THE Company of SADLERS queſtionleſs declare themſelves to be of great Antiquity, as ſhewing their beginning in the Times of theſe Kings following: Edward I. Richard II. Henry IV. Edward II. Edward III. Henry V. Henry VI. Edward IV. Richard III. Henry VII. Henry VIII. Edward VI. CARPENTERS.

THE Company of the CARPENTERS, being a Society of ancient ſtanding, were incorporated by Letters Patents, bearing date the ſeventh Day of July, in the ſeventeenth Year of the Reign of King Edward IV. by the Name of Maſter, Wardens, and Comminalty of the Myſtery of Freemen of the Capentry of the City of London.

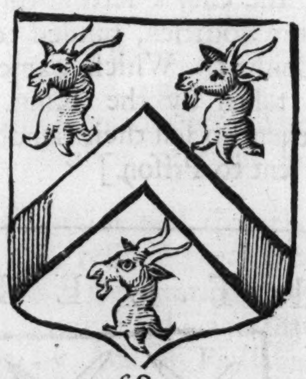
Among other Gifts he gave 500 l. to build an Alms Houſe near Godalmin in Surrey, for Ten poor Men: and 70 l. a Year to maintain them. And his Wife added ſomething, for the Company to go down and viſit it.]

CORDWAINERS.



THE Company of SHOEMAKERS or CORDWAINERS, as they ſtile themſelves, have been of long continuance, and were firſt incorporated in the 17th Year of King Henry VI. being afterward confirmed by King Philip and Queen Mary, in the 4th and 5th Years of their Reign: Then again re-confirmed by Queen Elizabeth, in the 4th Year of her Reign: And laſtly, by King James I.

A Statute concerning the Cordwainers. 4 Ed. IV. Ca. 7. J. S.

Concerning theſe Cordwainers there was an Act made in the 4th Year of King Edward IV. (which anſwereth to the Year of our Lord 1464.) to this Tenour; "That no Cordwainer or Cobler, be he "within Franchiſe or without, make any Shoes, "Galoſhes, or Huſeans, with any Pyke or Poleyn, that ſhould paſs the Length of two Inches, "to be judged by the Wardens or Governours of "the ſame Myſtery in the City: Nor ſell any up"on Sundays or Feaſts of the Nativity and Aſcen"ſion, and Corpus Chriſti; nor ſet or put them up"on the Feet or Legs of any Perſon on thoſe Days, "upon pain of Forfeiture of 20 s.

Whence we may obſerve certain Antiquities concerning theſe Tradeſmen and their Ware, about 240 Years ago. Firſt, That the Name of Shoemaker was not yet known for thoſe of this Calling, but Cordwainer or Cobler. And that the Name of Cobler was not then a name of Contempt, for a Man of leſs Skill in that Myſtery, or only a Mender der, but for a Maker and Seller of that Commodity. Secondly, That there were in thoſe Times three ſorts of Shoes worn, Shoes, Galoſhes, and Huſeaus, of whatſoever faſhion they were, 'tis uncertain; but that one of theſe three ſorts covered the Legs, or at leaſt ſome part of the Leg, as others were for the Feet. And thoſe perhaps for the Legs were the Huſeaus, ſomewhat like it may be to the Buskin, or perhaps rather to the High Shoes, which Countrymen wear in ſome dirty, miry Countries. Thirdly, That the Shoes, Galoſhes, &c. were with Toes of an extraordinary length, and ſharp, called therefore Pykes, or Poleyns. And that the People, eſpecially the better Sort ſo affected the wearing them, that an Act was fain to be made to reſtrain the Length of theſe Pykes to a certain Meaſure; that is to ſay, not to above two Inches. Fourthly, That theſe Cordwainers had a Privilege, or at leaſt a Cuſtom, beyond other Tradeſmen, to ſit and ſell their Shoes on Sundays and the greateſt Holidays. Which was therefore now prohibited upon a Penalty.

This Company build a new Hall.

This ancient Corporation in the Year 1577, built a fair and new Hall for themſelves. And on Tueſday, July 23. the ſame Year, they made a magnificent Feaſt for their Friends; which they called, their Houſe-warming. Here was preſent, among the reſt of the honorary Gueſts, the Recorder Fleetwood.

The Strangers Shoemakers: a Commiſſion for them.

Of the Foreigners born, that flocked over into England, not far off from the beginning of Queen Elizabeth's Reign, many were of this Occupation of Shoemakers. Whereupon Anno 1576, this Company procured a Commiſſion to enquire of certain Aliens born, being of the ſaid Trade; Firſt, Whether they were Denizens, or not. And if they were, then to enquire by whom they were ſo made. Secondly, Whether thoſe Denizens being Strangers, had refuſed to pay to the ſaid Shoemakers of London every Quarter, in the name of Quarteridge, 6 d. according to a certain Decree thereof, made in the Star-Chamber, and confirmed, as they ſaid, by Act of Parliament. Thirdly, Whether there were any Proviſo in the ſaid Denizens Letters Patents, binding them thereby to do and pay, as the Citizens ought for to do: And alſo, what Penalty and Loſs the ſaid Strangers ought to ſuſtain thereby, not doing and paying as is aforeſaid.

Quarteridge exacted by the Company.

For the better underſtanding of the aboveſaid, it muſt be known, that in the fifth Year of the Queen there was an Act made concerning Tanners, Curriers, and other Artificers occupying the cutting of Leather, that every Perſon, Stranger born, or other, uſing to convert Tanned Leather into made Wares, might thenceforth buy all kind of Tanned Leather to the intent aforeſaid, upon every Monday in the Market at Leadenhall in London. Sithence the making whereof, the Shoemakers and Curriers, being free of the City of London, exacted 2 s. yearly, as well of every Engliſh, as Stranger foreign Houſholder, and 12 d. upon every like foreign Journeyman, within three Miles compaſs of London, in name of a Quarteridge; contrary to the meaning of the ſaid Statute, or any other Graunt.

Their Dealings with Foreigners.

And for the better confirming of this Exaction, they practiſed with certain Foreigners, to condeſcend in the name of all the reſt, although in truth without their Conſent, to ſet down the ſame by an Order in the Exchequer. And thereupon, as was ſuppoſed, they made the ſaid Foreigners free of the City. And other Foreigners they perſuaded in their Hall to become bound in Obligation of 5 l. for the true Payment thereof.

Their Bill.

And in a Parliament Anno 1575, they exhibited an odious Bill againſt the ſaid Foreigners, as well Engliſh as Strangers; requiring thereby, that the Foreigners might be ſecluded and avoided from buying of Tanned Leather on the ſaid Monday at Leadenhall Market, or in any other open Market in the City: To the intent that all ſuch Leather ſhould be bought at their hands, and not elſewhere: And the Foreigners ſhould be reſtrained from bringing or ſelling any their made Wares unto any Honourable, Worſhipful, or Common Perſon within the City of London, upon pain of Forfeiture of the ſaid Wares; contrary to former Statutes, and againſt all ancient Uſage and Cuſtom.

The Shoemakers of Weſtminſter's Complaint againſt them.

Whereupon the whole Company of Shoemakers inhabiting within the Liberty of the City of Weſtminſter, as well Engliſh as Strangers, petitioned the Lord Treaſurer Burghley, (who was High Steward of Weſtminſter) Shewing, how they, all her Majeſty's loving Subjects, charged with many Children, Houſholds and Families, ſhould utterly be impoveriſhed, if the ſaid Bill ſhould take effect; and many Honourable, Worſhipful and other People might be diſappointed of ſuch Wares, to their great Diſcommodities, and Enhancement of Prices for the ſame againſt the Common Weal. And for that they could not any wiſe obtain a Sight or Copy of the Bill, whereby to propoſe any Allegations or probable Matter, to ſubvert or reject the ſame. And for that they were poor, and a number of unskilful Perſons, having no other Refuge under her Majeſty, but only his Lordſhip, to defend them; Therefore they prayed him to give his Furtherance and Aid in that High Court of Parliament, that they might continue and enjoy the Benefit of the ſaid Market, and buying of Leather, as in the late Statute was expreſt, without any Repeal of the ſame; and to occupy and retail their ſaid Wares without Reſtraint, Exactions, Forfeitures, or Servility.

The Conteſt between 'em continues.

This Controverſy between the Shoemakers of Weſtminſter and the Company of Shoemakers of London, continued the next Year. For the Company ſet forth Articles againſt thoſe of Weſtminſter. And they on the other hand gave in their Anſwers to thoſe Articles.

Shoemakers of Weſtminſter would hinder the Company in their Search.

Another particular Conteſt between them was, that the Shoemakers of Weſtminſter made great endeavour, that the Company of Cordwainers of London ſhould not have the Searching of their Wares, though the Queen by Letters Patents had granted to the Maſter and Wardens of the ſame Myſtery, the Search and Correction of all Men occupying the ſame Art within the City of London, and three Miles compaſs. And this confirmed by an Act. To evade this Patent and Act, divers Strangers that made Boots and Shoes, did ſue to Edward Dyer, Eſquire, to have a Licence to be diſpenſed with, from all Contempts, Penalties and Forfeitures whatſoever, committed or incurred by reaſon of Force of any Article contained in that Statute. Which made the Company of Cordwainers in September, 1577, petition the Lord Treaſurer, that no ſuch Licence might be granted: That they might not be at liberty to make and work their Wares, contrary to good Laws and Statutes, and hurtful to the Profit of the Common People, and dangerous to the Wardens of the Company, by reaſon of a Penalty of 5 l. to be laid upon them for every Default made by any Shoemakers in their Wares.

They ſue one another in ſeveral Courts.

The Heats ſtill grew between them. For the next thing you hear of them was, that the Free Shoemakers ſued the Shoemakers in Weſtminſter in the Exchequer. And theſe Shoemakers on the other hand exhibited a Bill againſt the Free Shoemakers in the High Court of Star-Chamber, upon divers Extortions by them ſuppoſed to be committed. For which to be quit with them again, the Free Shoemakers indicted them at a Seſſions of the Peace held in the County of Middleſex, alledging, that the Repair that the Shoemakers of Weſtminſter had made unto their Solicitor, one Francis Sparry, was an unlawful Rout and Aſſembly, unlawfully to gather Money to the Maintenance of their Suits, thinking to enforce one to bear the Suit againſt them. And ſithence that time, they arreſted one Edward Tyſe, one of the Shoemakers dwelling at the Savoy, binding him unto the Peace without a Cauſe of his Breach of the Peace, and without any Oath-taking, only to put him, being a poor Man, to extreme Charge and Trouble. And when the Shoemakers Solicitor was ſerving a Subpœna upon one John Lenche to come to the Star-Chamber, there came running upon him the ſaid Solicitor, Abraham Lenche his Son; and being behind him did ſtrike the ſaid Solicitor with a Dagger down to the Ground, and had ſlain him, had not others preſent ſaved him. And not therewith contented, they reported, they would not only undo theſe Shoemakers, but all thoſe that would be Aiders, and take part with them. All this theſe Men in a Petition laid open before the ſaid Lord Treaſurer: Praying him to grant, that they might have their Cauſes as well in the Court of Exchequer, as in their Court of Star Chamber depending, to be heard and determined with Expedition; and that Juſtice Southcote, and ſome other Juſtice of Peace within the County of Middleſex, might conſider upon the ſaid Indictment, and take order therein, according to Law and Juſtice.

The Shoemakers Petition. An Order of Star-Chamber about Strangers.

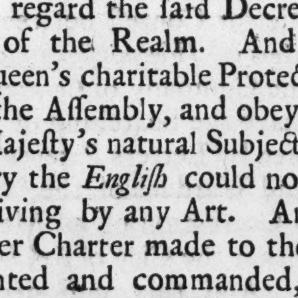
The Free Shoemakers, in the Month of October 1578, put up another Petition to the Lord Treaſurer, ſetting forth their Caſe, viz. That there was an Order in Star Chamber in King Henry the Eighth's Time, that all Strangers Artificers ſhould be Contributors as the King's natural Subjects were; and ſhould come to the Halls, and take the Oaths to be true to the King and his Heirs. Of which ſundry Exemplifications were made and ſent to the ſeveral Companies in London; and among the reſt, one to the Cordwainers. But that certain Strangers of that Art, as namely, Francis Gerers, Daniel Swarts, John Yong, Edward Tyſon, Leonard Harman, and many other by their Example, did not regard the ſaid Decree, nor the Acts and Laws of the Realm. And not contented with the Queen's charitable Protection, did refuſe to come to the Aſſembly, and obey and be governed as her Majeſty's natural Subjects. Whereas in their Country the Engliſh could not be ſuffered to get their Living by any Art. And whereas the Queen by her Charter made to the ſaid Myſtery, expreſly granted and commanded, that all the ſaid Perſons ſhould be obedient to the lawful Ordinances of the ſaid Company (which Ordinances were, by the Lord Keeper of the Great Seal of England, and the Lords Chief Juſtices, peruſed, ratified and confirmed, according to an Act of Parliament in that caſe provided) the Strangers, for juſtifying their Contempt, did arrogantly and untruly pretend the Lord Treaſurer's Letters in their Favour, written to the Lord Maior and Recorder of London, before whom the ſaid Company had no Cauſe depending. Therefore they prayed his Lordſhip to examine, or cauſe the Premiſſes to be examined; and to give Order, that her Majeſty's Laws, Commiſſions, Charters, and Commandments, and the lawful Ordinances of the Company, might be duly obeyed.]

PAINTERS.



THE Company of the PAINTERS, having the addition of PAINTERS STAINERS, for their Skill and Cunning in divers myſterious Works, have been a Society of great Antiquity from time to time, and were incorporated Anno Dom. 1580, it being the three and twentieth Year of Queen Elizabeth, &c.

The Art of Painting declines. And why. J. S.

The Painters Stainers were a Brotherhood ſince the Times of Edward III. and a Company: And ſo continued till the Year 1575, and 17th of Queen Elizabeth; but no Corporation: Paying Scot, Lot, and all kinds of Charges in the Queen's Affairs, and otherwiſe: As in time of War, charged with the ſetting forth of twelve Soldiers and all their Furniture; they having neither Lands, Revenues, nor any Riches to diſcharge the ſame; but only levied among the Brethren of the Company, every Man according to his Ability. Which Brethren were maintained by their good Workmanſhip in their Trades. But now about the Time beforeſaid, their Trade began to go to decay, by reaſon of other Perſons that had not been Apprentices to it, who undertook Painting; as Plaiſterers and others, intermeddling in the ſame Science: And the Painters having no Power to reſtrain them by vertue of any Corporation, to the great Slander of the Art and Science, and the utter Decay and Ruine of all ſuch as would endeavour themſelves to be good Workmen in the ſame. Much ſlight Work went off; as Pictures of the Queen and other Noblemen and others; and all other manner of Works, which ſhewed fair to ſight: And the People bought the ſame, being much deceived; for that ſuch Pictures and Works were not ſubſtantially wrought: A Slander to the whole Company of Painters, and a great Decay of all Workmanſhip in the ſaid Science; and alſo a great Diſcouragement to divers forward young Men, very deſirous to travel for Knowledge in the ſame.

The Painters complain of it:

Of this the Painters made Complaint from time to time to the Lord Maior for the time being; and yet could never get any Redreſs for the ſame. The Reaſon whereof, they ſaid, was, that they had no Judgment or Skill in that Science, to diſcern ſuch fraudulent Workmanſhip from that was ſubſtantial and good. Therefore Anno 1575 and 1576, they addreſſed to the Queen, that ſhe would conſider their Cauſe, and give Aid and Aſſiſtance to them. And deſired of her to be incorporated by the name of Maſter, Wardens, and Commonalty of Painters-Stainers within the City, Liberties and Suburbs of the City of London, being Freemen and Citizens of the ſame; and to be enabled to purchaſe Lands, Tenements, and Hereditaments to the Uſe and Behalf of that Company, in Fee: To have a Common Seal, to chooſe a Maſter, Wardens, and Aſſiſtants, according to Ordinances to be made by them; to execute all Cauſes pertaining to that Company; to reſtrain, that none be ſuffered to uſe that Trade, but ſuch as have been, or ſhall be Apprentices to ſome of that Myſtery ſeven Years; to have Authority to enter into any Shops, Warehouſes or Workhouſes of Men exerciſing that Myſtery, and to ſearch, examine and ſurvey their Works, Painting, Colours, or other Stuff, &c. This was granted.

And petition to be incorporated.

Q. Elizabeth's Serjeant Painter.

One George Gower was Queen Elizabeth's Serjeant Painter. Who had a Warrant from her for him, or his ſufficient Deputy or Deputies, for the better Execution of his Office, to take up and provide for the Queen, and in her Name, for the only Proviſion of her Service, all Colour, Oil, Varniſh, Workmen and Labourers, as well Free as Foreign, and all manner of Neceſſaries and Stuff whatſoever, meet to be employed for that Service. And alſo to take up all manner of Carriages, as Barges, Boats, Carts, Wayns, Horſes, with their Furnitures, neceſſary for the Conveyances of the Premiſſes, as well by Water as Land, at reaſonable Payments and Prices to be made in that behalf.

Of this Company was Sampſon Camden, the Father of the Learned William Camden, Clarencieux King at Arms. Who in memory thereof gave them a Gilt Bowl of 16 l. Price. Thus inſcribed, Guil. Camdenus, Clarencieux, filius Sampſonis Pictoris Londinenſis, dono dedit.]

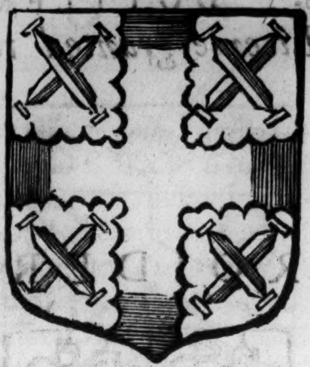
CURRIERS.



THE Company of CURRIERS, a Company of long Continuance, and of good Community amongſt themſelves, became incorporated in the third Year of King James I. the 12th day of June.

Contention between the Curriers and Cordwainers. J. S.

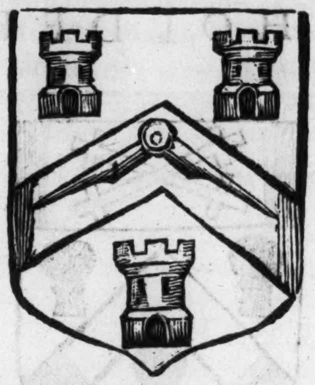
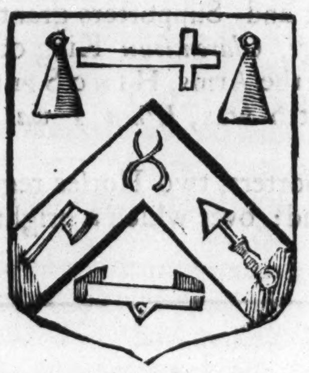
The Trade of theſe Curriers, or Coriers, is chiefly to prepare and dreſs Leather for the uſe of the Cordwainers or Shoemakers. In the Times of Queen Elizabeth there happened Contention between them and the Shoemakers, about the ill dreſſing of their Leather, and about the Prices to be paid them for their Work; about ſelling and buying of Leather in their own Houſes, and about coming to the Markets to buy Leather, which would not be allowed them. But at laſt, about the Year 1590, both Parties came to Articles of Agreement indented. As, That the Curriers ſhould have the Dreſſing of all the Leather bought in Leadenhall and Southwark Markets, and three Miles compaſs of London. That the Shoemakers ſhould find Tallow for the tallowing of their Backs; and that the Curriers ſhould not refuſe to accept thereof, unleſs it were inſufficient and not good. That the Shoemakers ſhould give hereafter, for the dreſſing of all upper Leather Hides, 2 s. apiece, the Curriers finding good and ſufficient Stuff. That the Shoemakers ſhould give to the Curriers from Lady-day to Michaelmas, for currying and tallowing of Backs, 6 d. and the Shoemakers to find Tallow; and from Michaelmas to Lady-day, 8 d. ſo that they be well ſliked. The Shoemakers to give for the dreſſing of all kind of Skins, 3 s. 4 d. a Dozen. But all this upon theſe Conditions on the Cordwainers ſide; viz. That if any Hide, Back, or Skin, ſhall be found by the Maſter and Wardens of the Cordwainers for the time being, to be inſufficiently dreſſed and wrought by any Currier, then the ſaid Currier ſhall forfeit to the Party grieved the Sum of 10 s. And that whenſoever any Currier ſhould come into their Markets at Leadenhall, Southwark, Bartholomew Fair, or three Miles compaſs, the Maſter and Wardens of the Cordwainers ſhould commit him that ſhall be found there to Priſon, there to remain 24 Hours without Bail or Mainprize; and forfeit ſuch a Fine to the Chamber of London, as the Lord Maior and Aldermen ſhould think convenient. And that if any Free Currier ſhould buy or ſell any kind of Leather in their Houſes or elſewhere, then likewiſe the ſaid Maſter and Wardens ſhould have the like Authority to commit him to Priſon, there to remain during the time aforeſaid, and pay ſuch Fine as the ſaid Lord Maior and Aldermen ſhould think convenient. Otherwiſe the Free Cordwainers could not agree to the Articles aforeſaid.]

MASONS.



THE Company of MASONS, being otherwiſe termed FREE MASONS, of ancient ſtanding and good reckoning, by means of affable and kind Meetings divers times, and as a loving Brotherhood ſhould uſe to do, did frequent this mutual Aſſembly in the Time of King Henry IV. in the 12th Year of his moſt gracious Reign. [Their Arms granted by William Hanckeſlow, Clarencieux King at Arms, 13 Edw IV.]

PLUMBERS.



THE Company of PLUMBERS, of large and very memorable Antiquity, remaining a Fellowſhip or Brotherhood by the name of Plumbers. At length they attained to be incorporated by Letters Patents, the 11th or 12th Day of April, in the ninth Year of King James I. of England, and of Scotland the four and fortieth, &c.

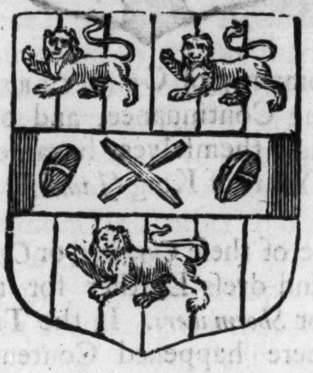
EMBROIDERERS.



THE Company of the EMBROIDERERS can make appear by their worthy and famous Pieces of Art, that they have been of ancient Uſe and Eminence, as is to be ſeen in divers places at this Day: But for the matter of their Incorporating, it hath relation to the 4th Year of Queen Elizabeth, &c.

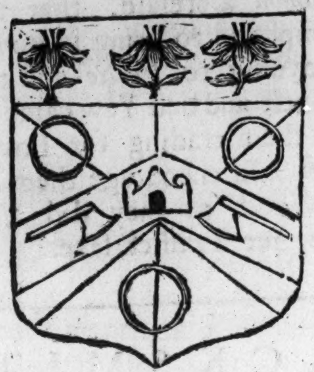
COOPERS.



THE Company of COOPERS became to be incorporated in the 16th Year of the Reign of King Henry VII. by the Name of Maſter, Wardens, or Keepers and Commonalty of the Freemen of the Myſtery of Coopers in London, and the Suburbs of the ſame City.

A great Benefactor of this Company. J. S.

Mr. Stroud lately deceaſed, dying ſome Years ago Maſter of this Company of Coopers of London, was a noble Benefactor: Who left this Company 6000 l. in Truſt to build a Free School and Hoſpital at Eggham near Staines. Which is accordingly erected, and endowed.

Nicholas Gibſon, ſometime Sheriff of London in the latter End of King Henry VIII. founded a Free School, and Hoſpital adjoining thereto, in Ratcliff. And left an Eſtate in Truſt to this Company for the perpetual Maintenance thereof. The ſaid Company have greatly improved and augmented this Foundation, both in the Number of poor People, and Salaries and Penſions: Toby Wood, Eſq; a Counſellor of Lincoln's Inn, and one Mr. Cloker of this Company, being Benefactors to it. BRICKLAYERS and TYLERS.

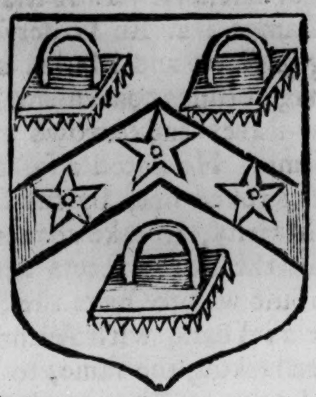
BOWYERS.



THE Company of BOWYERS, in regard that the Uſe of the Long Bow hath added no mean Honour to this Realm of England, making it famous in far remote Nations: They may well ſtand on a great Privilege of Antiquity, yet their Incorporating ſpeaks but of the 21th Year of the Reign of King James I.

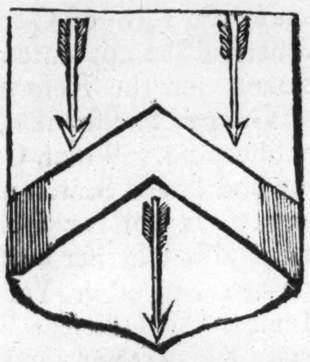
FLETCHERS.



ALtho' there is ſmall reaſon of ſundring Bows from Arrows, or Arrows from Bows; yet becauſe they have divided themſelves into two ſeveral Companies, let the Fault be on their own Heads. For as I find them, ſo I leave them.

Bowyers, Fletchers, Stringers, Arrow-headmakers: their Petition. J. S.

But beſides theſe two Trades belonging to Archers, there were alſo two more; namely Stringers and Arrow-Headmakers. All theſe about the Year 1570 and odd, petitioned the Lord Treaſurer: Wherein they ſtile themſelves, the Decayed Companies of Bowyers, Fletchers, Stringers and Arrow-Headmakers, as well in the City of London, as elſewhere through the Realm. They had made a Petition to the Queen before, concerning their own decayed Condition, by reaſon of the Diſcontinuance of the Uſe of Archery, and Toleration of unlawful Games and Exerciſes. Concerning which, Aubrey, Maſter of Requeſts, told them what the Lord Treaſurer had ſaid upon View of their ſaid Petition; viz. That he thought it meet and requiſite a Commiſſion ſhould be granted to ſome of the chief of the Companies of Bowyers and Fletchers, Freemen of the City, as well for ſuppreſſing unlawful Games, as alſo for the Enforcement of the Exerciſes of the Long Bow, according to the Law and Statute of the Realm in thoſe Caſes provided. Upon this they preferred a Petition to him, to have due and favourable Conſideration of the Cauſe of their Complaint, with their decayed Eſtates; and to vouchſafe, that the ſaid Commiſſion might be granted to them, according to his Lordſhip's former Model, and as certain Notes ready to be ſhewed him did import.

Raſe Lane, ſues for a Commiſſion for taking care of the Laws for Archery.

In the Year 1576, one Raſe Lane, a great Projector in thoſe Times, would have monopolized to himſelf this Commiſſion for the Reſtoration of Archery. He ſhewed in his Paper put in for that purpoſe, that Archery depended upon three ſpecial Points, provided for in the Statute, for the Maintenance of Archery. 1. A ſtrait Prohibition of unlawful Games. 2. An Order for making up and repairing of Butts and Marks, and the Exerciſe of Shooting at times convenient. 3. For a Proviſion of Bow-ſtaves and Arrows at low Prices, rated in the ſame. He noted alſo, that the Pains of the Premiſſes reſted not, by the ſaid Laws, in the Queen's Majeſty, to take advantage of, or to pardon, but in the Lords Leets and Franchiſes. This Man's Suit was to have the Survey of the Premiſſes for 21 Years, with Authority ſufficient to enjoyn Men lacking the ſame, to take the Supply of their Lacks of Bows and Arrows at his hand, at the Prices of the ſaid Laws, and not above: And alſo like Authority, as far as in her Majeſty lay, by taking the Penalties, and the Puniſhments of unlawful Games, in ſuch as he ſhould find, upon the Survey, to continue the uſe of them, or to releaſe the ſame to ſuch as ſhould conform themſelves to the contrary; and would take Bows, as was aforeſaid: whereby they might be both forced and allured to exerciſe Shooting at times convenient; and alſo to keep up the Butts and Marks, as the ſaid Laws did appoint.

The Statute for the Long Bow.

The Statute for the Maintenance and Exerciſe of Shooting in the Long Bow, was made Anno 1541, in the 33d of Henry VIII.

The Queen's Commiſſion for Archery.

It was upon the Ground of this Statute, that the abovementioned Petitions were built: As was alſo a Commiſſion in the 13th of Queen Elizabeth, Anno 1570. Wherein She appointed Commiſſioners in each County for the Reformation of the Uſe of unlawful Games, and for the Maintenance and Exerciſe of Shooting. Which Commiſſioners were to take due and lawful Search in every place within each County, as well for ſuch as uſed unlawful Games, as alſo whether every Perſon for himſelf, his Servants and other Youth in his, or their ſeveral Houſes, had ſufficient Furniture and Proviſion of Bows and Arrows, and had not occupied the ſame according to the Meaning of the ſaid Statute of Henry VIII. But notwithſtanding this Commiſſion to ſee the Abuſes reformed and corrected, in many Parts the Uſe of Shooting was never the more frequented or uſed; and the Faults as many as they were wont. Upon this the Queen iſſued another Commiſſion in the 14th of her Reign, Anno 1571; viz. That theſe Commiſſioners ſhould within 40 Days after the Receit of thoſe Preſents, certify unto the Lord Keeper or Lord Chancellor for the time being, in how many Towns and Pariſhes in the ſaid County they had executed and performed the Effect of the ſaid Commiſſion, and in how many not: and alſo the Names of ſuch Perſons, whom they had or ſhould find offending in the Premiſſes, together with their reſpective Offences in that behalf, in writing under their Hands and Seals; to the intent that further Order might be taken therein. But this Commiſſion, tho' it was fair tranſcribed in Parchment, yet was not ſigned by the Queen; but only examined by Sir Gilbert Gerard, Her Attorney General: whoſe Hand is ſet at the bottom.

Bowſtaves brought from Italy.

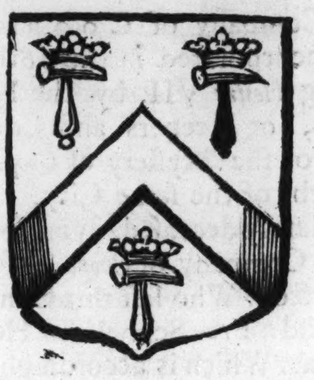
For the Supply of this Nation anciently with Bow-ſtaves made of Yew, the Italian Merchants by an old Statute, provided in Edward the Fourth's Time, were bound to bring in Bow-ſtaves into England. One Middlemore had a Commiſſion from the Queen, to ſee to the Performance of this Statute. The Penalty whereof by his Officer, one Wanton, was required now of the Italian Merchants, and particularly of one Diogenes Franciſchini, and other Merchants of Venice. Who were fain to make a Complaint by way of Petition to the Lord Treaſurer; ſhewing, That this bringing in of Bow-ſtaves was a Matter of long time not uſed, and ſo not provided for by them, the Italian Merchants: And alſo became impoſſible; for that the Country from whence Bow-ſtaves were had in King Edward the Fourth's Days, had been in the Turks Poſſeſſion, and none were within any of their Trades. So that they could not perform that which then might have been, nor did know any ſuch Courſe of Traffick, how to come by them: but was a Matter wholly diſcontinued, as impoſſible.

The Italian Merchants to be compelled to bring Bow-ſtaves. The beſt Yew.

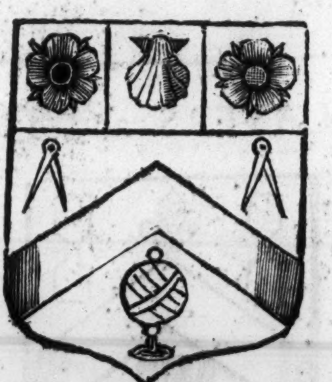
Yet in former Times, to ſupply this Defect in our Country, the Italian Merchants touched at Spain, where they took in Bow-ſtaves. The People of Caſtile on purpoſe deſtroyed their Woods; and provided by Law, that no ſuch Wood, as Yew, ſhould be preſerved. But notwithſtanding it was urged by Wanton aforeſaid, that theſe Italians ſhould be compelled to bring in Bow-ſtaves from the Parts adjoyning to Venice and there abouts; becauſe the fineſt and beſt Yew came from thence; And becauſe their trading for Bow-ſtaves with that People would encourage them to plant and cheriſh that Wood, as they did Vines and Corinths; that is, for Traffick ſake.

BLACKSMITHS.



THE Company of SMITHS, or BLACKSMITHS, by which Title you pleaſe to term them, being a very ancient Brotherhood or Fraternity of the City of London, were firſt incorporated by Queen Elizabeth, in the 20th Year of her Reign, their Charter bearing Date the 15th of April, &c. Afterward it was re-confirmed by King James I. in the ſecond Year of his Reign, the 21th Day of March.

JOYNERS.



THE Company of JOYNERS, called alſo JOYNERS and CEELERS, [and CARVERS,] of ancient ſtanding, and reputed to be a loving Society, were incorporated by Queen Elizabeth, in the 13th Year of her Reign.

Their Hall. Mr. John Burroughs. J. S.

This Company (as I have been told by one that hath long been their Clark) hath been a Brotherhood ever ſince the Times of King Henry VII. And that their Hall (which is ſituate in Thames-ſtreet) was given them by a Widow, enjoyning them, in conſideration of that Gift, to procure a certain Number of Maſſes to be ſaid for her Soul. The Great Hall is all wainſcotted, and King William and Queen Mary's Arms at the upper per End, with excellent Carving. Their Skreen at the lower End coſt (as they ſay) 130 l.

The Parlour.

Their Parlour is likewiſe wainſcotted with more curious Artifice and Embelliſhments. And ſo is the Cieling fretted with Wainſcot Work. In which are three Circles: wherein are excellent Painting of Angels, &c. The middle Circle, which is the largeſt, hath a Draught of St. James, the Patron of their Company, with a Square in his Hand, as it were giving his Orders to ſeveral Perſons ſtanding about, and directing their Work.

On the Chimneypiece is a very curious Picture, repreſenting ſeveral Perſons of the Company, ſitting at a long Table in their Livery Gowns; and Mr. Whiting, (ſometime of this Company) and his Man, laying a Model before them of the Work of their Hall, or ſome Rooms in it; with ſome of the Aſſiſtants viewing and conſidering it. This Parlour, they ſay, coſt 300 l. wainſcotting and painting.

Burnt down.

This Houſe was burnt down in the great Fire; and the Hall of it burnt down again Anno 1694. but the Parlour ſaved, (ſuffering ſome little Damage) by the Diligence of Mr. Burroughs, the Clark, employing Engines, and good Engineers, to throw great Quantities of Water in at a Window in the Parlour, that fronted the Door entring into the Hall.

Charles Hobſon.

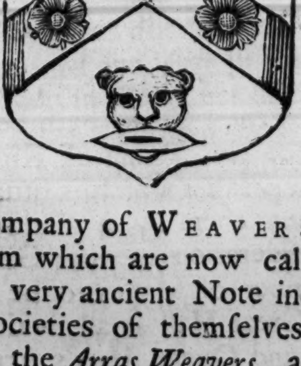
Charles Hobſon, Eſq; ſoon after Knighted, was of this Company: Who was employed by the late Queen Anne about her Works in White-hall, Chelſea College, and other Places Anno 1708. He was drunk to by the Lord Maior for Sheriff of London the enſuing Year. He told her Majeſty of it; and ſhe ſeemed pleaſed, and enjoined him to hold. Which he did.

There are in this Company about 260 upon the Livery.]

PLAISTERERS.

THE Company of the PLAISTERERS, of larger Antiquity than leiſure will admit to be delivered, of good and mutual Agreement among themſelves, like affable and loving Brethren, were incorporated in the Time of King Henry VII.

WEAVERS.



THE Company of WEAVERS (not meaning them which are now called Silk-Weavers) were of very ancient Note indeed, as having ſeveral Societies of themſelves, the Woolen Cloth Weavers, the Arras Weavers, and the Linnen Weavers. All which I refer to a further Relation.

The Company's Complaint againſt the Silk Weavers. J. S.

Divers Freemen of the City of ſundry ſorts, under the Reign of Queen Elizabeth, and ſince the Flight of Strangers into theſe Parts, had by their Induſtry learned of theſe Strangers, and otherwiſe, the Art of Silk-weaving; namely, making of Silk-lace, and ſuch like things in the Loom; and ſo did lawfully uſe the ſame. But the Company of Weavers, who would not allow any kind of weaving to any one but ſuch as were Members of their Myſtery, about the Year 1583, impeached theſe Weavers, and exhibited a Bill to the Lord Treaſurer, Mr. Chancellor of the Dutchy, and Barons of the Exchequer, againſt the ſaid Freemen, as uſing the Art of Silk-weaving, being free of other Myſteries. Upon this a great number of theſe Freemen ſo complained of, brought to the Maior, Sir Edward Osborn, and the Aldermen his Brethren, their Complaint, that the Bailiff and Company of the Guild of the Weavers, had diſturbed their Liberty. Hereupon the Lord Maior wrote a Letter to the Lord Treaſurer, relating the Cauſe in favour of thoſe Silk-weavers, againſt the Company: "Shewing him, that the "ancient Liberties of the City had ever been, "that a Freeman of any Company might lawfully uſe any lawful Art within the ſame City, "and being free of one, was free of all. And "that without which general Freedom, both the "Commonweal might receive great Prejudice, "and the Order and Governance of the Companies, and of the whole City, ſhould receive ſuch "a Confuſion, as the State thereof could no way "bear. And that the Weavers themſelves did for "the moſt part live by the Uſe of other Arts, and "took the Fruit of that general Freedom which "they denied to others.

Osborn Maior his Judgment of the Freedom of the City.

The ſame Weavers alſo (and a Note was produced to the Lord Treaſurer for that purpoſe) took upon them for Money, to admit a number of Strangers, as well not Denizens as others, to uſe their Art, to the great Hindrance of the Queen's natural Subjects. Which Matters the ſaid Treaſurer by his Letters willed to be enquired upon, by occaſion of a Libel ſpread, and ſent to him. Sir Thomas Blank, the former Maior, and his Brethren, called the ſaid Weavers, and required them to hold them content with the general Liberty, for others to uſe their Art, as they might others: And did offer to them, if any Lack were to them in Search, Correction, or good Order, they ſhould be reaſonably aſſiſted. This they refuſed; and in great Contempt, and to the Peril of the Diſſolution of the whole State of the Company, they purſued their Bill before-mentioned.

Blank Maior, his dealing with the Weavers.

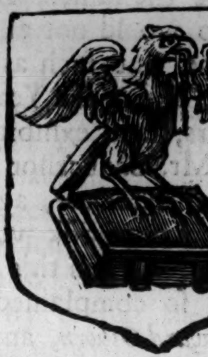
Osborn, then Maior, prayed the Lord Treaſurer, that by his Order the ſaid general Liberty might be maintained, and the Weavers remitted to the Maior and Aldermens Conſideration, according to the Laws and Orders of the City. Wherein he promiſed, they ſhould, as Citizens, have reaſonable Favour, as the State of the Commonweal, and this City ſhould require.]

FRUITERERS.

THE Company of the FRUITERERS, being a very ancient Brotherhood, and of long continuance, became to be firſt incorporated in the third Year of the Reign of King James I.

SCRIVENERS.



THE Company of the SCRIVENERS, an ancient and long continued Society, were incorporated the 28th of January, in the 14th Year of the Reign of our Sovereign Lord King James I.

J. S.

Their Hall ſtood in Noble-ſtreet in Alderſgate Ward: which they have lately parted with, and ſold to the Company of the Coachmakers, lately incorporated.

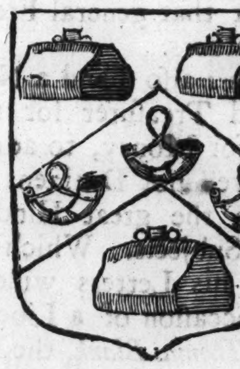
Paternoſter-maker. Lit. Broun. E. A.

Among the Wills and Teſtaments in the Biſhop of London's Regiſter, is the Will of William Taverner, Pater-noſter-maker, An. 14... It may be enquired whether he were not of this Company.]

BOTTLE-MAKERS & HORNERS.



AS for BOTTLE-MAKERS and HORN-MAKERS, the precedent Times have remembred them to be of Antiquity, and two diſtinct Companies combined in one: But I find no Record that they were at any time incorporated.

Tranſportation of Horns. J. S.

Conſiderable Quantities of Horns were wont to be tranſported by theſe Horners. In the Year 1576, were ſhipped that Year 140000 Horns, to the value of 210 l.

Queen Elizabeth granted a Patent to Simon Furney and John Craford, for tranſporting of Horns. Whereby the Horners were hindred from tranſporting them: Yet by an Act they were allowed to tranſport refuſe Horns. And theſe were now ſtopt by the Patentees. Which cauſed a Petition of Complaint to the Lord Treaſurer.

The Horners Petition againſt Patentees for Horns.

For in the Year 1592, the Horners made a Petition, complaining, That whereas they and their Predeceſſors had all heretofore bought all manner of Horns, and wrought the beſt of them, to ſerve in the Realm, and ſold the Refuſe, and ſome of their wrought Wares, as Blowing Horns, Shoehorns, and Lanthorns, both to Engliſh and ſtrange Merchants: Now one Simon Furner a Merchant, and John Craford a Scrivener, got a Licenſe from her Majeſty for tranſporting of Horns: and thereby had not only reſtrained the Petitioners from their former Traffic, to their undoing in general, but alſo thereby greatly endamaged the Queen in her Cuſtoms, almoſt ſubverting the ſame. For whereas heretofore ſhe had 18 d. Cuſtom for a Thouſand of Horns, they would ſuffer none to paſs, unleſs they had 10 s. more to themſelves for every Thouſand. Which intolerable Impoſition took away Traffic; and ſo conſequently her Cuſtom. There was a Proviſo in their Licenſe, that if any Abuſe or Inconvenience grew thereby, then the Lord Treaſurer of England for the time, ſhould reform and order the ſame. So the Petitioners prayed the ſaid Lord, to order the matter as the Equity and Neceſſity of the Cauſe required. Alſo there was a Proviſo in her Majeſty's Grant, that the Horners ſhould have their ancient Liberties, that had been Time out of mind: and the Statute allowed them the like. Therefore they prayed his Lordſhip's Letter to the Cuſtomers, that they might enjoy their former Liberties.

The Horners Liberty by their Charter.

This Matter depended till the Year 1597, when the Treaſurer ſent to Sir Richard Carmarthen, to call before him theſe two Patentees beforeſaid, and underſtand what could be alledged on both Parts, touching the Liberty of the Horners by their Charter, and to end the Queſtion between both, if he could: Or elſe to let him underſtand his Opinion, what he conceived fit to be done therein. He endeavoured accordingly to end the Controverſy between them, but could not. The Queſtion roſe upon one Word chiefly: viz. That they had deſired of the King (that gave them their Charter) that they might have the Liberty within the City of London, and four and twenty Miles about, to chooſe and buy the principalleſt Horns, before the Strangers ſhould buy and tranſport away. And then after the Company were ſo furniſhed, it ſhould be lawful for THEM, and all other Perſons, to buy and tranſport the reſt. Now the Horners conſtrued the Word THEM to pertain to their Company; Furner and Craford conſtrued the Word THEM to pertain to the Strangers, and all other Perſons upon their Suit. Carmarthen ſaid, that being no Lawyer, he dared not to judge of the Word, but left it to his Lordſhip's better Judgment.]

STATIONERS.

THE Company of STATIONERS, of great Antiquity, before the famous Art of Printing was invented, or brought hither, as (for the moſt part) their dwelling in Pater-noſter-Row, and the adjoining Parts, can teſtify. Their Charter of Incorporation was granted the 4th Day of May in the third and fourth Years of King Philip and Queen Mary.

The firſt and moſt eminent Printers. J. S.

Of this Corporation are Printers, Bookſellers, and ſuch as ſell Paper and Parchment, and Blank Books bound up for the Uſe of Tradeſmen and Merchants; and theſe laſt are now peculiarly called Stationers. The firſt of this Corporation which I have met with, who practiſed the Art of Printing Books, were Wynkyn de Worde (a Dutchman as it ſeems) who dwelt at the Sun in Fleetſtreet, and one Pynſon: Who both flouriſhed in the Reign of King Henry VII. and in the beginning of the Reign of King Henry VIII. And Tho. Godfrey; who printed a Treatiſe, writ by St. Germain in the Time of King Henry VIII. concerning Conſtitutions Provincial and Legatine. And next to them in the ſaid King Henry VIII. his Reign, were Richard Grafton and Edward Whitchurch; who had the Honour to print the Tranſlation of the Bible into Engliſh in the Years 1538 and 1540, or thereabouts. Theſe continued in the Reign of King Edward VI. Now alſo Reginald Wolf, a Switzer, and learned, John Day, and William Seres, were noted Printers: Whereof Wolf was Archbiſhop Cranmer's Printer, and printed his Books, and other Books appointed for publick Uſe in the Church. He was alſo a great Collector of Engliſh Hiſtory: afterwards digeſted and printed by Hollingſhead. Cawood and Jugg printed Proclamations and State-Books in the Times of King Edward VI. and Queen Mary. Richard Totil in the Time of Queen Mary, was the great Printer of Law-Books, of whom more by and by. Seres kept his Shop in Peter College, a Place ſo called, ſituate on the Weſt of St. Paul's Church. Sir William Cecyl, Principal Secretary to King Edward, procured for him, being his Servant, a Licenſe to print all manner of private Prayers called Primers (containing the Pſalter or Pſalms, Devotions, &c.) as ſhould be agreeable to the Book of Common Prayer eſtabliſhed in the Court of Parliament. And that none elſe ſhould print the ſame, upon pain of forfeiting the ſame. Provided, that before the ſaid Seres, or his Aſſigns did begin to print the ſame, he or they ſhould preſent a Copy thereof, to be allowed by the Lords of the Privy Council, or by the Lord Chancellor for the Time being, or by the King's four Ordinary Chaplains, or two of them. And when the ſame was, or ſhould be from Time to Time printed, that by the ſaid Lords, and others of the ſaid Privy Council, or by the Lord Chancellor, or with the Advice of the Wardens of the ſaid Occupation, the reaſonable Price thereof be ſet, as well in the Leaves, as being bound in Paſte or Board, in like manner as was expreſs'd in the End of the Book of Common Prayer. This Licenſe bore Date 4. March, 7 Edw. VI.

Seres. K. Edw. Warr. Book.

Day the Printer.

Day, the Printer, was not inferior in Reputation for Printing to any in thoſe Times. He had his Printing-Houſe in Alderſgate, and his Shop, or Shed, near the beginning of Queen Elizabeth's Reign, in St. Paul's Churchyard, by Permiſſion of the Church. He printed the voluminous Books of Fox's Acts and Monuments, of Thomas Beacon's Works, and a great many other good Books, written in favour of Religion againſt Popery. His Motto, with reſpect to the Night of Ignorance and Superſtition newly diſperſed, was, Ariſe, for it is DAY. He alſo 7 Edw. VI. Mar. 25. obtained a Licenſe for the printing a Catechiſm in Engliſh, with the Brief of an A B C, thereunto annexed: And alſo for the printing and reprinting of all ſuch Works and Books deviſed and compiled by the Reverend Father in God John Biſhop of Winton, or by Thomas Beacon, Profeſſor of Divinity. So that no ſuch Books, or any Part of them, were any ways repugnant to the holy Scriptures, or Proceedings in Religion, or the Laws of the Realm; as the Licenſe ran.

King Edw. Warr. Book.

I have ſeen a Patent ready drawn for Queen Elizabeth's ſigning, for ſeven Years privileging Richard Totil, Stationer, to imprint all manner of Books or Tables whatſoever, which touched or concerned Coſmography, or any Part thereof, as Geography, Chorography, Topography, writ in the Engliſh Tongue, or tranſlated out of any other Language into Engliſh, of whatſoever Countries they treated, and whoſoever were the Author. But whether this were ever actually ſigned, I cannot tell.

Care taken by the Starchamber and Eccleſiaſtical Commiſſion, for Books.

In the Year 1566. a Sheet was printed, intituled, Ordinances decreed for Reformation of divers Diſorders in printing and uttering of Books. At the End were ſubſcribed the Names of ſome of the Privy Council hereunto; being an Order in the Starchamber: viz. the Lord Keeper Bacon, Marquis of Wincheſter, Lord Treaſurer, Earl of Leiceſter, Lord Clynton, Lord Admiral, Secretary Cecil, and others. Which was occaſioned by a Motion of thoſe of the Commiſſion Eccleſiaſtical under their Hands. Theſe Ordinances were deſigned for the preventing the bringing in, or printing Books againſt the Religion eſtabliſhed, and were as follow.

Ordinances decreed for Reformation of divers Diſorders in printing and uttering of Books.

Ordinances for printing and uttering Books.

THAT no perſon ſhall print, or cauſe to be imprinted, nor ſhall bring, or cauſe or procure to be brought into this Realme imprinted, any Booke or Copie, againſt the forme and meaning of any Ordinance, Prohibition, or Commandement conteyned, or to be conteyned, in any the Statutes or Lawes of this Realme, or in any Injunctions, Letters Patents, or Ordinances, paſſed or ſet forth, or to be paſſed or ſet forth, by the Queenes moſt Excellent Majeſties Graunt, Commiſſion or Authoritie.

THAT whoſoeuer ſhall offend againſt the ſaid Ordinances, ſhall not onely forfeite all ſuch Bookes and Copies as ſhalbe ſo printed or brought in, but alſo ſhall from thenceforth neuer vſe or exerciſe, nor take benefite by any vſing or exerciſing of the Feate of Printing; and ſhall ſuſteine three moneths impriſonment, without baile or mainepriſe. And if he be not before ſuch offence bound with ſuerties in forme hereafter expreſſed, then he ſhall alſo forfaite for euery offence.

THAT no perſon ſhall ſell, vtter, put to ſale, binde, ſtitche, or ſowe any ſuch Bookes or Copies ſo printed or brought in, contrarie to the ſaid Ordinance, vpon paine to forfaite all ſuch Bookes and Copies, and for euery Booke xx s.

THAT all Bookes to be ſo forfaited, ſhalbe brought into the Stationers Hall in London, and there the one moitie of all ſuch forfaitures of money ſhalbe reſerued to the Queenes Majeſties vſe, and the other moitie ſhalbe deliuered to him or them that ſhall firſt ſeiſe the ſame Bookes or Copies, or make complaint thereof to the Wardens of the ſaid Companie: and all the Bookes ſo to be forfaited, ſhalbe deſtroyed or made waſte paper, by the diſcretion of the ſaid Wardens.

THAT it ſhalbe lawful for the Wardens of the ſaid Companie for the time being, or any two of the ſaid Companie, thereto deputed by the ſaid Wardens, as well in any Portes, as other ſuſpected places within this Realme, to open and viewe all Packes, Drifattes, Maunds, and other thinges, wherein Bookes or Paper ſhall be conteyned, brought into this Realme, and alſo to make ſearch in all Workehouſes, Shoppes, Warehouſes, and other places of Printers, Bookeſellers, or ſuch as bring Bookes into this Realme to be ſolde, or where they ſhall have reaſonable cauſe of ſuſpition. And all Bookes to be found againſt the ſaid Ordinances, to ſeiſe and carrie to the ſaid Hall to the vſes aboueſaide, and the parties therein offending, to leade and preſente before the Queenes Majeſties Commiſſioners in cauſes Eccleſiaſtical.

THAT euery Stationer, Printer, Bookeſeller, Marchant, and other perſon, vſing any trade of Bookes printing, binding, ſelling, or bringing into this Realme, ſhall before the ſaid Commiſſioners, or before any other perſons, thereunto to be aſſigned by the Queenes Majeſties moſt honourable Priuie Counſel, enter into ſeuerall recogniſaunces of reaſonable ſummes of money to her Majeſties vſe, with ſuerties or without, as to the ſaid Commiſſioners ſhall be thought expedient: that he ſhall truely obſerue all the ſaid Ordinances, well and truely yeelde and pay all ſuch forfaitures, and in no point be reſiſting, but in all things ayding to the ſaid Wardens and their Deputies, for the true execution of the premiſes.

Vpon the conſideration before expreſſed, and vpon the motion of the Commiſſioners: We of the priuie Counſell haue agreed this to be obſerued and kept, vpon the paines therein conteyned. At the Starre Chamber the xxix. day of Iune, Anno 1566. and the eight yeere of the Queenes Majeſties reigne.

Printing of Ballads, &c. done by the Company.

IN the Year 1575, ſome certain Perſons endeavoured to obtain from the Queen a Privilege for the ſole printing of all Ballads, Damaſk Paper, and Books in Proſe or Meeter, from the Quantity of one Sheet of Paper to four and twenty. The Company of Stationers made a Petition to the Lord Treaſurer, for ſtay of this: ſetting forth, how it would be the Overthrow of a multitude of Families: And that by the imprinting of theſe the Company was chiefly maintained. So as if the ſame were taken from them by way of Privilege, they ſhould be utterly undone. Whereof if the Queen were advertiſed, they were ſure ſhe would not paſs ſuch a Grant. Wherefore they prayed the Treaſurer, who had aforetime always been favourable to them in all their Cauſes, that he would acquaint the Queen with the Premiſſes, and be a means that the ſaid Privilege might not be granted.

Privileges granted to particular Printers.

Other Privileges there were, which the Queen ſometimes had granted to ſome Stationers for their Propriety in certain Copies; whereby all others were abridged from printing the ſame: And ſome of theſe Copies, ſuch as before were indifferently printed by any of that Calling, to the great Suſtentation of them and their Families. Which Advantage was by theſe Privileges taken from them. Thus Jugge. John Jugge, beſides the being her Majeſty's Printer, had the Privilege for printing of Bibles and Teſtaments. The which had been common to all the Printers.

Tothil. Richard Tothil, the printing of all kind of Law Books, (common before to all Printers) who ſold the ſame Books at exceſſive Prices, to the hindrance of a great number of poor Students.

Day. John Day, the printing of A B C, and the Catechiſm, with the ſole ſelling of them, by the colour of a Commiſſion. Theſe Books were the only Relief of the pooreſt ſort of that Company.

Roberts. James Roberts and Richard Watkins, the printing of all Almanacks and Prognoſtications. The which was alſo the chief Relief of the pooreſt of the Printers.

Marſh. Thomas Marſh, had a great Licenſe for Latin Books, uſed in the Grammar Schools of England.

The which was the general Living of the whole Company of Stationers.

Vautroller.

Tho. Vautroller, a Stranger, had the ſole printing of other Latin Books, as the New Teſtament and others.

Byrde.

One Byrde, a Singingman, had a Licenſe for printing all Muſick Books: and by that means claimed the printing of ruled Paper.

Seres.

William Seres, had Privilege for the printing of all Pſalters, all manner of Primers Engliſh or Latin, and all manner of Prayer Books: With the Reverſion of the ſame to his Son.

Flower.

Francis Flower, a Gentleman, being none of the Company, had Privilege of printing the Grammar, and other things: and had farmed it out to ſome of the Company for 100 l. by the Year. Which 100 l. was raiſed in the enhauncing of the Prices above the accuſtomed Order.

This as a Grievance many of the Company complained of, being now in number in the City 175. And of theſe 140 came to their Freedoms ſince Queen Elizabeth's Acceſs to the Crown. So much did Printing and Learning come in requeſt under the Reformation.

Seres Privilege of printing granted by the Queen, impugned.

It was ſhewn before, that William Seres had a Licenſe from King Edward VI. to print all manner of Primers. This was taken away from him in Queen Mary's Days. But obtained again for him under Queen Elizabeth by Cecyl's means. And the Grant now was to him and to his Son William Seres, during the Life of the longeſt Liver of them, with an Addition to print all Books of private Prayers. For which they had a Patent. This gave Occaſion to a great Caſe. For Seres the Father, in his latter Years, and being not ſo well able to attend and follow his Buſineſs, aſſigned the Privilege, with all his Preſſes, Letters, Stocks and Copies, (which in his whole Life he got) to one Henry Denham, for a yearly Rent. Denham took ſeven young Men of the Company of Stationers to join with him in the ſame. But certain inferior Perſons of the Company, ſetting up Preſſes more than England might bear, did print other Mens Copies forbidden to them, and privileged to others by the Queen's Letters Patents. Theſe endeavoured, for their own Gain, to have the ſaid Privilege taken away; preferring a Petition to the Privy Council, wherein they pretended, that in Juſtice, it ſtood with the beſt Policy of this Realm, that the printing of all good and uſeful Books ſhould be at liberty for every Man to do, without granting or allowing of any Privilege by the Prince to the contrary. And they ſaid it was againſt the Law; and that the Queen ought not to grant any ſuch. Seres upon this, in a Petition to the Lord Treaſurer, urged againſt theſe Men, that Privilege for ſpecial Books was ever granted by the Prince. For that for the moſt part in all ancient Books we read theſe Words, Cum Privilegio ad imprimendum ſolum. And that many Records might be found of the ſame. Whereby it appeared, that the Prince or Magiſtrate had ever care to commit the printing of all good Books, ſpecially of the beſt ſort, to ſome ſpecial Men well known, and tried for their Fidelity, Skill and Ability. Examples whereof might be ſhewed as well in England, as in other Chriſtian Countries. And that the Reaſon hereof was, that Printing of itſelf was moſt dangerous and pernicious, if it were not ſtraited and reſtrained by politick Order of the Prince or Magiſtrate.

A Controverſy among the Stationers about Licenſes.

This grew into a more general Conteſt between the Stationers, who had from the Queen Licenſes of Privilege to print certain Books, and the other Stationers; who thought this a great Hindrance to them, that they might not print them: Pretending that by their Freedom they ought to print any lawful Books: Nay, even thoſe Books, the Copies whereof had been bought of the Authors for their Money, or elſe given to thoſe that had the Propriety in them, to make their Benefit of. They would not allow the Queen to have a Power of granting theſe Privileges. And would and did, take upon them to print what they pleaſed. The Matter was heard before the Lord Maior. And afterwards before the Privy Council. Who committed the hearing of this Cauſe to Dr. Hammond, a Civilian, and Thomas Norton, a Divine, and ſome others. Theſe after Examination found the Complainants Intent to be derogatory to the Queen's Prerogative, not only as touching the granting of Privileges for Printing, but alſo for ſundry other Licenſes: And wiſhed the Complainants no further to attempt that Courſe, ſhewing unto them the Inconvenience that would enſue. Whereupon theſe Stationers ſeemed to renounce their Suits: affirming that they meant not to overthrow Privileges, but craved, that there might be ſomething appointed for them to Print. Wherein they were alſo ſatisfied by friendly agreement through the mediation of the ſaid Committees.

Copies voluntary granted to the Company.

The Expedient was this, that thoſe That had Privileges were to grant ſome Allowances unto the Company for the Maintenance of their Charge and their Poor. Thus Seres for his Part, who had the Privilege of Printing Primers and Pſalters and all Books of private Prayer, he and his Aſſigns yielded the beſt part of the ſaid Privilege for Relief of the whole Company: And out of that Privilege only reſerved to themſelves the Little Primer and uſual Pſalter. And divers other eminent Stationers in like manner granted many of their Copies for the ſame Intent. This was about the Year 1583.

Some Printers will Print other Men's Copies, notwithſtanding the Queen's Privilege.

But ſhortly after, one John Wolf, a Fiſhmonger uſing Printing, taking upon him as a Captain in this Cauſe, was content with no Agreement, but generally affirmed that he might and would print any Lawful Book, notwithſtanding any Commandment of the Queen. And to that End had incenſed the Popularity of London, as in a Common Cauſe, ſomewhat dangerouſly. And with him ſeveral of the reſt, changing their Minds, were aſſociated, and laboured to overthrow thoſe Privileges the Queen had granted, or could grant. Whereupon the above ſaid Committees finding them ſo diſordered, would have bound them to appear before the Queen's Council: which they promiſed to do. But after Conference with their Abettors, refuſed: and ſtill proſecuted their Complaints to her Majeſty, garniſhing the ſame with Pretences of the Liberties of London, and the Commonwealth of the ſaid Company: and ſaying, the Queen was deceived by thoſe that were Means for obtaining ſuch Privileges.

Redreſs required.

Seres after all this, prayed the Lord Treaſurer, that ſince the ſaid Complainants did ſtill intrude upon his ſaid Privilege, and did more obſtinately print his Books than afore, ſome Redreſs might be had therein.

Roger Ward reſiſts the Maſter and Wardens.

As Wolf was one of theſe unruly Printers, ſo one Roger Ward was another, who would Print any Book however forbidden by the Queen's Privilege, and made it his Practice to print all kind of Books at his Pleaſure. The Maſter and Wardens of the Company going to Search his Printing Houſe, according to the Power they had, were reſiſted by his Wife and Servants. Of which a Complaint was made by the ſaid Maſter and Wardens to the Court. And again in the Year 1583, the Maſter and Wardens preferred a Petition againſt this Man to the Lord Treaſurer: ſhewing his contemptuous Demeanour, doing contrary to all Order and Authority: and withal his Inſufficiency to uſe the Art of Printing. The Commiſſioners appointed by the Council could bring him to nothing: but ſtill he continued to print what he pleaſed without Allowance, by his own Authority; and ſuch Books as were warranted by her Highneſs Letters Patents to other Men: And ſold and uttered the ſame in City and Country, to Men of other Arts. Whereby the Company ſuſtained great Loſs, in taking the Sale of them; and particularly to the Decay of Seven poor young Men, who executed a Privilege granted to William Seres for a yearly Rent. This Man notwithſtanding had given two ſeveral Bonds to the Queen; the one, not to print any more diſorderly; the other, to bring in ſuch Books as he had ſo printed. But none performed. All this was laid open in the ſaid Petition. The Signers of it were, John Harriſon, Maſter; and Richard Watkins and Raſe Neubery, Wardens. And beſides them, Chriſtopher Barker, John Day, William Norton, George Biſhop, John Judſon, Francis Caldock; All Bookſellers in theſe Times of the chiefeſt Reputation.

The Stationers that had Privileges Petition the Council. Their Reaſons for them.

This Practice of ſome Printers, printing of Books, which others had Grants from the Queen only to do, was not yet laid aſide: which cauſed the Queen's Patentees Anno 1586, to petition the Lords of her Majeſtys Council in behalf of themſelves, who ſeemed now to be in ſome danger of having their Patents revoked. And withal preſented a Paper for the maintaining of Privileges for Printing: To this Import, “That all Princes in Chriſtendom, where Printing was uſed, granted Privilege, ſometimes for Years, ſometimes for Life, and ſometimes in Fee. That in this Realm the Queen's noble Progenitors had from time to time granted Privileges ever ſince the ſaid Myſtery was firſt uſed in the Land: which were always held good. And that her Majeſties Prerogative being no leſs than the Prerogative of her Predeceſſors, it ſeemed great Boldneſs in thoſe who now impugned Her herein. And that without Petition to her Highneſs, with Declaration of the Inconveniences, if any were. Seeing alſo that heretofore her Majeſties Patents for Printing had not only been allowed of, but fortifyed alſo by a Decree made in the Star-Chamber in the ſixth Year of her Majeſties Reign, by inflicting Puniſhments to the Infringers of them. But that for the Conveniency of Privileges, it were very neceſſary for the Common-wealth, that none ſhould Print at all, but ſuch as were authorized from her Majeſty, being known Men. For, that if every Man might Print that were ſo diſpoſed, it might be a means, that Hereſies, Treaſons, and ſeditious Libels ſhould often be diſperſed. Alſo, that Privileges were occaſion that many Books were printed which were more beneficial to the Common-wealth, than profitable to the Printer. For the Patentee being benefited otherwiſe by Books of profitable Sale, was content to beſtow part of his Gains in other Books, which were within the Compaſs of his Patent, very beneficial for the Common-wealth; and yet ſuch whereby the Printer ſhould ſcarce reap the tenth Part of his Charge. Which Books would never be printed, if Privilege were revoked. That further, if Privilege were revoked, no Books at all ſhould be printed within ſhort time. For commonly the firſt Printer was at Charge for the Author's Pains, and ſome other ſuch like extraordinary Coſt; whereas any other that would print it after him, came to the Copy gratis; and ſo might he ſell better cheap than the firſt Printer. And the firſt-Printer ſhould never utter his Books. Beſides, the ſecond Printer might better the firſt Impreſſion by Notes, Tables, Difference in Paper or Volume (as it is eaſier to amend than firſt to invent) which would alſo hinder the Sale of the firſt Printer's Books to his utter undoing. Theſe Inconveniences ſeen, every Man would ſtrain Courteſie who ſhould begin; ſo far, that in the End all Printing would decay within the Realm, to the undoing of the whole Company of Stationers. Then for the Price, if the Patentee ſhould exact out of reaſon, becauſe no Man might print the Book but himſelf, that would be remedied by the Statute of 25 Hen. VIII. If the Workmanſhip of the Patentee were worſe than it ought to be, it ſeemed to be a Condition in Law annexed to the Office, whereby he ſhould forfeit the ſame. And as well for theſe Reaſons as many others, which their Honours could beſt conceive of, they hoped their Honours were perſwaded that theſe Privileges were to be upholden.

A Privilege craved of the Queen for printing the Accidence and Grammar.

About theſe Times the Company of Stationers put up a Petition to the Lord Treaſurer (who was their great Patron) that, toward the maintaining of their poor Company, he would be a Means to the Queen to grant them, for their Relief, the Privilege of printing thoſe two little Books of Introduction into the Latin Tongue, uſed in Schools by Her Authority, viz. the Accidence and Grammar. For which they offered to yield ſomewhat yearly into the Receit of her Majeſty's Exchequer. They ſet forth in this Petition, what a very poor Company they were, and not able to bear the Charge that lay on them: That they paid exceſſive yearly Rents, for farming of ſuch Books, pertaining to their Art, as had been obtained from them by means of Privileges: Their good Deſerts from the Commonwealth, in ſearching for, and ſuppreſſing of Popiſh and Seditious Books, and executing ſeveral Warrants directed to them for ſuch purpoſe by the Queen's Commiſſioners in Cauſes Eccleſiaſtical. And finally, that they ſhould be driven to diſſolve their Company, unleſs the Treaſurer ſtood their good Lord, as on former Occaſions he had done, as the ſpecial Patron of their Company, and Favourer of the Art of Printing.

Decrees of Starchamber concerning Printers.

The Printing-Preſſes now a-days took too much Liberty; and the Printers being many, made bold to print ſundry Books that created great Diſturbances as well to the Church as the Civil Government. Whereof Complaint was made to the Queen. At length certain Decerees were made in the Star-Chamber concerning Printers, Stationers, &c. in the 28th Year of the Queen, and in the Year of our Lord 1585.

Encouragement of printing in King Richard III. his Days

In the Act againſt Merchant Strangers, in the Reign of King Richard III. Cap. 19. there was a Proviſo for the Encouragement of bringing Books into the Realm by Strangers, and for the encouraging of ſuch as ſhould print. It was provided, “That that Act, or any Parcel thereof, ſhould not extend to the Prejudice, Diſturbance, Damage or Impediment to any Artificer, or Merchant Stranger, of what Nation or Country he be, for bringing into this Realm, or ſelling by Retail or otherwiſe, any Book written or printed, or for inhabiting within this Realm for the ſame Intent: Or any Scrivener, Alluminer, Reader or Printer of ſuch Book: which he hath or ſhall have, to ſell by way of Merchandize: or for their dwelling within this Realm, for the Exerciſe of the ſaid Occupation.

Repealed 25 Hen. VIII.

Yet this Proviſo was repealed Anno 25 Henry VIII. It appears by the ſaid Act of Henry VIII. that upon the Act made of Richard III. for bringing in Books and Printers, there came into the Realm ſince the making of the ſame, a mervaillous Number of Printed Books, and daily did. And that the Cauſe of making the ſame Proviſo under King Richard was, for that there were but few Books, and few Printers within the Realm at that time, which could not well exerciſe and occupy cupy the ſaid Science and Craft of Printing. But ſince, many of the Kings natural Subjects had ſo diligently learned and exerciſed the ſame Art, that at that Day there were within the Realm [as that Statute of 25 Henry VIII. ſet forth] a great Number, cunning and expert in the ſaid Science and Craft of Printing; as able to exerciſe the Craft in all Points, as any Stranger. Whence we ſee how long Printing hath been uſed in England, even from the time of King Richard, who reigned in the Year 1485. And how well ſtocked the Nation was with them about the middle of the Reign of King Henry VIII. which was little more than 40 Years after.

An Act to confirm to the Stationers their Copies.

The Stationers Anno 8 Regin. Annæ, 170$\frac{9}{10}$ preſented a Bill to the Parliament, to have a Right to their Copies, confirmed to them, and the Sole power of Printing their reſpective Books. For it was now become common for others to be Interlopers, as they called them, and to Print upon them; that is, to Print again the Copies that they had bought: and that uſually of a worſe Paper and leſs Letter, that it might be afforded cheaper. By which means the firſt Printers (who were at great charge in the purchaſing of Copies and Printing the ſame) received great Dammage.

They ſet forth to the Parliament, that when the Author had conveyed over his Copy to any of them, they had a juſt and legal Property thereunto. And that they had given Sums of Money for Copies: and had ſettled thoſe Copies on their Wives at Marriage, or on their Children at their Deaths. And that at this time many Widows and Orphans had none other Subſiſtence: And that the Copies then in uſe had coſt the preſent Poſſeſſors (excluſively of all other Charges of Print and Paper) at leaſt 50000 l. Urging further, that this Property was the ſame with Houſes and other Eſtates, being agreeable to Common Law and good Reaſon. To which might be added, that unleſs this Liberty of Printing upon the Owners of Copies were ſtopped, it would prove a great diſcouragement to the printing of many good Books, offered by Authors to the Bookſellers: who would not care to meddle in ſuch uncertain Gain. And thereby might enſue great prejupice to Knowledge and Learning.]

No Book to be printed without the Author's or Proprietor's Conſent.

This produced an Act of Parliament Ann. 8 Regin. Annæ, to this import: It was enacted, That after the 10th of April, 1710, the Author of any Book already printed (who had not transferred the Copy thereof) or the Bookſeller, or other Perſon, who hath purchaſed any Copy to print or reprint, ſhall have the ſole Right of printing it for 21 Years. And the Author of any Book not yet printed, or of any Book hereafter to be compoſed, ſhall have the ſole liberty of printing it for 14 Years, to commence from the day of Publiſhing thereof. The Offender againſt this, who ſhall publiſh any ſuch Book without the Conſent of the Proprietor under his Hand, with Witneſſes, to forfeit the Books to the Proprietor. Who ſhall forthwith damask them, and make them waſte Paper; and forfeit 1 d. beſide for every Sheet found in his Cuſtody.

The Title to the Copy of the Book to be publiſhed, to be entred in the Regiſter-Book of the Company at the Hall of the ſaid Company: And the Conſent of the Proprietor entred.

Prices of Books not to be exceſſive.

If any Proprietor after the 25th of March 1710, ſhall ſet an unreaſonable Price upon any Book, any Perſon may complain to the Archbiſhop of Canterbury, to the Lord Chancellor, the Biſhop of London, the Lords Chief Juſtices, or Chief Baron, &c. who may call the Bookſeller before him, and enquire into the Cauſe of the Dearneſs; and upon Examination may reform and redreſs, and ſettle the Price. And if, after ſuch Price ſet, the Bookſeller ſhall expoſe to ſale, or ſell any Book at an higher rate, he forfeiteth 5 l. for every Book ſo ſold.

Nine Copies of every Book printed for as many Libraries.

Nine Copies of each Book printed on the beſt Paper, after the 10th of April 1710, are to be delivered to the Warehouſe-Keeper of the Company of Stationers at their Hall, before the Books ſhall be publiſhed, for the uſe of the Royal Library, the Libraries of the Univerſities of Cambridge and Oxford, for the Libraries of the four Univerſities of Scotland, of Sion College in London, and the Library of the Advocates in Scotland. And the Warehouſe-Keepers ſhall deliver the ſaid Copies within ten Days after demand, upon Forfeiture of the Value of the Book, and 5 l.

After the end of fourteen Years, the ſole Right of printing or diſpoſing Copies ſhall return to the Author for another fourteen Years.

Theſe are the Matters I have gathered, concerning this Company of Stationers.]

Legacies to the Poor of the Company.

R. B.

William Lamb gave to the Company of Stationers a Legacy of 6 l. 13 s. 4 d. for perpetual Relief of the Poor in the Pariſh Church of St. Faith's under St. Paul's: viz. To Twelve poor People, 12 d. in Money, and 12 d. in Bread, every Friday thro' the Year.

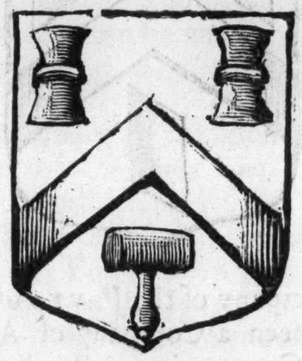
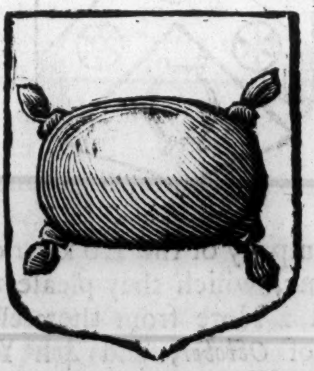
William Norton, Stationer (Treaſurer of Chriſt's Hoſpital) gave to his Company 6 l. 13 s. 4 d. yearly, to be lent to young Men free of the ſame Society.]

MARBLERS.



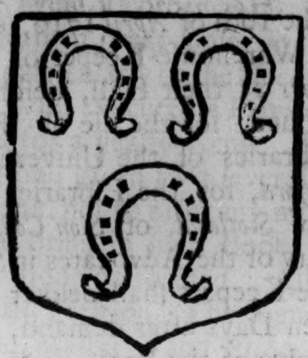
THE Company called by the name of MARBLERS, for their excellent Knowledge and Skill in the Art of inſculpting Perſonages for Tombs, Grave-ſtones, and Monuments in Churches, and elſewhere in Religious Places. Their Antiquity, and what reſpect they have carried, is unknown to me; nor can I find them to be incorporated, but to hold ſome Friendſhip with the Maſons, and are thought to be eſteemed among them in Fellowſhip.

WOOL-PACKERS.



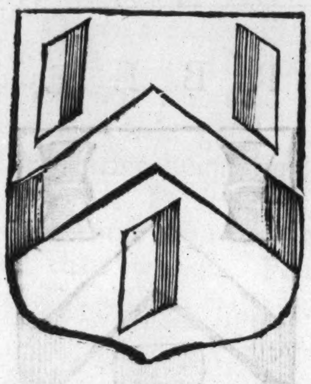
THE Company of WOOL-PACKERS, I know not what to ſay of them, becauſe it ſeems that there were ſuch Men in the Haunſe-days, when the Wool-Staple flouriſhed, and our Wool-Merchants had their Eminency. Further I cannot ſpeak of them, but leave them and their Arms to your Conſideration.

FARRIERS.



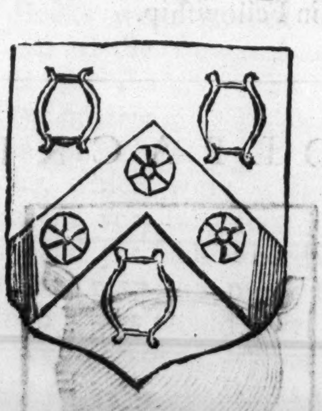
THE Company of the FARRIERS. My Relation concerning them, muſt needs be anſwerable to their own Allegation. Henry de Ferrariis, or Ferrers, a Norman born, came over with William the Conqueror, who gave unto the ſaid Henry de Ferrariis (as being his Farrier, or Maſter of his Horſe) the Honour of Tutbury, in the County of Stafford. Which was the firſt Honour given to the Farriers in England.

PAVIORS.



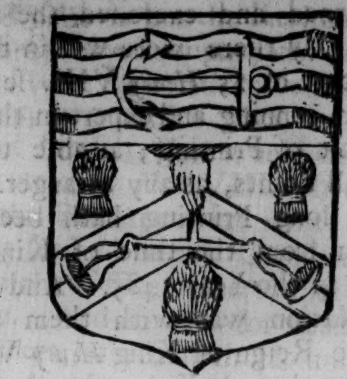
THE Company of the PAVIOURS, no doubt have been a Company of Antiquity, and maintained a Community or Brotherhood among themſelves; but for Incorporation, no Record doth teſtifie it to me, and therefore I have the leſs to ſay of them.

LORINORS.



THE Company of the LORINORS, or LORIMERS, which they pleaſe to accept. I have received a Note from themſelves, that the ſecond Day of October, and 4th Year of King Henry VII. the Wardens of the Art of Lorimers came into the Court of our Lord the King, in the Chamber of Guild-Hall, in the City of London, before Sir William Horne, Knight, then Lord Maior, and Aldermen of the ſaid City; Preferring then and there a Bill or Supplication to the Maior and Aldermen. And this is all that I can find remembred of them. [They are now incorporated, and have a Maſter and Wardens.] J. S.

BROWN BAKERS.



THE Company cf the BROWN BAKERS, a Society of long ſtanding and continuance, prevailed to have their Incorporating granted the ninth Day of June, in the 19th Year of the Reign of our Sovereign Lord King James I.

[Fraternitas Sancti Clementis Piſtorum London, Anno 1380.] Regiſt. Lond.

WOODMONGERS, or FUELLERS.

THE Company of the WOODMONGERS being a very ancient Fellowſhip, and of good and amiable* Agreement together for long time, came to be incorporated the 29th day of Auguſt, in the third Year of the Reign of our Sovereign Lord King James I. * Amicable.

The Supporters of theſe Arms are St. Katharine holding a Wheel, and St. John Baptiſt, with a Coat of Camels Hair: The Creſt, a Lion, Or, iſſuing out of a Thicket, proper. The Motto, Now is the Ax laid to the Root of the Tree.

Billeters. E. A. Whether ſome of theſe Woodmongers were called Billeters from dealing in Billets, I leave to conjecture. In the Regiſter of Wills, London, mention is made of one William Burford's Will, Citizen and Belleytere of London.

Cars and Carts governed ſometime by this Company. J. S. The Woodmongers in former times had intruſted to them by the City the Government of the Cars and Carts to be employed in the City and Liberties; becauſe, as may be ſuppoſed, they made uſe of ſo many in a continual Carriage of Fire-Wood and Coals, of Timber, Boards, &c. to the Inhabitants for their neceſſary Supplies. Sir Richard Brown, Knight, who was the Loyal Lord Maior, when King Charles II. came in, was of this Company: And in their behalf procured an Act of Common Council, Anno 1661, for them to order and diſpoſe of the Carts; that Truſt having been before in the Preſident and Governours of Chriſt's Hoſpital. But in the Year 1665, Laurence, Maior, this Power was by another Act taken from the Company, and committed again to the ſaid Hoſpital, where it ſtill abideth. A further Account of theſe Carmen will follow by and by. In that Act were ſeveral Rules and Orders made for this Company; viz.

Orders for Woodmongers. For the Prevention of the Deceit of Woodmongers in the Sale and Meaſure of their Coals, it was ordered, 'That all Sea-coals ſhall be filled and 'brought home to the Buyers in the Sea-Coal 'Meeters Sacks, or ſuch other Sacks as contain 'the full Meaſure of the Sea-coal Meeters Sacks; 'and ſhall be marked by the Keeper of Guild-'Hall for the time being, according to an Order 'of the Court of Aldermen made the 25th of Their Sacks.

‘ October, in the Maioralty of Sir Thomas Cambel, Knight.

Their Buſhel. ‘ All Perſons vending and uttering Sea-coal by Retail, ſhall, when they carry or ſend any Coals within London or Liberties, carry along with their Coals a good lawful Buſhel, ſealed according to the Buſhel of the Guildhall, allowed for meaſuring of Sea-coal: Which agreeth with the Fat anciently uſed for meaſuring Sea-coals. Which Buſhel ſhall be and contain in Breadth from out to out, (the Ring not exceeding half an Inch) nineteen Inches and an half; and in Depth within the Buſhel ſeven Inches and an half. If they bring Coals without ſuch Buſhel, to forfeit 10 s. for the firſt and ſecond Offence; and for third, the Car or Carrs of the Offender ſo to be ſeized, and carried to the new Store-Yard.

None to foreſtal Coals. ‘ And whereas the Woodmongers and others, uſing to ſell and utter Coals by Retail, have commonly gone or ſent down the River Thames, or otherwiſe travelled or employed their Agents, to meet the Ships and Veſſels coming from Newcaſtle, and other Parts, and at diſtant Places from the City, or by their Contract within the ſaid City and Liberties, have bought up and foreſtalled and engroſſed great Quantity of Coals, which ſhould have been brought to the City by the Owners and Sellers thereof, to be there ſold at reaſonable Prices: And the ſame have conveyed and brought to the City, to ſell again at high and exceſſive Prices, againſt the Cuſtom and Privileges of the City, to the Publick Detriment and Oppreſſion of the Poor: It was enacted, That no Perſon inhabiting within the City or Liberties, provide by Barge or Contract for any Sea-Coals, Scotch-Coal, Pit-Coals, or other Coals coming towards the City to be ſold, other than ſuch as ſhall be provided to be ſpent within their own private Houſes; nor ſhall ſell or utter the ſame by Retail or in Groſs; but that the Owners and Sellers thereof ſhall and may bring the ſame Coals to the City themſelves, here by them to be ſold, upon pain of forfeiting 5 s. for every Chaldron; and the like Sum for every Tun of Scotch-Coals or Pit-Coals.

Yeomen of the Wood-Wharfs. ‘ That the Yeomen of the Wood-Wharfs of this City diligently overſee, that all Perſons coming or repairing to this City with any Coals forementioned to be ſold, do obſerve the Orders and Rules before going; and uſe the like Diligence for the Diſcovery and Puniſhment of all Offenders in and about any Particulars thereof.

Penalties. ‘ And that all Pains, Penalties and Forfeitures in and by this Act limited, may be recovered by Action of Debt, Bill, or Information, in the name of the Chamberlain of the City, and in his Majeſty's Court holden before the Maior and Aldermen in the ſaid City, in the Chamber of the Guild-Hall. And after Recovery thereof, one Moiety to the Informer, after Charges deducted, and the other Moiety to the Poor of Chriſt's Hoſpital.

Carmen. The Carmen would make themſelves an ancient Fellowſhip, and joined in the ſame Corporation with the Woodmongers. And of later times fell out with the Woodmongers: who kept their own Carts for carrying out their Wood and Coals; to the great Prejudice of the Free Carmen of London. Whereupon they brought their Caſe before the Court of Common Council againſt the Woodmongers for working unlicenſed Carts; and for procuring 140 Carts by an Act of Common Council, to 420 old licenſed Carts, to the impoveriſhing of them. The Caſe by them ſtated was as followeth.

The CASE of the ancient Free CARMEN of London, humbly offered to the Conſideration of the Honourable Court of Common Council.

THE Carmen of London were made a Fellowſhip by the City in the Reign of Henry VIII. and in the 3d Year of King James I. were incorporated with the People called Fuellers, by the name of Woodmongers, and ſo continued till the Year 1668. About which time ſeveral Complaints being made to King Charles II. by divers great Perſonages, of the Woodmongers Frauds in buying and ſelling of Sea-Coal and other Fuel, his Majeſty recommended the Redreſs thereof to the City of London: Upon which a Committee of Common Council was choſen, who reported their Frauds and Abuſes in the Meaſure of their Fuel; and amongſt divers other Matters, That no effectual Courſe could be taken for Redreſſing thereof, but by prohibiting the Woodmongers from keeping and working Carts of their own for carrying abroad their Fuel. Upon which Report, the Court of Common Council paſſed an Act to effect the ſame.

The Free Carmen. That the Woodmongers ſtill continuing their evil Practices, particularly their grand Abuſes done to the Carmen, application was made to the King in Council for the Carmens Relief; upon which the Woodmongers appealed to the Parliament, where their Abuſes were made ſo apparent, that, for fear of Proſecution and Puniſhment, they ſurrendered their Gharter: And hereupon the Carmen were made a Fellowſhip by the City, by the name of The Free Carmen of the City of London, Ann. 1668.

That the Woodmongers contemning the aforementioned Act of Common Council, ſeveral Suits were brought againſt them for working unlicenſed Carts; and the Act being found to be deficient in matter of Form, upon Argument in the Courts at Weſtminſter, the Judges gave particular Directions how it ſhould be amended; which the Common Council having done, it was by them paſſed into an Act in the Year 1681. And the Woodmongers ſtill refuſing to conform, Actions were brought againſt them in London; which they removed into the Court of Common Pleas and Exchequer; where the Validity of the Act was argued by Council learned, and the Honourable the Judges of both Courts, pronounced the ſaid Act to be a good By-Law, and granted Procedendo's thereupon.

That the Woodmongers, after having put the City, Chriſt's Hoſpital, and the poor Carmen to the Expence of thirty Years Time and Treaſure, finding the ſaid By-Law to be binding, did apply themſelves to the City, and by their crafty Inſinuations, have obtained an Act of Common Council for allowing them 120 Carts, over and above the 420 old licenſed Carts which they now work; ſo that near 200 old licenſed Carts ſtand idle daily for want of their rightful Labour, to the impoveriſhing and undoing ſeveral hundreds of the ancient Free Carmen.

And now may it farther be offered to your Conſiderations, that we the ſaid poor Carmen of London, have paid time out of mind 400 l. a Year, for the Relief of the poor Children of Chriſt's Hoſpital. And tho' we are now oppreſt by the new Addition of 120, over and above the ancient number of 420, yet we continue to pay it ſtill.

And that the ſaid ancient Carmen do not deſire to leſſen the Authority the City of London and the Hoſpital ought of right to have over them, but to eſtabliſh the number of 420, thoſe being more than a ſufficient number to perform all the Services of the City.

And farther, are willing to pay 400 l. per Ann. into the Chamber of London, for the City's Uſe, over and above the 400 l. a Year paid to Chriſt's Hoſpital; and are likewiſe willing to pay 20 l. a Year towards making and maintaining a Cart-way up and down Tower Dock, if the Honourable Common Council ſhall pleaſe to reduce the Carts to the ancient number of 420, uſed by the Free Carmen: And are content with the Rates or Prices the City has already ſet and appointed for the Cartage of all ſorts of Goods.

An Act of Common Council was made, for the licenſing of Carts for theſe Woodmongers, in the Maioralty of Sir William Aſhurſt. Which may not be amiſs here alſo to inſert.

An ACT for Licenſing CARTS, to be uſed by the Freemen Woodmongers, or Traders in Fuel, that inhabit within the City and Liberties thereof.

Whereas there was formerly aſſigned, allowed and appropriated, by the Maior and Commonalty, and Citizens of the City of London, unto the Woodmongers or Traders in Fuel, inhabiting within the ſaid City and the Liberties thereof, a certain number of Carts, for carrying of Sea-Coals and other Fuel, which have been part of the number of four hundred and twenty Cars or Carts allowed, marked and appointed for the general Service of this City: But of late years the number of Inhabitants being greatly increaſed, and by reaſon thereof the neceſſary uſe of Street-Cars or Carts is much increaſed alſo; and therefore all the ſaid four hundred and twenty Cars have been uſed only for Street-Cars and Carts, whereby the Woodmongers and Traders in Fuel, within this City and the Liberties thereof, are in a great meaſure diſabled to manage and carry on their ſaid Trade and Imployments: The which they have humbly repreſented unto this Court of Common Council, and prayed Relief therein.

And this Court having taken the ſame into ſerious Conſideration, do find it neceſſary to encreaſe the ſaid number of four hundred and twenty Cars and Carts, ſo allowed and appointed as aforeſaid, ſo far forth as may be neceſſary for the ſaid Woodmongers or Dealers in Fuel, only for the management and carrying on their ſaid Trades and Imployments; and alſo for enabling them to furniſh the Citizens and other Inhabitants of this City and Liberties, with Coals and other Fuel, at as cheap and eaſy Rates and Prices, as they or any others may or can.

Be it Enacted therefore by the Right Honourable the Lord Maior, Aldermen, and Commons in Common Council aſſembled, and by the Authority of the ſame, That there ſhall be allowed, marked, and appointed to and for the ſole Uſe and Imployment of the Woodmongers, or Traders in Fuel, (being Freemen, and inhabiting within the City of London and the Liberties thereof, and no other) a fitting and convenient number of Cars and Carts, not exceeding one hundred and twenty, other than and beſides the aforeſaid number of four hundred and twenty Cars and Carts, now uſed as Street-Cars and Carts, as aforeſaid:

The which Cars and Carts ſo to be allowed, marked and appointed, ſhall be appropriated unto them the ſaid Woodmongers, or Traders in Fuel, for the ſole uſe, management and carrying on the Trade or Imployment of Woodmongers, or Dealers in Fuel only; and ſhall be divided and diſtributed to and amongſt them from time to time, as may be moſt convenient for them, and leaſt to the Annoyance and Obſtruction of the Publick Streets and Paſſages of this City, and the Liberties thereof; any Act of Common Council, or other Law, Uſage, or Cuſtom of this City, now in being and in force, to the contrary thereof in any wiſe notwithſtanding.

And be it farther Enacted by the Authority aforeſaid, That the ſaid Cars and Carts ſo to be allowed, marked and appointed by virtue of this Act, ſhall not be, nor taken or eſteemed to be appurtenant to the ſeveral and reſpective Wharf or Wharfs, to which the ſame or any of them are or ſhall be ſo allowed or appointed, nor ſhall be ſold or diſpoſed of by ſuch or any other the Woodmongers or Traders in Fuel, in any manner howſoever.

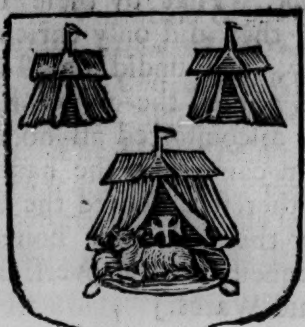
And that the Cars and Carts ſo to be allowed and appointed to the ſaid Woodmongers or Traders in Fuel, ſhall be burnt with a Faggot-mark on both the outſides thereof, and ſhall have alſo thereupon a piece of Braſs with the true number of ſuch Cars or Carts; and the Raves thereof ſhall be higher than the Raves of the Street-Cars or Carts, to keep the Fuel the ſafer from falling off and hurting the People in the Streets, and alſo the better to diſtinguiſh them from the ſaid other Cars or Carts.

And that the ſaid Wharf-Carts nor Cars, nor any of them, ſhall work in the Streets in any other Work than only in carrying of Coals and other Fuel, to and from the reſpective Wharfs, belonging to ſuch Perſons to whom the ſaid Cars or Carts ſhall be allowed: Upon pain, That for every time ſuch Wharf-Car or Cart ſhall work, or be otherwiſe employed for Wages, Hire, or Reward, the ſaid Car or Cart ſhall forfeit and pay for every ſuch Offence the Sum of Five Pounds.

And all and every the Licenſes that ſhall be given to any ſuch Woodmonger or Trader in Fuel, whoſe Carts or Cars ſhall be ſo hired and imployed, contrary to the true intent and meaning of this preſent Act, ſhall from thence be ſuſpended, till ſuch reſpective Penalty or Penalties ſhall be paid and ſatisfied: And every Perſon ſo offending, ſhall (till the ſaid reſpective Sums be paid) be diſabled to work any of his ſaid Cars or Carts; notwithſtanding any License or Licenſes to ſuch Perſon or Perſons, granted by virtue of this Act.

And for the better putting this Act in due Execution, and for the more equal and impartial Diſtribution of the ſaid Wharf-Cars or Carts, to and amongſt the ſaid Woodmongers or Traders in Fuel, with due reſpect to their ſeveral and reſpective Wants and Occaſions in the ſaid reſpective Trades: Be it further Enacted by the Authority aforeſaid, That the Right Honourable Sir Thomas Lane, Knight, Lord Maior elect, Sir Thomas Stamp, Knight, Sir James Houblon and Sir Francis Child, Knights and Aldermen of this City; and Mr. Caddon, Mr. Deputy Eyre, &c.

UPHOLSTERS.



THE Company of UPHOLSTERS or UPHOLDERS, were in elder times of Reckoning and Eſteem, and had a Brotherhood or Fellowſhip among themſelves. But concerning their Incorporating I find it not recorded.

Deceit in the Sacks of Feathers imported, &c. J. S.

In the beginning of Queen Elizabeth's Reign, and perhaps before, great was the Deceit by theſe Tradeſmen uſed in their Feathers, in their Quilts and Coverlids, in their Quiſhions for Chairs and Stools. And from 1578, and forwards, moſt Feathers that were in Sacks came out of the Low-Countries, ſo packed up, out of the Spoil of Houſes, with Lime, Dirt, Duſt, Stones and all heavy Rubbiſh, to make them Weight; that when they did drive a Sack, to make Beds of them, they did garboil out of every Hundred, the Half of ſuch Baggage and Refuſe Stuff; and yet the Feathers ſtill remained unmade clean for the Purpoſe, the Lime would cleave ſo faſt on them. A better ſort of Sacks of Feathers came out of Eaſtland; but near hand as faulty: which in driving fell out a little better, but not much.

Stuffs for Quilts and Coverlids brought from France, and Flanders.

All made Stuff, that came out of France for Quilts and Coverlids, for Inns and Husbandmen of the Country, came all ſtuffed with Cow Hair, taken from the Head by the Tanners. And ſuch Stuff made as came from thence or Flanders in Cuſhions, or for Chairs and Stools were filled with Thiſtle-Down, naughty Flocks, and all Baggage in them, that would breed Worms, and eat the Stuff, and ſtink. And ſo did they fill all their Mattraſſes.

One ſues to Search the Abuſes of the Upholſters.

One Cordel about the Year 1585, ſued to the Queen, that conſidering theſe Abuſes in the Trade of Upholſters, he might be appointed to ſearch and ſeal their Commodities and to have the Place of a Searcher, and accordingly to ſeize ſuch as were thus abuſed, as forfeit by Law. The Lord Treaſuter Burghley privately ſent Peter Oſborn, his Remembrancer, a diſcreet and honeſt Man, into the City, to get Information, the beſt he could, in this Matter. Who, without mentioning Cordel's Suit, asking an Upholſter, whether a Search would not help? He ſaid, All Retailers were then undone: For all their Stuff of that kind was ſuch, and forfeited by the Statute. But if it began with the Merchants that brought it in, they would bring no more ſuch, as he thought, till they might have better.

Thoughts of making this Company a Corporation.

Then the Upholſter complaining, how the Upholſters were no Corporation, Oſborn moved, whether Incorporating them would help, putting the Search thereof into their Hands; he thought it would, if they had Authority: And tho' there were but ſix of their Company of any Subſtance, they would beſtow an 100 l. to have it; that this Suit of the Search which then they heard of, might ſtay. The Iſſue was, that Oſborn ſent the Warden of the Company of Upholſters to the Lord Treaſurer. And his Advice was, that Cordel ſhould have ſome good Sum to procure their Corporation, and ſome part of the Forfeitures upon Searches, and the Queen adding ſome little Portion on her part, would advance well Cordel's Suit, and bring a Reformation of a great Inconvenience to the Common Weal.

A Searcher for the Frauds of the Upholſters.

I find again in the Year 1594, publick Complaints made to the Lord Treaſurer, of divers Frauds and Miſchiefs in Upholſters Commodities: As of the Badneſs of the Feathers, of their Smelling, of Fen-Down, of Squib and Strick Hair, of ſtuffing French Quilts with Cows Hair; of Wares made up of Flocks and part of Wool. And for the Redreſs of theſe things Petitions were put up by ſeveral of the Upholſters: And they (as it ſeems) the honeſteſt of them. The Lord Treaſurer upon this ſent his Letters (together with the Petition offered him) to certain of the eminenteſt, and of them to know, if thoſe Informations were true; and if they were willing a Searcher ſhould be appointed to look into them.

Information from themſelves of the need thereof.

Theſe in their Anſwer (excepting two or three of them, who diſſented) acknowledged the Abuſes committed in the ſaid Trade were very great, and rather greater than was expreſt in the Petition. And that altho' ſeveral Laws had been made heretofore in the Times of King Henry VII. and King Edward VI. for Reformation of the ſaid Abuſes; yet for want of good Execution, the ſaid Deceits were much more encreaſed. That in reſpect whereof, becauſe they that were Traders in the ſaid Occupation, conſiſting of divers Companies, namely, Upholſters, Drapers, Merchant Taylors, Skinners and Clothworkers, could not conveniently reform the ſame among themſelves, their Deſire was, if her Majeſty paſſed any Graunt for the Overſight and Correction of the ſame Abuſes, that then the Perſon to whom the ſaid Graunt ſhould be made, ſhould call to his Aid and Aſſiſtance, as oft as he ſhould overſee any of theſe Abuſes, two or three honeſt Subſidy Men, of ſome of the aforeſaid five Companies: Whereby no Wrong might be done to any Man, but that the Commonwealth might receive thereby ſuch Benefit as was deſired. In the which Courſe, they aſſured his Honour, there would be a Reformation of intolerable Abuſes, and a general Good done.

A Searcher oppoſed.

Feathers.

But whatever Anſwer they gave, this was oppoſed by a great many others: Who in another Petition to the ſaid Lord Treaſurer, alledged theſe things; That of Feathers were divers ſorts, and that they did much vary in their own Nature: And that it was not poſſible to make thoſe good that of themſelves were bad. That thoſe that ſmelled could not be made ſweet, but by ſome Continuance of wearing. That the Duſt that was in them was by reaſon of the Dryneſs and Sandineſs of the Soil wherein they were bred. That as for the Rubbiſh and Quills, they might be put into them by the Parties who had the uſing of them, and the other by the Negligence of them that had the making of them. Which they humbly beſeeched his Honour might be look'd unto by Men experienced in ſuch Caſes, of the Company of Upholſters, and not by ſuch as only ſought for private Gain. For unleſs they underhand agreed with the Merchant (which would breed great Inconveniences) it was to be feared that the Merchant, ſeeing his Wares toſſed, garbled and ript up, at length they ſhould have neither good nor bad. That there were none to be found, but Exceptions might be taken againſt them in ſome Caſe: And that the Prices at that Day were ſo exceſſive, that where they had been in their Remembrance at 5 d. now they were at 8 d. the Pound, and not ſo good. That if they ſpake of good, there was but one Country, which was France, from whence they came; where they did once a Year pluck their Geeſe alive, and let them go again. And this was the Cauſe that no other Feathers would be ſweet. Which French Feathers would be but few, if they had no others.

Down.

Secondly, For the Downe, in ſome Caſes they found it to be tolerable: that is, for ſtuffing of Cuſhions and making of Bedding for the Poor; whoſe Ability might not reach higher. And as for the Stuff it ſelf, they knew it would breed nothing that was hurtful to the Health of the Body. Only in the firſt Year that it was gathered, it would breed a Worm while it was green: but being a Year old, the Stuff was as ſweet and clean as any Feathers. And for this, Order was taken by them, that none ſhould be uſed, until it were a Year old; as alſo by the Parties that gathered them, which were the poor People in the Iſle of Ely. For the mingling of this Stuff with Feathers, or any other Stuff to deceive any, was a thing which they never heard of or knew.

Squib and Strick Hair.

Thirdly, As touching Squib and Strick Hair, they were of Opinion it was not to be uſed (Cow Hair excepted) and they thought was not uſed of any: For Downe was come in the place of it. Neither could they ſee, that it could altogether be taken away, Flocks being of ſo high Price, that the Poor could not reach them: Neither could the Quantity of Flocks be gotten in all England to ſerve for this purpoſe. Whereby many poor People ſhould lye in the Straw, or full hard. And it was uſed for Mattreſſes to lye under Featherbeds, to keep them from the Cords.

Cow Hair.

Fourthly, For French Quilts which were ſtufft with Cow Hair, there had not any quantity come over in four Years: Neither did they look for any quantity; altho' they were much deſired of many; and eſpeciallly of Inn-keepers, who knew that they were ſtufft with Cow Hair; nor could find any thing for that Price ſo convenient to ſerve their purpoſe.

Fifthly, That whereas ſome ſued, that all Wares, wherein there was any Cow Hair, might be forfeited, it was a thing unreaſonable. For ſo ſhould the moſt part of our Coverings that come out of Flanders, called Varder, and a hundred a Week that came out of Gloceſterſhire, be forfeited. And it being reported, that Buckrams which came out of France, and Ticks which came out of Flanders (whereof they then had but few, and thoſe dear) were intended to be ſealed. The Rumour of which Sealing and Garbling their Commodities was ſo noiſed among the Merchants, that they ſhould want that which otherwiſe would have been brought over in ſome reaſonable ſort, to the great prejudice of the Commonwealth.

Flocks.

Sixthly, Wares made part of Flocks and part of Wool, as Dornix and certain Coverings made at Sudbury, whether mixed with Flocks or not, they were not able truly to ſay; but for theſe, Sealers were appointed; and yet never were they ſo bad, nor ſo dear.

And theſe were their Anſwers to the pre-ſuppoſed Abuſes in their Trade: And in concluſion they beſeeched his Lordſhip, that by his Authoriry there might not any ſuch Thing or Graunt paſs againſt them as was required: Which if he ſhould permit, it would be to the utter Overthrow and impoveriſhing of the Trade, and the great Hindrance of her Majeſty's Subjects.

Secret Gains made by the Upholſters.

Notwithſtanding this Petition of the Company of Upholſters, the other Party (who called themſelves alſo the Company) preſented their Petition againſt the former, with their Anſwers to each Article above-mentioned; which they called falſe Suggeſtions; and craved leave to unfold to the Lord Treaſurer the true Reaſons, why they withſtood the Reformation of the ſame Abuſes: Viz. That they ordinarily bought Fen-Downe and Thiſtle-Downe for an Half-penny a Pound, and ſold the ſame among Feathers for 6 d. the Pound; and amongſt Feather-Downe, for 16 d. the Pound. That they took coarſe Canvas Cloth, being worth about 2 s. and 6 d. for a Tick of a Bed, and ſtufft the ſame with Fen-Downe mingled with Squib, Cow Hair and Strike, which coſt them about 6 d. and ſold the ſame for a Bed to the Poor, for 10 or 12 s. and ſometimes more, which in very ſhort time turned all to Worms. And it was moſt filthy and corrupt. That by theſe deceitful and wicked means, they did only enrich themſelves, being not many, and undid almoſt all the whole Company, and abuſed the whole Realm. And, which greatly diſcomforted all honeſt Men, the greateſt Cuſtom came into the hands of theſe Abuſers. And therefore deſired the Lord Treaſurer, to further the ſaid moſt honeſt, reaſonable and lawful Requeſt, for the overſeeing and correction of the ſaid Wares.]

TURNERS.

THE Company of TURNERS had long continued a loving Fellowſhip or Brotherhood among themſelves, to the good Example of others. They became incorporated in the Second Year of King James.

The Turners made Meaſures for Corn, and Liquids. Red Book J. S.

Theſe Turners anciently were Meaſure-makers: And there is this Record in the Chamber of London, concerning an Oath ſome of them took before the Maior about making Meaſures. Henry le Tournour, dwelling in Woodſtreet, Richard le Tournour, John le Tournour, in Swithin's Lane of Candelwikeſtreete; Rob. le Tournour, living at Flete; Will. le Tournour, without Biſhopſgate; Richard le Corveiſer, Tournour, living in Wodeſtrete: All theſe were ſworn on Saturday next before the Feaſt of St. Thomas the Apoſtle, An. 4 Edw. II. before the Maior and Aldermen, that for the futute they make not any Meaſures but Gallons, Potels and Quarts: And that they make no falſe Meaſures; as Meaſures called Chopines and Gylles; nor to make them after the manner of Boxes, or Glaſſes, or after any other manner. And that all ſuch falſe Meaſures, of what ſort ſoever they be, and whereſoever it ſhall happen they find them, they ſhall attach into the Hands of the Turners; or in any other place, as well in the Hands of Strangers as of Freemen: And ſhall cauſe them to come to Gyhald before the Maior; and ſhall preſent them, under pain of heavy Forfeiture.]

GLASIERS.

THE Company called of the GLASIERS, have been a Society of ancient Memory, and maintained a League of brotherly Affection together: But becauſe I am able to ſay nothing of their Incorporating, I am the more willing to paſs them over.

[The Arms and Creſt were confirmed to them by Robert Cook, Clarencieux King of Arms, Anno 1588, and in the Viſitation of London, made by Sir Henry St. George, Richmond, Deputy to Sir Richard St. George, Knt. Clarencieux King of Arms; the Demy Lion in the Chief altered to a Lion paſſant, Gold, 1634. CLARKES.

THE Company of CLARKES, commonly termed PARISH-CLARKES, I find to be very ancient in Continuance, and ſtand regiſtred in the Books of Guild-Hall. They became firſt to be incorporated in the ſeventeenth Year of King Henry III. and followed on ſtill in all the Princes Reigns, to the ninth Year of our Sovereign Lord King James I.

A Compoſition was anciently made between the Chamberlain of the City, and the Pariſh-Clarks, for having the Liberty of the City.

Pariſh Clarks Guide, printed 1698.

They were a Guild or Fraternity for 400 Years and upwards; being firſt incorporated by King Henry III. Known then by the name of the Brotherhood of St. Nicolas. Whoſe Hall was near Little St. Helen's by Biſhopſgate-ſtreet within the Gate, at the then Sign of the Angel. Where the Pariſh Clarks had ſeven Almſhouſes for poor Clarks Widows, as Stow ſhews. Unto this Fraternity Men and Women of the firſt Quality, Eccleſiaſtical and others, joined themſelves: Who, as they were great Lovers of the Church-Muſick in general, ſo their Beneficence unto Pariſh Clarks in particular, is abundantly evident by ſome ancient Manuſcripts at their Common Hall in Great Wood-ſtreet. Wherein Footſteps of their gteat Bounty appear, by the large Gifts and Revenues given for the Maintenance and Encouragement of ſuch as ſhould devote themſelves to the Study and Practice of this Noble and Divine Science; and in which the Pariſh Clerks did then excel, Singing being their peculiar Province.

Their Privileges and Charter.

King Charles I. renewed their Charter, and conferred upon them very ample Privileges and Immunities; and incorporated them by the name of Maſter, Wardens, and Fellowſhip of Pariſh Church Clarks of the City and Suburbs of London, and the Liberties thereof; the City of Weſtminſter, the Borough of Southwark, and the fifteen Out-Pariſhes adjacent. And of which Privileges this is not the leaſt; viz. That in reſpect of their great and continual Service, and the Charge which they undergo, they ſhould be free from all Offices, unleſs they deſired or yielded themſelves thereunto. Which Privilege was confirmed to them by the Order of the Lord Maior and Court of Aldermen, in the Maioralty of Sir Robert Viner, in the .... of King Charles II. in theſe Words, viz. All Pariſh Clarks to be exempt from all Pariſh Offices, as by their Charter, and by an Order of the Maioralty of the City of London. But if any Pariſh Clark within the Bills of Mortality ſhall happen to live in any other Pariſh than that of which he is Clark, he may not expect that Privilege; but muſt take his Lot, and bear his Office as well as other Pariſhioners. Another Privilege is, that they are allowed to have a Printing-Preſs in their Common Hall, for the printing of their Weekly and General Bills of Mortality. And a Printer for that purpoſe is appointed them by the Archbiſhop of Canterbury for the time being.

To report Chriſtnings and Burials weekly.

By their Charter alſo they are enjoined to make Report of all the Chriſtnings and Burials, which do happen in their ſeveral reſpective Pariſhes, on every Tueſday weekly by ſix a Clock in the Afternoon at the fartheſt, (but according to the By-Laws, by Two) that the King or Queen may have a true Account thereof upon Wedneſday following. For whom a Book is drawn up by the Clark of the Company, and ſent to his Majeſty; and another Book prepared for his Lordſhip's own uſe.

Their Oath.

They are by their Charter empowered to adminiſter an Oath to the Members of their Corporation, upon their firſt Admiſſion; "To be obſervant of, and obedient unto all ſuch wholſom "Rules and Orders made or to be made, which "may conduce to the common Profit and Benefit of the ſaid Company or Fellowſhip." And before the Oath be miniſtred to one newly choſen a Pariſh Clark, he muſt procure a Licenſe under the Seal of the Office of the Biſhop of London. Upon producing which, the next Court-day he may be ſworn, and received as a Brother of the Society of Pariſh Clarks. Notwithſtanding, if the Perſon have not obtained his Licenſe as aforeſaid, he may not be refuſed his Admittance, provided he produce a Certificate under the hand of the Miniſter and Churchwardens of ſuch his Election into the Place of Pariſh Clark.

Rules for Pariſh Clarks.

Rules and Orders are printed and given to every Pariſh Clark, when he is ſworn: The ſame with thoſe that are appointed to be hung up in a Frame in the Common Hall, where all that are concerned may take notice of them. They chiefly relate to direct the Clark in his Care concerning the Bills of Mortality; and to take a careful Account of all that Die in his Pariſh, or are Chriſtened; with their Names, Diſeaſes, Places of Dwelling, &c. And to bring all in duly to the Hall, in order to the printing the ſaid Bills. But again, to look a little upon them in times foregoing.

The Pariſh Clarks Meetings in Guild-Hall Chappel.

Formerly this Society of Pariſh Clarks uſed to attend great Funerals; going before the Hearſe, and ſinging, with their Surplices hanging on their Arms, till they came to the Church.

Some certain Days in the Year they had their publick Feaſts, which they celebrated with Singing and Muſick. And then received into their Society, ſuch Perſons as delighted in Singing, or were ſtudious of it. Theſe their Meetings and Performances were in Guild-Hall College, or Chappel. Thus the 27th of September, 1560, on the Eve thereof, they had Even Song, and on the Morrow there was a Communion. And after, they retired to Carpenters-Hall to Dinner. And May the 11th, 1562, they kept their Communion at the ſaid Guild Hall Chappel, and received ſeven Perſons into their Brotherhood. And then repaired to their own Hall to Dinner. And after Dinner, a goodly Play of the Children of Weſtminſter, with Waits, and Regals, and Singing.]

I FIND anciently there were divers other Myſteries, which are now aboliſhed and gone, or ſwallowed up in other Societies. As,

MEGUSERS.

THESE were a Company who dealt in the Skins of dead Horſes and other Creatures, and flawed them. Which they ſometimes did within the City. Which was ſuch an Annoyance, that it ſeems it was complained of to the Maior and Aldermen. And in the Maioralty of Richard de Reſham, Ann. 4. Regni Regis Edw. fil. Regis Edw. Walter le Whitawyer, Richard de Hundeſdich, John le Megucer, Richard le Megucer, were ſworn, that they ſhall never hereafter flaw, or cauſe to be flawed, dead Horſes within the City or Suburbs, by themſelves or others, under pain of danger to fall upon them. And if any of the aforeſaid ſworn Perſons ſhould hereafter ſee any flawing any Horſe within the City or Suburbs, preſently to inform the Maior for the time being.

CAPPERS.

CAPELLARII, Cappers. Hugh Fitz-Otonis being Cuſtos of the City, 54 Hen. III. were made certain Ordinances for the Trade of the Cappers, in the preſence of the Aldermen, and by their unanimous Conſent; viz. That none ſhould make a Cap but of good White or Grey Wool, or Black. That none dye a Cap made of White or Grey Wool, into Black; becauſe there is very great Deceit therein; for coming into the Rain, they fall, or loſe Colour, &c.

There was an Act 13 Eliz. in favour of theſe Cappers, which Trade began then to grow into decay. In this Act was declared, what abundance of poor People, with Women and Children, were employed; as alſo halt, decrepit, lame, in ſundry Exerciſes belonging to that Trade; as, Carders, Spinners, Knitters, Parters of Wool, Forcers, Thickers, Dreſſers, Walkers, Dyers, Battelers, Shearers, Preſſers, Edgers, Liners, Bandmakers, and other Exerciſes; who have thereby maintained themſelves and their Families. And the ſaid Act mentioneth, how the wearing of theſe Caps were very decent and comely for all Eſtates and Degrees, eſpecially for ſuch as inhabit Cities, Boroughs, Towns, Villages and Hamlets within the Realm. The Act alſo ſpecified what ſort of Perſons muſt wear theſe Caps, and when: Viz. All above the Age of ſix Years, except Maidens, Ladies and Gentlewomen inhabiting within Cities, Boroughs, Towns, &c. and except Noble Perſons, Lords, Knights, and Gentlemen of the Poſſeſſion of 20 Mark by the Year; and except all that have born Office of Worſhip in any City, &c. Theſe ſhall wear upon the Sabbath and Holidays (unleſs they travel out of the City, Towns, &c.) upon their Heads one Cap of Wool, knit, thicked, and dreſſed in England, upon pain of Forfeiture of 3 s. 4 d.]

THE Company of the WATERMEN, that have their maintenance by Rowing in Boats on the River of Thames, being a Brotherhood under the Power and Command of the Lord Maior of London, I leave them for this time.

There be 40000 Watermen upon the Rolls of the Company, as I have been told by one of the Company; and that upon occaſion they can furniſh 20000 Men for the Fleet; and that there were 8000 then in the Service.

There is a Book (the Original whereof is in the Town-Clerk's Office) intitled, The Conſtitution of the Company of Watermen and Lightermen, as amended by the Right Honourable the Court of Lord Maior and Aldermen. APOTHECARIES.

THE Company of the APOTHECARIES, that have divided themſelves from the ancient Society of Grocers, grew ſo highly favoured by our Sovereign Lord King James I. that (as I have heard) he called them His Company; and granted them Order for Incorporation the ſixth Day of December, in the fifteenth Year of his Highneſs's Reign.

The Office of the Men of this Myſtery is to make up and prepare Phyſick for the Sick or Diſeaſed, according to the Preſcriptions and Directions of the Phyſician: And ſo are to be Men ſkilled in Plants and Herbs, in Roots and Druggs, and to underſtand and exerciſe Chymiſtry. And hereby they become Aſſiſtants to the Phyſician in helping Men in Pain and Miſery, and in the Recovery of Life and Health. 'Which being, as a 'learned Phyſician writes, the moſt valuable thing 'in the World, that Art whereby the firſt may 'be prolonged, and the other preſerved or reſtored, muſt needs challenge the Eſteem and Regard of all. Theſe are the proper and genuine

The Office and Uſe of the Apothecary. J. S.

Preſent State of the Practice of Phyſick. By Dr. Pitts. Printed 1702.

Ends of the Art of Phyſick: An Art to which, under God, ſome owe their Conception, others their Birth; and which is helpful to Mankind in all the Periods of Life. It eaſeth the Pained, and comforteth the Sick and Languiſhing; it giveth Sight to the Blind, Hearing to the Deaf, and Feet to the Lame. It cheareth the Melancholick, reſtoreth the Uſe of Reaſon to the Diſtracted, and procureth Sleep and Quiet to the Reſtleſs. It extinguiſheth the Flame of Feavers, draineth and drieth up the Deluge of Dropſies, and putteth Life and Beauty into the Faces of the Fair Sex. In ſhort, it cureth Diſeaſes almoſt innumerable; and if not all and always, 'tis becauſe Sin, that hath made Death certain, muſt needs alſo make ſome Diſeaſes incurable.' But through this Commendation primarily belongeth to the Phyſician's Learning, yet the Apothecary's Art, which is ſo ſubſervient, and ſuch an Handmaid thereunto, muſt not be deprived of its Share in it.

Diſſenſion between the Phyſicians and the Apothecaries.

A Controverſy happened of late between theſe Apothecaries and the Phyſicians; the Phyſicians complaining, that the Apothecaries did exceed their Office and Trade, in taking upon them to adminſter Phyſick; and ſo intruded into the Phyſicians Province: And alſo that they wanted ſome Skill, and ſome Care, in making and preparing their Phyſick. Wherefore they not long ago ſued one Roſe an Apothecary, for ſeveral Months Practice. In which time he had by his own Advice miniſtred Medicines to one Man, to a conſiderable Value. This was proved in Court. But yet the Jury heſitated, as to the finding it for the Plaintiff. Whereat the Court wondering, the Lord Chief Juſtice asked them, Whether they did not believe the Evidence? To which the Foreman replied, That the Defendant had done only what other Apothecaries did. Whereupon my Lord ſet the Jury right. And then they brought in a Verdict for the Plaintiff.

Number of Apothecaries.

It is thought by ſome, that London and the Suburbs are overſtocked with Apothecaries; reputing the number of them to be near a thouſand: Whereas in Paris there were but fifty one; in Stockholm and Copenhagen but four or five apiece; and in Hamburgh but one Apothecary's Shop. For they ſay, that one Apothecary's Shop is ſufficient to make up at leaſt three Phyſicians Preſcriptions, and they of good Buſineſs.

Incorporated at firſt with the Grocers.

In the 4th of King James I. the King incorporated the Apothecaries with the Grocers, to be one Body Corporate and Politick. They were again divided from the Grocers, and made a Body Corporate of their own by a Charter of the ſame King, to wit, 13 Jac. 1. May the 30th. In which Charter are all the Apothecaries Names inſerted, beginning with William Beſſe, amounting to 104. Which we may conclude to be all of that Calling in London and the Suburbs.

Their Phyſick Garden.

This Company have a Phyſick Garden in Chelſea, repleniſhed with various Plants. Thoſe that have the Privilege of going into it, have a Ticket given them, which hath the Impreſſion of a Phœbus on it, and round it is this ſuitable Motto, Herbarum eſt ſubjecta potentia nobis; taken out of Ovid, and follows immediately after the Words the Company took for their Motto; viz. Opiferq; per Orbem dicor.

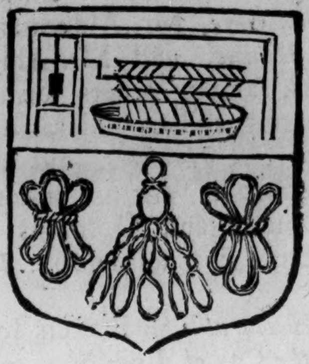
Not to ſerve Pariſh-Offices.

Anno 10 Regin. Annæ, 1712, an Act paſſed for reviving and continuing ſeveral Acts therein mentioned. One whereof was, for exempting Apothecaries from ſerving the Offices of Conſtable and Scavenger, and other Pariſh and Ward Offices, and ſerving upon Juries. This Act referred to, was that made 6 & 7 Reg. Guliel. 3. which was to continue for the ſpace of ſeven Years. Which Act was continued by an Act made 1 Regin. Annæ, for a further time of ſeven Years; and to be in force, after the Expiration thereof, for the ſpace of eleven Years.

SILK-THROWERS.



The Supporters and Creſt of this Company. Ex Offic. Armor.

J. S.

THE Supporters and Creſt of this Company being not here preſented, were as follow: The Supporters are two Turks in Habit, with Turbants upon their Heads. On the right ſide a Turk ſupporting the Arms, habited in Silk, Gules, decked, Gold; holding on his Right Hand a Battle-Ax, Or. On his left Arm a Skean of Silk, hanging down, proper: His Robe turned down about his Neck, Azure, eſcaloped. His Face with Whiskers, proper. Upon his Head a Turbant, Argent, charged in the middle with a Lozenge, Gold; with a Taſſel upen the top, Gules. The Turk on the Siniſter ſide alſo ſupports the Arms with his Right Hand; Robed Blew, and decked Gold; holding in his Left Hand, proper, a Scymitar ſheathed, all Gold, a Skean of Silk hanging down his Left Arm, proper. His Robe about his Neck as before, turned down, eſcaloped, Gules. His Face and Hair and Whiskers, proper. The Turbant on his Head, Argent, charged with a Lozenge, Or.

For the Creſt, Upon an Hill, Vert, a Mulberry-Tree, proper; Silk-Worms hanging about the Tree, and on the Leaves of the Tree, crawling.]

This Company of Silk-Throwers, or Silk-Throwsters, having gained their Trade and Skill of Silk-Throwing from the Strangers, ſince Anno quinto of Queen Elizabeth, and being for the moſt part Freemen of this City, were made a Fellowſhip of this City, 4 die Junii, Anno 19 of King James I. Sir Francis Jones, Knight, being then Lord Maior. And 23. die Aprilis, Anno 5 Caroli Regis, they were incorporated by the name of the Maſter, Wardens, Aſſiſtants, and Commonalty of the Trade, Art and Myſtery of Silk-Throwers of the City of London.

Silk-Twiſters.

There were ſeveral Tradeſmen, called Silk-Twiſters, Foreigners, towards the beginning of Queen Elizabeth's Reign, living in St. Martin's Liberty; who ſeemed tc be of the ſame Art and Calling. Among the trading Strangers that came over into England from Flanders, and thoſe Parts for their Religion, in the ſaid Queen Elizabeth's Reign, there were divers of this ſort that dealt in dreſſing and preparing Silk for other Trades.

Thrown or wrought Silk forbidden to be imported, 1 Hen. VII. cap. 9.

Tho' this Craft of Throwing Raw Silk is generally thought and ſaid to have been but of late ſtanding in England, viz. in the Reign of Queen Elizabeth, yet it is plain, that Thrown Silk was known in England long before. For in the 12th of Edward IV. it was enacted, that no Silk, nor Colein Silk, Thrown or wrought, ſhould be brought in, upon pain of Forfeiture thereof. Which Act was renewed and confirmed in the 1ſt of King Henry VII. Which Acts ſuppoſe that it had been brought in before. But the Throwing of it in England was not known nor practiſed till many Years after.

An Order was entered and regiſtered in the Archives at Guild-Hall, London, concerning the Silk-

An Order of the Court of Aldermen for the Silk-Throwers. E lib. ſuor. Statuor.

Throwers, petitioning to be made a Corporation. Which was as follows, ‘ Anno 1621, April 17, Anno Regis Jacobi 19. Johnes Maior, Benet, Low, Leman, Cockain, Barkham, Preſcot, Proby, Gore, Cotton, Hacket, Johnſon, Hearne, Hamerſley, Dean, Cambel, &c. Aldermen, Allen and Ducy, Sheriffs.

‘ This Day Mr. Alderman Barkham, Mr. Alderman John Gore, Mr. Alderman Haliday, Mr. Alderman Hearne, and Mr. Alderman Cambel, Committees, among others formerly appointed to take Hearing and Conſideration of the Petition of the Silk-Throwers, did deliver to this Court a Report in Writing under their Hands, of their Doings and Opinions therein. The Tenor whereof is as followeth: Viz.

To the Right Honourable Sir Francis Johnes, Kt. Lord Maior of the City of London; and to the Right Worſhipful his Brethren, the Aldermen of the ſaid City.

‘MAY it pleaſe your Lordſhip and Worſhips to be advertiſed, that according to an Order of this Honourable Court, We whoſe Names are hereunder ſubſcribed, Committees, among others in the ſame Order named, have met about the Petition of the Silk Throwſters, recommended by the ſame Order to our Conſideration: And upon the full Hearing and Debate of the Cauſe, and Conference had ſundry times with the Petitioners themſelves, and with ſundry Strangers that uſe the Trade of Silk-throwing, it appeared unto us, that it is very neceſſary, that this Company ſhould be made a Fellowſhip, as well for the governing themſelves and their Servants in the matter of their Trade, as for the reforming of many Abuſes, now uſed among them. And it will be a means, as we conceive, that Silk may be throwed, as heretofore Silk was that came from Bridges, and other Places beyond the Seas. The doing whereof doth and will tend unto the Benefit of the Commonwealth. Thoſe that now uſe the Trade of Silk-throwing in and about this City, are increaſed within forty Years paſt * from three or four to above fifty in number. Of which number above three parts are Engliſhmen; and of them the moſt Freemen, and the reſt Strangers. By which Silk-Throwſters, about 7000 or 8000 poor People in and about this City are employed and ſet a work, in winding and throwing of Silk (as we are informed.) For the bettering therefore of this Workmanſhip, and reforming Abuſes, and to have a ſettled Government among themſelves touching their Trade, by Order of this Court; and, as much as may be, to prevent the ſetting up of Intruders, ſuch as have not duly and orderly ſerved at the Trade, as Apprentices, according to the Laws of this Land, and Cuſtoms of this Honourable City, the Silk-Throwſters humbly deſire to be made a Fellowſhip, and to have Orders and Ordinances made and confirmed to them by this Court, for the free Uſe and Exerciſe of their Trade, and for the better Government of them and their Servants. Which Fellowſhip they deſire may be termed and called, The Fellowſhip of Silk-Throwſters of the City of London: and that out of the ſame, there may be yearly choſen two Rulers and ſix Aſſiſtants, for the more orderly and better Government, as well of thoſe that now do, or hereafter ſhall, uſe the ſame Trade. Whereby good Work may be made, for the general Benefit of his Majeſty's People.

* An. 1580.

7 or 8000 poor People employed.

Their Petition.

‘ This being the Sum and Subſtance of the Silk-Throwſters Petition, we have taken the ſame into our Conſideration, and have alſo adviſed with Mr. Stone and Mr. Pheſant about the Premiſſes: and both we and they do conceive, that their Requeſts are moderate and reaſonable, and no wiſe in Prejudice of the City Government: and we hold, that the Petitioners are fit to be aided and relieved in this Court in this which they deſire, being in point of Government of their Trade; conſidering that this Manufacture is grown of very great Uſe: by which many Thouſands of poor People are employed and ſet on work.

‘ Howbeit we hold it meet, that ſuch as are already Freemen, ſhall continue of the Companies whereof they are now free; and that they bind their Apprentices at their Halls, as they have accuſtomed: And that the Ordinances by which they are to rule and govern be firſt read, ratified and confirmed by this honourable Court: And the ſame Fellowſhip to have Continuance during the pleaſure of this Court only, and no longer. To the Intent the ſame may be again diſſolved by this Court, if any Inconvenience ſhall hereafter be found to ariſe thereby: Which yet appears not. All which we nevertheleſs ſubmit and leave to the Judgment and Conſideration of your Lordſhip and Worſhips, this 23d Day of March, 1620. And then the Aldermens Names are ſubſcribed, Edward Barkham, &c.

The which Report being openly read, was allowed of, and ordered to be entered into the Repertory, and to be performed accordingly.

The Orders.

The Orders of the Company were alſo entered in the Book and Regiſter of the Court at Guild-Hall, dated May the 15th, 1621. Jones, Maior, in theſe Words, “ This Day certain Orders made and deviſed to be obſerved by the Fellowſhip of Silk-Throwſters, within the City of London and Liberties thereof, were here openly read, and ordered to be entered into the Repertory, and to be performed. The Tenour whereof is as followeth. And then follow the Orders at length.

This Fellowſhip the Court of Aldermen granted and confirmed under their Seal, the 4th Day of June, Anno Regis Angliæ Jac. I. 19. & Scotiæ 54.

K. Charles I. his Patent to the Silk-Throwſters.

After this, they obtained King Charles the Firſt his Patent under his Broad Seal, in the Fifth of his Reign, to eſtabliſh them a Fellowſhip. It ſet forth, ‘ That whereas ſundry Perſons, his well beloved Subjects, uſing the Trade, Art or Myſtery of Silk-Throwing within the City of London, had by their Petition ſhewed unto him, that above 50 Years paſt, the Trade began in the ſame City by ſome few Perſons skilful therein. Who having entertained divers Perſons, trained them up in the Uſe and Exerciſe thereof; inſomuch, as they being for the moſt part Freemen of the City of London, and Natives born, were now become a great Company: And that about ten Years paſt they were Suitors to the Lord Maior and Court of Aldermen, that in regard the Trade was grown into great Uſe and Conſequence, they might be made a Brotherhood as other Companies in like Caſes had been: Which upon mature Deliberation was accordingly granted——— And that now the ſaid Silk-Throwers finding themſelves too weak by the Power they yet have, to rectifie ſuch Enormities, as daily happen among them, or to eſtabliſh ſuch Ordinances for the true working in the Trade as were requiſite, without which they could not well ſubſiſt: And that the Number of 6 or 7000 Poor were daily relieved and ſet on Work in the ſaid Trade: For redreſs of theſe Enormities, they humbly beſought his Majeſty, that he would be graciouſly pleaſed to make them a Corporation or Body Politic; for that the ſame might tend not only to the particular Benefit of the Company, but alſo to the general Good of the Commonwealth——— KNOW yee, that of Our ſpecial Grace——— We have Granted, ‘ Conſtituted or Ordained, and by theſe Preſents for Us, Our Heirs and Succeſſors, do Grant, that Our well beloved Subjects, Robert Bolling, Tho. Lord, Hugh Lobley, Chriſtopher Dover, George Garret, &c. now uſing the Trade, Art and Myſtery of Silk-Throwing, and all and every other the Freemen uſing the Trade, which now uſe, or hereafter ſhall uſe the ſame, in the City or Liberties, or within any Place or Places within four Miles of our ſaid City; Be, and ſhall be from henceforth for ever one Body Politic and Corporate in Deed and in Name, by the Name of Maſter, Wardens and Aſſiſtants and Communalty of the Trade, Art and Myſtery of Silk-Throwers, &c. And we do grant, that from henceforth for ever there ſhall be one Maſter, two Wardens, and eighteen Aſſiſtants, &c. Robert Bolling to be the firſt and preſent Maſter: and ſo to continue till the firſt Thurſday, which ſhall fall to be in the Month of May in the Year 1630, &c. And Tho. Lord and Will. Hart, the two Wardens till the ſaid Year, &c. That no Foreigner, or other Perſon, not being Free of the ſaid Trade, other than Engliſhmen born, which have already been trained up, taught and experienced in the ſaid Art and Myſtery, do at any time hereafter attempt, &c. to uſe or exerciſe the ſaid Trade, or any thing thereunto belonging, within the ſaid City of London or Liberties, or within any place within four Miles; unleſs it be the Widows of Freemen that have uſed in the ſaid Trade——— Yielding and paying to Us, Our Heirs, &c. for the Premiſes a Fee Farm Rent of 20 s. yearly at the Feaſt of St. Michael, &c. Witneſs Our ſelf at Weſtminſter the 23. of April, in the Fifth Year of Our Reign.

Orders of the Company confirmed by the Lord Keeper and Chief Juſtices. Book of Statutes. p. 39.

The Company alſo obtained an Inſtrument from the Lord Keeper Coventre, and the two Lords Chief Juſtices, Sir Nicolas Hyde, and Sir Thomas Richardſon, to confirm a Book of Conſtitutions and Orders made by the Company, and offered unto them by Petition, by vertue of a Statute made 19 H. VII. That no Maſters, Wardens or Fellowſhip of Crafts or Myſteries ſhould take upon them to make any Acts or Ordinances, or to execute them, in Diſinheritance or Diminution of the King's Prerogative, nor of any other, againſt the common Profit of the People: But unleſs the ſaid Acts or Ordinances be examined by the Chancellor and Treaſurer of England, or Chief Juſtices of either Bench, or three of them, upon pain of Forfeiture of 40 l. for every time they ſhould do the contrary.

They obtain an Act of Parliament.

And laſtly, This Company obtained an Act of Parliament in 14 Car. II. intitled, An Act for regulating the Trade of Silk-Throwing. Which ſeems to be the firſt Act of Parliament made in their behalf. Which Act ſetteth forth, that the Company of Silk-Throwers were incorporated 5*to Caroli Primi*, and made a Body Politic. That the Trade was of ſingular Uſe, and very advantagious to this Commonwealth, there being employed by the ſaid Company in and about the City of London (as was expreſt in their Petition) above 40000 Men, Women and Children. That they prayed an Enlargement of their Charter, whereby they might be better enabled to avoid the many Deceits and Inconveniences they daily met withal by Intruders, who had not been brought up Apprentices to the ſaid Trade; and others who ſettled themſelves beyond the Limits of the ſaid Charter [which was within four Miles of London] on purpoſe to avoid the Searches and Superviſion of the ſaid Governours. It was enacted, that from the 25. of December 166*2*, none ſhould exerciſe the Trade of a Silk-Thrower within the Realm of England, unleſs ſuch as were Apprentices to the ſaid Trade, upon pain of 40 s. for every Month.

It was ſet forth in their Petition An. 1629. that 7 or 8000 were employed. So much had the Trade encreaſed in 30 Years or thereabouts.

All now uſing or exerciſing the Trade in London, or within twenty Miles of it, to enter themſelves into the ſaid Society or Corporation: And to be ſubject to the Statutes, Orders and Ordinances thereof.

The Maſter, Wardens, &c. to have and enjoy all ſuch Grants, Privileges, &c. as by this preſent Act, or by the Letters Patents of Corporation were given and granted them.

Winders and Doublers, that pawn, ſell or detain Silk delivered to them: And the Buyers and Receivers of ſuch Silk, to make to the Parties grieved, Recompence and Satisfaction for their Damage, Loſs and Charges, as by the Juſtices and Officers ſhould be ordered and appointed.

If not able to make Recompence and Satisfaction, then to be whipt and ſet in the Stocks, where the Offence is committed, or in ſome Market Town in the County, for the firſt Offence: and for the ſecond, to make the like, or further Puniſhment, as the Juſtice ſhall think fit.

The Receivers and Buyers alſo to make Satiſfaction, or ſuch as take to pawn any Silk embezelled.

It is lawful for any Freeman of the Company to ſet on Work any Perſon being a native Subject to his Majeſty, and no other, whether Men, Women or Children, to turn the Mill, tie Threads, double Silk, wind Silk, as formerly they have uſed to do, altho' ſuch Perſons have not ſerved as Apprentices to the Trade, by the ſpace of ſeven Years.]

The Corporation ſhall not make any Orders or Ordinances, to ſet any Rates, or Prices whatſoever, upon the Throwing of Silk, to bind and enforce their Members to work at. But therein the Members ſhall be left at liberty to contract with their reſpective Employers.

Several Companies lately incorporated. J. S.

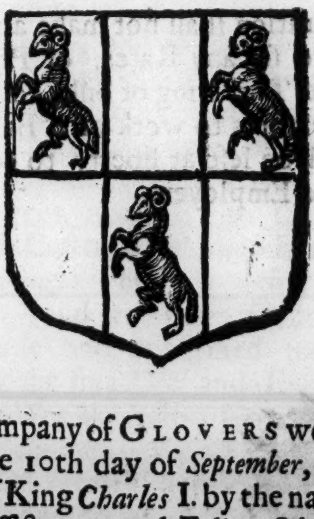
THE laſt Edition of this Survey went no further in the Catalogue of the Companies of London, there being then no more incorporated than thoſe ſixty two above mentioned. But ſince that time there have been ſeveral other Companies or Societies of Trades uſed, flouriſhing in the City: Which tho' formerly well known, yet were included in other Companies, and not incorporated by themſelves, and regulated by Governours and Laws of their own, till of later times. So that to the ſixty two, Nine more are to be added, which make up in all Seventy one, viz. The Glovers, the Tinners, Diſtillers, Clockmakers, Muſicians, Feltmakers, Sopemakers, Glaſs-ſellers, Coach and Coach-Harneſs-makers: To which may be added the Pinners and Needlers, the Patten-makers, Notaries, Brokers or Broggers, Refiners of Sugar, Players, the Luſtring Company, and perhaps divers other Callings and Trades this City may afford.

To ſeveral of theſe we can only ſhew the Arms they bear.

GLOVERS.

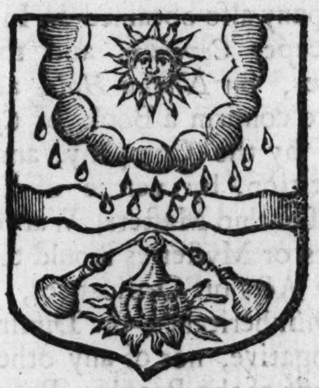


THE Company of GLOVERS were incorporated the 10th day of September, 1639. In the 14th Year of King Charles I. by the name of Maſter, Wardens, Aſſiſtants, and Fellowſhip of the Company of Glovers of the City of London; and by their Charter empowered to have one Maſter, four Wardens, ſixteen Aſſiſtants, or more, at the diſcretion of the Maſter and Wardens for the time being; and they to be choſen annually the 8th of September, the Nativity of the Virgin Mary.

TINNERS.

THE Company of TIN PLATE-WORKERS were incorporated by Charter the 29th of December, in the 22th Year of the Reign of King Charles II. by the name of Maſter, Wardens, Aſſiſtants and Commonalty of the Art and Myſtery of Tyn Plate-workers, alias Wyre-workers, of the City of London.

DISTILLERS.



Abuſes of Diſtillers by uſing of Hog-waſh, &c.

THeſe were ſuch as diſtilled Aqua Vitæ, Aqua Compoſita, Vinegar, and the like. In the Year 1593, one endeavoured to get a Grant from the Queen, for the taking care that theſe Liquors ſhould be well made, againſt the pretended great and dangerous Abuſes commonly practiſed in the making thereof. He ſhewed (taking the Opportunity of this before-named Year, wherein was a Plague) that the ordinary Makers of theſe Liquors made them of Hog-waſh, and Dregs, and the Waſhing of Coolbacks; which might occaſion many infectious Diſeaſes. The Lord Treaſurer, the better to inform himſelf, ſent to Alderman Anthony Radclyff, a Perſon knowing in ſuch Matters, for his Opinion. Who informed him, that it was a thing long ſince moved to be reformed by Parliament, as a Matter the abuſing whereof cauſed great Inconvenience. That he had Conference with the beſt and ſubſtantialeſt Men of that Calling, who made their Strong-Waters for the moſt part of good Ale and Beer; and that they wiſht all other Makers were debarred by ſome good Means, for the more exact making thereof. But that they that were poor and found more ſweet by making it of weak Beer and Ale, or of worſe Stuff, no doubt would repine at any new Grant to reſtrain them. He added, that when he enquired and ſought to underſtand how ſo many bought this Hog-waſh and Dreggs of the Coolback, he was told it was only the Feltmakers and Weavers, till at laſt he found it indeed, that even the Diſtillers of Aqua Vitæ, and Vinegar-makers, did engroſs it up; and with it work ſecretly in their Houſes, or ſo uttered it, or happly mixed it with weaker Beer, where the beſt and ſtrongeſt was fitteſt to be uſed for the Queen's Subjects. That he found, that in making of Vinegar, the Brewer ought to brew good Malt, as they did brew the beſt ſort for the Subject. The Prices of which ſort of Beer was from five to eight Shillings the Barrel. And that the Beeregre of eight Shillings the Barrel would continue and hold out, when the ſmaller would putrify and decay. That touching Aqua Vitæ and Aqua Compoſita, it was wont to be made only of Wine and Wine Lees, and of Ale made on purpoſe; but of later Years ſince Wines grew dearer, certain Strangers practiſed to ſtill the Dregs and Waſhings of Coolbacks of Beer: And now uſually bought by the greateſt Numbers of Diſtillers: from whence to his Underſtanding were very corrupt Stuff. That the aforeſaid Vinegar did not hold his ſtrength as it ought to do in the Service of long Voyages in Navigation. That in the beginning of the Wars in the Low Countries, the Flemings bought great Quantities of this kind of Beeregre for the cooling of their Ordinance, and was ſold at good Prices to the Spaniards, and to the contrary Part: but afterward it was not in that Requeſt. That he himſelf coming by chance into the Yard of one of the Vinegar-makers, found a Brewer's Drayman bringing unto him a Barrel of Dreggs, gathered out of divers Men's Houſes; and confeſt that he ſold the ſame to the Vinegar-makers ſometime for 20 d. and 2 s. the Barrel. And laſtly, the ſame Alderman Radclyff adviſed, that if the Parties that now ſhould have the brewing of this Beeregre and Alegre ſhould not put in good Bonds, to amend the Fault, and be tyed to ſell their Beer at ſuch reaſonable Prices as now or heretofore the beſt hath been ſold, the Abuſe would remain all one, or rather worſe.

A Patent granted to rectify the Diſtillers.

However, ſoon after, Richard Drake obtained a Patent from the Queen for the brewing and providing of all wholſome Liquor or Stuff for the making of Beeregre, Alegre, Aqua Vitæ and Aqua Compoſita.

But in the Event it proved, that this Patent remedied not this Evil. So that in the Year 1596, thoſe that were concerned in the Trade, petitioned againſt this Drake to the Lord Treaſurer; That he, under a Colour and ſubtil Suggeſtion, that the Liquors whereof Aqua Vitæ, Vinegar, &c. were made before his Grant, were of Draggs, Laggs, and ſuch like unmeet and unwholſome Stuff, which the Patentee pretended to reform, had notwithſtanding, ſince the obtaining of the ſaid Patent, wrought no Reformation; but every Liquor before occupyed was ſtill uſed: only the Benefit of the poor Artiſt was wholly turned to the peculiar profit of the ſaid Drake, and of his Aſſigns: who bound every one of theſe Makers in great Bonds to buy the Stuff of themſelves only; and they of the Brewers: Exacting to themſelves great Commodities from the Hands and Labours of others in ſuch grievous manner and extream ſort, as appeared by certain Articles which they annexed to their Petition. They prayed therefore that theſe Extremities might be redreſt, and the Grant recalled, which tended only to the private Gain of the ſaid Drake, and the ſubverſion of the Suppliants and their Wives and Families.

The Diſtillers Articles againſt the Patentee.

The Sum of which Articles were, That the ſame pretended unmeet and unwholſome Stuff, as Draggs, Laggs, &c. were made uſe of after this Grant, and allowed by the Patentee or his Aſſigns, as were before; nay, far worſe than heretofore. That the poor Traders that bought and ſold Vinegar, and thoſe other Commodities, were compelled by Threats and Impriſonment, to enter into Bonds, to buy of none, but of the Patentee only, or his Aſſigns, and to pay for making of their own Bonds, 3 s. apiece. That they forced the Brewers to ſell unto them their Grounds, which themſelves before, in their Suggeſtions to her Majeſty, had in very foul and odious terms named Draggs, &c. That they compelled the Tradeſmen to compound with them for 2 d. the Barrel; and would not permit them to buy where they would for their beſt Eaſe and Profit; as where they had beſt Credit, and might be aſſured of good and wholſome Stuff; except they would pay 3 d. the Barrel: Which would amount to a great Sum by the Year. Which Payments being made, the ſaid Tradeſmen might do what they liſted. That the Patentees, under pretence of their Letters Patents, had ſtayed divers Hogſheads of Vinegar, after they were cuſtomed and ſhipped: Whereby the Shipmaſters loſt their Voyage, and the Merchants greatly hindered for the Sale of their Lading. And that they had entred into divers Merchants Houſes, and took away Hogſheads of Aqua Vitæ, ready to be ſent over Sea, and Cuſtom paid; until one had paid 3 l. and another 30 s. according to the Quantity they had.

Arguments of the Illegality of the Patent.

Twenty Years before this, one Dr. Baily ſought to have the Survey of corrupt Vinegar, Beeregre, and Alegre, among other corrupt things; as Oil, Sope, and Butter. But it was anſwered, that this was granted by the Queen's Letters Patents about the 7th or 8th Year of her Reign, to the Company of Tallow Chandlers in London: and therefore could not be then granted to him. And the making of Aqua vitæ, Aqua Compoſita, and Askebaugh, and the Survey of the corrupt ſorts thereof, was granted to one Mr. Candiſhe of the Court, by Letters Patents under the Great Seal; and ſo ungrantable by her Majeſty during Candiſhe's Life. Beſides, it was thought, and much objected by divers Laws, that the Queen by her Licenſe under her Great Seal, could not grant the ſole Trade of any one Occupation or Myſtery to any one Man alone, that had been in uſe in the Commonweal before her Majeſty's Grant; nor yet impoſe a Fine or Impriſonment upon them that ſhould withſtand her ſaid Licenſe. Finally, That the Trade concerned ſo many poor Mens Livings, that it was impoſſible to bring it into one Man's hand by Licenſe. Theſe things were argued in point of Law againſt Drake, who by his Patent aſſumed a Power over the whole Diſtillers Trade.

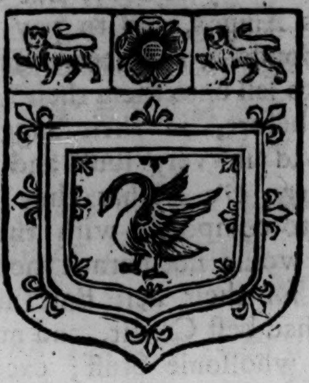
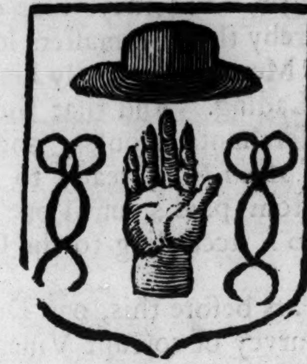
CLOCKMAKERS.

THE Company of CLOCKMAKERS were incorporated by Charter the 22d of Auguſt, in the ſeventh Year of King Charles I. by the name of Maſter, Wardens, and Fellowſhip of the Art of Clockmakers of the City of London.

MUSICIANS.



FELTMAKERS.



THE Company of FELTMAKERS were incorporated by Charter the 2d Day of Auguſt, in the ſecond Year of King James I. by the name of Maſter, Wardens, and Commonalty of the Art or Myſtery of Feltmakers of London; and again by Charter of Incorporation and Confirmation by the ſame Name, bearing date the 27th of June, in the nineteenth Year of King Charles II.

The Faſhion of wearing Felts.

The Faſhion of wearing Hats or Felts (as they formerly called them) began to take great place in Queen Elizabeth's Reign. And they were of two ſorts; viz. fine Felts and coarſe: The former were made of Wool brought from Spain, called Spaniſh Wool, and the latter made of Eſtridge Wool, brought from the Eaſt Countries. Theſe were for the wearing of Country People and of the meaner ſort: And ſometimes they were covered with Velvet, Taffata, or ſuch like.

Their Petition to be a Corporation.

In the Year 1576, the Feltmakers ſued to the Lord Treaſurer to befriend them in their Supplication to the Queen, to be incorporated: being, as they ſet forth in their Petition, the ancient and diſcreeteſt ſort of them. That thoſe of this Trade were four hundred Houſholders, diſperſed and reſident in ſundry parts of the City and Suburbs, as Southwark, St. Katharine's and other Places. That they had no Government of themſelves, as other Companies: and that they made their Felts for the moſt part very deceitfully, and of corrupt and unlawful Stuff, brought out of Spain and other Places; bought up by ſuch as had no Skill or Knowlege, whether they were good or bad; and by them retailed to ſuch Feltmakers as for Lucre were content to make deceitful Wares, to the deceiving the Wearers thereof, to the Breach of the Queen's Laws, and the Slander and utter Reproach of the whole Company. Which, if it were not in time foreſeen and reformed, would be the Overthrow of the whole Company, and the utter Impoveriſhment of their poor Wives, Children and Families. Therefore they ſued that they might be made a Body Corporate by her Majeſty's Letters Patents.

The Haberdaſhers hinder the Grant of their Petition.

But it ſeems the Haberdaſhers (of which Company theſe Feltmakers were) proved too hard for them. So that the Lords of the Council would not then allow their Petition. But after much Conteſt between them, they came to an Agreement. And the Feltmakers were to ſubmit themſelves to the Haberdaſhers, to be ſearched, ruled, and governed by the Maſter and Wardens, and governed by the Maſter and Wardens; and that there ſhould be certain Rules drawn between them, for the better Government of the ſaid Trade of Feltmaking, and of their Servants. At length Orders and Rules were by their own Conſents made and deviſed, and on both their parts pormiſed and agreed to be performed and kept; and which were required to be ſet down in the Starchamber between them.

Their Petition about Apprentices that ſerved not out their time.

The Hatmakers or Feltmakers, in the Year 1583, endeavoured to get a Patent from the Queen to put that Statute in the 8th. of her Reign in Execution, which was made about their Trade, that none ſhould occupy the ſame, but ſuch as had been Apprentices to it ſeven Years. For afterwards, divers that had not ſerved that time, and others that had never been Apprentices at all, enticed divers young Apprentices and hired Servants from London from their Maſters, and maintained and kept them at work at the ſame Trade: and would keep, ſome three, four or five Apprentices, and for leſs Years than the Statute limited. Whereby they were grown to ſo great a Number of Feltmakers in the Country, that the Feltmakers in Loudon living within the Compaſs of the Statute, and keeping all other Duties and Obſervances within the City of London, were not able to live upon the ſaid Trade, and to maintain themſelves and their great Families, without ſome preſent Remedy. Richard Seckford, one of the Queen's Maſters of Requeſts, July the 3. 1583. moved the Queen, then at Greenwich, in this Suit. Who then referred the ſame to the Lord Treaſurer. Thomas Blank, Lord Maior, and Maſter of the Haberdaſhers Company, wrote to the ſaid Seckford, March 27. the Year aboveſaid, that a Motion having been made by the Fletmakers to them, for the furtherance of their Suit, they thought the Suit very reaſonable, and needful to be granted for all Offenders againſt the ſaid Statute. But foraſmuch as the Feltmakers, and all within three Miles of London, were under the Government and Correction of the Company of Haberdaſhers, the Company prayed him, that there might be a Proviſo in their Book, that they ſhould not, by force of their Grant, intermeddle with any Hatmakers inhabiting within the City, or three Miles Compaſs, than, to the Maſter and Wardens of the ſaid Company, for the time being, ſhould be thought meet and expedient. And that when any Occaſion ſhould be, to uſe their Grant for the puniſhment of any Offender within the Limits of the ſaid Company, the Patentees to have the one half of all Forfeitures coming in that behalf, and the Company to have the other half, towards the Relief of the poor Feltmakerrs.

They petition the Queen for for an Officer, to ſearch the Wools and Flocks.

The Feltmakers bought their Wools, Flocks and other Stuff for their Hats, of the Merchants, both Strangers and Engliſh. Which Wools were brought from Spain, France, the Eaſt Country, and other Foreign Countries. But theſe Commodities were often very bad, being fallen May-Wool, rotten and other ill Wool, not apt, meet nor capable to be wrought or uſed in making of any Hats or Felts; and partly unwaſhed and full of Sand, Filth, Droſs, corrupt and unlawful Stuff, moſt deceitfully packed up in Sacks, and other cloſe things, and wound up in Fleeces, being neither ſuch merchantable nor ſtaple Wares, as it had been, nor in Truth, Conſcience, Juſtice and Equity it ought to be. By which deceitful Wools and other Stuffs, the Feltmakers ſuſtained great Loſs and Damage, and many times a Number of them, their poor Wives and Families utterly undone. Whereupon in January 1579, they made a Petition to the Queen, under the Names of Thomas Caunton, Thomas Bradford and others, who had ſubſcribed their Names in their own behalf, and in the behalf of more than 3000 of her Majeſties Subjects in the City of London, Bermondſe-ſtreet and St. Katharines and elſewhere, to authorize one of her Majeſties Subjects or his Aſſigns, for Indifferency ſake, to Search, Sort and Cleanſe the ſaid Wools, Flocks and other Stuff.

The loſs to the Feltmakers by bad Wool, laid before the Lord Treaſurer.

They likewiſe petitioned the Lord Treaſurer to the ſame Purport. And in their Addreſs to him, they ſhewed that in their Wool, it was ſo bad, that they commonly loſt one half or a third Part; and in the beſt of it brought into the Realm, they uſually loſt a fourth part. And that the making of Felts, then much encreaſing in England, and thereby great Numbers of the Queen's poor Subjects ſet on Work, they were conſtrained to buy great Quantities of the ſaid evil and deceitful Wools, becauſe they could get none other; the ſame being brought into the Realm, moſt by Engliſh Merchants, Aldermen and the beſt Commoners of London, and other Cities and Towns in the Weſt parts. Which foreign Wools, till within this few Years, were brought in only by Strangers. And then the ſame was waſhed, and void of May-Wool, and other rotten and ill Wool, Droſs, Duſt, Sand, &c. And if any were found contrary, the Buyer did uſually return it to the Merchant, or elſe had Allowance for the ſame. And then the Merchant by Certificate made return thereof into the foreign Countries, and to the Perſons by whom it had been bought, and had like Allowance for the ſame.

Their Requeſt.

The ſaid Feltmakers drew up their Deſire in ſeveral Articles, preſented to the Queen. The Chief whereof was, that ſhe would grant them one of her Servants, and his Aſſigns, to ſearch, ſort and cleanſe theſe Wools and Stuffs: And a good Fee to be allowed him. And tho' it were a large Fee, yet it would be well deſerved: for that two Men could hardly diſcharge and diſpatch a hundred Weight in a Day, to do it well. Adding, that the Merchants would not loſe hereby, but only would hereafter take care to import better and cleaner Wools: for which they might have a better Price.

The Merchants Anſwer concerning a Garbler of the Wools.

To theſe Petitions and Deſires of the Feltmakers, the Merchants, in February following, gave their Anſwer, firſt in ſome Heat and Anger, accuſing the chief Agitators in this Buſineſs, viz. Caunton and Bradford, as if they were of ſlender Credit, and of the worſt ſort of Felters, and Haunters of Taverns: Where they entred into Devices not to do any good to the Commonwealth, but to maintain their idle Lives with other Men's Goods. That many, whoſe Hands were ſet to the Petition, did diſallow the Matters contained in it. They added, that the Merchants brought thoſe Wools from Spain, without any falſifying, corrupting or mingling by the way; And therefore were not to be puniſhed with new Charges of needleſs Officers. Which Charges muſt not be raiſed upon the poor Workmen and Buyers. That it was true, the Wools of England were waſhed and picked; but the Uſage of Spain was not ſo. That touching the Tare of groſs and weighty Bags of Spaniſh Wool, whereof the Feltmakers ſaid they had no Allowance, they abuſed the Lords of the Council: For thoſe Wools were not brought in groſs and weighty Bags, but commonly ſuch as were carried two Sacks upon an Horſe, and ſeldom exceeding one hundred and half, or an hundred and three quarters. And yet how ſmall ſo ever they were, the Felters were allowed eight Pound for the Tare of every Bag. That where they ſpake of May-Wool, they ſpake ignorantly, or, on purpoſe, untruly. For thoſe Spaniſh Wools for Felters were not Fleece Wools wherein May-Wool could be, but altogether Lamb-Wool, or ſuch as could have no May-Wool, unleſs it were by great hap; very rarely a Lock of an old Lamb, or ſuch like long Wool. That it was reaſon, that Wools in England, ſerving for Cloth, ſhould be waſhed and cleanſed and wound, or elſe they would not ſerve the Clothiers: but contrariwiſe, the Spaniſh Wools for felting could not be wound, but lye looſe in Locks, becauſe it is Lamb-Wool, or very ſhort. Neither ought they to be waſhed or cleanſed; for they muſt be kept in their Fatneſs, as they come from the Sheep, or elſe they would not Felt, or meet together, and ſerve for the uſe of Felting. And ſo thoſe new Offers ſhould do more hurt than good. Beſides, that the ſorting was a vain Work: for no Feltmaker could diſcern the Wool good for Felters, however it were ſorted, till they had tryed it. And therefore the beſt Workmen of them did uſe to take Samples for Tryal, afore they bargained for it. That where they ſaid, Spaniſh Wools, by the Merchants Deceitfulneſs and Corruption, have often been returned by Certificate, it was wholly untrue. Their Honours were deſired alſo to conſider, that the means which her Majeſties Subjects had to bring Oyls and thoſe Wools, being the natural Commodities of thoſe Countries, made that People favourable to the Engliſh. And that if the ſaid Device of the Feltmakers ſhould take effect, it might not only be a great Hindrance to the Merchants, but alſo to the Navy of the Realm, daily employed in bringing home thoſe Wools; and a great hindrance to her Majeſties Cuſtoms. To this three Aldermen ſubſcribed their Hand, viz. Thomas Pulliſon (afterwards Maior) Francis Bowyer, and George Bond, and ſeveral other Merchants, as Hewyt, Haidon, Whitmore, Folkys, and thirteen more.

By Bradford's and Caunton's ſtirring ſo much in this Buſineſs, it was ſeen, that they endeavoured to get themſelves in, to be Garblers of the Spaniſh Wools.

Quantities of Spaniſh Wools imported.

Theſe Conteſts made the Lord Treaſurer enquire into the Quantities of Wool imported. And Smith the Queen's Cuſtomer ſent in this Account from March 1578, to March 1579. Spaniſh Wool brought into the Port of London, by George Bond, William Bond, William Hewyt and others, to the Quantity of 729 Bags: which did contain an hundred, or an hundred and a quarter a Bag. The Eſtridge Wools, that is the Wools imported from the Eaſt Countries, a coarſer ſort, amounted not to two hundred Weight.

The Haberdaſhers claim the Search of Wools.

But to prevent this Office of garbling Wools, the Haberdaſhers interpoſed; alledging this as an Infringment of an Agreement formerly made between the Company and the Feltmakers. Whereof Woodroff, Maior, and Maſter of the ſaid Company, wrote an account to the Lord Treaſurer to put a Stop to it, if he could. ‘ That whereas Suit was made by ſome light Perſons, for an Office of Garblerſhip of Foreign Wools to be erected, with ſeveral great Allowances for the garbling of every Bag of Wool, to the great Charge and Trouble of the Owners, and to the enhauncing of the Prices of Wool; by the Ordinances, lately confirmed to the Company of Haberdaſhers of London, (according to a Decree ſet down by him, the Lord Treaſurer and others of the Privy Counſel for the Government of the Feltmakers) there was Authority expreſly given to the Maſter and Wardens of the ſaid Company, with five, four, three, or two of the Feltmakers, to Search all Foreign Wools put to Sale by any Perſons within this City, or three Miles Compaſs of the ſame; and to puniſh by Fines any Perſon that ſhould offend in utterance of corrupt Stuff, with ſundry other ‘like Authorities, for the better Government of the ſaid Hatmakers. In the Execution of all which Ordinances, there were joyned yearly to the ſaid Wardens five Feltmakers; who had hitherto dealt as effectually as they could, in reforming all Abuſes: and had not ſpared to do any thing (to the great Charges of the Company) which was required of them to do by the ſaid five Feltmakers. In all which time they never required the Maſter and Wardens to ſearch Foreign Wools, or complained of any Neceſſity of Search therein to be made. Which the Wardens and others, if need had been, either known to themſelves, or informed by others, would not have failed to have done what had been requiſite. And finally, he moved his Lordſhip, that if by any reaſon he thought it needful that this Garbling ſhould be put in Execution, then that he would be a means, for indifferency ſake between the Merchant and the Hatmaker, that the Maſter and Wardens for the ſaid Company, with ſome other ſuch ſkilful Perſons as they ſhould thereunto appoint, might, upon Information, deal in the ſame in ſuch manner and ſort, as ſhould be thought needful and expedient. And in this State were theſe Hatmakers before they were a Corporation.

Abridg. of Eng. Chron p. 446.

It was not before the Year 1604. An. 2 Reg. Jac. I. that theſe Feltmakers were incorporated, by Letters Patents from King James I. by the Name of Maſter, Wardens and Commonalty of the Art or Myſtery of Feltmakers of London: Granting unto them divers Privileges and Liberties for the good Government of the ſame Corporation: being the firſt Company incorporated by this King: and was obtained by the humble and earneſt Suit of Richard Baniſter, John Sandes, Hugh Philips, Robert Brown and others, Feltmakers of London.]

SOPEMAKERS

Three ſorts of Sope. Gray Sope forbid. J. S.

TOwards the middle of Queen Elizabeth’s Reign three Sorts of Sope were made. Firſt, Coarſe Sope, made of Train Oyl, and Danske Sope Aſhes. Secondly, Sweet Sope, made of Sivil Oyl, and Danske Sope Aſhes. And Thirdly, Specle Sope, made of Tallow and the ſaid Aſhes. This was commonly called Gray Sope. This laſt was forbid by the Common Council of London: And that by Order from the Board. The Reaſon was, it would ſo waſt in ſhort time the Tallow of the Realm, that the Poverty would have no Candles, but muſt pay 6 d. or 7 d. yea and more, for a Pound of Candles. And beſides, it ſmelt worſe than the Sope made with the Train Oyl.

The Inconvenience of SpeckleSope.

This Speckle Sope, if allowed, would have endangered the making Sope with Oyl; becauſe they made their Sope cheaper with Tallow. And the Common People more deſired this made with Tallow, than that made with Oyl: becauſe the Specks in this Sope ſhewed fair and white in Winter by the congealing of the Cold. And the Makers of Sope with Oyl would be fain to corrupt their Sope, to make it as good cheap as the Speckle Sope, to be able to ſell with them in cheapneſs of price. And then the Realm ſhould have neither good Sope nor ſweet Sope any more.

Now not above eight or ten Sopemakers in London.

There were now about eight or ten Sopemakers in London: and they able to ſerve the whole Realm; yea and ſend beyond Sea alſo, if they might have Vent. They had four, five, or ſix Men apiece, and ſome more, beſides their Houſhold, that tended their Fats, and the beating of their Aſhes. And beſides, ſet many Men at work in the Realm, as Coopers, Labourers, Carters, &c. and made uſe of all manner of Carriages both by Land and Sea; being a Trade that ſent out weekly out of London great Quantities of this Commodity over the Realm, and moſt Northward. Yet there was Sopemaking alſo already at York, at Hull, and at Briſtol. Theſe things were urged before they were a Corporation, to recommend them to the Countenance of the State.]

GLASS-SELLERS.

The firſt Glaſs-houſe in London, by Patent to a Venetian. J. S.

ONE James Verſelyn, a Stranger, a Venetian, about the Year 1580, or perhaps ſomewhat before, was the firſt that ſet up a Glaſs-houſe in London, for making Venice Glaſſes. For which the Queen granted him a Privilege under her Great Seal. But the Glaſs-Sellers in London were much aggrieved at this, and ſhewed the Lords of the Privy Council, that it was the Overthrow of fifty Houſholds, uſing only the Trade of ſelling of Glaſſes; beſides the hindrance of the Merchant-Adventurers, bringing Glaſſes into this Realm beyond the Seas, the Loſs of her Majeſty’s Cuſtom, and the conſuming of 400000 Billets every Year in burning the ſame in one Glaſs-houſe; and the enhancing of the Prices of Glaſſes, prejudicial to all the Queen’s Subjects; there being a Prohibition in the ſame Patent, that none ſhould ſell ſuch Glaſſes, but the ſaid Verſelyn only.]

POTTERS.

Gally Tiles, and Apothecaries Veſſels J. S.

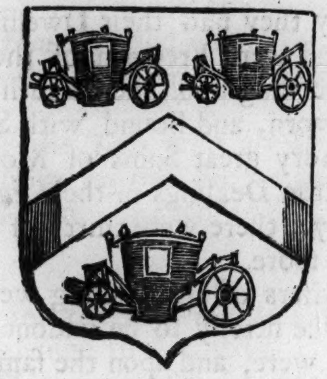
ABOUT the Year 1567, Jaſper Andries and Jacob Janſon, Potters, came away from Antwerp, to avoid the Perſecution there, and ſettled themſelves in Norwich; where they followed their Trade, making Gally paving Tiles, and Veſſels for Apothecaries and others, very artificially. Anno 1570 they removed to London, with the Teſtimonial of Isbrand Balckius, the Miniſter, and the reſt of the Elders and Deacons of that Church; and deſired by Petition, from Queen Elizabeth, that they might have Liberty to follow their Trade in that City without Interruption; and preſented her with a Cheſt of their handy Work. They ſet forth in their Petition, that they were the firſt, which brought in, and exerciſed the ſaid Science in this Realm: and were at great Charges, before they could find the Materials in this Realm. And that the ſame Science was ſo acceptable to King Henry VIII. that he offered to the ſame Jaſper's Father good Wages and Houſe-room, to come and exerciſe the ſame here: Which then came to none effect. They beſeeched her, in recompence of their great Coſt and Charges, that ſhe would grant them Houſe-room in, or without the Liberties of London, by the Water ſide; and Privilege for the time of twenty Years, that none but they, their Wives and Children, and Aſſigns, might exerciſe the ſame Science in this Realm; and to ſell and tranſport the ſame, as well outward as inward, to all Men, free of all Cuſtom.

COACH and COACH-HARNESS-MAKERS.



THE Company of COACH-MAKERS and COACH-HARNESS-MAKERS, were incorporated by Charter, the 31ſt Day of May, in the 29th Year of the Reign of King Charles II. by the Name of the Maſter, Wardens, Aſſiſtants, and Commonalty of the Company of Coach-makers and Coach-Harneſs-makers of London. Their Privileges to extend to the Cities and Suburbs of London and Weſtminſter, and twenty Miles round.

Confirmed by King James II. by Charter dated the 12th Day of May, in the third Year of his Reign.

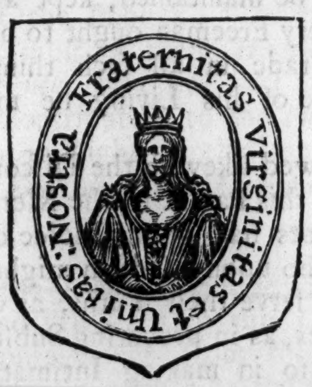
PINNERS and NEEDLERS



Fraternitas Virginitas et Unitas Nostra

Foreign Pins and Needles imported, the deſtruction of the Trade here: Petitioned againſt. J. S.

FOreign Pins and Needles being brought in about the Year 1597, did much prejudice theſe Callings; which employed abundance of poor People: who were put off their working, becauſe theſe foreign Pins and Needles could be afforded cheaper than they could afford them that wrought them here at home: Therefore in the aforeſaid Year, in the Month of December, they petitioned the Lord Treaſurer for Reſtraint of theſe Pins and Needles. The bringing in whereof was the Cauſe, that ſo many idle Perſons periſhed and miſcarried for want of Work. For that in foreign Lands theſe Commodities were wrought in Hoſpitals, which found the Workers of them in Meat, Drink, and Clothing; and the Artiſts had the Work only, for inſtructing them. But in this Land (for that there was not ſuch Proviſion for the poor Suppliants uſing this Trade) they could not live to ſell their Wares at ſo low a rate, as thoſe foreign Wares were ſold. But if they were reſtrained, many Thouſands would be ſet on work, and made Commonwealths Men, that now died in the Streets. The Premiſſes conſidered, and for that there were above 40000 l. worth of Pins and Needles yearly brought into the Realm, and which were nothing ſo good and well wrought as thoſe were, which were made and wrought within the Land, and that the Reſtraint of bringing them in, would be the Means of ſetting many Thouſands of our Poor on work: and that lame Soldiers, tho' they had no Legs, and Children, might work on this Trade. They prayed his Lordſhip therefore to give his Furtherance for reviving a Statute for Reſtraint of foreign Wares, of 3 Edw. IV. 4. 1 Ric. III. 12. 5 Eliz. 7. 14 Eliz. 11.

PATTEN-MAKERS.

This Trade ancient. J. S.

An Act of Parliament in their behalf.

PAttens and Clogs were anciently worn by Perſons of Quality, as well as others. And the Makers of them were an ancient Company. And there is a Pariſh Church in London, denominated from them, viz. St. Margaret Pattens, thoſe of that Trade probably having their Shops chiefly there. In an Act 4 Edw. IV. cap. 9. they are called the Myſtery of Pattenmakers of London. Theſe had an Act of Parliament made in their Behalf, upon a Complaint which they made of the grievous Hurt and Damage which they and other Perſons in time paſt of the ſame Occupation, had ſuffered by an Act of Parliament of 4 Hen. V. that abridged them the uſing of Timber of Aſp in making Pattens and Clogs, upon a Penalty; for the Benefit of the Fletchers, who uſed that Wood; that they might ſell their Shafts at eaſier Prices. But they ſhewed, how that this Wood was the beſt and lighteſt Timber for Pattens and Clogs; and moſt eaſy for the wearing of all Eſtates, Gentlemen, and other People. And that Perſons of other Crafts and Occupations, as Turners, Carpenters, Woodmongers, and Colemakers uſed this Wood, and had no Reſtraint put upon them: And that there was much Aſp-Timber, and fit for the Fletchers uſe to make Shafts, which they ſhould not uſe. Hereupon the Parliament enacted, that it ſhould be lawful from thenceforth, that the Pattenmakers might make Pattens of ſuch Timber of Aſp, as was not apt nor convenient to be made into Shafts.

NOTARIES.

THESE are a Branch of the Scriveners, but their Buſineſs being diſtinct, and different from them, they may deſerve to be conſidered by themſelves.

Their Complaint againſt one that had got a Patent for making Inſurances and Policies. J. S.

There were ſixteen Notaries in the Maioralty of Sir James Haws, who was Maior 1574. viz. Humfrey Brook, George Keval, &c. Theſe made a Complaint to the ſaid Lord Maior againſt one Richard Candler; who had got a Patent under the Broad Seal, that none but he and his Deputies ſhould make and regiſter Inſurances, and Policies, and other Inſtruments relating to Merchants. Which would be the impoveriſhing, Overthrow, and utter Decay of all theſe Notaries Publick of the City, with their Children, Servants, Apprentices and Families, to the number of 120 Perſons, and above: Who lived upon the making of Policies, Intimations, Renunciations, and other Writings granted unto the ſaid Candler. They ſhewed the Lord Maior, that they were Freemen of the City, and examined and admitted, and allowed to their Function by the Archbiſhop of Canterbury, and his Anteceſſors, by force of an Act of Parliament Anno 25 Hen. VIII. and confirmed by Act of Parliament 1 Eliz. That they were brought up, from their Infancies, all or the moſt part, as Apprentices; and ſithence poor Houſholders, having none other Trade to live by, but only by making of ſuch Writings. They added, that they were lawfully admitted to their Function. That it was a Function that Time out of mind was lawfully uſed, and reputed as expedient and neceſſary within this Realm, like as in all other Regions of Chriſtendom. Into which Regions the Suppliants had made divers and ſundry Inſtruments of great Weight: Whereunto good Credit was, and had been granted. That if this Grant ſhould take place, it would alſo be a great prejudice to the Notaries Servants ſucceeding them; and in the End of their Terms be forced to ſeek new Trades of Living. In fine, they prayed the Lord Maior and Aldermen to be a Means to the Queen and her Privy Council, that this Patent might be called in; that the Faculty of Notaries might ſtill be exerciſed.

With their Reaſons againſt ſuch a Patent.

They moreover ſhewed their Reaſons againſt this Patent in ſeven Articles. One was, touching the Office of a Notary: that it had been frequented Time out of mind. And the Prerogative of Admiſſion of Perſons meet to the ſame Function (after the Exoneration of their Predeceſſors from Exactions and other things from the See of Rome) was granted by Act of Parliament to the Archbiſhop of Canterbury. And ſince that Time ratified and confirmed by Act of Parliament alſo, in the fifth Year of the Reign of the Queen's Majeſty. From whom they, the Suppliants, had their Authority. The which according to the expreſs Words of the former Statute of King Henry VIII. ought to be accepted, approved and allowed and admitted, good and effectual in the Law, in all Places, Courts and Juriſdictions, as well Spiritual and Temporal within this Realm, as elſewhere within her Majeſty's Dominions, without any Revocation or Repeal to be had thereof: And all Acts to be done, had or executed according to the Tenour of that King'sGrant, made by Authority of the ſaid Act of Parliament, ought to be firm, permanent, and remain in force, as by the ſame Statute appeared. Which Premiſſes would be abridged and taken from them, if the Queen's Letters Patents granted to Candler ſhould not be revoked.

BROGGERS or BROKERS.

What their Office and Buſineſs is. J. S.

THEY were called Broggers in a Statute 10 Ric. II. and in Latin they are ſtiled Abrocarii or Broccarii, an Office of Antiquity and Credit. Formerly they were to be recepti ac jurati. Again, none to be Brocars in any Myſtery, unleſs choſen by the ſame Myſtery. Further, none of them to make Contracts of Uſury or Bargain, unleſs he bring the Seller and Buyer together, &c.

City Records. A. G.

Now Brokers are ſuch as are Aſſiſtants to the Merchants in buying and ſelling, and in their Contracts; concerned alſo in the Writing of Inſurances and Policies, and ſuch like. And therefore formerly they had their Dwellings near the Exchange, and were Freemen of the City. And ſo much depending upon their Truth and Honeſty, they were ſworn, and bound with Sureties in divers and ſundry great Sums of Money, for their honeſt and true Dealings in their Faculty. About the Year 1574, there were thirty of them in number, and no more.

The Brokers, in danger of being undone by a Patent, petition againſt it.

The Practiſers of this Calling were, about the ſaid Year, like utterly to be undone, as the Notaries before were, and upon the ſame Cauſe, viz. by a Patent obtained by Candler, that none but he, or his Deputies, ſhould make and regiſter Policies and Inſtruments of Aſſurance. Which Time out of mind were done by Notaries Public, and by the ſworn Brokers of the City. Theſe Brokers therefore petitioned the Lord Maior and Court of Aldermen, to be a means to the Queen, that the Premiſſes might be revoked: Otherwiſe it would be their utter undoing. That it would alſo be an Infringment upon the Liberty of every good Citizen, who before might make his Writing and Aſſurances himſelf, and uſe neither Broker nor Notary, except he pleaſed himſelf. Nor was it good, that one Man ſhould have an Office of divers Mens Livings. They urged moreover, that the old Freedoms, Liberties and Cuſtoms of this City might be maintained, kept and continued: and that every Freeman ought to be free, and occupy his Trade in all ſuch things, as for the Maintenance of his Living he might by good Order.

The Merchants incommoded by it.

They ſhewed likewiſe the Diſcommodities and Dangers of this Patent to the Merchants. That the Merchants had good Choice of Notaries and Brokers: Who upon a ſudden might be ready, and diligent to ſerve their Turns, as well in making their Policies, as in procuring Subſcriptions of the ſame, as alſo in making Intimations and other Writings incident thereunto. By which ſpeedy Diſpatch divers Loſſes and Inconveniences, which otherwiſe might happen, were prevented That if all this ſerving Merchants Occaſions ſhould be committed to one peculiar Perſon, it were not poſſible but great Diſcommodities and Loſſes would happen to many for lack of Diſpatch. That the Merchants found great Commodity and Surety by dealing with Notaries and Brokers, known to be ſkilful, ſecret, careful and diligent, in uſing and doing their Offices with Expedition. That it would be a great Bondage to Merchants to be tied to one particular Perſon, who might either for Favour or Reward diſpatch one Man, and for Diſpleaſure or Ill Will delay another. That Merchants who intended ſome ſecret, and yet lawful Voyage, would be glad to paſs their Writings privately by ſuch Notaries and Brokers, as they knew would be ſecret to them in that Behalf. Of which Convenience they muſt utterly be deprived, if they ſhould be forced to come to a publick Officer to paſs the ſame. That the Credit and Fidelity of the Broker is occaſion of divers Aſſurances, which otherwiſe would not be made, &c.

Jews Brokers.

Of late many Jews follow this Calling. Inſomuch that Endeavours have been made to reſtrain their Number. As appears by this Paper following.

Reaſons humbly offered to the Right Honourable the Lord Maior, and Court of Aldermen, againſt a Jew (who is a known Enemy to the Chriſtian Religion*) his being admitted a* Broker.

I. THAT the Act of Parliament to reſtrain the Number and ill Practice of Brokers and Stock-Jobbers, only limits the Number of Brokers to be one Hundred, and makes no mention of Jews, or any other Foreigners whatſoever.

II. THAT of the Jews, who are already Sworn Brokers, not above one half are of advantage to the Merchants in any Branch of Trade whatſoever.

III. THAT for the drawing and remitting of Money by Exchange to and from Foreign Parts, in which the Jews might be ſerviceable, if need required, there are already more than ſufficient; which has occaſioned almoſt one half of the Jew-Brokers to run into Stock-Jobbing: Which, with the great Number of other Jews employed to act under them as Brokers, contrary to the true Intent and Meaning of the aforeſaid Act of Parliament, has been the Occaſion of great Irregularities committed in dealing in Stocks.

IV. THAT there is no one Branch of Trade, which will receive any Detriment by not admitting a Jew to be a Broker at this time.

V. THAT the Jew-Brokers are, for the moſt part, neither Free of this Honourable City of London, nor any Livery Company, and pay very little towards the Support of the Publick: Whereas the other Petitioners are moſt of them Houſekeepers, Freemen and Livery-men, who pay Scott and Lott, and are otherwiſe Contributors to the Publick Charge, and have a Native Right to the Immunities and Privileges of Engliſhmen and Citizens, which the Jews have not.

VI. THAT the Jews have not any Right to the Immunities and Privileges of this City, nor deſerve any Incouragement from this Honourable Court, will evidently appear by the many Statute Laws now in force againſt them, contained in a Book, printed Anno 1703, dedicated to the Reverend the Clergy, and particularly to the Members of the Convocation: Which Book is ready to be produced. And if duly conſidered, 'tis humbly hoped, this Honourable Court will find no Reaſon to admit any more Jews to be Sworn Brokers.

Retailing Brokers.

There was another ſort of theſe, which they called Retailing Brokers, or Huckſters. And they were ſuch as uſed to buy old Apparel, Houſhold-ſtuff, Bedding, Books, Ends and Remnants of Silks and Velvets, Linnen and Woolen Cloth, &c.

Of this Trade there were many Abuſes diſcovered in Queen Elizabeth's Reign, as well as of later times. As the receiving and concealing of ſtolen Goods, and buying them at under Rates. Much of the Queen's own Plate and Jewels, Chains, Bracelets, &c. and of the Nobility's alſo, were ſtolen away from them, and brought to theſe Men to pawn or ſell. Of which Complaint ſeems to be made to the City. This cauſed an Act of Common Council Anno 1595, and 38 Eliz. Wherein a Regiſter was appointed to be of their Names that followed this Calling, written and kept by four honeſt and ſufficient Perſons, Freemen of the City, to be appointed and ſworn by the Maior and Aldermen. And theſe to enter the Names of every ſuch Retailing Brogger, or Broker, with the Place of their Dwelling, who ſhould receive, buy, or take to pawn any ſuch Plate or Goods: And likewiſe their Names, with the Place of their Abode, that ſhould deliver, ſell or empawn the ſame: Alſo a particular Note of the Things ſo delivered, ſold or laid to pawn; with the Prices or Sums of Money, for which the ſame were ſo delivered. To the Intent that any Perſon from whom any ſuch things have been unlawfully taken or conveyed, might make Search in the ſaid Regiſter Books for the ſame. Alſo, no Broker to buy, receive, or take to pawn theſe things, before he had preſented to the Regiſters the Parties who ſhould offer them to ſale, keep or pawn; and ſhewed to the ſaid Regiſters all ſuch things ſo offered to Pawn or Sale: A true Note alſo firſt to be regiſtered of the Names of thoſe that ſhould buy, &c. the ſame; and another Note deſcribing the Nature, Colour and Quality of the Things, and of the Prices and Sums of Money, for which the ſame were to be ſold or empawned. If they were empawned or left to be kept, then for what Time of Redemption: And if abſolutely ſold, yet it ſhould not be lawful for any Brogger to make Sale, or put away thoſe Things within the Space of ſeven Days next after. To the Intent, that if they had been ſtolen, the right Proprietors might freely view and ſee the ſame. The Broker to pay the Keeper of the Regiſter one Halfpenny, when the thing ſo entered to be kept or empawned, be for 5 s. or under: but if it be above, then one Penny, and no more.

No Broker or Huckſter, after Notice given to him by any of the Regiſters of any Plate, Goods, &c. affirmed to be ſtolen, ſhould buy or receive the ſame, but make ſtay of ſuch things ſo offered to Sale or Pawn: and cauſe the Party, ſo offering the ſame, to be apprehended and brought before ſome Juſtice of Peace, to be examined concerning the ſame Felony ſuppoſed. And at every ſuch Apprehenſion, to give Knowledge to the ſaid Regiſter who left the ſaid Warning, as well of the Party ſo taken, as of the Goods by him offered. To the Intent that the right Owner might be advertiſed by the ſaid Regiſter. No Broker to receive, buy or take to pawn any Plate, Jewels, Goods, &c. on Sabbath-Days, Feſtivals, or any Holidays, being not open Market Days. Every Broker offending in any Article, Clauſe or Point aforeſaid, to forfeit for every ſuch Offence 5 l. the one half to the City, the other to the Keepers of the Regiſter: and to pay to the Party grieved the full Value of the thing ſo bought, received or taken in Pawn, and concealed or untruly entered.

Pawn-Brokers, who.

The modern Pawn-Brokers are ſuch as take Plate, or any other Goods, and lend Money upon them at unreaſonable Conſideration; and to be returned back upon a Day, or otherwiſe the Commodities left in Pawn to be forfeited. Which hard Condition poor People are fain to comply with, to ſupply themſelves with ready Money upon ſome Extremity. Theſe, 'tis pity, the State hath not thought fit to take notice of, to redreſs their evil and unconſcionable Practices.

REFINERS of SUGARS.

The firſt Refiners of Sugar. J. S.

But two Sugar-houſes in England.

ABOUT the Year 1544, Refining of Sugar was firſt uſed in England. And the firſt Dealers therein were Cornelius Buſſine, Ferdinando Points, ... Mounſie or Mounſtow, John Gardiner, and Sir William Cheſter. Then there were but two Sugar-Houſes. And their Profit was but very little, by reaſon there were ſo many Sugar-Bakers in Antwerp: and Sugar came thence better cheap than it could be afforded at London. And for the Space of twenty Years together, thoſe two Sugar-Houſes ſerved the whole Realm, both to the Commendation and Profit of them that undertook the ſame. Whoſe Benefit was occaſioned by ſtopping of the Intercourſe between England and Antwerp.

Sugar Refiners unſucceſsful.

Sir T. Mildmay petitions for a Licenſe to refine Sugars.

Reaſons againſt it.

Afterwards many entered into that Trade, namely, John Alden, Henry Topsfield, Nic. Barneſly, Tho. Cordal, Richard Oldfield, Francis Fleming, Richard Pacton, Will. Holman, Ric. Bateman, and others. Who made ſmall Profit by it: and ſome proved Bankrupts. In the Year 1596, Sir Tho. Mildmay, a Courtier, (and before him one Henry Nowel, who died in the Suit) petitioned the Queen that he might have a Licenſe granted to him for Years, to refine Sugars: for which he would pay a Rent to the Queen. And to prevail in his Petition, he endeavoured to ſhew, that it was no Hindrance to her Majeſty's Cuſtoms, no prejudice to any Merchant Adventurer, no Damage to the Grocers of London, no Inconvenience to the Commonwealth, altho' it might be called a Monopoly. But the Lord Treaſurer (who would never conſent to any ſuch things without hearing what could be ſaid by others againſt it) received Reaſons why the Refining of Sugars ſhould not be granted to one, two or three private Perſons only, but be uſed generally, as had been accuſtomed: viz. That the Refining of Sugars was an ancient Faculty; and had been uſed in divers Countries for a general Commodity of the Commonweals, by all ſuch as had Skill by true Workmanſhip to exerciſe the ſame, without rejection. And whereas theſe Petitioners objected, that the former Refiners of Sugar added thereunto corrupt Mixtures, to their own private Gain, and to the deceiving of the Subject; a great number of honeſt Men would depoſe the ſame to be falſe and untrue. And this being privately in a few Hands, would be a principal Cauſe of the Decay of true Workmanſhip, and would alſo be the advancing of the Prices of all ſorts of Sugar, to the enriching of a few covetous and ill minded Perſons, and to the great Hindrance of the Commonwealth in general. That if the refining of Sugars ſhould be forbidden, then her Majeſty would loſe her Cuſtoms; which were no ſmall Sums: And that whereas England had been accuſtomed to be ſerved with fine Sugars from Antwerp, now England was ſufficient to ſerve itſelf, and did daily tranſport great Quantities into other Countries.

PLAYERS.

Players, Retainers to great Noblemen. J. S.

ACTING of Plays for the Diverſion and Entertainment of the Court, the Gentry, or any others, is become a Calling, whereby many get their Livings: How lawfully, is another Queſtion. Players in former times were Retainers to ſome Noblemen; and none had the Privilege to Act Plays, but ſuch. So in Queen Elizabeth's Time, many of the great Nobility had Servants and Retainers, who were Players, and went about getting their Livelihood that way. The Lord Admiral had Players, and ſo had the Lord Strange, that played within the City of London. It was not unuſual then, upon any Gentleman's Complaint of them, for Abuſes or undecent Reflections practiſed in their Plays, to have them put down. Thus once the Lord Treaſurer ſignified to the Lord Maior Hart, to have theſe Players of the Lord Admiral and Lord Strange, prohibited, at leaſt for ſome time; becauſe one Mr. Tilney had utterly for ſome Reaſons diſliked them. Whereupon the Maior ſent for both Companies, and gave them a ſtrict Charge, and required them in the Queen's Name, to forbear Playing for ſome time, till further Order might be given for their Allowance. The Lord Admiral's Players obeyed; but the Lord Strange's in a contentious manner went away to the Croſs Keys, and played that Afternoon, to the great Offence of the better ſort, that knew they were prohibited by Order from the Lord Treaſurer. So the Maior committed two of them to the Compter; and prohibited all Playing for the future, till the Treaſurer's Pleaſure was further known. This was in the Year 1589. More will be ſaid of theſe Players, when we come to Plays and Paſtimes uſed in the City.

There were two Acts of Common Council made about the middle of Queen Elizabeth's Reign, concerning theſe Actors of Plays. The firſt was in the Maioralty of Sir James Hawes, Anno 1574. Great Complaints were made by ſober Citizens againſt them: As, for their corrupting of Youth, Frays and Quarrels, increaſing the Infection by great Companies meeting together; (this being alſo a Time of Sickneſs;) Acting on Sundays and Holidays in the Afternoons, hindring the People's reſorting to the Prayers. And divers other Inconveniences and Sins, which the Citizens would not bear; and therefore made a very good Act for the Regulation of theſe Players. Which I tranſcribe from the authentick Act in Writing: Made the 6th of December, 17 Regin. Hawes Maior, Preſent the ſaid Maior, Fleetwood Recorder; Offley, Ducket, Alleyn, Knights; Nicolas Bond, Barneham, Box, Pipe, Woodroff, Oſborn, Aldermen; Barnes, Gamage, Sheriffs; & immenſ. multitudin. Commun.

WHereas heretofore ſundry great Diſorders and Inconveniences have been found to enſue in this City, by the inordinate haunting of great numbers of People, eſpecially Youth, to Plays, Enterludes and Shews; namely, occaſion of Frays and Quarrels, evil Practices of Incontinency, in great Inns, having Chambers and ſecret Places adjoining to their open Stages and Galleries; enveagling and alluring the Maids, eſpecially Orphans, and good Citizens Children under Age, to privy and unmeet Contracts; the publiſhing of unchaſte, uncomely, and unſhamefaced Speeches and Doings; withdrawing the Queen's Majeſty's Subjects from Divine Service on Sundays and Holidays; (at which time ſuch Plays were chiefly uſed;) unthrifty Waſt of the Money of the Poor and fond Perſons; ſundry Robberies by picking and cutting of Purſes; uttering of popular, buſy and ſeditious matters; and many other Corruptions of Youth, and other Enormities: Beſides, that alſo ſundry Slaughters and Maynehemings of the Queen's Subjects have happened by Ruines of Scaffolds, Frames and Stages; and by Engines, Weapons and Powder, uſed in Plays:

And where in times of God's Viſitation by the Plague, ſuch Aſſemblies of People in Throngs and Preſs, have been very dangerous for ſpreading of Infection: For the ſame and other great Cauſes, by the Authority of the Honourable LL. Maiors of this City, and th'Aldermen their Brethren; and eſpecially upon the ſevere and earneſt Admonition of the Lords of the moſt Honourable Privy Council, with ſignifying her Majeſty's expreſs Pleaſure and Commandment in that behalf; ſuch uſe of Plays, Enterludes and Shews hath been during the time of this Sickneſs, forbidden and reſtrained: And for that the Lord Maior and his Brethren the Aldermen, together with the grave and diſcreet Citizens in the Common Council aſſembled, do doubt and fear, leſt upon God's merciful withdrawing of his hand of Sickneſs from us (which God grant) the People, eſpecially the meaner and moſt unruly ſort, ſhould, with ſudden forgetting of his Viſitation, without Fear of God's Wrath, and without due Reſpect of this good and politick Means, that he hath afforded for the Preſervation of Common Weals and Peoples in Health and good Order, return unto the undue uſe of ſuch Enormities, to the great Offence of God, the Queen's Commandment and good Governance.

Now therefore, to the intent that ſuch Perils may be avoided, and the lawful, honeſt and comely Uſe of Plays, Paſtimes and Recreations in good ſort only permitted, and good Proviſion had for the Safety and well ordering of the People there aſſembled: Be it enacted by the Authority of this Common Council, that from henceforth no Play, Comedy, Tragedy, Interlude, nor Publick Shew, ſhall be openly played or ſhewed within the Liberties of the City; wherein ſhalbe uttered any Words, Examples, or any Doings of any Unchaſtity, Sedition, nor ſuch like unfit or uncomely matter, upon pain of Impriſonment by the ſpace of fourteen Days, of all Perſons offending in any ſuch open Playing or Shewing; and 5 l. for every ſuch Offender. And that no Inn-Keeper, Tavern-Keeper, nor other Perſon whatſoever, within the Liberties of this City, ſhall openly ſhew or play, nor cauſe or ſuffer to be openly ſhewed or played, within his Houſe, Yard, or any other Place within the Liberties of this City, any Play, Enterlude, Comedy, Tragedy, Matter, or Shew, that ſhall not be firſt peruſed and allowed in ſuch Order and Form, and by ſuch Perſons, as by the Lord Maior and Court of Aldermen for the time being, ſhall be appointed: Nor ſhall ſuffer to be enterlaced, added, mingled, or uttered in any ſuch Play, Enterlude, Comedy, Tragedy, Shew, or any other Matter, than ſuch as ſhall be firſt peruſed and allowed, as is aboveſaid.

And that no Perſon ſhall ſuffer any Plays, Enterludes, Tragedies, or Shews to be played or ſhewed in his Houſe, Yard, or other Place, whereof he then ſhall have Rule or Power; but only ſuch Perſon, and in ſuch Places, as upon good and reaſonable Conſiderations ſhewed, ſhall be thereunto permitted and allowed by the Lord Maior and Aldermen for the time being. Neither ſhall take or uſe any Benefit or Advantage of ſuch Permiſſion, before, or until ſuch Perſon be bound to the Chamberlain of London for the time being, with ſuch Sureties, and in ſuch Sum, and ſuch Form of the keeping of good Order, for avoiding the Diſcords and Inconveniences aboveſaid; as by the Lord Maior and Court of Aldermen for the time being, ſhall ſeem convenient. Neither ſhall uſe or exerciſe any ſuch Licence or Permiſſion at or in any Matters, in which the ſame, for any reaſonable Conſideration of Sickneſs or otherwiſe ſhall, by the Lord Maior and Aldermen, by publick Proclamation, or by Precept to ſuch Perſons, be reſtrained, or commaunded to ſtay and ceaſe: Nor in any uſual time of Divine Service in the Sunday or Holiday, nor receive any to that purpoſe in the Time of Divine Service to ſee the ſame; upon pain to forfeit for every Offence 5 l.

And be it Enacted, That every Perſon ſo to be licenſed or permitted, ſhall, during the time of ſuch Continuance of ſuch Licence or Permiſſion, pay, or cauſe to be paid, to the Uſe of the Poor in Hoſpitals of the City, or of the Poor of the City viſited with the Sickneſs, by the Diſcretion of the ſaid Lord Maior and Aldermen, ſuch Sums and Payments, and in ſuch Form, as betwixt the Lord Maior and Aldermen for the time being, on th'one part, and ſuch Perſon ſo to be licenſed or permitted on th'other part, ſhalbe agreed: Upon pain, that in want of every ſuch Payment; or if ſuch Perſon ſhal not firſt be bound with good Sureties to the Chamberlain of London for the time being, for the true Payment of ſuch Sums to the Poor; that then every ſuch Licence or Permiſſion ſhalbe utterly void. And every Doing, by Force of Colour of ſuch Licence or Permiſſion, ſhalbe adjudged an Offence againſt this Act, in ſuch manner, as if no ſuch Licence or Permiſſion had been had or made; any ſuch Licence or Permiſſion to the contrary notwithſtanding.

And be it likewiſe Enacted, That all Sums and Forfeitures to be incurred for any Offence againſt this Act; and all Forfeitures of Bonds to be taken by force, mean, or occaſion of this Act, ſhalbe employed to the Relief of the Poor in the Hoſpitals of this City, or the Poor infected or diſeaſed in this City of London; as the Lord Maior and Court of Aldermen for the time being, adjudge meet to be diſtributed. And that the Chamberlain of London ſhall have and recover the ſame for theſe Purpoſes aforeſaid, by Bill, Plaint, Action of Debt, or Information, to be commenced and purſued in his own Name, in the Court of the utter Chamber of the Guild Hall of London, called, The Maior's Court. In which Suit no Eſſoine, or Wager of Law for the Defendant, ſhalbe admitted or allowed.

Provided always, that this Act (otherwiſe than touching the publiſhing of unchaſt ſeditious and unmeet Matters) ſhall not extend to any Plays, Enterludes, Comedies, Tragedies, or Shews, to be played or ſhewed, in the private Houſe, Dwelling, or Lodging of any Nobleman, Citizen, or Gentleman, which ſhall or will then have the ſame there played, or ſhewed in his Preſence, for the Feſtivity of any Marriage, Aſſembly of Friends, or other like Caſe; without publick or common Collection of Money of the Auditory, or Beholders thereof: Referring always to the Lord Maior and Aldermen for the time being, the Judgment and Conſtruction, according to Equity, what ſhall be counted ſuch a Playing or Shewing in a private place; any thing in this Act to the contrary notwithſtanding.

The Petition of the Queen's Players againſt the former Act.

Upon this Act the Queen's Players made Petition to the Lords of her Majeſty's Privy Council, to this purport: ‘ That whereas the Queen's Poor ‘ Players (as they ſtiled themſelves) their time of ‘ Service drew near, ſo as of neceſſity they muſt
‘ exerciſe, to enable them the better for the ſame,
‘ and alſo for their better Help and Relief in their ‘ poor Living, the Seaſon of the Year being paſt,
‘ to play at any of the Houſes without the City ‘ of London (as in their Articles annexed to their ‘ Supplication might more at large appear.) Their ‘ Petition therefore was, that it might pleaſe their ‘ Lordſhips to vouchſafe the reading of their Ar‘ ticles ſent herewith, and in tender Conſidera-
‘ tion of the Matter therein mentioned, contain‘ ing the very Stay and good Eſtate of their Li‘ ving, to grant unto them the Confirmation of ‘ the ſame, or of as many, or as much of them,
‘ as ſhould be to their Honours good liking: And ‘ therewithal their Lordſhip's favourable Letters
‘ unto the Lord Maior of London, to permit them
‘ to exerciſe within the City, according to the ‘ Articles. And alſo that the ſaid Letters might ‘contain ſome Orders to the Juſtices of Middleſex, as in the ſame Articles are mentioned: Whereby they ſhould ceaſe their continual troubling of their Lordſhips. Subſcribing,

Your moſt bounden and daily Orators,

Her Majeſty's poor Players.

This Petition and the Articles annexed were anſwered by the City; and the Anſwer delivered, as it ſeems, to the Lord Treaſurer againſt them. And in fine, the Remedies (as they are ſtiled) for theſe Players, and for the more orderly Performance of them (ſent alſo to that Lord) were as follows.

Rules for them.

‘That they hold themſelves content with playing in private Houſes, at Weddings, &c. without publick Aſſemblies.

‘If more be thought good to be tolerated, that then they be reſtrained to the Orders of the Act of Common Council, Tempore Hawes.

‘That they play not openly, till the whole Death in London have been come by twenty Days unto Fifty a Week; nor longer than it ſhall ſo continue.

‘That no Plays be on the Sabbath Day.

‘That no Playing be on Holidays, but after Evening Prayer: Nor any received into the Auditory, till after Evening Prayer.

‘That no Playing be in the dark; nor continue any ſuch time, but as any of the Auditory may return to their Dwellings in London, before Sun-ſet, or at leaſt before it be dark.

‘That the Queen's Players only be tolerated. And of them their Number and certain Names to be notified in your Lordſhips Letters to the Lord Maior, and to the Juſtices of Middleſex and Surrey. And thoſe her Players not to divide themſelves into ſeveral Companies.

‘That for breaking any of theſe Orders, their Toleration ceaſe.

BUT notwithſtanding, theſe Orders were not duly obſerved, and the lewd Matters of Plays encreaſed; and in the Haunt unto them were found many Dangers, both for Religion, State, Honeſty of Manners, Unthriftineſs of the Poor, Danger of Infection, &c. And the Preachers daily crying againſt them, ſuit was made, that they might be baniſhed not only in the Liberties of the City, but in Places adjoining. And ſince that, namely, upon the Ruin at Paris Garden, ſuit was made to the Lords to baniſh Plays wholly in the Places near London. And Letters were obtained from the Lords, to baniſh them on the Sabbath Days.

CHAP. XVI.

Many Lands and Tenements of the Companies, given away by an Act in King Edward VI. Reign. Purchaſed again of the King. A Liſt thereof. A Project for each Company to ſend out a Ship for Trade. None to exerciſe any Trade than what he was Apprentice to. The Troubles of the Companies by means of the Patents granted for concealed Lands.

NOW to diſmiſs theſe Companies, after I ſhall have added ſome few things collected and gathered up, which relate to them in general.

The Companies receive a great ſtroke by the Act for taking away Chauntries. J. S.

Theſe Corporations had ſometimes ſuch Members, as by ſucceſs in their Trades and Callings, had come to great Wealth, and Chief Magiſtracy, and had raiſed Families. In acknowledgment of which goodneſs of God, and partly, out of a ſuperſtitious Care of their Souls departed according to the Religion of thoſe times, they gave part of their Eſtates to their reſpective Companies, in truſt for the building and maintaining of Hoſpitals, for annual Relief of the Poor; to which was commonly added certain Rents upon thoſe Lands or Tenements ſo given, for the Celebration of their yearly Obits, and for Prieſts, called Chauntry Prieſts, to ſing Maſs at ſet Days in the Churches where they were buried, for their Souls deliverance out of Purgatory, and for the Souls of ſome of their particular Friends and Relations deceaſed. Now this being ſuch a Nurſery of Superſtition, and a Maintenance for idle Prieſts, by an Act made in the beginning of King Edward VI. Reign, all ſuch Gifts were granted to the Crown. And accordingly all ſuch Lands and Poſſeſſions were ſeized into the King's hands; and ſo ſuch Portions of the Rents of them as were appropriated for ſuperſtitious Uſes, were as Rent-Charges paid by the Companies to the King. This was a great Blow to the Corporations of London; which were extreamly weakned in their Incomes and Revenues by the taking ſo much from them, and brought their charitable Donations almoſt to an End. Nor was there any other way for them but to purchaſe, and buy off theſe Rent-Charges, and get as good Penyworths as they could, of the King. And this they did 3 Edw. VI. by ſelling other of their Lands to enable them to make theſe Purchaſes. This coſt them 18700 l. Which Poſſeſſions when they had thus cleared again, they employed them to good Uſes, according to the firſt intent of them, abating the Superſtitions. A very exact account of which appears in this Table following. Which was drawn up long after, viz. in the Year 1587. and preſented to Queen Elizabeth and her Council, upon a new Vexation of them by certain, who had gotten a Patent, from her to look and ſearch into all ſuch Collegiate and Chauntry Foundations concealed hitherto. For which the Companies were again called to account; of which we ſhall hear more by and by. Here are ſpecified the Lands, purchaſed by each Company of King Edward VI. and what Lands they ſold to purhaſe the ſame, and how the Profits thereof were beſtowed. Which I tranſcribe from an Original.

A particular Note of ſuche Charitable good Uſes, as are performed by divers of the Companies of London, out of ſuche Rents as they purchaſed of King Edward VI.

Every Company to ſend a Ship to Sea, with their own Manufaƈture.

One Thomas Barnaby, a Merchant in Edward VI. his Days, urged to ſome great Lord of the Court the vaſt uſefulneſs of Shipping to this Iſland, of which at that time there was a great deficiency. And for the promoting of Shipping, he adviſed this way; that every Company of the City ſhould provide, and ſend out one Ship at leaſt, laden with the Commodities proper to their own Trade or Manufaƈture. Which might conſiderably advance Navigation in this Realm, and the Riches alſo of each Society. “ There be, ſaid he, ſo many rich Halls, that may ſpend 800 l. ſome 600 l. ſome leſs and ſome more, yearly. And great Revenues come to them yearly for Quarteridges and Forfeits: which riſe to no ſmall Sum. And nothing done withal, but making great Feaſts every Month or ſix Weeks at their Halls, and cauſing Viƈtuals to be dear. But it might be turned to a more honourable uſe: Alſo, it would be a great maintaining to the King's Subjeƈts, for every Craft to have a Ship to carry their Merchandizes to and fro, to the great advancement of the King's Honour, and to their own Commodities. And if chance ſhould fall (which God forbid) that a Ship ſhould be loſt, the Halls might eaſily bear the Smarts thereof.

A Bill that none ſhould exerciſe any Trade but he that had ſerved an Apprenticeſhip to it.

There was an endeavour made in March 1575, to obtain an Aƈt of Parliament that no Perſon ſhould exerciſe any other Trade than what he was Apprentice to. The Bill was drawn up and intitled, A Bill prohibiting the Exerciſe of any Art or Myſtery, ſaving to ſuch as have been Apprentice to the ſame; or, to prohibit, that no Perſon of one Art or Myſtery ſhall intermeddle with the Art or Myſtery of others. It ſet forth, How in the 37th Year of King Edward III. it was enaƈted, that Artificers and Men of Myſteries ſhould hold themſelves to one Myſtery, and that none ſhould uſe the Myſtery or Trade of others, but that which he had choſen. And in the Parliament holden in the fifth Year of the Reign of Queen Elizabeth, it was enaƈted that after the firſt of May then next enſuing, it ſhould not be lawful for any other than ſuch as did then lawfully uſe or exerciſe any Art, Myſtery, or manual Occupation, to ſet up, occupy or uſe any Craft, Trade, Myſtery, or Occupation, except he was brought up therein Seven Years; nor to ſet any Perſon at work in ſuch Myſtery, except he ſhould have been an Apprentice as aforeſaid.

Records ſhewed the Lord Treaſurer, relating thereto.

The City offered to the Lord Treaſurer a Paper, ſhewing, thar it appeared by ancient Records, that ſeveral Companies in London were incorporated, as well for the good Government of their Companies, and to ſee that true and perfeƈt Wares were made and ſold in the Realm, as to puniſh the diſordered Perſons, and baniſh the deceitful and corrupt Wares. At which time every ſeveral Company might occupy no other Trade but that whereunto the Perſon was Apprentice. Which Order kept the foreign Commodities at far lower Prices than at that preſent they were; and yet the Stuff and Wares better made than now they were. That Ignorance was a great occaſion of making and maintaining evil and corrupt Wares, and alſo of enhancing and raiſing up the Prices of foreign Commodities. That if every Man occupied his own Trade, that theſe Abuſes might eaſily be eſpied, and ordered either by the Governour of the Corporations, or by ſome other Device made by her Majeſty and the Honourable Council. That there were in London of ſeveral Companies far greater numbers that retailed Silks, than were free of the Mercers; and therefore no good Order could be kept.

Several diſfranchiſed for that cauſe in Richard the Second's Time.

In the Times of King Richard II. Sir Nicolas Brambre Maior, divers were diſfranchiſed and loſt their Freedom; for that they occupied other Trades than they were Apprentices unto: Viz. John Lynne and Nicolas Merchant, free of the Haberdaſhers, for that they occupied Merceries: Geffrey Preſtbery, for that he knew the ſaid Nicolas Merchant to occupy Mercery, and procured him to be free of the Haberdaſhers: William Southbrook, free of the Weavers, for that he occupied Drapery: Richard Croſs, for that he procured the ſaid Southbrook, occupying Drapery, to be free of the Weavers: Richard Skinner being a Taylor, loſt his Freedom, for that he uſed Drapery. Six ſeveral Taylors at that time loſt their Freedom, for that they knew the ſaid Skinner occupied Drapery, and yet procured him to be free of the Taylors.

From

Concealed Chauntry-Lands taken away from the Companies.

From the Year 1582, and ſome Years after, the Companies were again put to great trouble, a great part of their Lands and Tenements being in danger to be forfeited and taken from them, by reaſon of Sir Edward Stafford and others, who had obtained Patents from the Queen for finding out Obit and Chauntry, and Collegiate Lands concealed. Many of theſe Lands given by Act of Parliament to the King and his Heirs, 1 Edw. VI. the Companies were fain to purchaſe again of King Edw. VI. according to the Rent-Charges upon them, as was ſhewn before. But ſome other Chauntry Lands there were, which they held concealed hitherto; till certain prying Fellows (hoping thereby to make ſome Gains to themſelves) had made Diſcoveries of them to theſe Patentees, commonly called Concelers. Who examined narrowly into all theſe Concealments. And what was diſcovered became the Patentees, the Queen having ſome ſmall Part in Feefarm.

Concelers.

Lands concealed by the Grocers.

Thus Anno 1582, two of theſe Concelers, named Adams and Woodſhaw, diſcovered, that whereas divers of the Companies had upon the Act for Chauntries bought of King Edward VI. the Lands belonging to the Chauntries, and given to the reſpective Companies, and ſo enjoyed the ſaid Lands as they had done before, they had concealed ſome of the ſaid Chauntry Lands, and retained them in their hands, paying nothing for them. As for Example, the Grocers bought of King Edward VI. 67 l. 1 s. 8 d. per Annum; for which they gave 1341 l. 13 s. 4 d. and built the Weigh-houſe, which coſt them 1100 l. But theſe Men found, that the Lands belonging to Chauntries, in their Poſſeſſion, amounted to 147 l. 4 s. 8 d. What therefore remained of the Sum beſides 67 l. 1 s. 8 d. was by right the Queen's. Which ſhe gave to the Patentees: out of which the Queen had 4 l. 10 s. per Annum as a Fee Farm.

Lands concealed by the Skinners.

And ſo the Skinners bought of the ſaid King, Rents of their Chauntries to the Value of 30 l. 16 s. 6 d. per Annum. For which they paid 615 l. 10 s. Whereas there was now diſcovered to be Lands of that nature in their Poſſeſſion of 101 l. 8 s. 8 d. per Annum.

The Companies beſtow the whole Value of their Lands charitably.

Note, That the Value of the ſaid Lands were here ſet as they were charitably let by the Companies, (which was one great portion of their good Deeds) but would be much more by Improvement. Alſo the whole yearly Value aforeſaid, and the whole yearly Value of all the reſt of their Lands, the Companies ſhewed that they did beſtow upon the Poor, and upon Scholars, and other publick good uſes; without employing any one Penny thereof in their Dinners, or other like Charges. But the ſame were wholly born of their Quarteridge, and the Wardens Charge out of their own Purſes. As appeareth by this one Example of the Grocers here following.

The whole Rents of the Grocers per Annum,	216	14	04

And ſo in like ſort and proportion is to be ſaid of all the reſt of the ſaid Companies.

Note alſo, That the ſaid Companies are ſet by their Lands in Subſidy, 638 l. And ſo do pay at every whole Subſidy, 128 l. 10 s. Which, accounting every fourth Year to pay a Subſidy, amounteth yearly, communibus annis, to 31 l. 7 s. And ſo if the Companies loſe their Lands, the Queen ſhall loſe more in Subſidy than the whole that the Patentees do give her for the Lands.

Item, If the Land be taken away, and ſo the Purchaſe of the Rents void, if her Majeſty in equity repay the Sums that the King received for the Rents, it amounteth to 5640 l. 8 d.

The Companies buy their Lands concealed.

In fine, there was no way for theſe Companies to enjoy theſe concealed, but now diſcovered, Lands, unleſs they would lay down Money and buy them of the Patentees. Nor would the Patentees be contented to have them valued according to the old Rents they went at formerly, and as let by the Companies, but according to what they might be rented for at that preſent; and ſo ſet the Value upon them at 20 Years Purchaſe. But ſeveral Companies contended with theſe Concealers. For many of theſe Lands were dubious whether they came under the Statute for Chauntries. At length ſome Matters of Law in this Cauſe were put to the Lords Chief Juſtices, Sir Chriſtopher Wray and Sir Edmund Anderſon.

The Lords Chief Juſtices Judgments about theſe Lands.

Wherein they gave their Judgments under their hands, That albeit Meſſuages were demiſed to Corporations of Myſteries in London, yet being appoint to Chauntries, Obits, &c. they were given to the King by the Statute Anno 1 Edw. VI. And then they gave their Judgments, that the Queen was entitled to certain Meſſuages in Controverſy; and others they left doubtful, and cleared ſome others.

Four Concealments were diſcovered in the Drapers Company: viz.

The City's Plea.

But to make this Matter clearer, and to ſhew what the City pleaded for it ſelf againſt theſe Concealers, this Plea which they put in to the Lord Treaſurer, may deſerve to be conſidered.

1. IN the firſte yeare of Kinge Edward the vjth, Chauntries, Colledges and divers Lands, Tenements, Rents, &c. employed in ſuperſtitious uſes, were geven to the Kinge, his Heires and Succeſſors.

2. In the ſame Statute are divers Clauſes, lymitinge in what Caſes the Kinge ſhould have all or parte, or Rente, or the Land it ſelfe.

3. Among other, there is a Clauſe to this effecte; That all Profites emploied by Corporations of Miſteries, to ſuch ſuperſtitious Uſes, ſhould bee to the Kinge as Rentes-charge, whereunto all thoſe and other the Landes of ſuch Corporations ſhould be liable.

4. Hereupon the Lawe was then taken and put in uſe, that in ſuch caſes where Landes were geven to ſuche Corporations, with lymitinge of Proffites to bee ſo ſuperſtitiouſly emploied, the Kinge ſhould not have the Landes, but the Proffites ſo employed, as Rentes-charge.

5. Upon this Statute, Commiſſions were directed for London, to certen Perſons of the Kings Counſell learned, and other greate learned Men in Lawe, and ſuche as were of Parliament, and prevye to the makinge of the Lawe, and ſo beſte underſtanding the true meaninge of the Statute.

6. Theſe Commiſſioners came to the Halles of London, and there had all the Evidencies of the Companies laide before them, that they mighte accordinge to their Underſtandinge, ſett downe the Rightes of the Kinge.

7. They, according to the ſaid Expoſition, did ſett downe and certifie thoſe Proffites to bee the Kinges, as Rents-charge, and did not entitle the Kinge to the Landes themſelves.

8. The Certificates were ſo accepted and allowed in the Kinges Courts, no doubte with the adviſe of the Kinges Officers and Judges and Counſel learned.

9. Theſe Rents were accordingly paied to the Kinge by the ſpace of certen yeres, without queſtion.

10. Afterward the Kinge in the thirde yere of his Raigne, having occaſion to levie a great Maſſe of Money, did require the Companies to purchaſe thoſe Rents, which they were lothe to doe; but beinge urged by their Dutie of Love and Service to the Kinge.

11. The Companies accordingly purchaſed thoſe Rents, for which they paied to the Kinge allmoſt xix thouſand Pounds.

12. For the raiſinge of this Somme of 18700 l. they were enforced to ſell divers of the ſaide Landes and Tenements, to paye for the reſte.

13. The Kinge moſt gratiouſlye meaninge that both the Companies and the ſaid Purchaſers ſhould reteyne bothe the ſaide Landes, and enjoye their ſaide Rentes according to their Bargaynes, did in the fifth Yere of his Raigne, in a Seſſion of the ſame Parliament, paſſe an Acte of Parliament for their aſſurance againſte Reverſions, Remainders and other Incombrances.

14. In the Preamble of the ſaid Acte is recited, howe the Kinge was by the ſaid Statute in the firſte Yere of his Raign, intituled to the ſaid Proffits, as Rents-charge, and not to the Landes in the handes of thoſe Laye Corporations.

15. So by the Judgement of the Kinge, his Nobles, Judges, Counſaile learned, and whole Court of Parliamente, in the ſaid late Seſſion, who had bene allſo of the former Seſſion, and beſte underſtandinge their owne meaninge, it was confeſſed and recited, that the Kinge in this Caſe, had the Rents, and not the Landes.

16. In the Bodie of the ſaid Acte is expreſſely ſett downe, that the ſaid Companies and Corporations ſhall quietly enjoye and holde both the ſaid Rents, Manors, Landes, Tenements and Hereditaments.

17. Accordinge to this Expoſition, they have ever ſince quietly enjoyed the ſame.

18. They have made ſondrye Sales, Grauntes, and Leaſes of their ſaid Landes and their Grauntees, have likewiſe done. Upon which Grauntes are ſondrye Warrantiſes, Bondes and Covenants.

19. Many of the ſaid Leaſes are become Portions of Widowes and Orphanes.

20. Many have beſtowed great Buildings upon the ſame, to the beautifying of her MajeſtiesCitie.

21. Many, but eſpecially poore Men, have their Habitations and onely Settlings of their livinge in the Premiſſes.

22. The Arrerages of the Profits are very greate Sommes.

23. The Companies havinge purchaſed the ſaid Rents, thoughe they mighte have turned them wholly to their owne profite, have emploied the ſame to publike uſes, viz. reliefe of poore Perſons, of Almes, Exhibitions, of Schollers in the Univerſities, Proviſions of Grayne and Armour, ſetting forth and Entertainments of Souldiers, and other Service of their Soveraignes from time to time.

24. Nowe of late there hath bene founde out a newe Opynion upon the ſaid Statute, contrary to the forſaid Expoſition and Underſtanding thereof. And it is ſuggeſted that the Kinge is entitled to the ſaid Landes, and not to the Proffites; and ſo the ſaid Companies have neither Lande nor Rente, notwithſtanding their Purchaſes bona fide, and by the Judgment of the Kinge, his Counſels learned and Parliaments.

25. Upon this Suggeſtion, informations of Intruſions are brought againſt the ſaid Companies, all for concealed Landes.

26. Yf the ſaide Informations ſhould prevaile, and the ſaid newe Opynion holden for Lawe, infinite Inconveniences would enſue: Viz.

27. The Companys beinge bona fidei Poſſeſſores, and having truly purchaſed for greate Sommes at the Kings requeſte, ſhould be defrawded of their lawful Bargaines.

28. The Arrerages ſhould be to them a greater Burden then they are able to ſuſteyne.

29. The Warrantizes, Covenants, Bondes and Forfeitures, are an infinite Somme, and a moſte unſpeakeable Confuſion.

30. The Charge of their Buildinge ſhould be wholely loſte.

31. Multitudes of Widowes and poore Orphanes ſhould be thruſte out of their Portions, and utterly undone.

32. The Teſtaments and Laſte Willes of many perſons ſhould be utterly defeated.

33. Infinite nombers of poore Inhabitants ſhould at an inſtant be expelled from their Dwellings.

34. Marveilous nombers of Poore ſuſteined by thoſe Revenues of Companies, ſhould be put from their Reliefe, and coſte to miſerie, and burden of the State more than London ſhall be able to ſuſteyne.

35. Many poore Schollers muſte loſe their Exhibitions.

36. The Companies ſhall not bee able to furniſhe her Majeſties Service from time to time as they have done, and deſire to doe; much leſſe to mainteyne the good contynuance of her Citie to her Majeſties Honoure.

37. Finally, the Confuſion and Tumbling up of the whole State and Order of this Citie would bee uncredible.

38. Her Majeſtie ſhould hereof, by the ſaid Suggeſters, receyve little or nothinge, and in no waye comparable to the loſſe that her Highnes may ſuſteyne in her Cities Diſabilitie.

It may therefore pleaſe your honourable Lordſhip of your Goodneſs,

To be favourable to the ſaid Citie and Companies in their moſt humble Petitions to her Majeſty, and counſell for their Reliefe, and to be meane,

That her Majeſtie will allowe the ſaid true Interpretations of the Statutes, whereby they have hetherto enjoyed the ſaid Landes.

That her Majeſtie will commaunde ſuch Sutes, Informations, and Moleſtations, to ceaſe.

And that her Highneſs, if need ſhould be, will by her moſte gracious Graunts, or Royal Aſſente to an Acte of Parliament hereafter for that Cauſe, ratifie the the Poſſeſſions of the ſaid Companies in playne and expreſſe Forme.

Arbitrators between the Patentees and Companies.

FOR the final compounding and adjuſting theſe Controverſies ariſing between the Patentees and Companies, certain Lords of the Council were made Arbitrators between them; whereof one of them was the Lord Treaſurer of England.

Offer of Patentees to the Companies.

The Offers of the Patentees before the Lords Arbitrators, April 4. 1585, to the Companies, were as folow:

'They require the Inheritance and Fee-ſimple of ſo much of the Lands in queſtion, as they ſhall be found to have Right unto by the Opinions of the Judges: In conſideration whereof, they will grant unto the ſaid Companies and their Succeſſors for ever, out of the ſame Tenements, ſo much annual Rent, in nature of a Rent-Charge, as the ſame Tenements are now demiſed for, and remit unto them beſides all the Arrearages, without offering Diſturbance to any Tenant for the Leaſe or Term of Years granted them bona fide, before the Date of the Patent.

'They demand 5000 l. and Leaſes in Reverſion for an hundred Years, of all the Lands that they ſhall have Right unto by the Opinions of the Judges, remitting to the Companies abſolutely the Inheritance of the Lands, the whole Arrearages, and ſuffering the Tenants quietly to enjoy their Eſtates.

'They are contented to depart with a third Part of ſo much Land as ſhall be thought to be their Right by the Opinions of the Judges, reſerving only to themſelves two parts of the ſame Land, being rated and caſt up according to the yearly Value in Rent, or as it is worth to be ſold.

'Where it is alledged by the Companies, that they paid for the Rents-Charges out of theſe and other Lands 19000 l. or thereabouts; the Patentees, to ſave the Companies from Loſs and Prejudice, are contented to repay unto them ſo much Money ratably for the Rents out of the Lands to be adjudged for the Patentees, as it ſhall appear they diſburſed for the ſame, remitting unto them the Arrearages and mean Profits: The ſaid Companies to reſign over to the Patentees all their Intereſt both in the ſaid Lands and Rents ſo by them purchaſed; and the Tenants to continue out their Leaſes made bona fide before the Date of the Patent.

In ſhort, the Rents in Adam's and Woodſhaw's Patent were compounded for in the Year 1587, which amounted to 227 l. 16 s. 10 d. The Mercers Companies Rents, which they had before compounded for of the Queen, amounted to 196 l. 15 s. 3 d. and there remained much more to be compounded for.

K. James I. diſcharges all Eſtates of Concealments by Proclamation.

King James I. in the ſeventh Year of his Reign, Anno 1609, for the Eaſe of theſe long complain'd of Grievances, ſet forth a gracious Proclamation, intituled, A Proclamation ſignifying his Majeſties Pleaſure to confirm by all means the Eſtates of his Subjects againſt all Defects in their Aſſurances, and all concealed Titles; importing, 'That it had pleaſed him, as a Pledge of greater Favour intended towards his Subjects than ever they received from his Predeceſſors (ſetting apart all Conſiderations of Profit to himſelf, or Power over his good Subjects in this kind) by this Proclamation to declare, that he was fully reſolved, that all his Subjects ſhould partake of this Grace, to have all the Eſtates of their Lands confirmed and made perfect, and to be diſcharged of all mean Profits and Iſſues whatſoever heretofore due, or acknowledged, notwithſtanding any Defects, or Imperfections, &c.

The Act againſt Concealers; 21 Jac. I.

But it was not before the 21ſt of King James I. that this great Vexation of the Subject, by reaſon of Concealments, was put a full and ſatisfactory End to; when an Act of Parliament was made againſt theſe Concealers, and all Pretences of Concealments whatſoever. The Contents of the ſaid Act was, 'That the King, his Heirs, and Succeſſors, ſhall not at any time hereafter ſue, impeach, queſtion, or implead any Perſon or Perſons, Bodies Politick or Corporate; for, or in any wiſe concerning any Manours, &c. Secondly, or for or concerning the Revenues, Iſſues, or Profits thereof: Thirdly, or make any Title, Claim, Challenge, or Demand, &c. And that every Perſon or Perſons, Bodies Politick and Corporate, their Heirs and Succeſſors, and all claiming from, by, or under them, or any of them, for and according to their ſeveral Eſtates and Intereſts, which they have or claim to have in the ſame reſpectively, ſhall hereafter quietly and freely have, hold, and enjoy againſt his Majeſty, his Heirs and Succeſſors, &c. And furthermore, that every Perſon or Perſons, Bodies Politick and Corporate, their Heirs and Succeſſors, &c. ſhall quietly and freely have, hold and enjoy all ſuch Manours, &c. as they now have, claim and enjoy, &c. againſt 'all and every Perſon and Perſons, their Heirs and Aſſigns, having, claiming, or pretending to have any Eſtate, Right, Title, Intereſt, Claim or Demand whatſoever, &c. by reaſon or colour of any Letters Patents, or Grants, upon Suggeſtion of Concealment, or wrongful detaining, or not being in Charge, or defective Titles, or by, from, or under any Patentees, &c. of, or for which Manours, &c. no Verdict, &c.

Merchants. Their Companies. J. S.

WE have not yet told of all the Myſteries and Trades in London, as diſtinguiſhed into their ſeveral Companies. There is yet another Rank of conſiderable Traders, whoſe Traffick and Commerce lieth chiefly abroad, and who employ Shipping; exporting the Products and Manufactures of England into foreign Parts, and importing the Commodities of foreign Growth hither. Theſe we call Merchants, in great Credit and Reputation among us, as well as of Wealth and Opulency. Of theſe there be divers Companies alſo, according to the Regions and Countries of the World to which they trade, being incorporated by divers of our Kings and Queens. But notwithſtanding they are of theſe Companies of Merchants, yet moſt of them are Freemen of the City, and belong to ſome one either of the Twelve, or the other Companies of the Myſteries of London. But firſt to ſpeak ſomething of the Trade in general.

The Trade of London.

Which is that which makes London to be London, that is, makes her flow with Wealth and Honour, and able to deſerve the Name of the Chamber of the Kings of England; and finally, which influenceth the Proſperity and good Eſtate of the whole Nation: For ſhe is the Spring of Wealth, whence, as in ſo many Channels, it is derived throughout all the Parts of the Kingdom.

The great Trade of it. R. B.

And the Trade and Commerce of this City cannot but be great, if we conſider the vaſt Sum paid into the King's Treaſury, ariſing from the Cuſtoms, which amounts to about 400000 l. per Ann.

Moreover its great Trade may be gueſs'd at by the Shipping lying at Anchor in the River Thames, inſomuch that paſſing down the ſaid River, the Maſts reſemble a Wood, or Foreſt, beſides thoſe conſtantly going out, or coming from foreign Parts of the known World. Its great Trade may alſo be computed by great Numbers of well furniſhed Shops and Warehouſes, and by the great Port and Splendour the Merchants and Tradeſmen live in; their Houſes richly furniſhed; their Apparel coſtly; their Equipage noble, and their Tables plentiful, and many of them honoured by the Prince with Knighthood: Inſomuch, that London may not improperly be reckoned, a grand Magazine of Money, and Commodities of all ſorts, neceſſary for the Uſe and Pleaſure of Mankind. And for Horſes, Ammunition and all ſorts of Arms, it may be ſtiled a Storehouſe for War. And laſtly, for Men of all Ranks and Qualities, as Nobility, Gentry, Courtiers, Divines, Lawyers, Phyſicians, Merchants, Tradeſmen, Artificers, Seamen and Foreigners, is a vaſt Rendezvous of People.

Commodities exported.

For Exportation, this City (as the Storehouſe of the Kingdom) ſupplies other Nations with Lead, Tin, Copper, Iron, Pewter both wrought and unwrought, Shot, Guns, Allom, Seacoal, Saffron, Tallow, Hides, Leather, Calves-Skins, Lamb-Skins, Cony-Skins, Hops, Corn, when under ſuch a Price per Buſhel, as is ſet by Act of Parliament, Pilchards, Herrings, Barrel-Cod, Poor-Jack, Ling, Shoes, Stockings, Hats, Caps, Ruggs, Honey, Sope, Madder, Butter, Cheeſe, all ſorts of Haberdaſhery Wares, as Gloves, Ribbons, Needles, Pins, Tape, &c. but above all, with Cloth and Woolen Manufactures made into Serges, Norwich Stuffs, Sayes, Bayes, Perpetuanoes, Druggets, Kerſies, Raſhes, Cottons, Fuſtians, Flannels, Worſteds, Frizes, Peniſtons, &c. and that in vaſt quantities. All which ſaid Commodities, with divers others, not here named, find great vent beyond Seas.

Importation of Commodities.

The Importations are alſo as conſiderable, the Merchants bringing in from all parts of the Earth their Wares and Riches: which, after we have ſufficiently ſupplied our ſelves with, in great quantities, to the enrichment of the Importers and others that deal in them, are again tranſported to other Countries. And as our American Plantations take off prodigious quantities of all ſorts of the aforeſaid Commodities; that is, as well thoſe of our own Growth and Manufacture, as thoſe imported; ſo likewiſe by the Plantations, as Barbadoes, Jamaica, Virginia, New-England, Maryland, New-York, Carolina, Penſilvania, Bermudos, St. Chriſtopher, Nevis, &c. no leſs advantage is made by their Sugars, Tobacco, Indico, Ginger, Fiamento, Cotton, Cocoa, Furrs, Fuſticks and other Woods; which is enough not only for our Nation, but to ſupply moſt Countries with.

The American Plantations a great enrichment to England.

Commodities imported.

The Commodities imported are, Oils, Wines, Brandy, Spices, Fruits, as, Raſins, Corinths, Figs, Prunes, and Prunelloes, Calicoes, Pintadoes of ſeveral ſorts, Saunders, Tamerines, Spicknard, Alloes, Myrrhe, Rhubard, Opium, Druggs of ſundry ſorts, Precious Stones, Gold, Silver, Pearl, Amber, Frankincenſe, Caſſia, Camphire, Borax, Mirabolans, Benjamin, Rice, Chryſtal, Porcelane, Cabinets, Coffee, Tea, China-wares, Cornelian Rings, Muſk, Civet, Ambergreeſe, Salt-petre, Grograins, Turkey Carpets, Silks, Raw and Wrought into ſeveral Fabricks, as Taffaties, Sarſnets, Tabbies, Velvets and Pluſh, Diaper, Damaſk, Cambricks, Hollands, Ghentings, Muſlins, &c. alſo Caviare, Catchope, Pot-aſhes, Firs, Pipe-ſtaves, Oars, Deals, Clapboards, Cordage, Cable-yarn, Cottons, Cotton yarn, Red-wood, Log-wood, Fuſtick, Cedar, Pitch, Tar, Roſin, Iron, Steel, Wire, Laten, Elephants Teeth, Cochineil, Flax, Hemp, Wax, Tallow, Furrs, Goat skins, Cordovants, Hides, Sturgeon, Camels Hair, Mohair, Camblets, Grograms, Yarn, Galls, Glaſs, Slood, Allom, Iſinglaſs, Hogs Briſtles, Beaver Wool, Woombs, Colours for Painters, Pictures, Paper, Rice, Anniſeeds, &c. And indeed all Commodities whatſoever find good vent here.]

The Cuſtom Houſe for the Queen's Cuſtoms. J. S.

For the Management of Trade in Shipping off and Landing Goods, and for the Entring of them, in order to the Payment of the King's Duties, there is a Cuſtom-Houſe in Thameſtreet, below the Bridge, commodiouſly ſeated and ſupplied with Wharfs and Cranes for the lading and unlading of Goods: and as convenient within, by ſeveral Apartments for Offices belonging thereunto; beſides, a very large and ſpacious Room, where the Clarks and others ſit, for the diſpatch of Buſineſs.

The Officers.

In this Office of the Cuſtom-Houſe is a great Number of Officers employed, in their ſeveral Stations: many whereof have very large and noble Stipends, beſides other Advantages. The Principal Officers are the King's Commiſſioners; who have the whole Charge and Management of all his Majeſty's Cuſtoms in all the Ports of England, as well as London; and the Overſight and Ordering of the numerous Officers and Servants belonging to them. Theſe Commiſſioners, as ſeveral other Officers do, hold their Places by Patent from the King. Many others there are that are appointed by Warrant from the Lord Treaſurer, or the Lord Commiſſioners of the Treaſury for the time being. The Officers alſo for the Out-Ports, ſome are Patent-Officers, and others Warrant-Officers, to a great number. The Names of all theſe Offices belonging to the Cuſtom-Houſe, and their reſpective Salaries, may be ſeen by thoſe that have a mind to know, in the Book called the Preſent State of England.

Weights and Meaſures. Magna Charta, Cap. 27.

Other great and neceſſary Appendages of Trade, are Weights and Meaſures. Which by the Magna Charta, ought to be one and the ſame throughout the whole Kingdom: and thoſe muſt be according to the King's Standard, of Weights and Meaſures kept in the Exchequer, by a ſpecial Officer of the Houſe, called the Clark, or Comptroller, of the Market. And for the preventing of Deceits in ſo important a Matter, there are Officers appointed to inſpect the ſame: As the Jury of Inqueſts in the ſeveral Wards and Pariſhes of London, and the like for the Parts without the City Liberty. And in the County there is a Clark of the Market, for the Verge of the King's Palace, (which ſome ſay is twelve Miles circuit round the Court) whoſe Care is to look after the ſame. And to that end he keeps his Courts half yearly, at convenient Places for the Inhabitants; who bring or ſend their Weights and Meaſures to be tryed, by the Standard kept by him. And what Weights and Meaſures are by the Jury found to be faulty, the Owners thereof are preſented and fined by the ſaid Clark, more or leſs, according to the Offence, or returned into the Exchequer; and accordingly to be eſtreated for the King.

Clark of the Market.

But within the City Liberties, the Lord Maior hath the looking after the ſame: And the like hath the Steward, or Head Bailiff for the Liberty of Weſtminſter. And ſo for other Liberties, which by ſome old Privilege claim ſuch a Power, as St. Katharines, &c.

Concerning the Weights and Meaſures uſed in London, and all over England, and the particular practice of weighing and meaſuring Commodities, recourſe may be had to Books of Commerce, and Merchandize; and for a brief and ſuccinct Relation thereof, to the Preſent State of England.

Preſent State, p. 385. Edit. 1694.

The ſame Standard for Great Britain.

I only add, that after the Union of England and Scotland, it was enacted that the ſame Weights and Meaſures be uſed throughout Great Britain, as were before uſed in England: And the Standards of thoſe Weights and Meaſures, (anciently kept in the Exchequer at Weſtminſter) to be kept alſo in thoſe Burghs in Scotland, to which the keeping of Weights and Meaſures are now in Uſe. And all the Standards to be ſent down to the reſpective Burghs from the Standard kept in the Exchequer.

The Beam.

There antiently was, and ſtill is, a publick Ballance, or Beam, belonging to the City, for weigh of Commodities between Buyer and Seller, and a Maſter Weigher appointed: and there was all poſſible Care uſed for the juſt keeping of this Beam. For which Purpoſe theſe Orders of old time, may be taken notice of.

An Ordinance made of the manner of weighing by the Beam, 3 Ed. II. Ann. Dom. 319. Red Book.

* Speciarias.

Quia ſepius, &c. In Engliſh, ‘ Becauſe often before theſe times, many and ſundry Contentions have ariſen betwixt the Merchants Strangers ſelling, and the private Merchants buying different Commodities of Averdupois, and * Spices: which were weighed as well by the great Balance, as the ſmall: So that it was uncertain upon the Tract of weighing: For the Weigher gave to ſome more, and to ſome leſs, as was reported:

‘ For the avoiding of ſuch Contentions, and for the removing them for the time to come, it was agreed by Thomas Romayn, Maior, and the Aldermen, and by the aſſent of Luke de Haveryng, William de Byderik, Raſe le Balauncer, Peter Adrian, William Furneys, Roger de Arcubus, William le Boteler, William le Barber, John Godelinyng, Richard de Dorſete, Richard de Iſpania, Citizens and Merchants of London: and John le Lang, Hildebrand de nova Curia, Jacob Fiſh, John Pope, Richard Sware, Bertram de Coloign, John de Sterneberwe, &c. Merchants of Lombardy, and Provence: THAT all the Merchandizes of Averdupois, as of Wax, Almonds, Rices, Copper, &c. and ſuch like, which are to be weighed by the Beam, for the time to come be weighed equally. That the Weigher remove his Hands thence: So that he ſeem neither to the Seller, nor to the Buyer, to yield any thing, or to take away more than what is juſt, after any manner whatſoever. And that every Hundred of ſuch Groſſes of Averdupois, contain fiveſcore and twelve Pounds; and every Hundred of ſmall Spices, viz. Ginger, Saffron, Sugar, Maces, and other of ſuch ſort, which are ſold by the Pound, contain fiveſcore and four Pounds. And it is enjoyned the Weigher, that he weigh no otherwiſe, under pain of Impriſonment.

‘ And moreover it is forbidden, that no Merchant Stranger, or private Merchant, ſell or buy but by the Balance; and not by Detail, under pain, &c. Yet always ſaving the State of the Lord the King, and of his Wardrobe, when they will weigh. That they weigh as before hath been uſed, if they pleaſe: until ſomething elſe be appointed by him and his Council. And this Ordinance was made on Monday in the Eve of St. Martin, Anno Regn. Reg. Edwardi fil. Reg. Edw. tertio.

‘ And the Weigher ſhall receive, for the uſe of the Sheriff, of every thouſand Weight weighed, 1 d. And the Weigher ſhall have for his own Labour of every hundred Weight a Farthing.

What the antient manner of appointing a Weigher of the great Beam was, may be ſeen by this Extract out of the Records of the Chamber; when one Andrew Goddard, 6 Edw. II. was put and ſworn in that Office.

‘ Memorandum, &c. Be it remembred, that on Wedneſday next after the Feaſt of St. Michael, Ann. Regni Regis Edw. fil. Edw. ſexto, came honeſt Men of the Commonalty, viz. of the Trade of the *Pepperers, Corders, or Ropers,, Ferriers, or Ironmongers, Apothecaries, and of divers other Trades, who uſed to weigh their Commodities by Averdupois; and in the Preſence of Nicolas de Farndon, holding the Place of the Maior that day (becauſe the Maior [John de Giſors] was before the King's Council at Weſtminſter for the Buſineſs of the City) and of Richard de Glocester, &c. Aldermen, and of Richard de Welleford, one of the Sheriffs; they preſented one Andrew Goddard to the Office of the Weigher of the great Balance: Whom they choſe for a good and faithful Man to do the ſaid Office; and prayed, that the Sheriffs would admit him to the ſaid Office: And that they would not let it to farm, becauſe that it would be to the great Detriment of the foreſaid Office.

‘ And the foreſaid Richard the Sheriff admitted the foreſaid Andrew. And the ſaid Andrew was ſworn, well and faithfully to weigh, as well for the Seller as the Buyer, as well for the Poor as for the Rich; and all other who ſhall come to the Balance. And at the end of every Week ſhall render up to the Sheriff all the Profit coming of the ſaid Office, &c. And the ſaid Weigher ſhall take of every Thouſand weighed 1 d. for the Sheriff, for the Farm of the City; and for his Labour for every Hundred, a Farthing.

The ancient Aſſize of Weights and Meaſures, was as follows.

Aſſize of Weights and Meaſures. Lib. Horn. fo. 123, and 307.

Per Ordinationem totius Angliæ Regni fuit Menſura Dni. Regis compoſita, &c. ‘ By the Ordinance and Diſcretion of the whole Kingdom of England, was the Meaſure of the Lord the King ſettled: viz. That the Engliſh Penny, which is called Sterling, round without Tonſure or Clipping, ſhall weigh 32 Grains of Bread Corn in the middle of the Ear: And twelve Ounces make the Pound of London, to wit, Twenty Shillings. And eight Pounds of Sterlings make one Galon: And eight Galons make one Buſhel of London: And eight Buſhels make a Quarter of London: And twelve Pounds and an half make a Stone of London. And a Sack of Wool ought to weigh twenty eight Stone; and in ſome Parts thirty Stone.

The Trone of the City amended Lib. Horn fo. 349.

Add this Extract to the reſt, concerning weighing of Wool, and rectifying of the Trone, and appointing a Weigher, and the Fee for weighing.

6 Ed. 2.

Memorandum, &c. ‘ Be it remembred that on Thurſday, in the Eve of the Purification of the bleſſed Virgin Mary, in the 6 of Edward the Son of Edward, came John de Bureford, Simon Abyndon Draper, John de Codynton Wooler, Walter de Cheſewyk, Wooler, John de Hamme, and Richard de Hakeneye, Woolers alſo, and very many other honeſt Men, Woolers, and others of the City, at Gyhald, London; before John de Giſorz, Maior, John de Wengrave, William de Leyre, Henry de Durham, John de Wyndeſore, William Sernade, William de Combmartin, Anketine de Giſcetio, Stephen de Abyndon, and Roger de Paris, Aldermen: And there before the ſame Maior and Aldermen, forſomuch as it was given to the ſaid Maior and Aldermen to underſtand, that the Trone of the City, wherewith Wools bought and ſold were weighed in the ſame City, was defective, and not well kept; becauſe that one John Powel, who had the Cuſtody thereof, had not ſufficient Inſight to execute ſuch Office; the aforeſaid John de Bureford and others abovenamed, were ſworn, touching the Holy Goſpel; that they would cauſe the ſaid Trone, well and faithfully to be kept, and, if it were neceſſary, to be amended. And that to keep the ſaid Trone, they would chooſe ſome faithful and diligent Perſon. And hereupon one Thomas Le Anſelma Kiere, being ſworn, aſſayed the ſaid Trone by the Weights of Gyhald, and made it certain and competent. And the Woolers being ſworn, choſe a certain Weigher, to ſerve the ſaid Trone in the place of John Powel; to wit, one William Gyri, who there preſently ſwore, that he ſhould weigh well and faithfully, by the foreſaid Trone, between Merchant and Merchant, doing Juſtice and Equity, as well to Foreigners, as private Men [i. e. Freemen,] ſparing or favouring none by Fear or Affection, Prayer or Price. And that he ſhould not take of the free Merchants of the City, but of both, that is, as of the Buyer, as the Seller, an Halfpenny only of every Sarpelar weighed: And of the Foreigners Merchants, weighing after the ſame manner, of both one Penny only. And if perhaps a private Merchant and a Foreigner have weighed on account of Merchandize made between them, he ſhall take, for every Tract, of the Foreigner 1 d. and of the private Man one Halfpenny only, and not more.

The Standards of Weights regulated by a ſpecial Jury.

Concerning the Abuſe of Weights in England, and the Complaint and Regulation thereof in Queen Elizabeth's time, it may not be unworthy to be noted: That in the 16th Year of that Queen, Information was given unto the Lord Treaſurer, Under-Treaſurer and Barons of the Exchequer, that the Weights uſed throughout the Realm were uncertain, and varying one from another: Which tended to the ſlander of the ſame, and deceiving of many, both Buyers and Sellers. So that no true and juſt Standards were then extant for the ſizing of true Weights, as in former times had been uſed. Whereupon they cauſed nine Merchants, and twelve Goldſmiths of the City to come before them, and charged them to enquire upon their Oaths on certain Articles, containing in effect, how many ſeveral ſorts of Weights, were then lawfully in uſe within the Realm; and to try and conſider upon certain Weights delivered to them by the ſaid Lord Treaſurer, Under-Treaſurer and Barons: And out of thoſe Weights, and othetwiſe, with all their Diligence and Underſtanding, to ſize one certain of all ſorts of Weights, lawfully to be uſed from thenceforth. And this Jury accordingly cauſed one certain Standard, as well of Troy Weight, as of Averdupois. And preſented it to the ſaid Treaſurer and the reſt, together with their Verdict in writing under their Hands and Seals; declaring the ſeveral Poizes of the ſaid Standards, and their Proceedings touching the Charge that was given to them.

Another Jury called upon the ſame Account.

In the 25th of the ſaid Queen, ſome Perſons of good underſtanding objected, and alledged unto the ſaid Treaſurer, that the ſaid Standards, ſo by the ſaid Jury ſized, were not agreeeble with the antient Standards, allowed and appointed by the Laws of the Realm, nor were ſo profitable to the Common-wealth, as were convenient. Whereupon the Treaſurer cauſed another Jury of eighteen Merchants, and eleven Goldſmiths, Citizens of the ſaid City, to appear before him in the Court of the Exchequer. And they were charged upon their Oaths to enquire and try, by all lawful Ways and Means that they could, whether the ſaid Standards ſo newly ſized, were agreeable unto the antient Standards, allowed and appointed by the Laws of the Realm; or whether they might be allowed and appointed to be Standards, for the ſizing of all other the Weights of the Realm by, without hurt to the Commonwealth. And for their better inſtruction and underſtanding of the Truth herein, the Lord Treaſurer and the reſt charged them to hear and conſider all ſuch Objections, as ſhould be made againſt the ſizing of the ſame Weights, or the ſaid Verdict, by any Perſon or Perſons: and to hear and conſider the Anſwer of the former Jury, to the ſame, and their Reaſons for their ſaid doings in that matter. And if they ſhould find their doings good and allowable, then to certify the ſame by Verdict in Writing under their Hands and Seals. And if not, then to cauſe other better and more true Standards of Weights to be ſized, according to the true meaning of certain Articles to them delivered by the Treaſurer.

Their Preſentment and Verdict contrary to the former.

Theſe Men at length did, upon Deliberation and Conferences had with the former Jury of the matters given to them in Charge, ſay and preſent unto the Treaſurer and the reſt upon their Oaths, as follows; viz. That the ſaid Standards or Weights ſo lately ſized by the former Jury were not agreeable to the antient Standard, according to their Judgment and Underſtanding; and that the ſame might not be allowed and appointed to be the Standard for the ſizing of all the Weights of the Realm, without hurt to the Commonwealth of the ſame. And furthermore, they cauſed to be new ſized, according to the true meaning of their Charge, ſo near as they could by their Diligence, Wit, Skill, and Underſtanding, two certain ſeveral Standards: that is to ſay, one, which did agree with the true Proportion of the Pile, or Standard, remaining in Goldſmiths Hall, to ſize all other Troy Weights by, which had been of antient Uſe: And the other of Averdupois; which did agree with the true Proportion of the Queen's antient Standard of LVI lb. remaining in the Exchequer, as it ſeems, ſince the time of King Edward III. to ſize all other like Weights by, and was in preſent Uſe. And that the ſame two ſorts of Weights might be uſed and continued for Standards to ſize all Weights by, throughout the Realm, without hurt to the Commonwealth of the ſame, to their beſt Knowledge and Underſtanding. This laſt Verdict, and the ſeveral Standards were preſented, and remained in the Court of Exchequer.

This laſt approved by the Treaſury.

Theſe ſame Standards ſized, and preſented by the laſt Jury, were found by the Lord Treaſurer and Barons, to be more agreeable with the Weights of long Continuance and Uſe in the Realm, and with the Standard allowed, appointed and uſed, both for our Monies and Plate, of Silver and Gold, and ſuch like things ſold by Weight; and agreeable alſo to the Laws of the Realm, for any material thing that had been found or objected to the contrary.

The Queen's Decree hereupon.

Hereupon the Queen, by the advice of her Privy Council, and others of Knowledge and Experience, determined and ordained, that the ſaid firſt Verdict and Preſentment, and the Standards ſized and preſented with the ſame, ſhould be and remain utterly fruſtrate and of no Force. And that the laſt Preſentments and ſaid Standards, ſized and preſented by the Jury of the ſame, ſhould be and remain and continue; and ſhould be holden, uſed, allowed and accepted as lawful, good, true and profitable for the Commonwealth, to all Intents and Purpoſes. And ſhe commanded the Treaſurer to cancel and make void the firſt Preſentment, and the Standards offered by that Jury, to be broken. And that the latter Preſentment ſhould be entred upon Record in the Court of Exchequer, and the Standard, ſized and preſented by the Jury of the ſame, to be laid up and ſafely kept in that Court, and to be accounted, uſed and followed as the Standard of the ſame Court, for the ſizing of all Weights of the Realm by. And to cauſe other like Weights and Standards to be made and ſized by the ſame. And to be ſent to the Cities and Towns, mentioned in the Statute touching Weights, made in the eleventh Year of her Grandfather Henry VII. there to remain, and be uſed as true Standards and Weights, according to the meaning of that Statute. And it was the Queen's further Will and Pleaſure, that the ſame Treaſurer and the reſt, by the Queen's Proceſs and Proclamation, or otherwiſe by their diſcretion, ſhould cauſe like Weights and Standards to be provided in every other Corporate and Market Town within the Realm of England and Wales; and to cauſe all other Weights, varying from theſe, to be forthwith deſtroyed, or made agreeable with theſe by the Clarks of the Market, or any other to be by them thereunto aſſigned. So that from henceforth there ſhould be but one Weight throughout all the Realm, according to the Laws and Statutes. This was one of the moſt worthy and uſeful Acts of that excellent Queen for the good of her Subjects.]

The firſt Governour. J. S.

This Company was ſettled and eſtabliſhed by Queen Mary, Anno 1555. and the Patent bore date February the ſixth. The firſt Governour was Sebaſtian Cabota, an ancient Gentleman, ſprung from Genoa in Italy, but had lived long in England, and deſerved very well of Maritime Affairs.

But King Edward VI. firſt opened the way of a Trade, by his Letters to the Emperor of Moſco in May 1553. Which that Emperor anſwered, granting the Egnliſh a free Trade into his Dominions.

Act for enlarging the Trade to Ruſſia.

A few Years ago, an Act was made for enlarging the Ruſſia Trade; Tobacco being allowed by the preſent Czar of Moſcovy, (who was lately in Perſon in England) to be imported into his Country, which was never allowed before. This Company had aſſumed a Power to ſet what Fine they pleaſed, upon thoſe that ſhould deſire the Freedom of their Trade; which uſually was 50 l. a thing complained of, as injurious both to the Company it ſelf, and to the Trade into thoſe parts: the Company being obſerved very much to decay, and the Trade becoming inconſiderable: which otherwiſe was of very great Conſequence to the Engliſh Nation, in reſpect of Shipping and Naval Stores. This matter coming before the Parliament, Nathaniel Tench, Eſq; Governour of the Eaſtland Company, a Merchant of great Knowledge and Experience; ſhewed this at large before the Parliament in the Houſe of Lords, in order to gain a liberty of Trade into Ruſſia, to the ſaid Eaſtland Merchants and others. And whereas it was pretended, by thoſe of the Ruſſia Company, that this would be to infringe the Priviledges granted to them by Act of Parliament; he anſwered, that no ſuch thing was intended, but that the ſaid Ruſſia Company might ſtill remain as they were before; only that the Trade might be enlarged, by abating the exceſſive Fines for Licence to Trade, from 50 l. or what they pleaſed to impoſe, to 5 l. And with this the Parliament was ſatisfied; and enacted the Fine at 5 l. and no more. By which means that Trade to Ruſſia is very conſiderably advanced already. For whereas before there were not above four, five, or ſix Ships at the moſt, ſent into thoſe parts in one Year; now there go ſixty or ſeventy Sail yearly.

Nathaniel Tench, Eſq; Governour.

It was obſerved, that the Ruſſia Merchants, when the Cauſe came before the Parliament, had the learnedeſt Lawyers in the Land to manage it on their Side: The Eaſtland Company had none but Mr. Tench, their Maſter. Who notwithſtanding anſwered diſtinctly all the Lawyers arguments, ſo fully and ſatisfactorily, and ſpoke to the matter with ſo much Evidence and Conviction, that he carried the Cauſe, and that with much Applauſe to himſelf, and Admiration of all that heard him

The Czar by Contract allows bringing in Tobacco into Ruſſia.

About the Year 1698. the Emperor of Ruſſia, (now ſtiled The Czar) being in England, there were ſome Merchants in London, who entred into a Treaty with him, for a free Importation of Tobacco into his Dominions. And they paid him 12000 l. immediately upon ſigning the Contract. And it coſt them above a 1000 l. more in other charges to obtain it. And this they did before one half of the Sum was ſubſcribed that was intended for a Stock ſufficient to carry on the Trade.

To this ſo gainful a Traffick for England, this Ruſſia Company put an impediment, by requiring ſuch large Sums for Licences to Trade thither: having Power otherwiſe to ſeize their Ships and Goods. Therefore they laboured for an eaſy Admiſſion into the Freedom of this Company, by means of a Bill, then depending in the Houſe of Commons, for enlarging the Trade to Ruſſia. But this being not for ſome time obtained, ſeveral fell off; and the whole Burthen of this undertaking, fell upon the Shoulders of ſeventy or eighty Perſons, who were the firſt Subſcribers. Theſe thought it needful to ſend ſome Tobacco; thereby to ſhew their willingneſs to comply with that part of the Contract; leaſt the Czar ſhould take an advantage by their neglect: and ſo they might looſe the 12000 l. paid him, and all their other Charges, and the Nation the advantage of that Liberty which had been ſo deſired. Therefore they ordered about 110000 Pounds of Virginea-Leaf, to be ſent from Holland thither: and more of Roll and cut Tobacco.

In fine, there being afterwards another Seſſions of Parliament, they ſhewed, that if they could not obtain their Freedom of the Ruſſia Company upon moderate Terms, they ſhould not be able to comply with their Contract with the Czar, but muſt be forced to throw up their Patent, or diſpoſe of it to the Dutch, on the beſt Terms they could.

Advantage of this Trade with Ruſſia.

At this time, they ſet forth ſome of the Advantages this Nation might enjoy, by encouraging the Tobacco Trade to Ruſſia. As, that firſt, We might probably in a ſhort time vend in Ruſſia 5000 Hogſheads a Year. Which might yield there 120000 l. over and above the Czar's Cuſtoms: and would be ſo much new Addition to the Nations Stock. Secondly, the Spinning and Manufacturing that Tobacco here in England, would give new Employment to above 1500 people; beſides thoſe that would be employed in Planting, Packing, &c. of it in Virginea; and Ships and Seamen to bring it thence. Thirdly, the Manufacturing of it here, and other petty Charges, upon 5000 Hogſheads, will amount to upwards of 26000 l. which will be diſtributed amongſt our labouring People. Fourthly, the carrying of ſo much Tobacco to Ruſſia, and bringing Returns from thence for it, will give a new Employment to a great Number of our Ships and Seamen. Fifthly, His Majeſties Revenues will be encreaſed betwteen 5 and 6000 l. per Ann. by one half of the Subſidy that will not be drawn back. Beſides, 'tis certain the greater Vent we have for Tobacco here, the better Price it will yield; and conſequently, encourage the Planting of more in Virginea: where there is Land enough to produce more Tobacco than all Europe can conſume. And Sixthly, if this Trade be encouraged, we ſhall bring the greateſt part of our Naval Stores from Ruſſia in our own Shipping; whereas now we have almoſt all thoſe Stores brought us from Sweden, and in Swedes Ships: by which this Nation ſuffers ſeveral ways. As we give the Swedes a greater Price for Naval Stores, than they can be bought for in Ruſſia: The Nation looſeth all the Freight we pay the Swedes. The Swedes take little of our Manufactures, &c.

The Reply of the Czar to a Merchant.

Let me be permitted to add this Paſſage, that when Mr. Heathcote, one of the Eaſtland Company (now Sir Gilbert Heathcote, Knight, Alderman, and Maſter of the ſaid Company) knowing how averſe the Prieſts in Ruſſia were to the taking of Tobacco, addreſt to the Czar in high Dutch (at a meeting of the Company with him in London) mentioning the ſame as like to prove ſome Impediment to the Trade in his Dominions; he replyed, He would do well enough with them, when he went Home.

The Eaſtland COMPANY; ſometime called Merchants of Elbing.

Why called Merchants of Elbing. J. S.

THE Company of Merchants trading to the Eaſt Country, called commonly in Queen Elizabeth's time, The Merchants of Elbing, becauſe there they firſt ſeated themſelves, became incorporated by the ſaid Queen Elizabeth. Elbing oweth a great part of its Beauty and Splendor, and the great Reſort of People to it, to the Commerce and Trade of the Engliſh. In the ſaid Town is yet to be ſeen, in a public Hall, the Coat of Arms of an Engliſh Agent; as a grateful Remembrance of the Trade brought thither by this Nation. But the Place having but a ſmall River coming up to it, and being found not ſo commodious as other Places in thoſe Parts, the Merchants have long ſince left it, and removed themſelves to Dantſig, Koningsburg, Riga, and other Towns.

Camd. Elizabeth ſub Ann. 1597.

This Company (by the Name of Governor, Aſſiſtants and Fellowſhip of the Merchants of Eaſtland) were firſt incorporated by Queen Elizabeth's Charter, dated Auguſt the 17th. Anno Regni 21. with liberty to Trade from any her Majeſty's Dominions through the Sounds, into the Realms, Dominions, Dukedoms, Countries, Cities and Towns of Norway, Swethen, Poland, Littaw, Lieſland, and Pruſſen, with the Territories of the ſame; alſo Pomerland from the River of Odera Eaſtwards, with Ryga, Revel, Konningsburgh, Elbing, Brownsborough, Dantzik, Copenhagen, and Elſenore, Finland, Gotland, Ewland, and Burntholme; or any of them, the Narve excepted. That Port being within the Charter of the Ruſſia Company.

And by the Charter, the ſaid Eaſtland Company, and the Hamburgh Company, may ſeverally Trade with all Denmark. The Trade to Copenhagen and Elſenore, and with Mackleburgh, Jutland, Sleſia, Moravia, Lubeck, Wiſmer, Roſtock, Stetin, Straelſound, and the whole River of Odera.

This Company was confirmed by the Charter of King Charles II. dated the 20th of February, Anno Regni 13.

But by a late Act of Parliament, Norway and Sweden were left free for any to Trade to, though not of this Company.]

The uſeful Trade of this Company. R. B.

This Company is found very advantageous to the Publick, by their great Trade, in tranſporting of our own Commodities, and importing great quantities of rich Merchandizes. Our Commodities exported are Woolen Cloths, Kerſies, Sergies, Perpetuanos, Norwich Stuffs, Cottons, Lead, Tinn, Pewter, Hatts, Stockings, together with ſeveral other of the Southern and Eaſtern Commodities. And for theſe they import Deals, Maſts, Timber, Oars, Clapboards, Balks, Bomſpars, Cantſpars, Pipeſtaves, Wainſcot and Quarters; alſo Flax, Hemp, Linnen-Cloth, Cordage, Cable-yarn, Pitch, Tar, Tallow, Pot-aſhes, Wheat, Rye, Iron, rich Furrs, Bees-Wax, Sturgeon, Stockfiſh, with ſeveral other Commodities.

The Atchievement belonging to this Company is thus blazoned; Or, on a Point wavy, a Ship under Sail proper. On a Chief Gules, a Lion, Paſſant Gardant. And for their Creſt, on a Helmet and Wreath of their Colours, an Ark, on which ſtand a Raven with diſplayed Wings; or as ſome vary it, an Elke proper. The Supporters are two Bears Sable. Their Motto, Deſpair not.

For the Management of the Affairs of this Company, they have a Governor, Deputy Governor, and Court of Aſſiſtants, conſiſting of four-and twenty, annually choſen out of the ſaid Fellowſhip in the Month of October, viz. the firſt Wedneſday after Michaelmas Day: and have their Meetings to keep Courts Monthly, or as occaſion requires, at Founders Hall in Lothbury.]

Nathaniel Tenche Governor. J. S.

Nathaniel Tenche, Eſq; a very grave, intelligent and worthy Citizen and Merchant, and who had fined for Alderman, was for many Years their Governor, and ſo remained to his Death.

easons a-inſt lay-g open the Woolen Ma-nufacture Trade: Writ by him.

Eliza. Ann.

While he was Governour, there being a endeavour to lay open the Trade of the Woolen Manufacture to every one that would; ſo injurious to this as well as other incorporated Societies of Merchants; he wrote and publiſhed in the Year 1689. a very rational Tract againſt it, tho' modeſtly without his Name ſet to it. It was intitled, REASONS, humbly offered by the Governor and Aſſiſtants and Fellowſhip of Eaſtland Merchants, againſt the giving a general Liberty to all Perſons whatſoever, to export Engliſh Woolen Manufacture, whither they pleaſe. It was occaſioned by a dangerous miſapprehenſion, that a general liberty to all Perſons to export the ſaid Manufactures where they pleaſed, would conduce much to the Intereſt of the Nation, under a Suppoſition that it would encreaſe the Vent thereof. The Error whereof this learned Merchant ſhewed, by undertaking to prove theſe Aſſertions, or Affirmations.

I. That a general Permiſſion of Exportations, as before mentioned, would be a Means to debaſe the Reputation of our Engliſh Manufacture: and conſequently render it leſs deſirable and ſought after abroad.

II. It would overthrow all the incorporated Companies of Merchants in England; as the Hamburgh and Ruſſia, (tho' eſtabliſhed by Parliament) the Eaſtland, the Turky, the Eaſt Indian, and the African. The Miſchief conſequential upon which would be as followeth. Firſt, The Trade of England would thereby be loſt, and come to be all, or at leaſtwiſe the greateſt part, in the Hands of Foreigners; as it ſo merly was before the ſaid Companies were erected. Secondly, All the Privileges obtained by the ſaid Companies from the Princes, States and Governors of the Places of their reſpective Reſidences, (which are of great advantage to the vending of our Engliſh Manufactures) would be utterly loſt. Thirdly, The Navigation of England by degrees would be very much impaired and diſcouraged.

III. And laſtly, A general Permiſſion would be ſo far from anſwering the End propoſed by it, of vending a greater quantity of our Woolen Manufacture than was before; that in all Probability it would in the End prove the Cauſe, and be the Occaſion of vending a great deal leſs.

The Trade to Narve regulated.

In this Treatiſe againſt a general Permiſſion of Traders, the Writer ſet down what he found recorded under Queen Elizabeth, viz. That the Engliſh in her Reign, had for a good while together a profitable Trade, and good Sales for their Engliſh Manufactures, at Narve in the Baltic Sea, until at length in the Year 1565. a number of ſtraggling Merchants, and unſkilful Traders, reſorted thither out of this Realm, with their Commodities. By which means in a little while the Trade, which before was good, was utterly ſpoiled. Inſomuch that many of them went about the Town with Cloths upon their Arms, and a Meaſure in their Hand; and ſo ſold the ſame by the Arſine (a Meaſure of that Country) to the great embaſing of that excellent Commodity, the diſcredit of our Nation, and the final impoveriſhment and utter undoing of the ſame ſtraggling Merchants. All which being made known to her Majeſty, and her Privy Council, Order was taken at the next Parliament, that the Town of Narve, (then under the juriſdiction of the Moſcovite) ſhould be compriſed within the Charter of the Ruſſia Company; to prevent the like ill kind of dealings for the future, and making vile the principal Commodity of the Nation. And it was ſo done accordingly by Act of Parliament.

This Gentleman's Speech in the Houſe of Lords upon the Ruſſia Company's Bill.

This Gentleman was very inſtrumental in procuring the Act for the Enlargement of the Trade of the Ruſſia Company; the Bill for which ſtuck a great while, the ſaid Company oppoſing it vigorouſly, as infringing their Charters and Privileges. And who, after a full hearing of their learned Lawyers in the Houſe of Lords, made a Speech himſelf in Perſon, in anſwer to all their Objections: and that with ſuch an Evidence and Conviction of the publick Benefit of this Bill that lay before them, that he carried the Cauſe, and the Bill paſſed. Which Speech kindly communicated to me by Sir Fiſher Tenche, Baronet, his Son, may deſerve to be here recorded, as containing divers matters of conſiderable Remark about Trade, eſpecially in thoſe Parts. And was to this Tenor.

‘I Shall not trouble your Lordſhips with a repetition of what was argued by the learned Counſil at the laſt Hearing before your Lordſhips; no further than is neceſſary to lead your Lordſhips to a better underſtanding of what we ſhall further alledge on the behalf of the Bill.

‘The intent of the Bill is for the enlarging of Trade to Ruſſia: A Trade moſt certainly as capable of an enlargement, as any Trade that is driven out of England: whether we reſpect the greatneſs of the Czar's Dominions, or the preſent management of that Trade, in the Hands of thoſe few Perſons, (being not at moſt above ten or twelve) who are at preſent, the Managers of it.

‘The largeneſs of the Czar's Dominions is known to all, as alſo that the Coldneſs of the Climate is proper for the vent of our Woolen Manufactures, and the Commodities of our Plantations.

‘That thoſe few Perſons that have now the Trade, by vertue of their Charter, neither do, nor can carry it on, by many Degrees, to the Extent it will admit, it is evident: for their Stock (tho' ſome of them are able Men) is no way adequate to the carrying that Trade to its full Extent. And that they do not, appeareth by the great difference of the Shipping that is employed thither by us and our Neighbours. For in the Year 1697. there were at Archangel only 50 Sail of Ships: of which there were but 6 or 7 Engliſh at the moſt. And whereas they alledge, that the Trade at preſent is carried on to its full extent, and bring for Proof, that they have more Goods there than they can vend, it is no more than what all Merchants have, wherever they Trade: And doth from hence ariſe, not that the Country will not take off more Goods; but that they being few in number, can agree together to ſet what Price they pleaſe upon them.

‘But I ſhall not further inſiſt upon this, but confine my ſelf to two Arguments which the Counſil either wholly omitted, or ſlightly inſiſted upon: and then endeavour to remove, that great objection they ſeem to inſiſt ſo much upon: as, that the preſſing of this Bill is an Invaſion of their Property, veſted in them by Act of Parliament: Which we doubt not to prove to your Lordſhips is no ſuch thing.

‘The firſt argument we do inſiſt upon, is the matter of the Petition, as to the late Contract made with the Czar, to import Tobacco into his Dominions.

Argument from the Tobacco Patent.

‘There being a Bill depending in the Honourable Houſe of Commons, to open and enlarge the Ruſſia Trade, upon an eaſy admiſſion; divers Merchants and others took the opportunity of the Czar's being in England, to attain, if poſſible, what had been long deſired, but could as yet by no endeavours be obtained, viz. the ‘ſole Trade of carrying Tobacco to Ruſſia, and ſelling of it there. A Privilege it is of that vaſt advantage to this Nation, that it would take up too much of your Lordſhips time to ſet it forth in its ſeveral Branches. For, beſides the venting of ſo great a Quantity of our own Growth and Manufactures (for I look upon the Growth of our Plantations to be equally ſuch as what grows here in England) it will contribute to the enlarging of our Navigation; both as to the importing from one Plantation, ſo great a Quantity over and above what is now imported for England, as the large Extent of Ruſſia will take off; ſo likewiſe by conſequence, the bringing of a much greater Quantity of Goods from Ruſſia, as the Produce of it: which being, as we call them, Gruff Goods, will take up a very great Quantity of Shipping to bring them hither: and thereby very much enlarge our Navigation. Which renders it in every reſpect very advantageous to this Nation.

‘To which may be added, the Manner how this great Advantage to the Nation was obtained. In which may be obſerved, that what in all probability could not have been obtained by an induſtrious Application, in a ſplendid Embaſſy to a great Expence, was flung into our Laps be a Capricio of Fortune. For may we not well ſtile it ſuch, to ſee an Emperor of Ruſſia here in England; and that what was endeavoured by our Neighbours with great Application, while he was with them, and was denyed them, was by the means of his Perſonal Eſtimation and Reſpect to one preſent,* graciouſly conceded to us.

* A Noble Lord.

‘My Lords, when our late King Charles II. ſent the Earl of Carlile thither in a ſplendid Embaſſy, but to regain the Privileges the Engliſh Nation had formerly there; notwithſtanding all the Expence and the wiſe Conduct of that Noble Lord, he was forced to come away Re infecta. By which it appeareth that the Ruſſes, are not ſo eaſy in their Conceſſions, as ſome may think. So that it may be truly ſaid in this as in another Caſe, what Art could not, Chance hath obtained. And if by the flinging out of this Bill, this opportunity ſhould be now loſt, in all probility the greateſt Induſtry and Application would never re-obtain it.

‘To which may be added the danger thereby of loſing our whole Trade for Ruſſia. For the Czar by his Actions ſeemeth to be a Perſon of Humour, (if we may have leave to ſpeak ſo of ſo great an Emperor) and we all know his Power is Deſpotic: His Will is his Law. So that ſhould he be diſappointed in what he believeth is ſo fully agreed upon, he would look upon it as a Breach of Faith. And he who values himſelf ſo much upon his Word, would thereby be ſo far diſtaſted, as to forbid the whole Commerce of England with Ruſſia. Which would not only be a great Advantage to our Neighbours, but an irreparable loſs to England in general; but in a more particular manner to thoſe Gentlemen, who now labour ſo much to have the Bill flung out; but, as we humbly conceive, do not ſufficiently apprehend the conſequence thereof.

Then he proceeded to Arguments, drawn from the Advantages ariſing to our Navigation by the opening and enlargement of this Trade.

Arguments from the advantages to our Navigation.

‘That the Wealth and Strength of this Kingdom is ſupported by our Navigation, no Man will deny: and conſequently that whatſoever doth contribute to the rendring that moſt ſecure and eaſy, is our National Intereſt. That the opening and enlarging this Trade (which is the Purport of the Bill) doth contribute to the ſecuring our Navigation, and rendring it moſt ſecure and eaſy, will appear in what followeth.

‘That we have not thoſe Commodities, of Hemp, Pitch, Tarr, Maſts and Plank, (which are abſolutely neceſſary to the carrying on of our Navigation) of our own Growth, no Man will deny. That we are at preſent ſupplyed with them from Sweden and Denmark, is evident: And that the ſame Commodities may be had, both in greater Quantities, and at eaſier Rates from the Empire of Ruſſia, if there were need, we are ready to make out by Proofs.

‘That the preſent Ruſſia Company, doth not bring home theſe Commodities (ſome little Quantity of Hemp excepted) is likewiſe clear by their Entries at the Cuſtom-Houſe: Whereas the Hollanders and Hamburgers bring home every Year great Quantities, both of Maſts, Pitch and Tarr.

‘The laſt Year, the Dutch had in their firſt Shipping, two Ships laden of Tarr: and their ſecond Shipping, Maſts: But we none at all.

‘Whereas our Merchants, being but ten or twelve, having other Commodities, which yield them more certain Profit, and are of themſelves ſufficient to employ all their Stock, do wholly neglect the bringing home of theſe neceſſary Commodities for the ſupport of our Navigation. And by ſuch their neglect, have given our Neighbours opportunity to engroſs them: and to make Contracts with the Ruſſes for the ſole Trade in them. Which as it is at preſent very detrimental to this Nation, ſo in time may become fatal to it.

‘For theſe neceſſary Commodities of Pitch, Tarr, Hemp, Maſts and Plank, being to be had only from Denmark, Sweden, and Ruſſia, if there ſhould at any time happen to be a War between the two Northern Crowns and this Kingdom; that by Conſequence muſt neceſſarily obſtruct our being ſupplied with them from thence. And then we have no place left us, to be ſupplied with thoſe Commodities, but Ruſſia. In which exigency, if this Bill doth not paſs, we are clearly in the Hands of ten or twelve Perſons for the ſaid Supplies; who have already, by the neglect of Trade in thoſe neceſſary Commodities, given our Neighbours Opportunities of engroſſing them; and if they would then bring them home, could not. But were that Obſtacle removed, if ſuch an Exigence ſhould happen, as a Difference with the Northern Crowns; could it be expected, that ſo few Perſons, as are at preſent in that Trade, with their ſmall Stocks, ſhould ſupply this Kingdom with Naval Stores, ſufficient to ſupport our Navigation. So that it appeareth, it is abſolutely neceſſary for our ſelf-preſervation, that the Bill paſs, and the ſaid Trade be opened and enlarged: thereby to ſecure us of thoſe neceſſary Proviſions for the ſupply of our Navy, in Caſe of any War with the Northern Crowns.

‘To which Neceſſity, I ſhall add one Word more of Conveniency, as to this Part of theargument, and then conclude it.

‘We at preſent labour under ſeveral difficulties in our Commerce with Sweden. [Here the Paper of Grievances was read.] And we are now upon a Commercial Treaty with that Crown. If they come to underſtand, that by the paſſing of this Bill, and opening the Ruſſia Trade, we are not under the ſame dependencies upon them for our Naval Stores, as we hitherto have been, but that we can fetch them from Ruſſia, and upon eaſier Terms than we do from them, they will then court our Friendſhip, and give us much eaſier Terms of Trade in our Commer‘cial Treaty now on foot than otherwiſe they will. But if they find that by the rejecting of this Bill, we are ſtill under the ſame dependencies upon them, for thoſe neceſſary Commodities, as we hitherto have been, they will then continue thoſe hardſhips upon us, if not lay greater.

Anſwer to the Objections of Property.

[Then he came to anſwer to the objections of Property.] ‘This Bill doth not invade their Property, ſince it leaves them their Incorporation intirely. They are ſtill notwithſtanding this Bill, an incorporated Company; their Laws, Rules and Regulations, as to Trade, are intirely preſerved to them. No Man can come into that Company, notwithſtanding the Bill, but muſt come to them for their Admiſſion, muſt take the Oath of the Corporation, muſt ſubject themſelves to their Laws and Rules of Trade, muſt pay what Impoſitions they ſhall think fit to lay upon the whole Community. And thereby bear all Burthens relating to the Company, equal with themſelves. True it is, that if this Bill did give liberty of a free Trade thither, it might be conſtrued an Invaſion of their Property. But that is not the Caſe here; and ſo far it cannot be denyed, their Property is preſerved to them, notwithſtanding the Bill paſſes.

‘But then it is objected, that this Bill is to compel them to admit Perſons into their Freedom at the Fine of 40*s.* Whereas they have by their Charter a Liberty, if they pleaſe, to exclude all admiſſion into their Freedom, ſave by Service and Patrimony (as they not long ſince did by a By-Law of their own) or to ſet the Price of admiſſion at 60 l. (which they alledge they do at preſent) and this they ſay is an Invaſion upon their Property. To which we anſwer.

‘That their being obliged by the Bill, to admit Perſons into their Freedom barely in it ſelf, can by no reaſon be ſaid to be a violation of their Property, ſince their Act of Parliament doth direct them (if not enjoyn them) to that.

‘So that as before, a bare Obligation to an Admiſſion cannot be ſaid to be a violation of their Property.

‘But then they object further, that the ſetting of their Fine of admiſſion at 40*s.* as the Bill doth, is a violation of their Property. To which we anſwer:

‘That ſince there is no Sum ſpecified, as the Fine for Admiſſion, ſetting it at 40*s.* is no more a violation of their Property, than the ſetting it at 60 l. becauſe the difference of the Sums can no way alter the Matter, as to their Property. For if the ſetting of the Fine be the Violation, whether it be at 40, 50 or 60 l. the Violation is equal. But foraſmuch as the Terms of Admiſſion are not in the leaſt expreſſed either in their Charter or Act of Parliament, the adjuſting of the Fine of Admiſſion, as is done in this Bill, can by no Means be ſaid to be a Violation of their Property.

‘True it is, that if their Fine of 50 or 60 l. had been expreſſed in their Act of Parliament, we muſt have admitted, that the leſſening of it never ſo little might have been interpreted a Violation of their Property. But this is not the Caſe here, the Act of Parliament having veſted them in a Property of no particular Sum, but a bare power of Admiſſion: Which this Bill doth no way violate.

‘If they can pretend to any thing of a Property in this Buſineſs of Admiſſion, they muſt alledge that they have a Property to an arbitrary deſpotick Power; to admit, or not admit when they pleaſe; either exclude all Purchaſers, as they have confeſſed they did lately by a By-Law of their own; or to ſet what Sums they will upon them, either 50 or 60 l. or if they pleaſe 500 l. For being not reſtrained by a Law, they may ſet it at what they pleaſe. But we hope your Lordſhips are of opinion, they have no arbitrary deſpotick Power veſted in them, as a Property, by Act of Parliament: or if there was any ſuch thing, your Lordſhips would think it not only convenient, but neceſſary to regulate it. For we humbly conceive it cannot well be allowed, that the Parliament would ever veſt an arbitrary Power in any Company of Men whatſoever, by way of Property. But the Construction ariſing from the not expreſſing the Fine in the Act of Parliament, doth certainly lie much fairer on the contrary ſide. For we appeal to your Lordſhips, which is the moſt rational Conſequence from the not expreſſing the Fine, either that (as they would interpret it) they may lay what Fine they pleaſe, or (as it is moſt rational to believe) they ſhould lay none at all but admit Gratis. For by their having it in their Power to lay what they pleaſe, they may elude the Act by laying it ſo high as none will come to them. By the other, of admitting Gratis, the intention of the Act is ſecured. And which of theſe two Conſtructions are moſt rational, we ſubmit to your Lordſhips.

‘But this without Controverſy is clear and evident, that no Fine being preſcribed, either in their Charter or their Act; it is in the Power of this preſent Parliament, without Violation of Property, to adjuſt the Fine (if any be to be taken) to what Sum they in their great Wiſdom ſhall think fit. Which is the only thing deſired.

This was the ſubſtance of what was ſpoken, by the foreſaid Gentleman, before the Lords, June the 7th, 1698. He ſpake alſo effectually to the ſame Arguments before the Lords at anoSeſſion, February the 1ſt, 1698-9. When the Bill paſſed.]

MERCHANTS of LEVANT, or TURKIE Merchants.

THE Company of MERCHANTS of LEVANT, or (more commonly termed TURKIE Merchants, being firſt incorporated by Queen Elizabeth, were afterward confirmed and enlarged by our Sovereign Lord King James I.

R. B.

Theſe Merchants by their Diſcoveries, made the firſt Trade into the Seignioury of Venice; and then into the Territories of the Grand Seignior, including the Trade of the Eaſt-Indies; which then was unknown to us by Sea; their Goods being brought by Caravans of Camels to Aleppo, and other Parts of Turkey. But ſince the diſcovery of the Indies by Sea, there is another rich and potent Company of Merchants incorporated, trading thither; which is to be ſpoken of by and by. And this Company doth in a great meaſure deprive this Turky Company of all Eaſt-India Goods. Notwithſtanding the Traffic of theſe Merchants is great and very conſiderable: exporting yearly about 30000 Cloths, both dyed and dreſt; alſo Kerſies, Lead, Tin, Pewter, Iron, Steel, Wire, Starch, Sugars, Hides, Elephants Teeth, Brazile, ſeveral Eaſt India Commodities, as Spices, Callicoes, Logwood, Indico, Red and White Lead, and Pieces of Eight. And for theſe and the like are imported Raw Silk of ſeveral Sorts, Camblets, Grograins, Yarn, Mohairs of Angor, Wools, Cottons, Cotton Yarn of Smyrna and Cyprus, Galls of Moſolo and Toccat, the Currants and Oyls of Zant, Zephalonia, Morea, &c. the Druggs of Egypt and Arabia; alſo Turky Carpets, Cordovants, Boxwood, Rhubarb, Wormſeed, Sena, Cominſeed, together with ſeveral other rich Commodities.

When incorporated.

This Company was firſt incorporated in the Reign of Queen Elizabeth, and confirmed by her Succeſſors. They have ſeveral Privileges and Immunities granted them; as the making of By-Laws and Orders for the well governing of the Society. They have power to determine Controverſies that may ariſe in the ſaid Company, concerning their Trade, giving of Oaths, impoſing of Fines or Impriſonment on Offenders, the uſing of a Seal, and the bearing of a Coat of Arms. Which is thus blazoned. Azure, a Ship in full Sail, all proper, each Sail garniſhed with a Croſs, Gules, in a Sea betwixt two Rocks, and a Chief ingrailed, Argent. Creſt and Supporters they have none, neither a Motto.

The Government is committed to a Governor, Deputy Governor, and a Court of Aſſiſtance of Eighteen: Who are annually choſen by a general Conſent, in the Month of February. They keep Court monthly, or as Occaſion requires, for the management of the Companies Affairs; as to appoint Conſuls, Vice-Conſuls, Factors, &c. to ſuch places where their Factories are kept: as at Smyrna, Aleppo, Conſtantinople, Cyprus, &c. who are anſwerable to the ſaid Company for what they do or Act under them.]

Out of this Company, ſeven diſcreet and able Perſons are to be ſucceſſively Truſtees of an ample Eſtate, for the Maintenance of the College at Blackheath; founded, by Sir John Morden, Baronet, ſometime a Member of this Company, for the Reception of poor decaied Merchants: And to be Viſitors of the ſaid College yearly: According to the ſaid Mordens laſt Will and Teſtament, who died Anno 1708.]

Eaſt-India Company managed by a joynt Stock.

This Company is managed by a joynt Stock, which makes them potent, rich and eminent; and is found ſeveral ways beneficial to the Nation, as in their building of Ships, in the employing and maintaining many hundreds, not only in their Shipping but in their Factories. To whom they allow good Salaries; and according as they are found induſtrious and ingenious, they are raiſed to a higher Degree, with larger Salaries. The like may be ſaid of their Servants here at home. Again they are found very beneficial to the Nation, by their great Trade into the ſeveral parts of India, China, Arabia, and Japan: Exporting, and Importing ſo many, and ſo great Quantities of rich Commodities.

and for their Supporters, two Sea-Horſes, or rather Lions, Or and Azure, and for their Motto above the Creſt, Deusindicat: and below, Deo Ducente, nil nocet.

This Company, for the better negotiation of their great affairs, is governed by a Governor, Deputy, and Court of Aſſiſtance, conſiſting of twenty four. Who about the middle of April are annually elected by the Adventurers of the ſaid Company: amongſt which there muſt be eight new ones choſen, the reſt may be again elected; as alſo the Governor, and Deputy Governor. And theſe accordingly meet at their Houſe in Leadenhall-ſtreet, now called the Eaſt-India-Houſe, generally weekly, and keep Courts for the management of their affairs; as the vending their Goods, making of Dividends, raiſing of Money, viewing their Accounts from their Preſidents, Factors, &c. buying in of Goods, ſetting forth Ships, ſending over Factors and Servants, and for the ordering of their Factories kept at Camboya, Bombay, Surat, Curwar, Baticale, Calicut, Fort St. George, Pentapoli, Maſolipotan, Ougeley, Gonru, Ormus: with ſeveral other Factories in the Iſles of Aſia, in China, and Japan.]

An Apology and Defence of this Company againſt the Interlopers. J. S.

In the Year 1690. there came forth a little Piece, called, A modeſt and juſt Apology for, or Defence of the preſent Eaſt-India Company, againſt the Accuſations of their Adverſaries. Wherein the Crimes alledged againſt them are fairly examined, the Calumnies confuted, and all ſubmitted to the judgment of impartial and unprejudiced Perſons. This Tract was written (tho' no name be ſet to it) by that diſcreet and knowing Merchant, Nathaniel Tenche, Eſq; mentioned before; and was occaſioned (as the Writer expreſſeth in the beginning) by Calumnies daily inculcated in all noted Coffee-Houſes: wherein this Company was not only ſet forth as Bankrupts, as to their preſent Condition, but repreſented as vile and odious as Malice it ſelf could invent. Aſperſions thrown on them: whereby the Enemies endeavoured, not only to impoſe upon the unthinking Vulgar, but upon the Members of the Honourable Houſe of Commons: and by putting Papers into their Hands, wherein were many things notoriouſly untrue. This was in order to the compaſſing of an Endeavour now made for a new Eaſt-India Company. And new Subſcriptions with a Preamble were printed; and the very Terms of an Act of Parliament for that purpoſe, propounded to the Legiſlative power of the Nation, King, Lords and Commons.

A new Eaſt-India Company.

This was chiefly ſet on foot and managed againſt the Company, by thoſe they called Interlopers; who traded into the Places of their Privileges, and were not free of the ſaid Company. Whoſe Ships and Goods the Company ſtopped, and uſed other Ways and Means to hinder their Trade.

There was afterwards a new Eaſt-India Company ſet up by Act of Parliament. Whereby the old was to be diſſolved after ſome Years: which might ſuffice to bring forth their Effects. But after much endeavour and meetings of Perſons appointed out of both Companies, to confer and concert matters, they were both amicably united into one. This new Company held at firſt their Meetings at Skinners Hall. But now for ſome Years paſt it is held at the old Houſe in Leaden-hall-ſtreet. They have a Governor, Deputy Governor, and twenty four Directors, to manage the Companies Affairs.

The Traders to India united into one Company. Ann. 1657.

In ſhort, the Trade to the Eaſt-Indies, lay open from the Year 1653 to 1657. Then this Method of private Trade, proved ſo very deſtructive to the ſeveral private Traders thither, that the governing Power at that time, found it neceſſary to unite them all into one joynt Company with a joynt Stock. But in the Year 1698. an Act of Parliament was obtained, for laying the Trade open in a Method of a regulated Company. Which upon tryal the ſeparate Traders, who procured that Act, found it neceſſary to unite themſelves: So as to Trade only with one joynt Stock. And tho' there was ſeemingly an irreconcileable conteſt between the New and Old Company, yet both of them became ſo ſenſible of the deſtructive Conſequences of Trading by a dividend Intereſt, that they are now happily joyned into one Company again, having the ſame joynt Stock, Intereſt and Deſign.

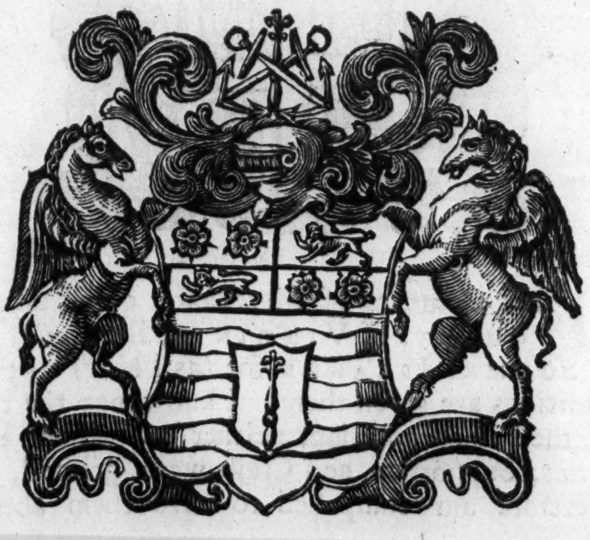
New MERCHANTS ADVENTURERS.



A New Company of Merchant Adventurers, but of their incorporating I am able to ſay nothing: but the Coat and Creſt of their Arms were given and granted by Sir William Seger, Garter, and Maſter William Camden, Clarencieux, Kings of Armes, the thirteenth Day of November, in the 14th Year of King James I. 1616. Their Motto is, Reddite cuique ſuum. [Extinct.]

The Company of FRENCH MERCHANTS.

THE Company now called of FRENCH MERCHANTS: of their Creating, Incorporating, and Patents granting, no intelligence hath been given me, and therefore I am the leſs able to ſpeak of them: only I hear them to be a Company of worthy Gentlemen; and let that honeſt Title at this time ſuffice them. [Extinct.]

THE Company of Merchants, called MERCHANTS of VIRGINIA, BERMUDAS, or SUMMER-ISLANDS: for (as I hear) all theſe additions are given them. I know not the time of their incorporating, neither by whom their Arms, Supporters, and Creſt were granted, and therefore am compelled to leave them abruptly.

[Theſe Merchants were never incorporated.]

But beſides theſe Companies, there are others; which muſt not be omitred. As,

The Royal African, or Guinea Company of MERCHANTS.

R. B.

THIS Company is called the Royal Adventurers of England trading into Africa, which by their Charter granted to them by King Charles the Second, bearing Date the 20th of January in the 14th Year of his Reign, have very large Immunities granted them; as Power to call and keep Courts, to make By-Laws, ſo as not repugnant to the Law of the Land, and to puniſh Tranſgreſſors by Fine or Impriſonment; to ſet forth Men of War, to defend their Factories and Forts, that at any time after ſhall be erected and ſettled in any Part of Africa, within the Limits of their Charter; which is from Sally in South Barbary incluſive, to Cape de Bonna Eſperanza. And within the ſaid Limits all Engliſh Ships are prohibited to trade, except thoſe of this Royal Company, and ſuch as are authorized under them. They have Power to appoint Governours over their Plantations, Forts and Factories, to raiſe Arms, to train and muſter Military Forces, and to execute Martial Law againſt Invaſions or Rebellions in their ſaid Factories; but the Sovereign Right and Dominion over the ſame is reſerved to his Majeſty and his Succeſſors. Furthermore, they have the Freedom of enjoying all the Privileges in the City of London, as fully as any Company of Merchants whatſoever.

Large Privileges granted this Company.

Limits to trade in.

Their Atchievment.

The Atchievment belonging to this Company is thus blazoned, Or, an Elephant Sable, a Quarter, quarterly France and England; for their Creſt, out of a Crown Ducal an Anchor erected, wreathed about with a Cable, all Or, between two Wings expanded Argent, each charged with a Croſs of England. And for their Supporters, two Blackamoors proper, with Arrows in their Hands Or, headed, and feathered Argent. And for their Motto, Regio floret, Patrocinio Commercium, Commercioque Regnum.

Their Seal.

Their Seal is double; one, the Elephant ſupported by two Blackamoors; the other, the Effigies of King Charles II. enthroned. The Voyage Out and Home is uſually within a Year, which is but ſhort: and many Ships and Seamen are employed by this Company, who, for the Security of their Trade, have at a very great Expence erected ſeveral Forts and Factories along the Coaſt of Guinea, without which the Trade could not be preſerved to this Nation; and for that very reaſon this Trade cannot be managed but by a Company and joint Stock; for no private Perſon will be at the Charge of Forts and Factories. Beſides, ſuch as venture one Voyage, and perhaps no more, do uſually conſult the cheapeſt way in their Expences and Exports; neither will they take care to ſend ſuch good and merchantable Commodities to trade with, as a Company will, whoſe Intereſt obligeth them to ſend ſuch as are good good for the Support of their Trade, which otherwiſe would ſink. Beſides, it brings Engliſh Manufactures into a better Reputation than thoſe of our Neighbours, which this Company hath really effected in ſeveral Commodities bought in Holland, as Says, Muskets, Knives, &c. being now all exported of our own making. And of theſe differences in and between the Commodities ſent by the Company, and thoſe ſent by private Traders, the Natives of Guinea (who are a ſagacious People) are very ſenſible, by the ill dealings they have met with in that kind from ſome private Traders; which hath been a thing very diſadvantageous to our Engliſh Manufactures and Trade: But theſe Miſchiefs have been removed ever ſince the ſettling of this Company, and the Prohibition of Interloping Traders.

Goods exported.

This may be reckoned the moſt beneficial Trade that belongs to the Crown, as well by the Commodities exported as imported, as by the Negro Trade for the Support of our American Plantations. The Goods exported are, Says, Perpetuanos, Broad Cloths, Welſh Plains, and other woollen Manufactures in great abundance; beſides Quantities of moſt other Engliſh Goods and Stuffs. The large Conſumption of which doth not only enable the Tenant the better to pay his Rent, and maintain his Family, but alſo ſets abundance of poor People to work. And beſides theſe Goods of our own Growth, vaſt Quantities of foreign Commodities are ſent them, which were imported by the Eaſt India Company, and other Merchants, as Iron, Copper, Cowries, Sleſias, Sheets, Manilloes, Royſados, Chints, Rombargars, Coral, Callicoes, Piccanies, Cloths, Amber, Powder, Muskets, Batteries of all ſorts, Turkey Carpets, Brandy, Strong Waters, Spirits, Ginghams, Taffeties, Beads of all ſorts, and made into Bracelets, Buckſhaws, Knives, Tallow, &c.

Commodities imported.

The Commodities imported are, Gold, Gold Duſt, Elephants Teeth, Hides, Ambergreaſe, Wax, Red-wood, Malegutta or Guinea Pepper, with divers other good and rich Commodities, beſides the great Quantities of Negro Slaves for the Supply of our American Plantations; by whoſe Labour, and the Planters Induſtry, the King and his Subjects are very much enriched.

Their Factories.

This Company, for the Negociation of their Affairs, have ſettled ſeveral Factories, as at Gambo, Rio Nuno, Rio Grande, Sierra Liona, Serbro, Ceſtos, Achin, Anta, Cormendu, Cape Corſo, Acara, Carmentine, Ardra, Benin, Callabar, and in time, through the Succeſs of good Management, without doubt will have many more important Places.

Guinea Coin.

From the Gold brought from Guinea by the Company, our Gold Coin called Guineas took their Name; and as an Encouragement to the Company to bring over Gold, and to coin it, they are permitted by their Charter to have their Stamp, which is the ſame as the others coined, but with an Elephant on the Arms ſide.

The Government.

This Company conſiſteth of a Governour, Sub-Governour, Deputy Governour, and Court of Aſſiſtants, conſiſting of 36, annually choſen out of the Members of the Company on the 10th of January; to whom the Management of the Affairs of the ſaid Company is committed. But of theſe any ſix or ſeven, choſen out of the Court of Aſſiſtants, may negotiate the Buſineſs; whoſe Tranſactions are to be reported to the Court for their Approbation: and theſe have their Meetings weekly, or oftner, at their Houſe called the African-Houſe in Leadenhall-ſtreet.]

J. S. This Company hath of late been ſettled by Act of Parliament; whereby it is allowed to any others, not of the Company, to trade to Guinea, by Licenſe obtained from the ſaid Company, paying uſually 20 per Cent.

The Caſe of this Company An. 1708.

For ſome further Hiſtory of this African Company. It was reduced to a very low Ebb Anno 1708. and to recover itſelf, the Members thereof endeavoured in the Parliament of Queen Anne, Anno 1708-9. to obtain an Act to trade in a joint Stock, excluſively to all other Traders.

Their Memorial.

Then they ſet forth a Memorial touching the Nature and State of the Trade to Africa. And therein was ſhewed, how that ever ſince they got firſt footing on the Coaſt of Africa in the Reign of King James I. they traded thither by Companies, one after another, with joint Stocks, and endeavoured all along to erect Forts and Settlements for the foreſaid Ends. But for want of a Parliamentary Sanction, their Meaſures were always diſturbed; and the Progreſs of the Trade and Acquiſitions interrupted chiefly upon account of a divided Intereſt: Which was always more or leſs kept up among themſelves, both at Home and Abroad. So that the Trade of Africa hath been often wholly relinquiſhed for Years together, by reaſon of the Intruſion, and irregular Proceedings of Interlopers.

Interlopers.

While the Trade of Africa was laid open, before the Reſtoration of King Charles II. the Dutch Company took ſuch Advantages of the ſeparate Traders, that their Loſſes were computed to about 300000 l. as appeared by their Petition to the King. Whereupon his Majeſty Anno 1662. granted a Charter to the preſent Company's Predeceſſors. And they [called then the Royal African Company] paid 34000 l. to their Predeceſſors for the few Forts and Settlements which remained in their Poſſeſſion at the time of ſurrendring their Charter; namely, two on the North Coaſt, viz. James Iſland and Scerra Leon; and one upon the Gold Coaſt, viz. Cape Corſe Caſtle: then in an ordinary Condition, and out of Repair.

A new Charter, A. 1672.

That in the Year 1672. it was eſtabliſhed by a new Charter, with excluſive Privileges. Then they purchaſed and repaired a conſiderable number of Forts, Factories and Settlements on the Coaſt of Africa; contracted many Alliances with the Natives, and renewed the ſame from time to time: they introduced and encouraged the making of ſeveral ſorts of Woolen and other Manufactures, proper for the Trade of Guinea, and formerly manufactured in England; and reduced the making thereof to a ſtaple and ſettled Goodneſs. They exported yearly upwards of 70000 l. worth of the ſaid Woolen and other Manufactures: and gave far better Prices for the ſame, than what uſually is now given for the like. They furniſhed the Weſtern Plantations with conſtant Supplies of great numbers of Negroes; the Produce of whoſe Labours hath added very much to the public Revenues and Riches of this Kingdom. They imported conſiderable Quantities of Gold Duſt, Elephants Teeth, Red Wood, and other Goods, fit for being manufactured at Home, &c.

So that their Trade did not only produce an annual Dividend of certain Profits to all the particular Adventurers in the Joint-Stock, beſides a Multiplication of their Capital; but likewiſe ſeveral other publick and national Advantages to the whole Kingdom.

Their need of a Confirmation by Act of Parliament.

But for twenty Years paſt, they have ſtruggled with many Obſtructions and Difficulties for want of a Confirmation by Act of Parliament. Otherwiſe the Britiſh Intereſt on the Coaſt of Africa had been by this time in a much more flouriſhing Condition, than could be conſiſtent with a precarious Conſtitution: Which permitteth of the pernicious Conſequences, that muſt neceſſarily attend a divided Intereſt: Eſpecially, in a Trade where we have all the Stratagems and united Power

Powers of formidable, foreign Competitors to deal with.

A free Trade to Africa granted by Parliament An. 1697.

That ſoon after the Revolution, the Interlopers brake in upon the Privileges of the Royal African Company's Charter; and Anno 1697. the Parliament granted a Permiſſion to all the Subjects to trade to Africa, paying to the Company a Duty of 10 l. per Cent. for their Exports, towards the defraying the Charge and Expences of their Forts and Settlements. And ever ſince the Trade hath fallen into great Diſorders and Confuſions: For that, ſince this Liberty allowed, the Prices of Goods and Merchandizes imported into Guinea are diminiſhed, at leaſt the one half of what they produced formerly. And the Prices of Negroes are advanced to much more than double of their former Prices. Which proceeded from the Advantage the Natives take of having Variety of Chapmen. Whereas before they could have Recourſe only to the Company's Settlements and Ware-houſes.

The Decay of this Trade, whence proceeding.

That foreign Rivals in this Commerce did upon occaſion foment and encourage the Diviſions among the Traders here, who had different Intereſts. And they inſtructed the Natives, how to make their Advantages hence.

That after this Act, in one Year the ſeparate Traders ſent eighty one Veſſels to Africa: But for ſome Years laſt paſt they have not ſent out above one fifth of that number of Ships per Ann. by reaſon of Loſſes and Diſappointments, &c. That finding it impracticable for themſelves, or the ſeparate Traders, to trade profitably on the Foot of the preſent Conſtitutions, they have not traded for near ſo much as otherwiſe they would have done. So that the Planters in America complained, that for theſe five or ſix Years paſt, the Company and ſeparate Traders together have not ſupplied them with ſufficient numbers of Negroes: and that thoſe they get, do coſt them more than double the Prices they formerly paid.

That without ſome fixed Society, veſted with a conſiderable Joint-Stock, there can be no ſure Dependance upon having the Britiſh Plantations ſupplied with ſufficient numbers of Negroes at moderate or certain Rates, nor upon making any advantageous Contracts with the Spaniard or Portugueſe, to furniſh them with Negroes in their Weſt-Indies.

Danger of the Loſs of this Trade.

That it would be very difficult to regain a Trade, if once loſt; eſpecially this of Guinea: which all the neighbouring Nations earneſtly thirſt to gain from us. And which, if deſerted for a very ſhort ſpace of Time, would be certainly poſſeſſed by the French or Dutch. And that the only means to preſerve the ſame, is by inveſting the Company with Privileges ſuitable to thoſe granted to the Companies of other Nations. But that if this were granted, as the Company had paid in ſeveral additional Sums of Money upon the reſpective Shares of that joint Stock, in order to preſerve this Trade, ſo eſſential to the Nation, they would advance a further Stock, ſufficient to ſupport and improve the ſaid Trade in every Branch thereof.

The Improvements the Company have made.

Here follows what Improvements this Company hath made to that Trade. Beſides their old Forts, which they have rebuilt and enlarged, they have purchaſed the Danes Fort, and built ſeveral other Fortifications, of Sherbrow, Dickes-Cove, Succondee, Commenda, Queen Anne's Port, Annamadoe, Winebah, Accra-Whidah: Beſides ſettling ſeveral other Factories on the Gold Coaſt. The Charge of all which, with the providing of them with great Guns, ſmall Arms, Ammunition, and Stores of all ſorts, their conſtant Supplies and Repairs, and the Intereſt of that Money ſo long ago advanced, and laid out, hath amounted to ſeveral Hundred Thouſand Pounds. So that all things conſidered, the Company's Eſtimation of them will appear to be very moderate, whatſoever private Traders do, or may maliciouſly ſuggeſt to the contrary.]

Tonnage and Poundage. A Caſe between the Merchants and the Barons of the Five Ports. A Table of Duties of the King's Beam; and Water Bailage. Blackwel Hall, the Market for Cloth. The Wharfs and Keys of the Port of London. Act for the regulating Carrs and Carts. Rates appointed to be taken for Carriage. The Corporation of Mariners, called TRINITY HOUSE.

Tonnage and Poundage, given for the ſecurity of Merchants Ships. J. S. Inſtitut. P. IV. p. 33.

THE Kings and Queens of this Land enjoy a conſiderable Revenue, coming in from the Merchants for all their Commodities: It is called the Subſidy of Tonnage and Poundage: and is commonly granted them for Life by Act of Parliament. This, in the Reign of King James I. amounted but to a ſmall Matter in compariſon of what it doth at preſent. Sir Edward Coke, who was then a Commiſſioner of the Treaſury, writes, that theſe Subſidies amounted to 16000 l. per Ann. and ſo were letten to Farm. The Values of the Merchandizes for which the Poundage is paid, do appear in a Book of Rates in Print: Whereby the Merchant knoweth what he is to pay. The Subſidy of Tonnage of Wine is certain in theſe Acts of Parliament by the Contents of the Veſſels. And none of theſe Acts do extend to any other Liquid Merchandize imported or exported, but unto Wines only.

The Subſidy of Tonnage and Poundage is ever expreſſed in the Grant, to be for the keeping and ſafeguard of the Seas, for the Intercourſe of Merchandize ſafely to come into this Realm, and ſafely to paſs out of the ſame. And this pertains properly to the Office of the Lord Admiral, to ſee the Conſideration of this Act performed.

A Caſe between the Merchants and the Barons of the Five Ports. Lib. Horn.

About four hundred Years ago and upwards, Gregory de Rokeſley, and Henry de Walleis, or Galeis who were Maiors for many Years, were great and chief Merchants of London. Theſe and the other Merchants of thoſe Times, uſed to hire Ships for their uſe, from the Barons of the Cinque Ports, and from the Iſlands belonging to England, that lye againſt Normandy. Now there happened a Conteſt between the Merchants and the Owners, and Mariners that imported their Effects; as to ſatisfaction for Goods thrown overboard in a Storm. The Cauſe we meet with in ſome of the Records of the Chamber, which was this:

The Barons of the Five Ports of the Lord the King; and in like manner the Mariners of Guernſey and Sark, and others of the Kingdom of England, complained to the King [Edward I.] that when it hath happened, that any of them hired out their Ship to carry, from the Parts beyond Sea, Wines and other Merchandizes, towards England, Gaſcoign or Wales: and thoſe that are in the Ship muſt, by reaſon of ſome Tempeſt of the Sea, for ſaving the Ship, caſt overboard, ſometimes ten Hogſheads, twenty, thirty, ſometime forty more or leſs; it hath been accuſtomed time out of Mind, and granted to the ſame Barons, that the Ship in which ſuch Wines or other Wares have been, with all their Utenſils, ought to be quit of making or providing any manner of aid, to make good the loſs by the ſaid caſting overboard; but only that the Mariner loſe his Fraught of the Hogſheads and Wares ſo thrown into the Sea.

But Gregory de Rokeſley, Henry de Galeis, or Walleis, and other the King's Merchants, as well of England, Gaſcoin, as of Ireland, of the King's Dominions, did compel the foreſaid Barons of the Five Ports, and the other Mariners of the Kingdom of England, to apprize their Ships, with all the Utenſils and Rigging belonging to thoſe Ships, together with the Wines and other Goods being in the Ships, to acquit and make good the Wines and Goods ſo caſt out into the Sea, according to their Will; to the moſt heavy loſs and impoveriſhing of the Barons and Mariners, againſt the Liberties granted to them.

This matter was tryed and heard before the King and his Counſil: who granted, and for the future adjudged, Firſt, the Ship in which the Wares and Wines were, with the whole Furniture, the Maſter of the Ship's Ring, worn upon his Finger, the Victuals of the Mariners, the Utenſils uſed to dreſs their Dinners, the Necklace, the Girdle, the Silver Cup of the Maſter of the Ship wherein he drinketh (if he have any) ſhall be quit of making reparation for the aforeſaid caſting overboard. And alſo the Fraughts of the Wines, and the other Goods being in the Ships which are ſaved, ſhall be ſafe to the Mariners. And the Maſter of the Ship ſhall loſe his Fraught of the Hogſheads or Goods thrown into the Sea. And all other Goods being in the Ship, as well of the Mariners as of the Merchants, as Wines, Merchandizes, Pence in Groſs, and other Goods, except the foreſaid, and the Fraught of the Goods which ſhall be ſaved, for the time to come, ought to be applyed to afford aid to acquit Goods and Wines ſo caſt into the Sea out of the Ship, by reaſon of the Tempeſt.

Tables of Rates payable by Strangers, at the Beam.

At this diſcourſe of Merchandize, it may be very fit and uſeful to ſubjoin two neceſſary Tables relating thereunto; concerning the Duties Strangers are to pay to the City at the King's Beam, for weighing of Goods; and the Cuſtoms for divers Wares and Commodities, brought by Traders into the City, called Toll, and Duty of Water-Bailage. WHEREAS, I am informed that divers Perſons Aliens and Foreigners Trading in the Port of this City, in ſeveral Goods and Merchandizes, for which certain Cuſtoms, Tolls and Duties of Waterballiage, have Anciently been, and of Right ought to be anſwered and paid to this City; and the Officers appointed Collectors in that behalf, and that Sundry Fræmen againſt their Oaths, do frequently Colour the Goods of Foreigners, both inward and outward Bound, thereby to ſave and avoid Payment of the Duties; Alſo that ſome late Officers and Perſons employed in and about the Collection of the ſaid Duties, have through Ignorance, or Careleſneſs, or other Regards, neglected to Demand, or Receive the ſaid Duties upon ſome Commodities, and not fully as was Due upon others, many Perſons would from thence take Advantage to deny the Right of the Duties, and refuſe to pay the ſame; by all which Means the City is much prejudiced in her Ancient and Juſt Rights, and the preſent Officers much damnified by the ſame, and diſcouraged in the Execution of their Places: I taking notice of this great Abuſe, and to Remedy the Evils and Inconveniences aforeſaid, and to maintain all Juſt and Lawful Rights and Cuſtoms of the City, have thought fit for the Information of all Perſons concerned, to notify and declare Sundry of the ſaid Cuſtoms, Tolls and Duties of Waterballiage, as in ſeveral Antient and later Books and Rolls of the ſaid City, they are on Record. That is to ſay, that all Maſters of Veſſels, particularly either Barge-Men, or Liter-Men, or any other Veſſel, or Boat-Maſters whatſoever, ſhall, before they enter their Veſſels at the Cocquet-Office, give a true Account of all the Goods that are in their Barges or Veſſels particularly, and pay all the Duties for all Foreigners Goods, to the Deputy or Deputies appointed by the City to receive the ſame, and that no Warfinger, Meeter, Porter or Labourer whatſoever, ſhall preſume to be aiding or aſſiſting to any Maſter of Veſſel or Veſſels, until ſuch Entry be firſt made, and the Duty thereof paid to our Deputy or Deputies, and by them certified; that thereby the City may not be deceived of their Duties herein mentioned, as they will anſwer the contrary at their Peril.

And for all ſuch Goods or Merchandizes as are not herein mentioned, pay proportionably, according to the ſaid Rates.

Copies of theſe Rates to be huug up at the Water-ſide.

And to the end that more publick Notice may be taken of the Premiſes, ſo that the Officers imployed may not err, in taking leſs than is due, to the wrong of the City, or more than is due, to the Injury of particular Men, and that all who ought of Right to pay the ſaid Duties, may be ſatisfied thereof, I do order that Copies of the ſaid RATES be hanged or fixed in all convenient Places at the Water-ſide; and do hereby eſpecially enjoin all Perſons, Freemen of this City, not to colour the Goods and Merchandizes of Foreigners, (the which hath been too often complained of, to the great Wrong and Deceit of the City in the ſaid Rights and Cuſtoms) as they tender the Obſervation of their Oaths, taken at their Admittance into the Freedom, and will avoid ſuch Puniſhments as may by Law and Cuſtom of this City be inflicted for offending therein.

And becauſe Cloth is the great Staple Merchandize of England, an Account ſhall next be given of Blackwel-Hall, where the Market for that Commodity is only held in London. And then ſhall be ſet down the ſeveral Wharfs and Keys in the Port of London, eſtabliſhed by Law, for the Places of exporting and importing of Merchandizes.

Blackwel-hall the Market for Cloth. J. S.

All Cloths made or mixed with Wool, Worſted, Jerſies and Cruell, wrought within England, when brought to London to be bought and ſold, muſt be brought to Blackwel-Hall, formerly the Manſion Houſe of Sir Robert Ducy, as the common Market-place; where they are carefully laid, and expoſed to Sale: For theſe very good Ends, viz. to prevent corrupt and deceitful Bargains and Contracts; which might happen, if they ſhould be ſold in Inns, or ſome private Warehouſes; and that good Wares might be bought and ſold: And to prevent foreign buying and ſelling in other Markets, contrary to the Cuſtom of the City, and divers Acts of Parliament. And for the Hallage of theſe Cloths brought hither, certain Payment and Duties are to be paid. For the full aſcertaining and confirming all this, a good Act of Common Council was made for the Hallage of Woollen Cloths, Drapery Wares, and for pitching, ſafe keeping, and ſafe Delivery thereof; And for appointing and ſettling of Market-places for theſe Cloths: It was made Anno 1665. Sir John Laurence Maior; and was in the Tenor following:

Commune Concilium tentum in Camera Guildhall, Civitatis London, die Martis, quarto die Julii, Anno Regni Domini noſtri CAROLI ſecundi, Dei Gratia, Angliæ, Scotiæ, Franciæ & Hiberniæ, Regis, Fidei Defenſoris, &c. decimo ſeptimo, coram Johanne Laurence Milite, Majore Civitatis London, Thoma Adams, Ricardo Brown & Thoma Aleyn, Milit' & Baronet' Aldermannis, Johanne Frederick, Thoma Bludworth, Willielmo Turner & Franciſco Meynel Mil' Aldermannis, Samuele Starling & Willielmo Hooker Aldermannis, & Georgio Waterman & Carolo Doe Militibus & Aldermannis, Vicecomitibus ejuſdem Civitatis, necnon majore parte Communiariorum de Communi Concilio ejuſdem Civitatis tunc & ibidem aſſemblat.

Whereas by ancient Cuſtome heretofore and now uſed within this Honourable City, and alſo by the old Laws and Ordinances made and now in force within the ſame City, all Cloth, Cloths, and other Commodities made or mixt with Wool, Worſted, Jerſey or Cruell, made or wrought within the Kingdom of England and Dominions of the ſame, brought and to be brought unto the City of London and Liberties thereof, were and ought to be brought unto ſuch common Market-place or places, as to that purpoſe within the ſame City and Liberties thereof, was and ſhould from time to time be appointed, and there only, and not elſewhere, ought to be bought and ſold, and the Owners of the ſaid Cloth, Cloths, and other Commodities, made or mixt with Wool, Worſted, Jerſey or Cruel, did there pay Hallage and other Duties; which was ſo done, as well that good and lawful Wares ſhould be bought and ſold, and corrupt and unlawful bargains and contracts, made in Inns, Ware-houſes, and other private places, tending to the deceit of the People, and contrary to the Laws of the Realm and the Cuſtom of this City, might be avoided; As alſo, that there might be no foreign buying and ſelling in thoſe Markets, or within any other part of the City of London, in fraud of the Liberties, and contrary to the Cuſtoms within this City (time out of mind uſed) prohibiting foreign buying and foreign ſelling within the City, which Cuſtom hath had the confirmation of ſeveral Acts of Parliament, and is a great ſupport of their Government, enabling them to undergo thoſe publick Charges, which others, not free of that City, are not liable unto, and which otherwiſe they could not bear.

And whereas by an Act of Common-council made at a Common-council held at the Guild hall, London, upon the twenty ſixth day of February, in the fourteenth year of the Reign of our Sovereign Lord the King that now is, the ſome time Manſion-houſe of Sir Robert Ducy, Knight and Baronet, with the Appurtenances in the Pariſh of St. Michael's Baſiſhaw, London, is appointed and ſet apart for the pitching and harbouring of ſuch Cloth, Cloths, and other Commodities made or mixt with Wool, Worſted, Jerſey and Cruell, which (in purſuance of an Act of Common-council made at a Common-council held at the Guild-hall, London, upon the fourth day of December, in the thirteenth year of the Reign of our Sovereign Lord the King that now is, intituled, An Act for the better regulating of the old and new Drapery in Blackwel-hall and Leaden-hall) cannot be pitched, received and harboured at Old Blackwel-hall, Leaden-hall, and the Welſh-hall, or any of them.

And whereas it was one of the principal ends of the ſaid mentioned Act of Common-council made the fourth day of December, in the ſaid thirteenth year of the Reign of our Sovereign Lord the King, to contract and reduce into one Act the ſubſtance of all, or of the moſt neceſſary Acts of Common-council in force, touching the bringing of all woollen Cloths, Drapery Wares, and other Commodities of like kind, brought and to be brought unto this City to be ſold or tranſported unto the publick Markets of Blackwel-hall, Leaden-hall, and the Welſh-hall.

And whereas there are ſome Penalties and Proviſions in that Act, which ſince have been conceived not fit to be put in execution, and are yet ſo intermixed with the body of the ſaid Act, that they cannot well be rectified without repealing of the ſaid Act, and framing of a new Act of Common-council.

And whereas the ſaid other before-mentioned Act of Common-council, bearing date the ſaid twenty ſixth day of February, in the fourteenth year of the Reign of our Sovereign Lord the King, hath ſuch dependance upon the ſaid other before-mentioned Act made the ſaid fourth day of December, that in caſe the ſame ſhould be repealed, it might be queſtioned whether the ſaid Act, made the ſaid twenty ſixth day of February, were ſtill in force.

Now, To the intent that all ambiguities and doubts touching the Duties payable for Hallage and for pitching, ſafe keeping, and ſafe delivery of all woollen Cloths, Drapery Wares, and other Commodities of like kind brought to this City to be ſold or tranſported, may be certainly known, and the duties for ſuch pitching, ſafe keeping and ſafe delivery, be duly paid and received, and no other demanded; and that the ſaid Market-places be certainly appointed and ſettled; Be it Enacted and Eſtabliſhed by the Right Honourable the Lord Maior, the Aldermen his Brethren, and the Commons in this Common-council aſſembled, and by the Authority of the ſame, That the ſaid Act of Common-council, made the ſaid fourth day of December, entituled, An Act for the better regulating of the old and new Drapery in Blackwel-hall and Leaden-hall, and every part thereof, be from henceforth repealed and made void, and the ſame, and every part thereof, is hereby repealed and made void.

And be it hereby further Enacted, by the Authority aforeſaid, That the ſaid Houſe, ſome times the Manſion-houſe of the ſaid Sir Robert Ducy, with the Appurtenances, ſhall be from henceforth a place for the pitching and harbouring of any ſuch Cloths and other Commodities, as by this preſent Act, or any other Act now in force, are appointed to be brought, pitched and harboured at Blackwel-hall aforeſaid; And that the ſaid Manſion-houſe be from henceforth called New Blackwel-hall, and is hereby made and appointed a common Cloth-Market-place, to all intents and purpoſes that Blackwel-hall, Leaden-hall and the Welſh-hall have been heretofore uſed; And the ſaid Manſion-houſe is hereby annexed and made part of the Blackwel-hall aforeſaid; and that ſuch Rules, Orders and Directions ſhall be obſerved and practiſed in the ſaid New Blackwel-hall as are hereby, or by any other Act of Common-council now in force, appointed to be obſerved in Blackwel-hall aforeſaid; And that ſuch Rates as are by this preſent Act appointed to be paid and received for ſuch Cloth and other Commodities as ſhall be brought to Blackwel-hall, ſhall be paid and received for ſuch Cloth and other Commodities as ſhall be brought to New Blackwel-hall aforeſaid, in ſuch manner as the ſame are, either by this Act, or any other Act of Common-council in force, appointed and directed to be paid and received for thoſe that ſhall be brought to Blackwel-hall; And that all Clauſes, Articles and Things mentioned in this preſent Act, or by any other Act of Common-council now in force, to be done, obſerved or put in execution at Blackwel-hall aforeſaid, be done, obſerved or put in execution at New Blackwel-hall, as fully and effectually to all intents and purpoſes, as if the ſaid New Blackwel-hall had been anciently part of, or heretofore annexed to Blackwel-hall aforeſaid.

And be it further Enacted, by the Authority aforeſaid, That all ſtrained Eſſex or Suffolk Cloths, and all Cloths commonly called Coventry Cloths, blue and white, and other mixed Hampſhire and Surry Kerſies, all ſorts of Norfolk, Suffolk and Eſſex Flanions, Bayes, Perpetuanies, Raſhes, Serges and Sayes, and all other Commodities that go under the name of the New Drapery, made or mixt with Wool, Worſted, Jerſey, Cruell, or with Cotten-wool, or with either or any of them, brought, or which ſhall be brought to the City of London and Liberties thereof, either by Land or Water, be brought unto, pitched and harboured in Leaden-hall, there to remain until they be entred, and the duties of Hallage, herein after mentioned, paid for the ſame, and not to be thence removed by the ſpace of ten days, unleſs ſold in the mean time, and the ſame be firſt entred, and the ſaid duties of Hallage paid and ſatisfied, (except the Weſtern and Colcheſter Stuffs) which being brought to the Hall and entred, and the duty of Hallage paid, may be taken thence by the Owners as ſoon as they pleaſe.

And be it further Enacted, by the Authority aforeſaid, That all ſorts of broad and narrow Cloths, by what Name ſoever called, diſtinguiſhed or known, or in what Place ſoever made, and all other Kerſies, Bayes, Tammies, Sayes, Raſhes, Perpetuanies, Serges, Ruggs, Blankets, Mottleys of what ſort or nature ſoever, Penniſtones, Half-Thicks, Plains, Friezes, Cottons, Fuſtians, Linſy-woolſy, Stockings of all ſorts, and all other Commodities and Manufactures made or mixt with Wool, Worſted, Jerſey or Cruell, or with Cotton-wool, or either or any of them, and brought, or which ſhall be brought to the City and the Liberties thereof, either by Land or Water, be brought unto, pitched and harboured in the Old and New Blackwel-hall or Welſh-hall, or one of them, there to remain till they be entred, and the duties of Hallage herein after mentioned, alſo paid for the ſame, and not be thence removed by the ſpace of ten days, unleſs ſold in the mean time, except the Cloth, Cloths or other Commodities made or mixt with Wool, Worſted, Jerſey or Cruell, bought in the Country by any Merchant, Draper, or any other Freeman of the ſaid City by Pre-contract of the Clothier; which Cloth, Cloths and other woolen Manufactures, ſhall be brought to the Hall, appointed by this Act to receive the ſame, there to be entred, and pay the duty of Hallage hereby appointed to be paid for the ſame. Which being done, the ſaid Commodities may be taken thence by the Owners as ſoon as they pleaſe, and except ſuch ſmall parcels as being contracted for in the Country by Perſons that have bought or ſhall buy the ſame for their own private uſe, and not to ſell again; and alſo except Norwich Stuffs, and Monmouth Caps, Bewdly Caps, and other woollen Caps, which Commodities are not to be brought to the ſaid Hall, nor at preſent to pay Hallage.

And be it further Enacted, by the Authority aforeſaid, That no Inn-holders, or any other Perſon or Perſons, free or not free of this City, and inhabiting ing or dwelling within the ſame, or the Liberties thereof, ſhall permit or ſuffer any of the ſaid Cloth, Cloths, or other Woollen Manufactures, which ought to be pitched at the aforeſaid Blackwel-halls, Leaden-hall or Welſh-hall, or any of them, at any time or times hereafter, whilſt the ſaid Commodities, or any of them, ſhall remain in their ſaid Inns, to be bought or ſold at or within any their Houſes, Chambers or Warehouſes, upon pain that every ſuch Innholder or other Perſon ſhall forfeit for his firſt Offence twenty ſhillings, for the ſecond Offence forty ſhillings, and for every other Offence four Pounds.

And be it further Enacted, by the Authority aforeſaid, That no Perſon or Perſons, not being free of this City, ſhall by himſelf, or any other for him, or by his means or practice, bargain, ſell or barter, in any place or places within this City, or within the Liberties thereof, any of the ſaid Cloth, Cloths, or other woollen Manufacture aforeſaid, ſave only in ſome of the Halls aforeſaid, nor ſhall buy any of the ſame within the ſaid Market-place or places, on pain to forfeit and loſe for the firſt Offence fifty ſhillings, for the ſecond Offence four pounds, and for every other Offence the ſum of five pounds.

And be it further Enacted, by the Authority aforeſaid, That all Perſons, as well Carriers as Clothmen and others, ſhall, at the bringing of their Cloth, Cloths, and other woollen Manufactures, appointed by this Act to be brought either by Land or by Water to this City as aforeſaid, bring or cauſe them to be brought to one of the ſaid Blackwel-halls, Leaden-hall and the Welſh-hall reſpectively, to the end they may be entred, and the duties paid for the ſame, upon pain of twenty ſhillings for every Pack of Cloth, Cloths or other Commodities, to be forfeited and paid by every ſuch Carrier, Cloth-man or others, for every Offence to the contrary; and for every ſingle Cloth, or other woollen Commodity, the Piece ten ſhillings.

And be it further Enacted, by the Authority aforeſaid, That the Markets at the aforeſaid Blackwel-halls, Leaden-hall and the Welſh-hall aforeſaid, ſhall be and begin weekly on every Thurſday between the twenty fifth day of March and the twenty ninth day of September, at ſeven of the Clock in the Forenoon, and continue till eleven of the Clock in the ſame Forenoon, and between the twenty ninth day of September and the twenty fifth day of March at eight of the Clock in the Forenoon, and continue till eleven of the Clock in the ſame Forenoon; and on every Thurſday at one of the Clock in the Afternoon, and continue till four of the Clock in the ſame Afternoon; and on every Friday at eight of the Clock in the Forenoon, and continue till eleven of the Clock in the ſame Forenoon, and ſhall begin in the Afternoon of the ſame Friday at one of the Clock, and ſhall continue until four of the Clock in the ſame Afternoon; and ſhall begin every Saturday at eight of the Clock in the Forenoon, and ſhall continue till eleven of the Clock in the ſame Forenoon; and that the ſaid Hours for the beginning and ending of the ſaid Market times ſhall be known by the ringing of the Market-Bells in the Halls aforeſaid, appointed for that uſe and purpoſe, and the ſame to be held and continued weekly throughout the whole Year, and from Year to Year; and that every Perſon or Perſons that ſhall ſell or put to ſale any Cloth, Cloths, or other Commodities before-mentioned, at any other Time or Times than aforeſaid limited, ſhall for every Offence forfeit and pay the ſum of forty ſhillings; and that the reſpective Hall-keepers ſhall not permit or ſuffer any buying or ſelling of any of the aforeſaid woollen Cloths, or Commodities aforeſaid, in or at either of the ſaid Halls, in or upon any other Days or Hours than on the Market-days and Hours appointed. And if any of the ſaid reſpective Hall-keepers ſhall wilfully offend herein, he ſhall forfeit for his firſt Offence forty ſhillings, and for his or their ſecond Offence the ſum of three pounds.

And be it further Enacted, by the Authority aforeſaid, That the reſpective Hall-keepers of every of the Halls aforeſaid, ſhall diligently and faithfully keep their Books and weekly Regiſters of all the woollen Cloths and Commodities aforeſaid, bought and ſold in any of the ſaid Halls, or brought and pitched there, in which Books and Regiſters they, and every of them, ſhall truly enter the Names of Baptiſm, Surnames, Places of Habitation, and addition both of the Buyer and Seller of every of the ſaid Commodities.

And whereas there are many Freemen of this City, who in ſhew and pretence are the immediate Buyers of the ſaid woollen Cloths and other Commodities before-mentioned, in the ſaid Markets of Blackwel-hall, Leaden-hall and the Welſh-hall, yet are in reality but Inſtruments, Agents and Brokers for Strangers and Foreigners, to the great Abuſe and Wrong of this City, and Freemen thereof; It is Declared and Adjudged, and Be it by this Common-council, and the Authority thereof, Declared, That all ſuch Practices are contrary to the Cuſtom and Privileges of this City, and that all ſuch buying of any of the aforeſaid Commodities by any Freeman of this City in any of the ſaid Blackwel-halls, Leaden-hall or the Welſh-hall Markets, for the uſe of any Stranger or Foreigner, either in Copartnerſhip or otherwiſe, is colouring of the Foreigner's Goods, and is contrary to the Oath of every Freeman of this City.

Therefore be it Enacted, and it is hereby Enacted by the Authority aforeſaid, That every Freeman of this City which ſhall buy in any of the ſaid Halls any of the ſaid woollen Cloths or Commodities for the uſe of any Foreigner, or Stranger or Strangers as aforeſaid, contrary to the true Meaning of this Act, ſhall, for his or their firſt Offence, forfeit and pay the ſum of five pounds, and for his or their ſecond Offence the ſum of ten pounds, and for his or their third Offence the ſum of twenty pounds; and if any ſuch Perſon or Perſons ſhall again offend in the like manner, then, upon his or their Conviction thereof in the King's Majeſties Court holden within the Guild-hall of this City before the Lord Maior and Aldermen of the ſame City (for the time being) he or they ſhall ſtand and be utterly diſfranchiſed, as unworthy Members of this City.

And be it further Enacted, by the Authority aforeſaid, That if the Owner or Owners of any of the aforeſaid Commodities, or his or their Servant, cannot within the time and ſpace of ten Days next after the bringing of them to the ſaid reſpective Markets, ſell all the Cloth, Cloths, or other Woollen Manufactures brought to the Blackwel-halls, Leaden-hall or the aforeſaid Welſh-hall, that then it ſhall be lawful for the ſaid Owner or Owners, or his or their Servant, by his Appointment, to remove any of the ſaid Commodities which ſhall remain unſold after the Market-days are over, to any other Market or Markets forth of this City and Liberties thereof, or otherwiſe to diſpoſe of them as they ſhall think fit, ſo as they do not ſell the ſame Commodities out of the ſaid Markets within the ſaid City of London or the Liberties thereof.

And be it further Enacted, by the Authority aforeſaid, That if the Owner of any Cloth, Cloths, or other Woollen Manufactures, their Factor or Servant, ſhall deſire to have any of the Commodities aforeſaid to be lodged in any of the Warehouſes belonging to any of the aforeſaid Halls or Markets, when they cannot ſell them within the ten Days ſpace appointed by this Act for Sale of them, then the ſaid Owner or Owners, their Factor or Servant, of any Cloth, Cloths or other Woollen Manufacture aforeſaid, ſhall pay for their lodging and ſafe keeping of the ſaid Commodities, ſuch reaſonable Rates weekly, as ſhall be agreed between the ſaid Owner and ſuch Perſon or Perſons as ſhall be appointed by the Governours of Chriſt's Hoſpital, who are hereby authorized to put in Execution this Act, as to all the Parts thereof. Provided, the ſaid Perſon or Perſons ſo to be appointed by the ſaid Governours to receive ſuch Monies, for lodging and ſafe keeping all Cloth, Cloths, and other Woollen Manufactures, do not take more by the Week for lodging and ſafe keeping, of any Owner or Owners, their Factor or Servant, than half ſo much as by this Act appointed for the firſt pitching, for Hallage of ſuch Commodities, as ſhall be deſired to be left in the ſaid Warehouſes.

And be it further Enacted, by the Authority aforeſaid, That the ſaid enſuing Rates, and no other, ſhall be paid, demanded and received of the reſpective Owner or Owners, or his Servant, for the Commodities here under mentioned, brought and to be brought to the ſeveral Halls, or any of them, for the ſaid Hallage-duty thereof, and for the entring, harbouring and ſafe keeping thereof the ſpace of ten Days, from the Time of their firſt pitching, and no longer.

Rules for Factors.

And whereas the regulating of all Markets in London and the Liberties thereof, by the ancient Cuſtom of this City hath, and now doth of Right belong to the Lord Maior, Aldermen, and Commons in Common-council aſſembled, and by the like ancient Cuſtom of this City, all common Factors, Brokers and Makers of Bargains within London and the Liberties thereof, before their Exerciſe of ſuch their Employments, have uſed to be allowed and admitted to exerciſe that Employment, by ſuch Perſons, and in ſuch Manner as the ſaid Lord Maior, Aldermen and Commons in Common-council aſſembled, have uſed to direct and appoint, and ought not in any other manner to exerciſe the ſame, which was ſo done, for that Factory or Brokery are no Trades, and ſo are not ſubject to any Rules or Regulations as Trades are: And whereas it is found by Experience, that the ſaid Markets of the ſaid Blackwel-halls, Leaden-hall and the Welſh-hall are not to be kept indifferent between Clothier and Citizen, but may be either huckſtred or foreſtalled, and that it will be in the power of the common Factor or Broker to undo the Clothier, by taking which of the Cloths he ſhall think fit to his own uſe, or by keeping them unſold at his pleaſure, or by putting the worſt Paymaſters upon the Clothier, and taking the beſt to himſelf, or by making the Clothier pay Factorage for thoſe he buys himſelf, or in the name of ſome other Perſon for his own uſe, unleſs the ſaid common Factors and Brokers may be ſtinted, and they regulated in their Actings; to the end therefore that all thoſe Miſchiefs may be prevented, and the ſaid Markets of the ſaid Blackwel-halls, Leaden-hall and the Welſh-hall regulated, Be it further Enacted, by the Authority aforeſaid, That no Perſon or Perſons whatſoever, that now uſeth, or hereafter ſhall uſe the Employment of a common Factor or Broker or Maker of Bargains in any of the ſaid Markets, ſhall from and after the twenty ninth of September now next coming, deal or intermeddle in the ſaid Markets, or in any of them, as a common Broker or a common Factor for or concerning the Sale of any of the Commodities aforeſaid, unleſs he or they ſhall be firſt adjudged by the Lord Maior and Aldermen of London in their Court called or known by the name of the Court of Aldermen, held within the Guild-hall of this City of London, fit to exerciſe that Employment, and be by them alſo thereunto admitted: And that every Perſon which ſhall do contrary thereunto, ſhall for the firſt Offence forfeit forty ſhillings, and for the ſecond, and all other Offences, five pounds for each Offence.

And be it further Enacted, by the Authority aforeſaid, That no common Factor or Broker ſhall at any time hereafter buy in any of the ſaid Markets in his own Name, or in the Name of any other to his own uſe, any of the Commodities aforeſaid, nor ſhall ſell any of the ſaid Commodities out of the ſaid Markets within the ſaid City, and the Liberties thereof, to any Perſon or Perſons whatſoever; And that if any common Factor or Broker ſhall do the contrary hereunto, the Party ſo offending, for every ſuch Offence, ſhall forfeit and pay for every ſuch his firſt Offence fifty ſhillings, and for his or their ſecond Offence the ſum of four pounds. Provided, That all Clothiers, or other Proprietors of Woollen Manufactures may have liberty to employ their own Houſhold Servants, or any Perſon who is not Factor to more than one Clothier; and that ſuch Houſhold Servant or Perſon ſhall not incur the Penalties in this Act mentioned, for not being admitted as aforeſaid, by the Lord Maior and Court of Aldermen.

And whereas it is found that by the Increaſe of Factors in the ſaid Markets, the Clothier who comes up to London to make Sale of his Cloth, Cloths or other Woollen Manufactures, many times wants room to pitch and ſell the ſame Commodities in, which is a great Grievance to the ſaid Clothier, and no ways allowed by this City; for remedy whereof, Be it further Enacted, by the Authority aforeſaid, That it ſhall and may be lawful to and for the ſaid Governors of Chriſt's Hoſpital, or any Three of them, from Time to Time to regulate the aforeſaid Markets of the ſaid Blackwel-halls, Leaden hall and the Welſh-hall, as to the ſtanding of the Clothier and Factor in the ſaid Markets, having always regard to the Clothier who ſells in his own Perſon or by his Houſhold Servant, that he or they have always convenient room reſerved in the ſaid Markets for the Sale of the aforeſaid Commodities.

And it is further Enacted and Ordained, by the Authority aforeſaid, That all and ſingular the Pains, Penalties, Sum and Sums of Money, Forfeitures, and other Things whatſoever, which ſhall be forfeited or incurred by virtue of this Act, or by reaſon of any Clauſe, Branch or Article of the ſame, ſhall be obtained, levied and recovered as the Caſe ſhall require, either by Action of Debt, Bill, Plaint or Information, in the Name of the Chamberlain of the ſaid City for the time being, in the King's Majeſties Court holden in the Chamber of the Guild-hall before the Lord Maior of the City of London, and Aldermen of the ſame City for the time being. In which no Eſſoin or Wager of Law ſhall be admitted or allowed for the Defendant, and the Chamberlain of the ſaid City for the time being, in all matters or things to be proſecuted by virtue of this preſent Act, againſt the Offender or Offenders, ſhall recover the ordinary Coſts of Suit to be expended in and about the Proſecution of them, or any of them.

And be it further Enacted, by the Authority aforeſaid, That all Pains, Penalties and Forfeitures to be had and recovered by virtue of this or any former Act or Acts for the regulating of Blackwel halls, Leaden-hall and the Welſh-hall as aforeſaid (the Charges of Suit for the Recovery thereof being firſt deduced) the Remainder ſhall be divided into two parts, the one Moiety thereof, together with all the Duties of Hallage, to be paid unto the Treaſurer of Chriſt's Hoſpital (for the time being) to be employed towards the Maintenance of the poor Children harboured and kept in the ſaid Hoſpital, and the other Moiety to him or them that will ſue for the ſame, any other Act or Ordinance to the contrary thereof notwithſtanding.

21. FRESH WHARF, containing from Eaſt to Weſt one hundred and fifteen Foot, and from the River of Thames Northward forty Foot in the narroweſt place.

Billinſgate. ITEM, We do alſo humbly conceive and certifie, that the common Key or Place called Billinſgate, containing from North to South one hundred ſeventy one Foot and a half, and in Breadth from Eaſt to Weſt forty Foot, to be a common open Place for the landing or bringing in of Fiſh, Salt, Victuals or Fuel of all ſorts, and all native Materials for Building, and for Fruit (all manner of Grocery excepted) and for carrying out the ſame, and for no other Wares or Merchandize: And that if the Lord Maior and Aldermen of the City ſhall think fit to fill up any part of the ſaid Dock at the North End thereof, not exceeding forty Foot in length, the ſame Ground ſo filled up may have the ſame Priviledge as the reſt of the Wharf before deſcribed.

Bridgehouſe. ITEM, We think fit, and humbly certifie, that the Bridgehouſe in Southwark may be allowed as a Place convenient for the landing of any kind of Corn, bought or provided for the Proviſion or Victualling of the City, and not upon any private or particular Perſons Accompt, and for no other Goods or Merchandize.

ITEM, We think it reaſonable, and do humbly adviſe, that it may be lawful for any Perſon to ſhip or lade into any Ship or Veſſel on the River of Thames, bound over Seas, and lying between London and Woolwich, any of the Goods or Merchandize hereafter mentioned, viz. Horſes, Coals, Beer, ordinary Stones for Building, Fiſh taken by any of his Majeſties Subjects, Corn or Grain; Provided that the Cuſtom and Duties of ſuch Goods be duly paid, and Cocquets or other lawful Warrants paſſed for the ſame, and delivered to the Searcher, or one of his Majeſties Under-Searchers, and ſhipped in the preſence of ſome of them, and in the preſence of a Deputy, to ſuch Perſons as ſhall be appointed from time to time to manage or receive the Cuſtoms in the Port of London, and not otherwiſe.

ITEM, We humbly adviſe, that it may be lawful for any Perſon or Perſons to unſhip and lay on Land Deal-Boards, Balks, and all ſorts of Maſts, and great Timber at any place of the River of Thames, betwixt Weſtminſter and Limehouſe-Dock; Provided the Owner of ſuch Goods do firſt pay or compound for the Cuſtom and other Duties, and declare the place at which they will land them, before they unſhip any of the Goods, to the Officers or Farmers of the Cuſtoms thereof for the time being, and receive Sufferance or Permiſſion from them ſo to do; and that they unſhip none of the ſaid Goods but in the preſence of a Waiter or Officer appointed thereunto, unleſs by ſpecial Licenſe of the ſaid Officers or Farmers of the Cuſtoms for the time being; otherwiſe the ſaid Goods to be liable to Forfeiture according to Law.

Buildings. And to the end the Buildings upon the Wharfs and Keys afore-named may be carried on with the moſt Conveniency, Regularity and Ornament, and be kept at forty Foot diſtance from the Wall, Key or Wharf which bounds the River of Thames, according to an Act of the now Parliament, lately paſſed for rebuilding the City of London: We humbly adviſe, that it may be lawful for the Owners or Poſſeſſors of the ſeveral Wharfs called Lyon Key, Sommers Key, Dice Key and Sabs Dock, to fill up or wharf over and enlarge into the River of Thames ſo much as will make the Front of their Wall or Campſhot range equally with the adjoining Keys or Wharfs, that is to ſay, that Lyon Key, the whole length thereof being thirty ſix Foot nine Inches, may be enlarged into the Thames eight Foot in breadth, to make it equal to the outmoſt point of Buttolph Wharf: And that Sommers Key, being ſeventy four Foot in length, may be enlarged into the Thames the ſame breadth of eight Foot from the ſaid Lyon Key to Billinſgate: And that the Dock or Inlet at Dice Key, being fifty ſeven Foot in length, may be enlarged into the River of Thames twenty four Foot four Inches, to make it range equal with the other part of the ſaid Key on the Weſt ſide, and with Ralphs Key on the Eaſt ſide thereof: And that Sabs Dock, being now open in an irregular Form, may be arched, wharfed over, or filled up, to make the ſame front the Thames in a right range with the Walls or Campſhots on both ſides of it: And in caſe the ſaid Keys and Dock, or any of them, ſhall be ſo filled up or wharfed over, we think it reaſonable, that from thenceforth the general Wharf of forty Foot to be left next the Thames, be reduced accordingly.

And for further Ornament and Conveniency in the Buildings which ſhall be erected upon the ſaid Wharfs to front the River of Thames, according to the Intent of the Act of Parliament for rebuilding the City, We think it neceſſary, and do declare, That if any of the ſaid Houſes or Buildings be intended for Warehouſes, or hereafter ſo employed, yet nevertheleſs the two upper Stories and Garrets of the ſaid Houſes be made, and from time to time continued with glazed Windows: And if the ſaid Stories or Garrets be made uſe of as Warehouſes, and be made with Doors outward to receive in Goods, yet thoſe Doors to be made in the Form of Doors or Walves for Balconies, to open with double Leaves to the bottom of the Floor whereunto they are placed.

Cranes. ITEM, We think fit, that the number of Cranes upon the ſaid ſeveral Wharfs be at the election of the Owners or Poſſeſſors of the Ground, provided they exceed not the dimenſions following; viz. A ſingle Crane with one Wheel twelve Foot in breadth, and a double Crane with two Wheels twenty Foot, and each of them in depth or length from the Wall or Campſhot twenty one Foot at the moſt; and that the ſaid Cranes, as well ſingle as double, be kept open and free for common Paſſage from the Ground to the Floor under the Wheels without any other Incloſure, Partition, Separation or Hinderance by Poſts or Spurns than the neceſſary Poſts and Timbers which ſupport the ſame at both ends; And that the open height of the ſaid Crane be at leaſt ten Foot and a half from the Ground to the Floor under the Wheels, that Carts and Carriages may freely paſs under them.

Incroachments. And to prevent all Incroachments, Incumbrances and Abuſes that may be made or committed upon the ſaid Wharfs, Keys or Cranes, We think fit, and do hereby declare, That it ſhall not be lawful for any Perſon to build any Outſets, Jets, Penthouſes, Warehouſes, Rooms, Lodgings, or any manner of Poſts, Sheds or Buildings, contiguous or annexed to the ſaid Cranes, or any part of the open Wharf, of forty Foot in breadth, deſcribed as aforeſaid, more than what is convenient about the Cranes for the Wheels to work in and upon, and ſufficient Covering thereunto, not exceeding the height, breadth and length aforeſaid. And for further Ornament, in regard thoſe Cranes ſtand in the moſt publick View of the River, that they be laid in Oil and coloured blue, and in the Front thereof towards the Thames be placed the King's Arms, painted and ſet in an Eſcutcheon or other Frame, with a decent Moulding about it of at leaſt four Foot and half in Diameter.

ITEM, We have adviſed, and do think fit, That all the Paſſages, Lanes or Cart-ways leading to the ſaid Keys or Wharfs from Thames-ſtreet, and every of them, be made of the breadth of eleven Foot at the leaſt: but if any was of a larger breadth or dimenſion heretofore, this ſhall not be conſtrued or meant to leſſen or ſtraiten it, but that it continue at the ancient or larger dimenſion.

ITEM, We think fit, that the ſeveral Keys and Wharfs deſcribed and allowed to be free places for ſhipping and landing of Goods and Merchandize as aforeſaid, and which according to the Tenor of the ſaid Act of Parliament for rebuilding the City, is and ought to be left open and free at the diſtance of forty Foot from the Water-ſide, ſhall not be ſeparated or divided one from another by any Houſe, Wall, Pale, Poſt, Rail, or other Impediment whatſoever, but only by meer Stones or Marks in the Pavement for the diſtinction of Propriety, and not otherwiſe.

Wharfingers. ITEM, We think fit, and do hereby declare, that if any Wharfinger or Owner of any the Wharfs or Grounds allowed for ſhipping, lading or landing of Goods or Merchandize as aforeſaid, do not conform to the preſent Form, Rules and Method hereby preſcribed and directed for their Wharfs, Cranes, or Buildings, or hereafter ſhall diſcontinue or alter the ſame, or make new Incroachments thereupon, That after publick Notice given by any three or more of the principal Officers or Farmers of his Majeſties Cuſtoms, by fixing up a Writing under their Hands upon the Wharf where the Fault ſhall be committed, declaring the Offence, and limitting a Day and Time for the Amendment thereof: which if not amended or performed accordingly, that then ſuch Wharf, or Crane, ſhall from thenceforward be no more reputed or taken, or have the Benefit or Priviledge as a lawful place of ſhipping, lading or landing of Goods or Merchandize; but be thenceforward utterly debarred thereof, unleſs reſtored by his Majeſties ſpecial Warrant; and nevertheleſs the ſaid Buildings, Alterations and Incroachments to be demoliſhed and removed, as the Law in that caſe hath directed.

Yet nevertheleſs, notwithſtanding any Advice, Declaration or Appointment herein before mentioned, concerning the Keys, Wharfs or Places of ſhipping, lading or landing of Goods and Merchandize, if at any time it ſhall ſeem reaſonable to the principal Officers or Farmers of the Cuſtoms for the time being, and conſiſtent with his Majeſty's Service, to give ſufferance or permiſſion for the ſhipping, lading or landing any Goods or Merchandize at any other place or places, or in any other manner than is herein before nominated and adviſed, or aſſigned to be lawful Keys and Wharfs, it ſhall and may be lawful for them ſo to do; and ſuch ſufferance and permiſſion ſhall be good and warrantable, without any Forfeiture or Advantage to be taken againſt the Goods ſo landed, notwithſtanding any thing herein before declared to the contrary.

But if his Majeſty ſhall be pleaſed to reduce all the lawful Keys and Wharfs to the ſpace of Ground betwixt London-Bridge and the Tower, which will be a great Improvement to the Owners thereof, We do humbly adviſe, and hereby declare, That whoſoever ſhall accept of, or from henceforward employ any of thoſe Keys or Wharfs by vertue of ſuch Conceſſion to the uſe of ſhipping, lading or landing of Goods and Merchandize, that it is to be underſtood, and it is hereby declared to be with this Covenant and Condition, That they perform all and ſingular the Orders, Aſſignments and Appointments, which on their parts and behalfs is herein before declared to be performed and done, and not otherwiſe.

Cars. And for the avoiding the Incumbrance and Annoyance which will daily happen, to the diſturbance of his Majeſty's ſervice, and inconvenience to Merchants in taking up their Goods at the ſaid Keys and Wharfs, by ſuffering Cars to ſtand empty upon the ſaid Wharfs and open places allowed by the Law for other purpoſes; We think it neceſſary, that the ſeveral Wharfingers, or Poſſeſſors of any the ſaid Keys or Wharfs, or their Servants, ſhall not ſuffer to ſtand or remain upon their Wharfs, or paſſages leading to them from Thames-ſtreet, any more than ſuch Cars or Carts as ſhall be immediately called to lade or take up Goods, Wares or Merchandize there: And if any other Car or Cart ſhall preſume to come down empty, without being called by the Owners or Agents employed in taking up of Goods, and there ſtand to the Diſturbance and Hinderance of the Service aforeſaid, it ſhall be lawful for the ſaid Wharfingers, or their Servants, by lawful and peaceable means to force them off, and in caſe of refuſal, to proſecute them farther by ſuch Rules, Orders and Puniſhments, as by the Laws and Cuſtoms of the City they may or ought to do.

The Extent of the Port. And to prevent all future Differences and Diſputes touching the Extent and Limits of the Port of London, and the many Frauds and Abuſes which have been acted and committed, as well upon and within the River of Thames, as without the Mouth thereof upon the Sea; We think it neceſſary, and do humbly adviſe, that the ſaid Port may be declared by his Majeſty to extend, and be accounted from the Promontory or Point called the North-foreland in the Iſle of Thanet, and from thence Northward in a ſuppoſed right Line to the oppoſite Promontory or Point called the Naſe, beyond the Gunfleet upon the Coaſt of Eſſex, and ſo continued Weſtward through the River of Thames, and the ſeveral Channels, Streams and Rivers falling into it, to London-Bridge, ſaving the uſual and known Right, Liberty and Priviledge to the Ports of Sandwich and Ipſwich, and either of them, and the known Members thereof, and of the Cuſtomers, Comptrollers, Searchers, and their Deputies, of and within the ſaid Ports of Sandwich and Ipſwich, and the ſeveral Creeks, Harbours and Havens to them or either of them reſpectively belonging, within the Counties of Kent or Eſſex; but that every part and place of the River of Thames and Sea within the Limits and Bounds aforeſaid, not included or belonging to the ſaid Ports of Sandwich or Ipſwich, or the ſeveral Creeks, Harbours or Havens to them, or one of them reſpectively belonging, within the ſaid Counties of Kent or Eſſex, ſhall be deemed and taken to be within, and part and parcel of the Port of London.

Thames-ſtreet. And whereas by the Act of Parliament for rebuilding the City of London, it is Enacted, That for the prevention of Inundations, and for eaſineſs of Aſcent, the Street called Thames-ſtreet, and all the Ground between the ſaid Thames-ſtreet and the River of Thames, ſhall be raiſed and made higher by three Foot at the leaſt, above the Surface of the Ground as now it lieth: And whereas by exact Surveys and Levels lately made of the Surface of the Ground, and the ſeveral Wharfs and Campſhots bounding the River of Thames from London-Bridge to Tower-Dock, it is found that the Grounds, Wharfs and Campſhots aforeſaid have been heretofore of different and unequal Heights, and thoſe made now much more unequal by Rubbiſh and Alteration, which hath happened by the Accident of the late Fire, by means whereof the ancient Surface of the Ground and Campſhots are hardly diſtinguiſhable: And whereas it is alſo found that the Wharf called Sommers Key, is, in purſuance of the ſaid Act, raiſed higher than any of the reſt, inſomuch that it appears to be now five Foot above the High-water Mark at an ordinary Spring-Tide, which is judged ſufficient Height againſt all Inundations: Therefore according to the true Intent and Meaning of the ſaid Act of Parliament, we hold it neceſſary to declare, that all the other Keys, Wharfs and Campſhots aforeſaid be raiſed to an exact Level with the ſame: And accordingly it will be found, that the ſeveral places hereafter named ought to be raiſed from the preſent Height as followeth, viz Brewers Key one Foot ſix Inches, Cheſters Key one Foot ſix Inches, Galley Key two Foot, Wool Dock one Foot nine Inches, Cuſtomhouſe Key, on the Eaſt part thereof, ten Inches, and on the Weſt part thereof one Foot, Porters Key one Foot, Bear Key on the Eaſt part thereof one Foot ſix Inches, and on the Weſt part thereof two Foot, Wiggons Key one Foot, Youngs Key eight Inches, Ralphs Key ſix Inches, Dice Key one Foot, Smarts Key one Foot four Inches, Billinſgate two Foot, Botolph Wharf ſix Inches, Cocks Key Six Inches, Gaunts Key one Foot, and Freſh Wharf ſix Inches: And for the eaſineſs of Aſcent, that all the ſaid Ground be continued from the water-ſide to Thames-ſtreet, in an equal and gradual Aſcent to the Height that is to be there ſet forth and limited, according to the Intent and true Meaning of the Act of Parliament aforeſaid.

And laſtly, we do humbly adviſe, that no further or other Paſſage be made or enlarged to the Wharfs, or any part of the River of Thames, from Thames-ſtreet within the Limits aforeſaid, other than the ancient and common Paſſages to the ſame.

Act for governing and ordering Cars and Carts. J. S.

For the diſpoſing of Cars, Carts, &c. there was an Act of Common Council Anno 1665. Sir John Laurence Maior, the Import whereof was, That the Right of ordering and diſpoſing of Cars, Carts, Caroons, Carters and Carmen, and all other Perſons working any Carts or Cars within the City of London and Liberties, is and hath been in the Maior, Commonalty and Citizens: And accordingly the Government of the ſaid Cars, Carts, &c. hath been from time to time, by ſeveral Acts of Common Council, diſpoſed and committed, ſometime to the Preſident and Governor of Chriſt's Hoſpital; and at other times to the Maſter, Wardens and Fellowſhip of Woodmongers, London: And in the Year 1658. to the late Preſident and Governors of the Poor of the ſaid City: And laſt of all, it was committed again to the Maſter and Wardens of the Fellowſhip of Woodmongers, by Act of Common Council made 1661. in the Maioralty of Sir Richard Brown [who was a Woodmonger.] But hereupon divers Complaints were made of many Inconveniences and Grievances brought upon the Citizens and Inhabitants of London and the Liberties; as in raiſing the Price, and uſing Deceit in the Weight and Meaſure of Coals, by means and pretence of the Privileges and Power granted by this Act of Common Council. Therefore that Act made to the Woodmongers was repealed.

The ordering of them is in Chriſt's Hoſpital.

And it was enacted, that the Preſident and Governors of Chriſt's Hoſpital ſhould, for the time to come, have the Rule, Overſight and Government of the ſaid Cars, Carts, &c. during the Pleaſure of the Court, and according to the Rules, Directions and Proviſions in this Act mentioned, viz.

Rules for the Carts.

No more than 420 Carts to be allowed to work within the City and Liberties. And that 7 s. and 4 d. per Annum, and no more, ſhall be received or paid for a Carroon; and 20 s. and no more, or greater Fine upon any Admittance or Alienation of a Carroon.

Any Perſon preſuming to work any Car, Cart, &c. not being allowed, for every time ſo offending to forfeit 40 s.

Not any Car, Cart, &c. to be permitted to a Wharf, Wharfinger or Woodmonger, or to be kept by them, after the firſt day of Auguſt next, but by Licenſe of Chriſt's Hoſpital, upon penalty of 40 s.

Such as have Carroons, not to let them out for Hire without the Approbation and Allowance of the Preſident and Governors of Chriſt's Hoſpital.

None to be admitted to work any Car, but ſuch as ſhall be found of civil Carriage, and able and meet for that Employment, upon pain of 10 s. a day.

That the Prices of Carriages may be moderate, as well for the People as for the Carmen, hereafter from Year to Year, in the Month of September, the Rates and Prices of Carriage ſhall be ſet and appointed by the Court of Aldermen, and ſuch of the Commons and others as they ſhall think fit to call before them for their Information. And the ſaid Prices to be printed, and ſet upon the Poſts in public Places. And if any Carman demand or take more, to forfeit for every ſuch Offence 10 s.

To be lawful for one of the Marſhals of the City and their Men (who are hereby appointed to aſſiſt the Preſident and Governors of Chriſt's Hoſpital) to take and ſeize all ſupernumerary Cars, not allowed, that ſhall be found working in this City; and according to the ancient Cuſtom, to impound them in the new Store-yard at the Poſtern belonging to this City; there to remain till the reſpective Owner ſhall conform himſelf to the Government of the ſaid Preſident and Governors.

That if the yearly Rent of 17 s. 4 d. a piece be not paid to the ſaid Preſident and Governors, the Carroon, that is, the Licenſe of ſuch Perſon ſo wanting or refuſing, ſhall be forthwith ſuſpended, and his Perſon diſabled to work any longer.

The Preſident and Governors of Chriſt's Hoſpital from time to time to obſerve, perform and execute ſuch Acts and Orders as have, or ſhall be further made by the Common Council, or by the Lord Maior and Court of Aldermen, for and concerning the Regulation of Cars, Carts, &c. and touching the Price, Meaſure and Aſſize of Coal-ſacks, Coals, or other Fuel.

In this Act were contained alſo certain Orders concerning Sea-coal, and the Woodmongers, which may be ſeen under the Woodmongers Company.

Rates appointed to be taken by Carmen.

Now for aſcertaining the Prices to be taken by Carmen for the Carriage of Goods and Merchandizes from the Wharfs to the ſeveral Places of the City and Liberties, an Act of Common Council was made, Sir William Bolton, Maior, Anno 1666. occaſioned from daily Complaints of Merchants and Citizens of the exceſſive Rates demanded and taken by Carmen, above what is reaſonable, and had been limited; having been ſo appointed and ſet by the Juſtices of the Peace. And whereas the Rule, Government and Overſight of the Cars, Carmen, and all Perſons working any Cars or Carts within London and the Liberties, by Act of Common Council of June 21. 1665 was in the Preſident and Governors of Chriſt's Hoſpital, the ſaid Preſident and Governors were deſired by this Court, that they cauſe every Car which ſhall be licenſed to work, to be numbered with Figures upon a Piece of Braſs, to be fixed upon every Car and Cart, and the Carman's Name; and ſuch Figures to be fairly regiſtred in a Book to be kept in Chriſt's Hoſpital, there at any time to be ſeen; to the End, that if any Carmen ſhall not conform to the Rates aforeſaid, or refuſe to carry Goods at ſuch Rates, the Merchant, knowing what Figure is upon the Cart, may more readily find out who is the Worker thereof. And the Preſident or Governors, upon the Certificate or Teſtimony of the Party grieved, are hereby authorized to ſuſpend ſuch Perſon from working ſuch Car, until he ſhall make Reſtitution.

The Cars to be numbered with Figures.

The Preſident and Governors to meet every Thurſday in Chriſt's Hoſpital at Two in the Afternoon, to hear and determine of Complaints, that ſhall be made by any Merchant or Citizen againſt the Carmen.

Streetmen.

And it is ordered by this Court, the ſaid Preſident and Governors to have Power, and are authorized to nominate and appoint Streetmen, ſuch as they ſhall think fit, to be Overſeers of the ſaid Carmen; to ſee and take care, that Merchants and other Citizens Goods be well and faithfully delivered at the Rates and Prices, without any Exactions, Hindrance or Diſturbance.

The Rates and Prices for Carriage follow.

From any Wharf between the Tower and London-Bridge, to Tower-ſtreet, Gracechurch-ſtreet, Fanchurch-ſtreet, Billingsgate within, Cornhill, and Places of like Diſtance up the Hill, with 1800 Weight, not exceeding 2000 Weight, 2 s. 2 d. And being above 2000 Weight, 2 d. for every Hundred. Provided the Carmen for this Rate, and all other Rates herein contained, help to load and unload their Carts.

And for Sea-coal the Load 16 d. every Load to be Half a Chaldron. And for one Hundred of Faggots, the like Rate.

From any of the Wharfs aforeſaid to Tower-ſtreet, Billingsgate-ſtreet, &c. with 1400 Weight, not exceeding 1800 Weight, 22 d. and ſo proportionably of the reſt.

This Order to be printed, and Copies thereof faſtned, and ſet up on Poſts in all publick Places of the City.

The great Uſes and important Services of this Corporation, will appear by ſome particular Account of the Buſineſſes they are employed about, viz.

And further, for the good of Navigation, to them belong the Service and Power of erecting, placing, and maintaining ſeveral Light-Houſes, Buoys and Beacons, or other Sea-marks upon the Coaſts of England, and in the Mouth of the River of Thames; and to alter and ſhift the ſame, as there may be Occaſion from time to time, for the better ſecurity of Ships, according to an Act of the Eighth of Queen Elizabeth.

Survey the Channels.

For which End the Brethren do frequently Survey the North and South Channels leading to the River, and are watchful to obſerve the Alteration and Encreaſe of all ſuch Lands and Shoals as may ariſe in the Channels, or in any Port or Harbour of this Kingdom; upon ſignification ſometime from the Parliament, ſometime from the Lord Admiral, or Commiſſioners of the Navy, and do accordingly erect their Buoys and Marks.

It is made of Braſs, with two Keys, whereof the Maſter keepeth one; given by John Wodecote Maſter, Anno 1597, as is inſcribed upon it; as alſo theſe three Sentences to the ſame import, in Engliſh, Dutch and French, viz. *Remember the Poor. But Chriſtmas eſpecially is a time that this Charity is moſt largely and univerſally diſtributed to all that come for an Almes, and bring Certificates either from Maſters of Ships, or other ſubſtantial Perſons of good Credit, that they are proper Objects of Charity. At Chriſtmas 1705, they expended in this charitable way of Contribution above 200 l. whereof twelve Hundred and more partook.

The Seventh, no Maſter to ſuffer to be taken in, or heaved out of the Ship, any Ballaſt, without having a Sail nailed to the Sell of the Port; or if a ſmall Veſſel, to the Gunnel, to overhang the Side of the Lighter, upon pain of 20 s.

The Eighth, concerning Maſters, by themſelves, or their Officers, or Seamen, refuſing to hinder any Perſon appointed by the Corporation, (and upon demand ſhewing his Authority under the Common Seal) from coming on board his Ship in the day time, to ſearch for Powder, Guns unſhotted, heating of Pitch, Tar, &c. the careleſs and unſeaſonable drying of Bread-rooms, and ſuffering Bum-boats to come aboard, and to traffic with them, upon forfeiture of 5 l.

The Ninth, concerning certain Members of this Corporation, that partly of themſelves, and partly at the Requeſt of others, preferred Bills, Petitions, &c. to the Parliament, and to other inferior Juriſdictions, in the Name of Seamen in general, without making the Maſter, Wardens, and Aſſiſtants acquainted, to the great Detriment and Scandal of the Corporation. For the preventing this for the future, if any Members of this Corporation do, or attempt the like Matters, or ſhall ſet their Hands to any Bill, Petition, &c.

without conſent of the Maſter, Wardens and Aſſiſtants, he ſhall forfeit 5 l.

The Tenth, for better regulating and governing of Seamen and Mariners, it was ordered that no Mariner on Shipboard ſwear, curſe, or blaſpheme, on forfeiture of 1 s. for every ſuch Offence, to be put into the Poors Box, remaining on board the ſame Ship. Any Seaman hired to ſerve in any Ship, and at any time to lie on Shoar, during the Voyage, without leave, to forfeit 2 s. 6 d. to the Poors Box. No Mariner being in perfect Health to abſent himſelf from Prayers, being performed according to the Liturgy of the Church of England, and not repairing thither immediately after the ring of the Bell; the neglect of which is the forfeiture of 6 d. If any Mariner be drunk, to forfeit 1 s. If he ſhall be obſtinate and ſtubborn in not obeying the Maſter's lawful Command, or the Mate's or Boatſwain's, in his abſence, to forfeit half his Months pay.

Any Perſon found to offend againſt the abovementioned Orders, to be left to the Liberty of the Maſter or Commander, with conſent of the Mate, Boatſwain, Purſer, Gunner and Carpenter, or the major part, either to inflict corporal Puniſhment, according to the Cuſtom of the Seas, or receive and take the Penalty hereby impoſed.

If the Perſon or Perſons have not preſent Money to ſatisfy what the Order is, then to ſubſcribe their Names to the Maſter or Purſer's Books, thereby ſignifying their Conſents, that the ſaid Forfeitures may be defaulted out of their Wages the next Pay-day.

The Eleventh, concerning any Mariners Shipping himſelf with any Maſter for a Voyage, and afterwards Deſerting and Shipping himſelf with another; the Maſter with whom he goeth the Voyage to detain 2 s. in every Pound of his Wages, for the time he ſerveth in his Ship, to be paid to the Corporation for the Uſe of the Poor.

The Twelfth, every Commander of a Ship hiring any Mariner to ſail with him upon any Voyage, to take in writing under the Seaman's Hand, upon what Condition he is entertained, and to ſubmit himſelf to the By-Laws of Trinity-Houſe.

All which Acts, Ordinances and Conſtitutions, George Lord Jeffreys, Baron of Wem, Lord High Chancellor of England, Sir Robert Wright, Lord Chief Juſtice of the Pleas, before his Majeſty to be holden, and Sir Edward Herbert, Lord Chief Juſtice of his Majeſty's Court of Common Pleas, at the Requeſt of the Maſter, Wardens and Aſſiſtants, and Elder Brethren of the ſaid Corporation, by Authority and Vertue of an Act of Parliament made in the 19th Year of King Henry VII. for that Purpoſe; ſaw, read, and examined; and for good, lawful and laudable Ordinances and By-Laws, did allow and approve, and ſet their Hands and Seals thereunto the 24th of June, 1687.

The Lighters belonging to the Ballaſt Office, marked by the Company.

The Maſter, Wardens, and Aſſiſtants of Trinity Houſe, have cauſed all the Lighters employed in the Ballaſt Work, to be new weighed and marked in their own Preſence, with all the exactneſs poſſible. And to the End that no Maſter of a Ship, or other Perſon, having Occaſion for Ballaſt, may be deceived in the Tonnage by the Lightermen employed in that Work, the ſaid Corporation publiſhed in Print the ſaid Table.

After the Table is added,

The Penalty of taking in Ballaſt at private Wharfs.

Now whereas this Corporation is informed that divers Maſters of Ships, and coaſting Veſſels chiefly, do frequently take in Ballaſt from private Wharfs and Places in the River without entring it at the Office, and paying for the ſame; it is hereby declared, that if any Maſter ſhall take in all, or part of his Ballaſt (or Chalk-ſtones or Rubbiſh of any kind, to be uſed inſtead of Ballaſt) from any Wharf or Place whatſoever within the River of Thames (excepting from our own Wharfes at Greenwich and Greenhith) or ſuffer our own Lighter-men, or any other, to ſerve him with Ballaſt, before it be entered and payed for; he is for the firſt time to pay double the Price of the Ballaſt he did ſo take in, and for the ſecond, to be proſecuted with the utmoſt Rigour of the Law.

Or of taking Lighters with Ballaſt violently.

And if any Maſter, or his Company, ſhall violently take and carry aboard his Ship any Lighter with Ballaſt, not appointed to him by the Office, no further Supply of Ballaſt, nor any Bill ſhall be given to the ſaid Maſter, untill he ſhall have given ſuch Satisfaction for his, or their aboveſaid Abuſe and Diſorder, as this Corporation ſhall think reaſonable.

Or in Caſe of not taken it in when brought.

And if any Maſter ſhall not take in his Ballaſt when brought to his Ship-ſide at the time of his own appointment, or ſhall not diſcharge the Lighter or Lighters bringing the ſaid Ballaſt the ſame Tyde of Ebbe, he ſhall pay for the ſaid Ballaſt, though it be afterwards carried away, as if it had been taken into his Ship; unleſs he ſhall, one Tyde at leaſt before, give notice at the Office, that he ſhall not be ready for the Ballaſt at the time before appointed. Divers Remarks concerning the Merchants of London. J. S.

AND here, by way of Appendix, I ſhall add a few Collections concerning the Merchants of London in general, and then more particularly concerning the Merchants Strangers, and ſuch as are foreign born, wherein the City hath always much abounded.

Few Merchants in King Edward VIth's Days.

In the Reign of King Edward VI. there were but few Engliſh Merchants Adventurers, and a great want of Shipping to convey our Commodities abroad, and bring in Returns for them. A notable Merchant in thoſe Days wrote thus in a Letter to a Stateſman then, (viz. Sir William Cecyl) "I think there is never a City in Chriſtendom, having the occupying that this City hath, "that is ſo ſlenderly provided of Ships, having "the Sea coming to it, as this hath. And, that "he had heard of late much complaining for "Engliſh Ships to lade Goods into Spain, and o"ther Places; and none were to be had. And "that he had ſeen thirty ſeven Hoyes laden with "Wood and Timber, go at one Tide out of "Rye, and never an Engliſh Mariner among "them.

Merchants in Queen Elizabeth's Days.

The number of Merchants in London in the beginning of Queen Elizabeth, viz. when Alderman Lodge was Maior, (which was Anno 1561.) were in all 327. Whereof the Company of Mercers afforded 99. And theſe were the Names of the chief, Sir Thomas Leigh, Sir Thomas Greſham, Mr. Alderman Martin, Mr. Alderman Baskerfield, Sir Roland Hill, Vincent Randal, Lyonel Ducket. Of the Grocers were 57. Whereof the chief were, Sir John Lyon, Mr. Alderman White, Mr. Alderman Lodge, Lord Maior, Mr. Edward Jackman, Alderman. Of the Drapers 29. Whereof the chief were, Sir William Cheſter, Mr. Alderman Champion. Of the Haberdaſhers 51. Whereof the chief were, Sir William Hawarde, Alderman Woodroff. Of the Merchant-Taylers 25. Whereof the chief were, Sir Thomas White, Sir John York, Sir William Harper, Alderman Row, Richard Hills. Of the Skinners 16. Of the Fiſhmongers 12. Of the Clothworkers 13. Whereof was Alderman Hayward. Of the Ironmongers 6. Whereof was Alderman Chamberlain. Of the Salters 2. Of the Girdlers 2. Of the Bowyers 1. Of the Leatherſellers 9. Of the Armourers 1.

Traffic firſt to Ruſſia.

The Traffic of the Merchants to the Parts of the World at a greater Diſtance, was firſt to Ruſſia. Which began in the latter End of King Edward VI. Wherein divers of the Court were Adventurers with the Merchants of London.

Voyage to Maderabombo.

In the Year 1563. in March, a Voyage was undertaken to Maderabombo, ſet forth by ſome Merchants, ſome Mariners, and ſome of the Court, to encourage foreign Trade; viz. the Earl of Pembroke, the Lord Robert Dudley, the Lord Admiral, and Sir William Cecyl, Knt. Secretary of State, Sir William Garret, Sir William Cheſter, Sir Thomas Lodge, Benjamin Gonſon, Edward Caſtlyn, Merchants, John Hawkyns, William Wynter, Mariners. The Ships that went in this Adventure, the Complement of Men in each, and the Charge of their Ordinance, Tackle and Apparel, were as follow:

Ships.	Men.	Ordinance, &c.
The Jeſus of Lubeck	80
The Salomon	35	600 l.

The Wares and Victuals for the Negroes, with their Apparel, and Habiliments of War, amounted to the charge of 1190 l.

The Sum of the whole Charge (over and beſide the Adventure of the Jeſus of Lubeck accounted for) 3300 l.

Voyage of Furbiſher to find out the North-Weſt Paſſage.

In the Year 1576. certain Moſcovy Merchants, (with whom ſeveral of the Court were alſo Adventurers) ſent Martin Furbiſher, or Frobuſher, in a Voyage to diſcover a Paſſage by Sea North-Weſtward to Cathay. Which Voyage coſt 1600 l. Wherein Michael Lock was one of the chief Adventurers, and Treaſurer. From this Voyage was brought home 200 Weight of Ewr by Furbiſher, for Experiment, which was molten and tried by one Jonas Schutz, an Almain, and John Baptiſta Agnello, an Italian, and three Engliſhmen; and there proceeded thence in Silver 6 Ounces, 7 Penny-weight, and 13 Grains; and of the ſame Ewr in Gold 5 Penny-weight and 5 Grains. Which both in Silver and Gold amounted to 47 s. 6 d. Sterling, at 5 s. the Ounce Silver, and 3 s. the Penny-weight Gold, according to the Account brought in to the Muſcovy-Houſe. So that at that Rate a Tun of the ſaid Ewr would make in Money 23 l. 15 s. all Charges deducted. Hence upon the View of this Account they found, that for every 8 l. to be disburſed by the Adventurers, they would gain 5 l. Which aroſe upon every 100 l. gain clear above the Sum of 60 l. And a Writing was delivered in to Secretary Walſingham, one of the Adventurers, to the ſame Import. And hereupon Sir William Wynter certified ſeveral honourable Adventurers, as well as Walſingham, upon the Information given him, that Furbiſher had found a Mine of Gold worth 60 l. the Tun, from whence the foreſaid Ewr was taken.

His ſecond and third Voyage.

Upon which a ſecond Voyage was undertaken by the ſaid Furbiſher in the Year 1577. which coſt above 4000 l. to fetch Ewr from this Gold Mine. And a third Anno 1578. made upon the Foundation of ſome Writings of the Value of the Ewr brought the ſecond Voyage, (however that Ewr proved not good.) And their Honours gave Orders for this Voyage by their Letters written to the Commiſſioners. Which Voyage coſt 15000 l. Yet after all, theſe Voyages turned not to the deſired deſired Account: For they could find no more of their firſt Ewr.

A Voyage by Carleil to the Northern America.

In the Year 1583. Alderman Hart, Mr. Spencer, Hoddeſdon, and divers other Merchant Adventurers, attempted a Diſcovery, in order to Trade, of the hithermoſt Parts of America, to the Latitude of 40 Degrees, or thereabouts, under Captain Carleil: Who excited them thereto by many conſiderable Arguments of the Profitableneſs thereof; the Country being very fruitful, inhabited with a ſavage People of a mild and tractable Diſpoſition; and that of all other Places, which were unfrequented at that day, it was the only fitteſt and moſt commodious for us to intermeddle withal. For firſt, it was not any long Courſe, but ſuch as might be performed to and fro in four Months, after the firſt Diſcovery thereof. Secondly, one Wind ſufficed to make the Paſſage; whereas moſt other Voyages of like Length were ſubject to three or four ſeveral Winds. Thirdly, it was to be performed at all times of the Year. Fourthly, the Paſſage was upon the high Sea; whereby they were not bound to the Knowledge of Dangers, or any other Coaſt, more than of that Country, and of ours here at home. Fifthly, thoſe Parts of England and Ireland, which lie apteſt for the proceeding outwards and homewards upon this Voyage, were very well ſtored of goodly Harbours. Sixthly, that it was to be accounted of no Danger at all, as touching the Power of any foreign Prince or State.

Such as deſire to know more of the Voyages ſet out by the Merchants Adventurers, for Diſcovery of foreign Parts of the World, and for ſettling a Traffic there, may conſult Hackluit's Voyages; where the various Hiſtories thereof, in the Northern, Weſtern and Eaſtern Regions of the Earth, are ſet down at large.

Number of Merchants 1590.

About the Year 1590. the Number of the chiefeſt Merchants in London increaſed greatly. I find 280 Names to one Petition. And of the Court of Aldermen theſe Merchants ſigned it, William Row, Maior, Richard Hayward, Richard Martyn, William Webbe, Cuthbert Buckle, John Spencer, William Maſham, Anthony Radclyff, Hugh Offley, Henry Billingſley, Richard Saltonſtal, William Elkyn, Stephen Soame, Thomas Skyner, Richard Gourney.

Beer a great Commodity tranſported.

Of the Commodities which were of the Growth or Manufacture of England, it is not my Buſineſs to make a diſtinct Declaration. But among other things ſent abroad by the Merchants, I find, that about the Year 1580 and odd, much Beer was tranſported, and became a great Commodity in Queen Elizabeth's Reign. But the exporting of it was often forbid by that Queen's Proclamation: For commonly it was a Cauſe of enhancing the Price of Corn. Yet even upon Prohibitions, ſpecial Licenſes were granted by the Lord Treaſurers. Thus he allowed one Lyſter, in the Month of November, to brew and tranſport 500 Tun of Beer for the Queen's Uſe: And in the ſame Month another Ship was laden with 350 Barrels of Beer to Embden; and in the ſame Month again a Ship of Amſterdam laded 300 Barrels of Beer more. And in the ſame Month four Ships of Embden more were laden with 800 Barrels. Which ſhews in what Requeſt our Engliſh Beer was then abroad.

Sea-Coal.

Among the Commodities of the Growth of England ſent abroad, as well as ſpent here at home, the Sea-Coal of Newcaſtle deſerves ſome mention. This is the great Commodity that ſupplies the City with Firing, both for dreſſing of Food, and for the Operation of divers Trades and Manufactures exerciſed there. About the Year 1590 and odd, Sea-coal began to advance its Price far higher than ever before; being enhanced by ſiniſter Ways and Means of ſome at Newcaſtle; a few engroſſing the whole Commodity to themſelves. And beſides, the Coals were not ſo good as they uſed to be, by their ſending out the beſt into foreign Parts, and ſending the worſt to be ſpent in the Realm. The Price of Sea-coal of the beſt ſort went at 4 s. the Chaldron, many and many a Year before now. Then there happened a Leaſing of the Mines; which was called the Grand Leaſe: Which Grand Leaſe was aſſigned to one Mr. Sutton. And then the Price came to 6 s. the Chaldron; and ſo continued during the time that Sutton enjoyed the Leaſe. Then it was aſſigned over to the Town of Newcaſtle: and then the Price began to increaſe to an exceſſive Rate. Firſt to 7 s. then to 8 s. and was now grown to 9 s. Neither could be ſo had, unleſs the Buyer would be content to take of both ſorts, viz. the Good and Bad together.

The Price formerly.

The Maior complains of the Price advanced.

Of this the Lord Maior made complaint to the Lord Treaſurer Burghley, againſt the Town of Newcaſtle; ſetting forth the Cauſes of theſe Abuſes, and then the Remedies for the Reformation of them. The chief Cauſes were, certain Inhabitants of Newcaſtle, called Freehoſts, to whom the Grand Leaſes were firſt made over to the Uſe of that Town, being to the Number of ſixty Perſons, or thereabouts. Theſe of later times had compounded and made over their whole Right to a far leſs Number, viz. ſome eighteen or twenty Men. Who having before Coal-pits of their own, engroſſed the whole Commodity, and reduced the Trade into a few Mens hands: combining together to ſell their Sea-coal at their own Prices; and ſo advanced the Price, as was ſaid before, to 9 s. the Chaldron, one with the other. The ſaid few Perſons, being Men of great Wealth, had, beſides the Grand Leaſe, taken and engroſſed all the Coal-mines about the ſaid Town; namely, the Mine of Stella, the Biſhops Mine, ſometimes farmed by one Mr. Tempeſt and others, the Mine of the Lordſhip of Ravenſworth, the Mine of Mr. Gaſcoin, the Mine of the Lordſhip of Newborne, and divers others. Of theſe Mines or Pits they opened or ſhut up ſuch and ſo many as they thought good, for the advancing of their private Gain. Whereby the Freehoſts, who were wont to make Suit for the Sale of their Coals, and offer the ſame unto the Shipmaſters, (which made a Cheapneſs) were now ſued unto, and made it a matter of Favour and Preferment, whom firſt they would ſerve; ordering the Prices at their own pleaſures.

The Cauſes.

The Remedies.

The Remedies propounded were, that the Lords of the Privy Council would take Order, that all Owners and Farmers of Coal-mines might open them, and make Sale of their Coals at reaſonable Rates, not exceeding the Price of 7 s. the Chaldron, and to lade the ſame at moſt opportune Places without any Reſtraint. And that they be enjoined to have good ſtore of Coal digged before-hand, and ready to be laden: Whereby the Shipmaſters might not be enforced to ſtay for their Lading, as they had ſometimes four, five or ſix Weeks together: Whence the Price of Coals became increaſed.

Benefit of Coals to Newcaſtle.

The Town of Newcaſtle made a great Benefit by theſe Coals long ago. For in theſe latter times of Queen Elizabeth, were yearly ſhipped hence unto ſeveral Places within the Realm and beyond the Seas, by computation, five or ſix Hundred Thouſand Chaldrons. The Toll whereof, after the Rate of 4 d. the Chaldron, amounted to the Sum of 10000 l. a year. Which went to the Chamber and Corporation of that Town; beſide the Revenue which grew to the Inhabitants of that Place for the Sale of their Coals.

Price of Coals in K. Hen. VIII. his Reign.

So that in the latter part of Queen Elizabeth's Reign, theſe Coals bore 9 s. the Chaldron. But in the Time of King Henry VIII. they were bought at Newcaſtle for 2 s. 2 d. the Chaldron. For one Thomas Barnaby, a Merchant in thoſe Times, exciting a great Courtier in King Edward's Time, to promote Shipping, and increaſe the number of Mariners, which would turn ſo much to the Strength of England, ſhewed, how the ſending Coals into France from Newcaſtle would ſet 6 or 7000 Mariners a work: Whereas then the French got the Benefit. For in Times of Peace there would be three or fourſcore Ships of Normans and Britons at once, as ſoon as their Fiſhing was done, fetching Coals from thence. And as ſoon as they were departed, would come as many more. The Advantage of that Trade to the Engliſh would prove very conſiderable: For as he, the ſaid Barnaby, had bought Coals at 2 s. 2 d. the Chaldron, ſo he had ſold them in France for 13 Nobles. And this for the Commodity of Sea-coal.

The Inconvenience of a Tax laid upon Coals. J. S.

Let me yet add ſome Notices more modern, concerning this notable Commodity of Sea-coal. There was about the Year 1698. a Tax laid upon them of 5 s. the Chaldron. Which the Citizens were extremely diſpleaſed at; and in a little Book drawn up chiefly for the Uſe and Information of the Parliament, printed Anno 1699. is ſhewed the Miſchief of it: For it is entitled, The Miſchief of the Five Shilling Tax upon Coals. This was taken off by the firſt Seſſion of the next Parliament, and laid on again the laſt Seſſion of the ſame. It was expected never to have heard of this Tax again, having been taken off in a full Houſe, and after full and ample Examination by the Committee, and after the Experience of its Partiality, eſpecially upon the Poor, and of its pernicious Conſequences upon Trade and Navigation.

1400 Ships in the Collier Trade.

The ſaid Book ſhewed, that 1400 Sail of Ships were employed in the Collier Trade, as appeared by the Coaſt-Books of the Cuſtom-houſe in the Port of Newcaſtle. Which coſt in building one thouſand Pounds one with another. And that it was notorious, that the ſaid Ships gave not, when this Tax was on foot, (nor never would give as long as it continued) one farthing Profit to the Owners. Here then was the Intereſt of 14000 l. loſt from the Proprietors of Shipping, and ſo from the Nation itſelf.

Tax upon Coals, how injurious.

Therefore it was humbly repreſented to the Parliament, that this Tax was inconſiſtent with the Safety of England, partial upon the Poor, pernicious to our Shipping, and Seamen, deſtructive of our River-men, viz. Boatmen, Keelmen, Bargemen, Ballaſtmen, Coal-heavers, &c. fatal to our Manufactures made with Sea-coal, (eſpecially Salt, Glaſs, and all ſorts of groſs Iron-work) that by this Coal-Tax muſt run into Coal Countries, or out of the Kingdom; and ſo highly injurious to the Royal Revenue.

How many Chaldrons yearly from Newcaſtle; viz. 200000.

It appeared by the Cuſtom-houſe Books for the Coaſt-Duty of 12 d. per Chaldron on Coals at Newcaſtle, that there was exported from that Port communibus annis, in Times of Peace, 200000 Chaldrons of Coal, Newcaſtle Meaſure. And Newcaſtle hath but two thirds of the Collier Trade. So that the Writer ſaid, that he might with Safety affirm, there was exported from Newcaſtle and its Member Ports, 300000 Chaldron of Coals: Which is in Tunnage of Shipping 795000 Tun. To which if we ſhould add the over-Sea Collier Trade, he doubted not to affirm the Collier Trade employed 900000 Tunnage of ſhipping per annum. Which is more than two thirds of all the Tunnage of Goods imported or exported every where, from or into this Kingdom in Engliſh Bottoms. So that the Collier Fleet is the great Body of the Shipping of England; and all our other Trades are ſerved by Detachments from it.

900000 Tunnage of Shipping in the Collier Trade.

The Collier Trade like to be diminiſhed.

This is the Navigation and Collier-Trade of England. But upon this Tax, there would not be exported (as he computed) from the North Coaſtways, above 150000 Chaldron, Newcaſtle Meaſure; nor half the Number of Ships and Sailors be employed upon the ſaid Trade that was before the ſaid Tax. For there would remain no further Occaſion for Coals in the South, than for domeſtic Uſe: their Forges and Furnaces being run, by this Tax, either into the North, or out of the Kingdom. And inſtead of 100000 l. per Annum, which was expected from this Tax, we ſhould find it would not bring in above 50000 l. And there would be a Fall in the Proceed of other Taxes above double the Sum. And one half of the Collier Trade failing, one half of the Men it ſupported at Sea, in our River, and at Land, would either be driven abroad, or reduced to live upon the Alms of the Pariſh. Twenty thouſand Souls was the leaſt we ſhould find to fall into theſe miſerable Circumſtances. And this muſt make a vaſt Abate in the Proceed of the Taxes, the Pole-money, Births and Burials, the Exciſe of Beer, Ale and Salt, the Duties upon the Materials for Navigation, and the Branches of the Cuſtoms.

The Benefit of being releaſed of the 5 s. Tax on Coals.

Further, the Author computed, that if there were no Five Shilling Tax upon Coals, we ſhould export from the North Coaſtways above 400000 Chaldrons of Coals, Newcaſtle Meaſure, which might be modeſtly computed and judged at 1200000 Tuns of Coals; having every day an increaſing Trade. For Wood decayeth every where: and the Town groweth more populous, having many new Streets built out of her void Spaces and cumberſome Palaces. This 1200000 Tun of Coals is a Bulk of Cargo ſufficient to employ 2000 Sail of Ships of the ſame Burden with thoſe at preſent in the Collier Trade, and will maintain 20000 Seamen, and a tripple number of River-men, at the loading and unloading Ports: and alway living jollily and comfortably in their Buſineſs, muſt raiſe the Proceed of the Revenue far above what is expected from that foreſaid Tax. Twenty Years Experience ſince the writing of this Book will ſhew, what Truth there is in that Argument.

Iron Ordnance.

About the Year 1572. conſiderable Quantities of Iron Ordnance, caſt here in England, were tranſported abroad. Whereby the Queen's Enemies, as it was feared, were ſupplied: and that by ſome Licenſe ſecretly obtained. But the Merchants of London, knowing how this might furniſh the Enemies Ships to obſtruct their Trade, and bring other great Damages upon the Queen and her Subjects, petitioned her in a great Body to withdraw this Licenſe; laying alſo their Reaſons before her Majeſty for it. But this Petition (whether it were ſhuffled off by ſome about the Queen) never came before her. But they petitioned a ſecond time, for the preventing ſo great a Danger, beſeeching her to take a full View and deep Conſideration of their former Petition, together with the Reaſons annexed thereto. The Iſſue was, that in September the aboveſaid Year, there was a ſtrict Reſtraint for tranſporting all Iron and Braſs Ordnance, proclaimed. It ſet forth, 'How the Queen was informed, that notwithſtanding it was unlawful to tranſport any Ordnance out of the Realm, without ſpecial Licenſe, other than for her Majeſty's natural Subjects, to be uſed in their ſhipping, and not to be aliened to any Stranger, yet this had been lately practiſed by ſome. Therefore for the ſtay hereof, her Majeſty did ſtrictly command all manner of Perſons to forbear to ſhip,

‘ with intent to Tranſport to any Foreign Parts, any kind of Ordnance of Braſs or Iron, or to ſell or deliver any ſuch Ordnance to any Perſon to Tranſport the ſame, upon Pains, &c. which her Majeſty muſt extend againſt ſuch Offenders, as did thereby ſtrengthen the common Enemies againſt her Majeſty and her Realms.

‘ And for a further Remedy againſt the Inconvenience that was generally ſeen in making of great Quantity of Iron Ordnance, and by ſelling the ſame to ſundry Perſons that had ſecretly carried the ſame out of the Realm, whereby the common Enemy had been furniſhed with the ſame, not only for Shipping, but alſo for Maritime Towns and Ports, which otherwiſe had not been able, nor durſt have put their Ships to the Seas; therefore ſhe ſtraitly charged all Owners of Iron Works, Furnaces or Forges, or that made any Iron, that none of them ſhould make any manner of Ordnance above a Mynion, and that to be of ſo many Pounds.” This good Service the Merchants now did for the Nation, as well as for themſelves.

The Ground of this Complaint.

The Ground of all this ſeems to be, that the Lord Admiral had granted a Licenſe of Tranſporting Iron Ordnance to Sir Thomas Leighton, who had made uſe of one Garret Swift to obtain it of the Admiral; and Sir Thomas, underhand, did promiſe to the ſaid Swift, by a Writing dated in Auguſt 1592, that in conſideration hereof, upon his obtaining the Suit, he would appoint him, the ſaid Swift, his whole and only Deputy to execute the ſame under him during his Life, and for his Pains would give him the fourth part of all ſuch Fees and Benefits as ſhould any ways ariſe by the ſame.

One moves for an Office for regiſtering Contracts between Merchants, Owners and Maſters.

In the Year 1590, John Allington Draper, moved that an Office might be ſet up for the making and regiſtring all manner of Writings in the ordinary Contracts and Bargains, uſually made between all Merchants, Owners, and Maſters of Ships, before the going out of every Ship or Veſſel; and that he, his Deputies or Aſſigns, might be the only Regiſters for that Office; and that no Ships ſhould paſs beyond Sea before they, the ſaid Allington, or his Aſſigns, had made their Charter Parties, Bonds, Bills of Lading, or other Writings, concerning their Agreement for the Voyage; upon pain to forfeit, for every Ship or Veſſel ſo departing, 40 l. the one Moiety to the Queen, the other to Allington or his Aſſigns; the Parties paying to the ſaid Allington for the making of the ſaid Writings, ratably as they had heretofore uſually paid. The Reaſons for the Queen's granting this were, that hereby the Queen, beſide the Gain of 40 l. yearly, and the Forfeitures, her Cuſtoms might be much the better aſſured and encreaſed from time to time. And it might be a general Benefit to the Common-wealth. For, whereas oftentimes corrupt Merchants pretended to paſs with their Ladings from Port to Port within the Realm, yet when they were at Sea, they paſt into foreign Countries, as well to the Queen's Enemies as Friends: ſome without paying any Cuſtoms, ſome often colouring Strangers Goods; whereby the Queen did loſe one half of her Cuſtoms, the Subjects the more unfurniſhed of Victuals, Corn, and other Commodities. All which, by the Diligence of this Patentee might be often diſcovered or prevented. Beſides, from him might be preſently given a perfect Note, what number of Ships and other Veſſels were yearly employed, by whom, whither, of what Burthen, and who were their ſeveral Owners and Maſters. Laſtly, that divers Suits of like nature, and not of greater Importance, yet much more beneficial, had been granted by the Queen to ſundry Subjects, by vertue of her Highneſs's Prerogative only.

The Reaſons for it.

An Office for making and regiſtring Aſſurances, Policies, &c.

About 16 or 17 Years before, ſuch a kind of Grant, Sir James Hawes being Maior, one Richard Candler Mercer, obtain'd of the Queen, viz. to make and regiſter all manner of Aſſurances, Policies, Intimations, Renunciations, and other things whatſoever, that hereafter ſhould be made upon any Ship or Ships, Goods or Merchandize, or any other thing or things in the Royal Exchange in London, or in any other Place within the City, by any manner of Perſons of what Nation, Condition or Quality ſoever, to endure the Queen's Majeſty's Pleaſure; but with a Proviſo, that if the ſaid Office ſhould be thought needful to be reformed for the better Benefit of the Subject that ſhould have any Dealing herein; then, notwithſtanding the ſame, upon ſuit made to her Highneſs, or her honourable Council, by Order to be directed in Writing, the ſaid Candler ſhould conform himſelf thereunto. But this Patent was ſoon complained of by the Notaries Public, and the Brokers, That it was an Intruſion upon them, and would be their utter undoing, as hath been ſhewn before. And upon this, this Patent ſeems to have been revoked. But now, after divers Years, another endeavoured to get the like Grant.

Foreign Merchants.

Now as to the Merchants that were Foreigners born, I ſhall add a few Remarks. Of theſe there were very many reſiding and trading here in former times. In the Reign of King Richard III. London harboured abundance of Italian Merchants. And in the Parliament, in his days, was an Act made againſt their Abuſes. It ſet forth the Evils and Incommodities they brought into the Realm. Theſe Merchants are their ſpecified to be Venetians, Apulians, Sicilians, Lucaners, Cataloyns [Catalonians perhaps, who were Spaniards] and others. The Act mentions, that theſe did in great numbers inhabit and keep Houſe, as well in London as in other Cities and Burghs within the Realm; and took Ware-houſes and Cellars to put therein their Merchandizes and Wares.

An Act in Richard III. Reign about them.

Their evil Doings, and unlawful Practices.

Their evil Doings were, (as was there ſpecified) That they did deceitfully pack and meddle their Wares, and kept the ſame till ſuch times the Prices were greatly enhaunced, for their great Lucre; That they ſold them to all manner of People as well by Retail as otherways; as well within the Ports where they brought them, as elſewhere; That they Bought at the ſame Ports and Places, at their own Liberties, the Commodities of this Realm, and Sold the ſame again, at their Pleaſures, within the ſame, as commonly and freely as any of the King's Liege People; and did not Employ a great part of the Money coming thereof upon the Commodities of the Realm, but made it over the Sea, by Exchange, to divers other Countries, to the King's great Damage and Loſs in his Cuſtoms, and to the great impoveriſhing of his Subjects, of whom they ought to have bought the Commodities of the Realm; That the ſame Merchants of Italy, and other Merchant Strangers were houſed, and took to them People of other Nations, and were with them daily, and did Buy, Sell, and make privy and ſecret Contracts and Bargains with the ſame People, to their great Encreaſe and Profits, and to the importune Damage of the King's Subjects, and contrary to divers Statutes; That theſe Merchants bought a great Quantity of Wool in divers Places, and Woollen Cloth and other Merchandizes of the King's Subjects. And part thereof they ſold again to the ſame Subjects and others within the Realm, and much of the ſame Woolls they delivered to Cloth-makers, thereof to make Cloth at their Pleaſure; King Richard III. therefore did make a Law, that theſe Italian and Foreign Merchants ſhould cauſe their Goods and Commodites to be ſold and bartered in Groſs, not by Retail, and to employ the Money coming of that Sale, within the ſame Ports where they did arrive, upon Commodities and Merchandize of this Realm, their reaſonable Coſt and Expences always excepted and deducted, upon pain of Forfeitures; and by no means to make over ſuch Monies by Exchange, and finally, to reſtrain the aboveſaid Abuſes. Of this Matter of Employment more will be ſaid by and by.

An Italian Merchant, the Cauſe of a Peace between England and France.

Anthony Guidotti, an Italian Merchant, towards the beginning of King Edward VI. his Reign, did good Service to England, by his Wiſdom and Dexterity in managing State-Buſineſs, in ſetting forward a Peace between England and France. For taking divers private Journeys from the Conſtable of France to the Council in England (which he ſeemed to do at firſt upon his own Head) it came at laſt to this Point, that four Commiſſioners were appointed to treat, and after long Debate, it ended in a Treaty, and that in a Peace, Anno 1549; and for a Reward, in April 1550, Guidotti was recompenced with a Knighthood and a Thouſand Crowns, and a Hundred Crowns Penſion; and his Son with Two Hundred and Fifty Crowns Penſion.

Italian Merchants plant themſelves in London under King Edward; And under Q. Elizabeth.

Among the Foreigners, that for the Liberty of their Religion planted themſelves in England under King Edward VI. many were Italians and Genoeſe, having a Congregation in London, and moſt of them Merchants, who brought over, and traded in Silks, Velvets, and Damasks, and got great Wealth thereby.

In Queen Elizabeth's Reign, about 1572, were of Note Franciſco Galliardetto, Cæſar Adelmar, (whence the Family of the Cæſar's of Hertfordſhire, ſtill flouriſhing) Acerbo, and Benedict Spinola, who had ſo much Favour granted him, as to obtain divers Licenſes for the paſſing of Cloths and Kerſies with Engliſh Cuſtom.

There have been from time to time many Acts made (beſides that mentioned before) for the Regulation of the Trade of Merchants Aliens, and Strangers, and that the Nation might receive Benefit and Advantage from it; as, That they ſhould dwell in no other Place but in an Engliſhman's Houſe, and he to be their Hoſt, and to have the Sales of all ſuch Goods as they ſhould bring into the Realm; and he, the ſaid Hoſt, to ſee the Money received for ſuch Commodities, to be employed upon the Commodities of the Realm. That they ſhould have appointed them by the Maior, Sheriffs, Bailiffs, and Conſtables, their Hoſt, whither they were to reſort, and to no other Place; and he to be appointed the Surveyor or Broker of all ſuch Merchandizes by them brought into the Realm, and the ſame to be regiſtred by him; and for his pains and travail therein, to have for every 20*s.* 2 d. That neither they, their Servants or Factors, ſhould ride into the Country, or any part of the Realm, to buy any Wool, Cloth, Lead, Tin, or any other Commodities; becauſe they uſed to ſell the ſame again within the Realm to other Merchant Strangers, to the hindrance of the King's Subjects; and by riding from Place to Place, and from Haven to Haven, they might underſtand the State of the ſame, with all ſuch Landing-Places as were meet for any Enemies to land at. That no Merchant Stranger, or Donizon, might buy any Wools, Wolfels, Leather, Lead, Tin, or any other Commodity throughout our Realms and Lands by Covin or Colluſion, to abate the Prices of the ſame Merchandizes: For by their riding and ſending into the Country, they came to know the Value of any the Engliſh Commodities, whereby the Merchants that were wont to ſerve them of the ſame, could ſcarce be offered the Monies it coſt in the Country, to the hindrance of the ſaid Merchants, and decay of the Commodities. That where any Contract was made with any Lombard or other Merchant Stranger, and any Bond thereof paſt between them, that if he ſhould break and eſcape out of the Realm without Agreement made with his Creditors, then if any Merchant of the Company acknowledged himſelf bound by the manner, the Company ſhould anſwer the Debt. For in former times, divers Merchants Strangers, as well of the Stylyard as others, having by their Credit here gotten great ſums of Money and Wares into their Hands of divers Subjects of this Realm, ſuddenly broke and played Bankrupts, and thereupon departed the Realm, whereby none of their Creditors knew where to ſeek any part of his Debts. That Merchants Strangers, being Victuallers, ſhould put in good Aſſurance for the employing of their Money received for the Victuals. That none of them ſhould lodge in their Houſe any other Merchant Stranger than of their own Country, upon pain of forfeiting 40 l. And in the Reign of King Henry VII. not to lodge in their Houſe any Merchant Stranger, either of his own Country, or other, upon the ſame Penalty. For with theſe they uſed to buy, ſell, barter and exchange, as commonly and freely as Engliſh Merchants did. By which means they coloured one anothers Goods, and hindred the Sale of our Country Commodities. That they ſhould make ſuch Exchange to the Court of Rome or elſewhere, and to be bound perſonally in the Court of Chancery by Recognizance, to buy within nine Months after ſuch Exchange, and make like Merchandizes in this Realm, as ſhould amount to the ſaid Sum, of ſo much as was exchanged, upon forfeiture of the ſame. Laſtly, That where they daily brought in Wheat, Corn, Merchandizes, &c. for the which they received Gold and Silver, and carried the ſame out of the Realm without any Employment upon any kind of Merchandize of this Realm, to the damage and impoveriſhing of the ſame, and diminiſhing the King's Coin; therefore none ſhould carry away any Beer, Wheat, Corn, or any other Merchandize from any Creek or Port, but that it ſhould be lawful to ſeize the ſame as Forfeit.

Quarrel with them for Non-Employment.

Theſe old Laws were revived in the Reign of Queen Elizabeth. About the 14th Year of whoſe Reign a great Quarrel aroſe againſt the Merchants Strangers, and continued a great while after, that they did not Employ the Money they received of the Commodities they brought into the Land, in purchaſing therewith other Goods of our own Growth and Manufacture; but that they returned their Monies by Bills of Exchange, or otherwiſe, abroad; and ſo emptied the Land of its Treaſure. William Bird of the Cuſtom-Houſe, informed the Lord Treaſurer An. 1572, that it was reported, that ſome Merchants Strangers brought in Wares for 8000 or 10000 l. or more a Year, and did not make Employment for 200 l. of the ſame in the Commodities of the Realm. Which was contrary to the good Policy of the Realm, and a great damage to her Majeſty: For hereby the Queen's Revenues were ſunk, and the Lord Treaſurer was informed from the Cuſtomers, that the Queen's Officers had no ſuch Knowledge of the Strangers Goods and Wares brought from beyond Sea, as heretofore they uſed to have. Whereby her Highneſs Cuſtoms and Subſidies Outward were much decreaſed. And they prayed him to take Order, that the Merchant Strangers ſhould deliver (as heretofore they had done) a Bill or Content of all ſuch Goods and Merchandizes as they ſhould from time to time bring into the Port of London: whereby their Employments made, and their Bonds taken for the ſame, might the better be ſeen unto for her Majeſty's Service.

One John Fabian endeavours to be Broker to the Merchants Strangers.

That which gave a great Occaſion to theſe Matters againſt the Foreigners, was a Supplication made to the Lord Treaſurer by one John Fabian, a Citizen, in the Year 1571, that he might be conſtituted the Broker for Strangers Goods. He ſhewed in a long Paper, the Acceſs of Aliens and Strangers coming out of Foreign Realms and Countries into the Realm, and eſpecially London, where for the moſt part they made their Dwelling; that it had been now of late Years far greater than in any Age or Time heretofore paſt, and ſo yet continued. That their Numbers daily encreaſed in that meaſure that it ſurmounted all Memory, which ſaid Strangers for the moſt and greateſt part of them, uſed the Trade of Merchandize, but that they did not, nor would ſet on Work, as Brokers in the Sales and Buying of their Goods, any Engliſh or Freemen of the City, but only Foreigners and Strangers, and that for the moſt part ſuch as were of their proper Nation and native Country; to the great and unſpeakable Gains of themſelves, and Loſs and Hindrance of the Commonwealth of the City. Now Fabian ſupplicated for the Reformation hereof, that in conſideration of his Induſtry and Willingneſs, his Skill and Ability to do and execute the ſame, and for the Profit to redound thereby unto the Queen, the whole City, and the Freemen thereof, to grant unto him and his Aſſigns, to be the principal, ſole and only Broker for, and to all Merchants Strangers that ſhould bring in, or convey out of the Realm any Wares, Goods, or Merchandizes whatſoever, into, or out of the Port of London; for which he would pay certain ſums of Money in annual Rent, or ready Money: And finally, that he being the firſt Deviſer and Inventer of this Suit, might be firſt preferred in it.

They ſue for Brokers of their own.

But this the Strangers by no means liking of, endeavoured that they might have Brokers of their own, and one Stephen John, and Nichol de Franays, Italians, were nominated by them; the latter ſued to Acerbo and Spinola, two chief Italian Merchants, to be admitted by the Lord Treaſurer.

Orders for Employment made by the Treaſurer.

In the Year 1573, Orders were made by the Lord Treaſurer for the Employment of Money growing by Wares brought into the Realm by Strangers, upon Wares of the Realm to be carried outward, to avoid thereby the continual carrying and ſtealing out of the Realm our Gold and Silver; and that Employment to be within Six Months, &c.

The Denizons and Strangers endeavour for favour.

This Order, touching ſo hard upon all the Strangers, Denizons, as well as all others, awaked them to ſeek for ſome Remedy and Favour in this matter; which they did ſo vigorouſly, that it was a thing that depended many a Year after. The Denizons, they petitioned to be diſcharged of this Order, and that they ought to be ſo by a Statute of the Third of Henry VII. they urged that they might enjoy the ancient Privileges of the Laws and Cuſtoms of this Realm, and all the Grants of her Majeſty's Letters Patents, and other of her Anceſtors; and particularly the Limitations of the ancient Intercourſe between the Houſe of Burgundy and us. And further, they declared themſelves content to be bound in reaſonable Bonds, not to carry out of the Realm any Money, Plate or Gold. They ſhewed moreover, that in theſe preſent days they could not ſell the hundredth part of their Commodities but at Three or Four Months, Five and Six Months, and often Eight, and alſo at Twelve-months Day Payment, according to the Nature and Quality of the Merchandize; and a great many did not pay till Three or Four Months after the Day, and ſome, for want of Ability, paid not at all. That when there came a Glut of Merchandize, their ſaid Wares could not be ſold for lack of Vent. And for ſuch Wares as could not tarry, they gave very long days of Payment. That Commodities brought in by Strangers, ſometimes the moſt part of them were bought upon Credit beyond Sea, and to pay for the ſame, they muſt deliver their Money here received by Exchange to Engliſh Merchant Adventurers, and others, who do ſhip Cloth and other Commodities, to be paid beyond the Seas, or elſe pay here ſuch Bills of Exchange, as by their Creditors are directed for the Payment of the ſaid Merchandizes. That the Commodities coming from beyond the Seas is oftentimes the Return of the Commodities taken up likewiſe upon Credit here, and ſhipped over the Sea to be anſwered there with the Money of the ſaid Return brought in, &c.

The Low-Country Merchants Plea.

In the Year 1584. Andreas de Loo, and divers Strangers of the Low-Countries, and others, were Suitors to the Lord Treaſurer, to have this matter qualified according to the Law. They urged for themſelves, that at the Colloquy at Bruges by Dr. Wotton, Dr. Haddon and Dr. Aubrey, it was accorded, that no ſuch Servitude of Valuation of Merchandize, ſhould be upon the Low-Country Men; and that Bills of Exchange ſhould be counted for Employment. And that in the Year 1567. Haddon wrote a Letter to the Cuſtomers of London, to allow Bills of Exchange for Employment. They further ſhewed, that the Employment out of the Realm of Engliſh Commodities, was ſo great now by the Engliſh Merchants, that the Companies of the Merchant Adventurers, the Spaniſh Merchants, the Moſcovian Merchants, and the Eaſtland Merchants, were fain to ſtint themſelves, what every Merchant ſhould ſhip out of the Realm, according to the Antienty of Continuance, Place and Freedom; every body being ready to carry out more than could be bought. So as there lacked no Employment. And the whole Tranſportation by Strangers of their Commodities, was now taken out of their hands by Engliſhmens Trade and Importation; the falſe Suggeſtion of the lack thereof, being one of the Cauſes of making thoſe Orders.

The Advantages this Employment would bring to the Kingdom.

But Fabian before-mentioned, in the Year 1588. was very hard againſt the Strangers. He aſſerted, that at the Conference had with the Houſe of Burgundy at Burborough in Flanders, concerning the Intercourſe, not any Charter or Monument could be produced to impugn or prejudice this Action for Employment. And that the Parliament then at hand might, if any thing were wanting, make it ſtrong and in force. He urged the fruit it would bring. Firſt, the great Augmentations of the Queen's Cuſtoms. Secondly, the Vent of the Commodities of the Realm. Thirdly, the only ſtay of our Money and Bullion from Tranſportation; and the reducing and bringing back that which had been conveyed and carried out. Fourthly, the Let that the Realm ſhould not be indebted, as now it was, to foreign Nations, by bringing in and conſuming more of their Wares, than was carried away of our Commodities. Fifthly, it would yield a Rent to the Queen of good value, to be paid yearly, where and how the Lord Treaſurer ſhould appoint. Sixthly, it would diſcover other things worthy of underſtanding, not to be omitted, to ſerve the Lord Treaſurer, and the State; which without, it could not ſo come to light.

This the way to bring all the Trade from the Foreigners unto the Engliſh.

The ſaid Fabian ſtood now to be Surveyor upon the Statute of Employment; that is, to be privy to all Strangers Entries in the Cuſtom-houſe, and to the Sale of their foreign Wares, and the Employments made upon the ſame. He, beſides the Arguments already made uſe of, ſhewed moreover, that it would bring in all the Trade, outwards and inwards, unto our own Nation, and and draw it away from Merchants Strangers, that gat the whole Gain from us, if they refuſed to ſubmit themſelves to the Laws and Ordinances of our Land. For, as our Laws ſtood in old time, that Merchants could not make any Exchange of Money over the Sea from hence without the Queen's Licenſe; ſo then they muſt of neceſſity employ the Money of their Wares brought in and ſold, in our Commodities, or elſe to be charged to have imported the ſame out of the Realm, and never ſhould be able to deny it. Which Commodities of the Realm, when the Stranger could not tranſport as cheap as the Engliſh Merchant might, by reaſon of the high Cuſtoms he muſt pay, then would he leave the Trade to our own Men. And ſo by this means all Merchants Strangers would leave the Realm, being not able to uſe Exchange as they were wont to do, by delivering the ſame unto our Men under the true Valuation of our Standard; whereby they had impoveriſhed the Land a long time of many thouſand Pounds a Year, and alſo had moſt pitifully bitten our Merchants by the ſaid Change, Rechange, Intereſt and Uſury. In this Suit Fabian continued till the Year 1590. but whether ever granted, I know not.

The whole Tradeabroad in the hands of Strangers.

The main Matter that awakened theſe old Laws of Employment, was, that the whole Trade of Spain, Portugal, Flanders, Artois and Brabant was then in the Hands of the Low-Country Men, and of the French. The Popes Allom alſo conſigned to Philip Corſini. And they all made no Employment of the Wares brought in and ſold. And ſo were in danger of ſpoiling the Realm.

Envy and Ill Will to the Strangers.

By what is ſaid above it appears, that theſe Strangers were not without the Envy and Ill Will of the Engliſh, among whom they came to ſojourn. They grumbled, and ſo Fabian complained to the Lord Treaſurer, how that if any Commodity happened to be in requeſt, by and by the Stranger Leger gave Advice on the other ſide of the Sea. And if the Commodity were foreign, they had it here with the firſt, and enhanced the Price on the other ſide. And that by this means the whole Trade of Wares almoſt came into their hands, the Engliſh Merchants excluded, that were wont only in former times to be made rich thereby. But if the Commodity were of our own native Country, they ran upon it likewiſe, enhancing the Price here, and ſent it away, taking the firſt Market on the other ſide. That they enhanced their Commodities at their Wills and Pleaſures, to the Diſcommodity and Hindrance of the Commonwealth. That they bought and ſold among themſelves, to the Hindrance of Freemen. That they were wont to defraud the Queen of her Cuſtoms by their ſubtle Devices, &c. And about the Merchants Strangers Exchange, Peter Osborn, the Lord Treaſurer's Remembrancer, ſhewed what an Inconvenience that was to the Engliſh Nation. Which Objection he ſaid, all the Italians in the World, nor the Low-Country Men, ſhould ever be able to anſwer.

Manufactures ſet up by Foreigners diſpleaſe the Citizens.

This alſo appeared by the Diſpleaſure that was taken at the many uſeful Manufactures brought in and ſet up here in London, and other Places of the Realm, by the Strangers; pretending, the great Loſs the Queen ſuſtained in her Cuſtoms hereby, as well as other Diſprofits to the Subject. Concerning which, Thomas Smith, the Queen's Cuſtomer, wrote thus to the Lord Treaſurer, being required thereunto, 'That he had ſought out, as near as he could, the certainty of the Queen's Loſſes and Hindrances in her Cuſtoms inwards, by the late Increaſe of made Wares here, which were accuſtomed to be brought into this Realm, and anſwered her Highneſs Cuſtom and Subſidy for the ſame, at the leaſt to the Value of 1000 l. yearly; which did ariſe in theſe Commodities following, viz. ſtriped Canvas, ſtriped Sackcloth, tuft and plain Mocadoes, Norwich and Sandwich Grograms, Searges, Sayes, Draperies and Tapeſtries, and all kind of Fringes, and Laces of Gold, Silver and of Crewell, beſides Bays and Frizadoes. Of which Commodities in time paſt was very few, or none at all, made here. Furthermore, that he had learned, that there was a great number of Bays made in England at Sandwich, Norwich, Colcheſter, and Thetford: whereof many were ſpent there, and many were ſent for Portugal, Spain, and the Low-Countries. That he had alſo learned, that the number of Bays making here did much hinder and decay the making of Welſh, Cheſhire, and Mancheſter Cottons, and of other coarſe Cloths made in the North Parts, as Northern Cottons, Cardinal Whites, Northern Streittes, Northern Checks, and Peniſtones; and alſo of Pyndewhites and Playnes, made in the Weſt Country. That the Decay of the making of theſe Commodities, did not only hinder the Queen's Cuſtom outwards, but alſo a great number of the Poor, which were wont to be ſet on work by the ſame. For he had learned, that the Strangers ſet few Engliſh on work. And laſtly, that the making of Bays, Frizadoes, and ſuch like here, did much raiſe the Price of Wools and Fells in this Realm; whereby her Majeſty was much hindred in her Cuſtoms outward of the Staple.

Smith the Cuſtomer.

And that the Citizens ſtill ſtand alike ill affected towards theſe Strangers, appears from their late Endeavours to hinder the Naturalizing of them; which was much uſed in the Reign of the late King William; ſhewing to the Parliament the Inconvenience thereof, in a Paper, entitled,

REASONS humbly offered to the Right Honourable the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons in Parliament Aſſembled, againſt the paſſing of ſeveral Bills now depending in Parliament for Naturalizing of Aliens.

Naturalizing Aliens.

AS it hath been the Prudence of the Princes (Kings and Queens) of this Nation, always to take care to make a Diſtinction between natural born Subjects, and Aliens of other Kingdoms; and have never encouraged, nor indeed tolerated them in any thing further than that which might one way or other be for the Intereſt of their Native Subjects: So it has no leſs been their Care of the Great and Populous City of London, to preſerve the Trade thereof to the Native Freemen of the ſame, eſpecially and principally againſt the Incroachments of Aliens of other Kingdoms. Witneſs, the ancient Oath adminiſtred to every Freeman, who ſwears not to take the Child of an Alien Apprentice; which clearly points out to us the Miſchiefs they apprehended would thereby redound to the Trade of the ſaid City: And Witneſs alſo the ſeveral Tolls and Duties anciently and time out of mind laid upon the Goods of Aliens imported and exported out of the Port of London, called Scavage, Package, Balliage and Porterage; and for weighing of Goods and Merchandizes, called Tronage; and other things, which in Proceſs of Time are become conſiderable Revenues of the ſaid City; which ſaid Duties, amongſt other things, are as a Security appropriated by a late Act of Parliament for Payment of the perpetual Intereſt of the Orphans Debts; and other Part thereof doth help to maintain the Charge, and ſupport the Magiſtracy and Grandeur of the ſaid City. Now by the Naturalizing of Aliens, the Revenue of the City would be greatly leſſened, if not totally loſt, and the City thereby deprived of one principal Means of bearing the Charge, and ſupporting the Grandeur and Magnificence thereof. There are ſeveral other Inſtances to be given, to prove that the Naturalization of Aliens is greatly prejudicial to the Trade of the ſaid City, and publick Good of the Nation in general; ſome of which are ſet out in the Statute of 1 Hen. VII. Cap. 2. in theſe Words, (viz.)

Whereas in Times paſt divers Grants have been made by King Edward, as well by his Letters Patents as by Acts of Parliament, to divers Merchants Strangers, born out of this Realm, to be Denizens, whereby they have and enjoy ſuch Freedoms and Liberties as do Denizens born within the ſaid Realm, as well in Abatement of their Cuſtom which they ſhould bear as if they were no Denizens, as in buying and ſelling of their Merchandize to their great Avail and Lucre, and oft-times ſuffer other Strangers, not Denizens, deceitfully to ſhip and carry great and notable Subſtance of Merchandize in their Names, by which the ſaid Goods be free of Cuſtom, in likewiſe as if they were the Goods of a Denizen, where of Right they ought to pay Cuſtom as the Goods of Strangers, by the which they be greatly advanced in Riches and Honour; and after they be ſo enriched, for the moſt part they convey themſelves with their ſaid Goods into their own Countries, wherein they be naturally born, to the great impoveriſhing of this Realm, and to the great Hurt and Defraud of the King's Highneſs in Payment of his Cuſtoms: Wherefore it is Enacted, Eſtabliſhed and Ordained, by the Advice of the Lords Spiritual, &c. That any Perſon hereafter to be made Denizen, ſhall pay for his Merchandize like Cuſtom and Subſidy as he ought or ſhould pay, before that he were made Denizen; any Letters Patents, or other Ordinances by Parliament or otherwiſe notwithſtanding.

The Statutes of 11 Hen. VII. Cap. 14. and 22 Hen. VIII. Cap. 8. are both to the ſame purpoſe. And during the Reigns of Edward VI. Queen Mary, and Queen Elizabeth, few or none were Naturalized. And in all the Reigns of King James I. and King Charles I. not above ten Aliens Merchants were Naturalized, and thoſe ſuch as by long abode in England had merited that Kindneſs of the Nation; and then it was rare to hear of an Engliſh Merchant that failed, ſo that the Clothiers grew rich, and the Clothing was in great Requeſt abroad. Beſides which,

This Favour of Naturalizing Aliens is ruinous to the Engliſh Merchants Trade, by Commiſſion, which they enjoyed plentifully before theſe Naturalizations, which theſe naturalized Aliens now enjoyed. The Engliſh had Factories ſettled in all Countries, whereby they governed the Trade of the World; and theſe Engliſh Factors were great Incouragers of our Manufactures, and brought a great Addition to the Capital Stock of the Kingdom, by the great Eſtates they arrived to, and brought home. But ſince theſe particular Naturalizations of Merchants Aliens, our Factories in France, the Netherlands, Portugal, Hamburgh, and other near Countries, are ruined and enjoyed by Aliens.

By the ſecond Rule in the Book of Rates, annexed to the Act of Tunnage and Poundage, Goods imported having paid Cuſtom, and again exported by Engliſh in Twelve Months, and Aliens in Nine Months, draw back from his Majeſty half the Cuſtoms paid by them on the Importation, and in ſome Caſes more than half: Which Rule was deſigned to give the Engliſh Merchant three Months longer time for a Market for their Goods in England than Aliens had, and yet ſaved to them the Benefit of the Draw-back of half the Cuſtom, in caſe they miſſed of a Market here, and were neceſſitated to ſend them abroad for a foreign Market. Which diſcriminating Advantage will be loſt to the Engliſh, when Aliens being Naturalized ſhall thereby have the ſame Priviledge.

And (among other things) it is not to be forgotten, how our ancient native Manufactures are ſlighted and neglected, by reaſon of the many Aliens being Naturalized and ſettled among us, have introduced foreign Faſhions and Inventions, to the Ruin of the honeſt Engliſh Handicrafts Tradeſman, whoſe Manufactures thereby become a Drug, which would not be, were Aliens not Naturalized: For by the Statute of 32 Hen. VIII. Cap. 16. an Alien Artificer is diſabled from ſettling among us, and can't ſo much as take the Leaſe of an Houſe in England to drive his Trade in.

See The Caſe of Jeuens and Harridge. Part 1. of Sanderſon's Reports. Folio primo. Expreſs in the Point.

Upon the whole matter, it ſhould ſeem highly conſonant to Reaſon, for all Engliſh Men, Lovers of their Country, and eſpecially for this High Court of Parliament, to take care to preſerve the Revenue and Trade of the Great and Populous City of London, to the Native Freemen thereof, for the Benefit of themſelves and their Succeſſors, by preventing the future Naturalization of Aliens: Or if any hereafter, for weighty Reaſons, be Naturalized, that it may be under a Proviſo, That they pay a greater Cuſtom to his Majeſty and his Succeſſors, for the Goods and Merchandizes they ſhall import or export, than his Majeſty's Native Subjects; and may pay all City, Town and Port Tolls and Duties payable before by any Aliens. And hereby will Trade be by the native Engliſh carried on in an equal Ballance with Aliens, the Cuſtoms (being the publick Revenue of the Nation for guarding the Seas) increaſed; the honeſt Engliſh Handicrafts Men encouraged; the native Manufactures brought again into requeſt; the ancient Trade by Commiſſion regained; the Number of Engliſh Factors abroad increaſed; the younger Sons of the Engliſh Gentry preferred; the Freemen and Members of this great Metropolis enriched, and the Revenue thereof, for Payment of the Orphans Debts, and ſupporting the Magiſtracy and Government thereof, preſerved; and generally, the Good of all his Majeſty's Subjects advanced.

BEING thus entred into Diſcourſe of the Strangers inhabiting London, I ſhall here take occaſion to ſubjoin ſeveral other Matters, giving a more particular Account of them, as well as I can gather it up.

Strangers and Foreigners

J. S.

Beſides the Freemen Inhabitants of this City, there are likewiſe a great Number of Strangers and Foreigners, that have choſen here to fix their Habitations. And they are of two ſorts; either ſuch as are Natives of England, and come of Engliſh Extraction, but not free of the City, nor of any of the Corporations; or ſuch who themſelves, or whoſe Anceſtors came from other Parts and Dominions. Theſe latter, making ſo conſiderable a Part of the City, both for Number and Wealth, may juſtly fall under ſome Cognizance in this Place.

Italian, Spaniſh, French, Flemings.

Many of theſe came antiently here, (beſides thoſe of Calais and the Parts adjacent, when they were loſt) eſpecially Italians and Genoeſes, and French and Flemings, upon the account of Trade: But in the Days of King Edward VI. and Queen Elizabeth, for Religion and Trade too; and they chiefly from the Low Countries, and ſome Italians, French and Spaniſh. For theſe Nations alſo had received the Goſpel. And becauſe I have ſeveral things to relate of theſe Foreigners, I ſhall digeſt what I have to ſay of them under ſome Particulars. As, Firſt, the Places where they generally fixed themſelves. Secondly, their Occupations. Thirdly, their Numbers. And, Fourthly, the Reception and Entertainment they met with among the Citizens.

The Places and Streets where they dwelt.

They choſe to live by one another, and conſorted as much together as they could. And the Streets and Places where they chiefly inhabited, were either in the Suburbs, or in Priviledged Places. As St. Martins le Grand, Black Friars, Clerkenwel, Turnmil-ſtreet, St. John's-ſtreet, High Holborn, the Dutchy of Lancaſter without Temple-Bar, St. Katharines, Holywel, Holywel-ſtreet, Norton Folgate, Shoreditch, Hoxton, White-chappel, Wapping, and Southwark. In the Liberties of the ſaid St. Katharines is a Place called now Hangmans Gains, by a ſtrange Corruption for Hammes and Guynes, where the poor Trades People of Hammes and Guynes were allotted to dwell, after Calais and thoſe Places were taken from the Engliſh.

Italian Merchants.

For the Italian Merchants, whom the Engliſh Citizens could not well brook for their great Wealth, which they got here by their rich Silks and Damasks which they brought over: there were of them Florentines, Luccaſſes, Venetians, Genoeſes, &c. and they chiefly reſided in Broad-ſtreet Ward, in St. Bartholomew's near the Exchange, and Benet Fink.

Trades of the Foreigners.

As for their Trades and Occupations, ſome of them followed the Calling of Merchants, others were Jewellers, Brokers, Weavers, Taylors, Shoemakers, Stone-cutters, Hatband-makers, Potters, Painters, Schoolmaſters, Phyſicians, Surgeons, Joyners, Butchers. And many were of no Trades at all, but lived of what they brought over with them. By theſe Foreigners divers Manufactures were ſet up in England. But the Queen thereby loſt in her Cuſtoms.

Manufacture of Bays.

The Strangers of the Low Countries brought in the making of Bays, that hath proved ſuch an advantageous Commodity for our Merchants to tranſport: but theſe were chiefly made at Norwich and Colcheſter, and brought up to London. And they were made ſo well, and ſo ſtrictly examined every Piece, that they carried a Reputation throughout the World. At Norwich there were eighteen Perſons appointed on purpoſe for the Search, Sealing and Meaſuring of the Baytre; as the Maior and Aldermen of Norwich wrote to the Lord Treaſurer. Whereby their Commodity held ſuch Credit and Eſtimation, that they were vendible both in this Realm and in many Countries beyond the Seas, to the Benefit of the Queen's Cuſtoms, and the Relief of the poor Strangers, the Workers thereof, with many of the Engliſh Nation. The Manner and Order of their Search and Sealing was remarkable, as they ſent it up Anno 1578, to London, in a Writing to this Tenor:

The Order of ſearching them.

Three Governors.

'Firſt, There been three Governors which overſee the Woolls, leſt any Lambes Wooll be occupied: And they alſo viſit the Racks in eche Howſe, that it be of equal Length, to warp upon, and their Slays to be accordingly. And they alſo renew their Stamps ſo often as nede requireth.

Two Serchers.

'There been two Serchers, by the name of Prynters, which do twice in the Week viſit eche Baye-Wevers Howſe, to view their Warps; and whether their Slays be full of Threds or not. And if they be found as they ought to be, then they ſet a Seal upon yt of Allowance; otherwiſe it is not received for a Baye, but is converted to a Blanket, and is finable. Alſo eche Wever is bound to make th' Owners Mark upon the Baye. Moreover, if Threds do breke in the Weving, and not tied again to a certain nombre, that is finable alſo.

Firſt Houſe, nine Serchers.

'After they come from the Lome, they are brought as they be, to the firſt Howſe called the Rawe Perſe. Wher there belong to that Serch nine Perſons, that view eche Baye for the true Workmanſhip of the Wever, and paſſeth undre Seal, and his Default, if eny be, is ſet upon the Seal, and is finable according to the Fault. And th' Owners Mark, and the Wevers Mark been ſown up ſo cloſe, that many times the Owner geveth Sentence upon his own Baye to him unknown, to his own Loſs. But this is a general Rule, the Workman that maketh the Fault of Workmanſhip payeth the Fyne.

Fuller.

'From thence they go to the Scowring and Fulling; and the Fuller is to ſtamp a Lead with his Mark thereupon, to th' Entent that if any Fault be in his Office, he doth allow the Owner the Fyne that ſhall be ſet upon that Default.

Rower.

'From the Fuller to the Sherman, called the Rower, who in like manner by a Mark or Letter is known, and is t' aunſwer his Default, if eny be made, to th' Owner, after it be found and judged by the Serchers.

The ſecond Houſe called the High Perſe.

‘ From the Fuller they be brought to the ſecond Howſe called the High Perſe, where be alſo nine Serchers, there to have the full Allowance according to the Goodneſs of the Baye, whether it be an whole Caſtle, a Lyon, or a Sword; for theſe been the differencies of Seals, whereby their Goodneſs are known, that eny Perſon of Diſcretion may buy them by theis Marks, and by one other addition which is uſed if they want full Goodneſs or worthyneſs of either of their Seals; then do they notwithſtanding carry the Seal with a difference by a Corner of the Baye cut, whereby it is known not to be a full Caſtle, Lyon, or Sword, and bereth Price accordingly. The manner of Serche is: Eche Baye with his Marke and Leads paſſed at th’ other Serche, is wound up cloſe and ſowed together, to that end it may not be known what is paſſed before, but to give the right Judgment as they fynd it then.

Nine Serchers.

‘ And when the Serchers do agree of the Goodneſs, and fynd the Baye not worthy of the beſt Lead, which eche Man doth covet, the Officer of the Baytre goeth out to th’ Owner, who waiteth for his Baye, and declares what is found, before it be ſtamped: But if the Owner thinketh his Baye to be better, he doth appeal to another Company called Betrackers, which be ſeven of them, that geve their Attendance twice in the Week, Tueſday and Friday, and as they fynd it he muſt ſtand contented, tho’ it be worſe than the firſt Men did allow. In this Serche there been certain Leads ſet upon the Lyſte of the Baye, called Over-Leads, t’ admoniſh the Buyer of every Fault, whether it be in the Fuller or Rowar, and hath for every ſuch Lead a quarter of a Flemiſh Ell allowed. And beſides, in this Serche great Corrections are uſed, as the Fault is found; ſome th’ Lyſtes be rent off; ſome cut aſondre in five Parts, ſome leſs, ſome more; whereby the Truth of every Baye is eſpied and known, and fyned beſides, and th’ Eſtimation of them preſerved.

Three Perſons for meaſuring.

‘ Then the Bayes be brought to the Thred Howſe, called the Sealing Howſe, where there do attend four Days in th’ Weke three Perſons that be ſworn Meaſurers, th’ one called by the Name of Meter, th’ other two been Controullers, and they receive the Bayes a Day before they do meaſure them, to that end that if the Wynde have ſtrayned them being on the Rame, then they may reſt, and gather home again: Foraſmuch as it is a tyche Commodytye to meaſure. And they do fold them, and lay them in redyneſs to the Meters Hands, who uſe to meſure them with a Flemiſh Awne or Ell, as they did in Flaunders. And if th’ Owner doth miſlike of the Meaſure of his Baye, as indeed he ought to be of good Skyll, that ſhuld be a Meaſurer of Bayes, foraſmuche as there is no ynche allowed, but ſtrictly from a Skotch in their Meaſure; then may the Owner appeal to the Comptrollers, and then the Meaſure by them is to ſtand and bear Warrant or Prynt by Seal.

Sale Hall.

‘ And from thence to the fourth Houſe, called the Sale Hall, which is uſed three Days in the Week, viz. Monday, Wedneſday and Friday, if it be not Holidays. And all other Commodities newly invented, have the like Carefulneſs in their making and ſerche, before they paſs.

Manufacture of Gallypots.

To this Manufacture of Bayes ſet up by the Strangers at Norwich, I add another Manufacture, viz. making of Gallypots, ſet up there alſo Anno 1567, by Jaſper Andries and Jacob Janſon, Potters, come away from Antwerp, to avoid the Perſecution there. And theſe were for the moſt part the Trades and Occupations of the Strangers that ſeated themſelves in London or elſewhere.

Merchant Strangers.

But a great number of thoſe in London were Merchants. Over whoſe Goods and Traffic it was thought by ſome, that a more ſtrict Eye ſhould be had, as not employing in the Engliſh Manufactures that Money which they gained by their Trade here; but returning the ſaid Monies into foreign Parts. One John Fabian therefore (partly for his own Ends) in the Year 1571, put up a Supplication to the Lord Treaſurer, that he might be conſtituted the Broker for Strangers Goods, in a long Paper, ſhewing in the beginning the Acceſs of Aliens and Srrangers, coming out of foreign Realm and Countries into this Realm, and eſpecially to London, whereof ſome Account is given before.

The Number of the Strangers.

The Numbers of theſe Srrangers that came over hither, eſpecially in the Reign of Queen Elizabeth, were conſiderably great. Inſomuch that there were three Churches appointed for them, (though all ſeemed to be ſheltred under the Charter of King Edward VI. for the Strangers free Exerciſe of their Religion) viz. a Church for them that came out of Flanders and the Low-Countries; another for ſuch as came from the Parts of France and Artois; and a third for Italians; and I may add, a fourth for Spaniards: beſides, many of theſe Foreigners reſorted to the Engliſh Churches; but many there were that reſorted to no Church at all.

Their Churches.

Inquiſitions taken of them often, by Order above.

Of theſe Strangers the State being ſuſpicious, as coming from the King of Spain's Dominions, who had conceived malicious and deſtructive Deſigns againſt the Queen and her Kingdom; ſhe did from time to time appoint ſome in every Ward to go from Houſe to Houſe to take their Names, their Qualities, their Callings, and their Churches; and Certificates were ſent up according to theſe Inquiſitions taken. Thus, about the Year 1566, the Names were taken of all the Members of the Dutch Church, and the Number of them, which was 310, among which was Gherardt Ver (Van) Strype, my Anceſtor, Anno 1567. By another Account taken of the Strangers, there appeared to be of them 2730, whereof Dutch 2030, French 428, Burgoinians 44, Italians 140, Spaniards and Portugueſe 45, Scots 40, Danes 2, Liegiois 1. Again, in the Year 1580, or thereabouts, the Certificates of the Strangers in the ſeveral Wards and Precincts about the City of London ſtood thus:

Men	1391,	Of which	Denizons	245,
Women	965,		Mere Strangers	1119.
Children	85,

And of theſe, of the	Dutch	Churches	938,
	French		689,
	Italian		050,
	Engliſh		499,
	No.		190,
			2366,
Beſides Perſons not certified			76,
		In all	2445.

The Certificate of them in the Out-Liberties of the City thus:

Men	662,	Of which	Denizons	463,
Women	279,		Mere Strangers	1462.
Children	661,

And of theſe, of the	Dutch	Churches	1364,
	French		1149,
	Italian		66,
	Engliſh		1043,
	No.		287,
			3909,
Beſides Perſons not certified			0138,
		In all	4047.

Anno 1593, May the 4th, a Compleat Liſt was brought in of the Number of Strangers, with the Children and Servants, according to Certificates made by every ſeveral Ward of London, viz.

Strangers 1970, } Where- { Denizons 267,
Their Children 2062, } of { No
Women Servants 1227, } { Denizons 737.
Engliſh-born Servants kept by Strangers 959,
Engliſh-born, ſet on Work by Strangers 534.

By another Book of the Numbers of Strangers taken for the ſame Year 1593, they are reckoned to amount to 5259, taking in, I ſuppoſe, all within the Liberties alſo, and without. Thence were deducted 959 Engliſh Servants, and the Sum was reduced to 4300; to which were alſo ſubjoyned all the Engliſh that were ſet on work by the Srrangers, which were made to amount in the whole to 1493.

The Family of Houblon and Lethieulier.

Among the Perſons named in a Liſt of the Year 1576, are John Houblowe, and Gyllam Tulyer mentioned. And in another are the Names of John Hubland, and Peter Hubland, miſwrit in both Places, I make no doubt, by the Engliſh Scribes. And in an authentic Catalogue, I have ſeen of ſuch French as fled to Rye in Suſſex upon that inhumane Maſſacre of Proteſtants in France, Anno. 1572; there be the Names of Le Tellier, and Tellier, one a Merchant, another a Miniſter, and another a Brazier of Diep. Some of theſe very probably were the Anceſtors of thoſe eminent Merchants and Citizens bearing the Name of Houblon and Lethieulier, which at this preſent flouriſh here in Wealth and Reputation; and ſome of them, ſuch as have, and do partake of the Government of this City, as well as other Places of Honour and Truſt.

The Citizens not over kind to the Strangers.

And having related thus much of the Foreigners that tranſplanted themſelves from abroad into this Place, I ſhall add ſomething further of the Manner of their Reception and Entertainment among the Citizens. Many whereof (eſpecially the more ordinary ſort) had no great love for them, and were glad of an opportunity of oppreſſing them, the Engliſh Nature being ſomewhat inhoſpitable to Strangers, jealous of their Induſtry, and ſuſpecting them to get their Trade away from them.

The Effect of a Proclamation againſt them.

Anno 1563, July 30, a Proclamation came out againſt Strangers: and divers Frenchmen, Denizons and others, were ſeized, it may be, upon the Falſeneſs and Treachery of the French to the Engliſh at New-Haven. But to ſee how ready the Citizens were to take this Opportunity to expreſs their Diſguſt againſt Foreigners; Sir Thomas Lodge, Lord Maior, wrote to the Privy Council, that the People, a great Number of them, were very fervent, and a great Number very unquiet, and proceeded, without Order, in the execution of the ſaid Proclamation; ſo that he thought it good, as he wrote, to give their Honours Intelligence thereof, beſeeching their further Order and Pleaſure herein; for that the ſame Proclamation was not orderly publiſhed, and the People very heady in uſing the Liberty of the ſame.

Execution of Laws againſt Aliens.

The poor Strangers not only in London, but all England over, as they were offenſive to the ordinary ſort of People, as Mechanics and ſuch like, ſo they were ſought as a Prey by others, to make a Benefit of them. Thus one Raſe Lane, a projecting Man, in the Year 1583, made this motion to the Lord Treaſurer, that conſidering, by reaſon of the Civil Wars in the Parts beyond Seas, numbers of Strangers made their Habitations within this Realm, and that in ſuch great Multitudes, as was to the great Annoyance of homeward Artizans and Subjects, both through the Exerciſe of Engliſh Trades, and by not performing for their Parts, that which the Laws of this Land did enjoyn for the benefit of the Common-weal; as alſo through the encreaſe of the Prices of Victuals, raiſing the Rents of Tenements, and encreaſing of Sickneſs by their over peſtering of ſmall Rooms with many of them; beſides other like Inconveniences, meet either to be refrained, or elſe at the leaſt, in ſome meaſure to be reſtrained by new Proviſions, meeting with the Miſchief of ſuch new Accidents: Therefore that her Majeſty would be pleaſed to grant him the executing ſuch Laws as were made againſt Aliens, with the Benefit of the Penalties thereof, and Authority yearly to Survey them, taking their Appearances, and for the Regiſtring of every of their Names to take 4 d. with a like Authority to take yearly Bonds to her Majeſty's Uſe (and that only of ſuch of them as have already broken the Laws) not to offend in the like hereafter, and to diſpenſe with what is paſt. This, if it had paſt according to the Petitioner's Deſire, would (it is like) have given occaſion of continual vexation to the Strangers.

The Apprentices deſign an Inſurrection againſt the Strangers.

Three Years after, viz. 1586, the Apprentices of London did conſpire an Inſurrection in the City againſt the French and Dutch; but eſpecially againſt the French. A thing as like unto Evil May-day as could be deviſed in all manner of Circumſtances, there wanted nothing but Execution. Several of theſe were taken all under 21 Years of Age. They were of the Myſtery of the Plaiſterers, and were committed to Newgate upon the Queen and Councils Commandment; and the Recorder, and other Magiſtrates of the City, were in ſearch for the principal Captain. For the effecting this, they had been working one whole Day or two, after in Whitehall and at Weſtminſter, (where they ſuſpected him to be) and at his coming home they hoped to have him, having ſet a ſtanding Watch armed from Nine at Night until Seven in the Morning; and meant to continue the ſame ſo long as it ſhould be thought convenient by the Lord Treaſurer, and other of the Lords, as the Recorder ſignified to them.

Complaint againſt Retailing Strangers.

Again, in the Year 1592, the Outlandiſh Strangers that dealt in Retail Trades, were greatly diſguſted by the Engliſh Shopkeepers and Freemen of London, as ſpoiling their Trades; and they made Complaint, and drew up Allegations againſt retailing Strangers, in order to the getting of an Act of Parliament againſt their retailing. They alledged, that the retailing of foreign Commodities by Strangers cauſed the Decay of Engliſh Retailers, in Ability, Number and Trade. For Example, the Engliſh Retailers of Linnen Cloth in London were to the Number of 160 or thereabouts, but now they were but 67, and the Strangers where encreaſed double in that Trade. And whereas, within ſeven Years paſt, one Engliſh Retailer of Linnen Cloth in London, uttered yearly in Lawnes and Cambricks to the value of 1400 l. now the beſt of them uttered not in that ſort of Ware yearly 200 l. and ſo of the reſt, though much more of thoſe Wares were uttered at that Day than was wont to be. So that what the Engliſh Retailer loſt, the retailing Strangers got. They alledged further, that the Strangers Retailers had more Liberty than the Engliſh Retailers, in that they retailed in Cities, Towns Corporate, and the Suburbs of Cities and other exempt Places; which Engliſh Retailers were prohibited by a Law to do, viz. the Statute of 1 & 2 Phil. & Mar. And that ſome Strangers were both Merchants and Retailers. They alledged, that the Strangers Retailers hindred the Queen's Subſidies and Cuſtomes, in living obſcurely as poor Retailers in ſhew; and ſo paid the Queen for Subſidy but 4 d. a Poll; and in not being meer Merchant, whereby they ſhould pay double Cuſtoms and Subſidies. They alledged, that they enhaunced the Prices of Wares, by ſecret combining with Merchants beyond the Seas, Wares being then by one half dearer than they were before they retailed. They alledged, that they were dangerous to the State, in reſpect of their exceeding Wealth, by uſing two or three ſeveral Trades; in reſpect of their great Numbers planted in the chiefeſt Cities and Coaſt Towns of this Land; in reſpect of their readineſs to fly from us upon report of Danger; and in reſpect that many of them were of no Church or apparent Profeſſion. Laſtly, they alledged, that they kept a Commonwealth among themſelves, for that they had Men of all Trades among themſelves, and they would not teach any of our People their Trades, nor bring up any Children of our Nation in their Trade under them. Upon theſe Reaſons they endeavoured to get an Act of Parliament againſt them.

Their Plea.

The Foreigners on the other ſide argued for themſelves, that ſuch an Act was againſt Charity, in that it debarred Strangers from their Livings; that the Strangers Retailers ſold Wares better cheap than the Engliſh Retailers did; that it was againſt the Freedom of their Denizations; that it was againſt the Queen's Benefit, in that Strangers paid double Cuſtoms and Subſidies; that they had done much good to divers Cities and Towns within this Realm; and laſtly, that if they were reſtrained from retailing, the Engliſh Retailers would raiſe the Prices among themſelves. The Number of theſe Strangers within London and the Liberties (according to the aboveſaid Complaint againſt them) were, reckoning both Denizons, and no Denizons, 1062.

The Bill againſt the Aliens trading by Retail brought into Parliament.

This Bill againſt Aliens ſelling by way of Retail, was brought into the Parliament An. Eliz. 35 1593. and Counſil was held for the Strangers, and for the City againſt them. Sir John Wolley, (Secretary for the Latin Tongue to the Queen) was againſt the Bill, and ſaid in the Houſe, ‘That ſuch a Reſtraint upon Strangers would be ill for London it ſelf; for the Riches and Renown of the City came by the entertaining of Strangers, and giving Liberty unto them. That Antwerp and Venice could never have been ſo rich and famous but by entertaining of Strangers; and by that means had gained all the Intercourſe of the World.

Sir Walter Raleigh's Speech againſt them.

But Sir Walter Raleigh took the other Side, and ſpake againſt the Strangers, and that with great Bitterneſs, and ſaid to this Tenor, ‘That whereas it was pretended that it was againſt Charity, againſt Honour, and againſt Profit to expel them; in my Opinion, ſaid he, it is no Matter of Charity to relieve them, for firſt, ſuch as fly hither have forſaken their own King. Our Religion is no Pretext for them; for we have no Dutchmen here, but ſuch as come from thoſe Princes where the Goſpel is preached, &c. As for Honour, it is Honour to uſe Strangers as we be uſed by them. But it is a Lightneſs in a Commonwealth, yea, a Baſeneſs in a Nation, to give a Nation a Liberty, which we cannot receive again. In Antwerp, where our Intercourſe was moſt, we were never ſuffered to have a Tayler or a Shoemaker to dwell there. Nay, at Milain, where there are Three Hundred Pound Engliſhmen, they cannot have ſo much as a Barber among them. And then as for Profit, they are all of the Houſe of Almaine, * who pay nothing; yet eat our Profits, and ſupplant our own Nations, &c. And therefore he ſaw no reaſon ſo much Reſpect ſhould be given unto them. And ſo he concluded, that he ſaw no matter of Honour, no matter of Charity, no matter of Profit, in relieving of them.

* Stilyard.

A Reflection upon this Speech.

Let me add the Obſervation that the Reverend Dr. Kennet, in a late Tract of his, makes upon this Speech of Sir Walter Raleigh: ‘This was a ſevere Speech againſt the poor foreign Strangers, delivered by him, who could not foreſee his own Misfortunes of being firſt ruined in a Voyage to foreign Parts; and after his Return, of being hunted to Death by a foreign Miniſter.

Sir Robert Cecil ſpeaks in favour of them.

But Sir Robert Cecil, (one of the Secretaries of State) a Man of a better Spirit, by his Wiſdom and Temper, took off this Invective. Who ſpake after this ſort, ‘That he could not but own it a matter of Charity to relieve Strangers, and eſpecially ſuch as do not grieve our Eyes. And as to the Point of Honour, this Entertainment of them had brought great Honour to our Kingdom, in that it was accounted the Refuge of diſtreſſed Nations. For our Arms have been open to them, to caſt themſelves into our Boſoms. And yet, (added he, to moderate matters) our Charity muſt not hinder or injure our ſelves. That as the Bill was, it was not ſufficient for this Purpoſe.——That for his own Conſcience, if the Queſtion were then made, he was not reſolved to give his Voice. That if it were not for the Gravity of the Houſe, nor for the Credit of the Committees to have it rejected upon the ſudden; that as it was then, it was not fit to paſs, in his Credit. He ſaw, the Citizens themſelves would be well aſſenting unto the reforming of the ſame. For that Mr. Recorder yeſterday ſpeaking with them for the City, yet with good regard thought the Bill might receive great moderation.’ And upon this Motion and Diſcourſe of Cecil, the Houſe was well pleaſed to ſtay the Bill, and commit it again to the former Committee. The Bill afterwards paſs'd the Houſe of Commons with a good Majority; but went no further before the Diſſolution: When the Strangers here reſiding, were left in Poſſeſſion of all Indulgence that the Laws of the Kingdom did allow, and the Laws of Hoſpitality could beſtow upon them.

A Roll to be kept of all Strangers.

Again, Anno 1593, did one Edward Dymock ſue for a View of Aliens and Strangers throughout the Realm; and to keep a Roll and a Book of the Names and Numbers of them. The like Suit did Sir Thomas Mildmay make: Petitioning for the erecting an Office to keep a Regiſter yearly of the Names, Ages, Abilities of Body, Countries, Callings, Arts, Sciences, Places of Habitation, Cauſes of Repair hither, and Times of Departure hence, of all Foreigners and Strangers, now being and inhabiting within the Realm; and of all others that ſhould from time to time come into the Realm to inhabit, or paſs out of the ſame; allowing 6 d. for every Poll at their firſt Entry into the Regiſter, and yearly after 4 d. of ſuch as were Houſholders, and 2 d. for Children and Servants; and 4 d. for every one that ſhould depart the Realm.

Objections againſt the Strangers.

It was commonly urged againſt the Strangers, that a greater Number might repair hither, than with good Policy were fit to be endured. That very many might juſtly be ſuppoſed to reſort hither, not ſo much out of Zeal to Religion, or Love to the Queen, as to practiſe againſt her, and her State, and to rob the Engliſh of their Commodities, to enrich themſelves. That they placing themſelves in London, Norwich, Canterbury, or in Port-Towns, as Southampton, Sandwich, Colcheſter, might be more ready to do Miſchief, or lie fitteſt to engroſs our Commodities into their Hands, and tranſport the ſame to their own private Benefit. That the Artiſans and mechanical Perſons might be impoveriſhed by the great multitude of Strangers being of their Trades and Faculties. That there were many rich Men among them, that lived obſcurely, to benefit themſelves by Uſury and Exchange of Money, without doing good to the Commonwealth. That many having gotten into their Hands great Riches and Treaſure, by engroſſing our Commodities, ſuddenly departed the Realm; and many times ſtole away with other Mens Goods, without any Notice given thereof; and that under colour of Merchandize and Religion, many Intelligencers and Spies adventured to come hither. Theſe were ſome of the Reaſons which Sir Thomas Mildmay abovementioned uſed to perſuade the Queen to grant a Regiſter.

Others of the wiſer ſort, favour them.

But the wiſer and better ſort were rather for cheriſhing theſe Strangers, as well perceiving what Advantages they brought to the Nation, both for their Callings and Examples of Thrift and Diligence, as alſo by rendring the Queen's Enemy weaker by the diſpeopling his Countries, and abating of his Trade and Traffic. They had alſo a religious Compaſſion for ſuch as left their own Country and Friends, and plentiful Living, (as moſt of them did) for the ſake of God and Truth. Of this Temper and Judgment was the wiſe Lord Treaſurer Burghley. For when in the Year 1588, great Labour was uſed to make Strangers employ their Monies received for foreign Goods and Commodities, in other home Commodities to be tranſported abroad, and not by Exchange; he was againſt urging it too rigorouſly, becauſe he ſaw it would drive away Strangers, which in thoſe Days ought, as he ſaid, rather to be cheriſhed than hardly dealt withal, or exacted upon.

They lend the Queen Money 1588.

Nor were they backward to aſſiſt the Queen according to their Ability, and to do as other Subjects did. Thus in that Critical year 1588, there being a Loan charged by the Queen upon the City, the Companies and Myſteries of London ſubſcribed each diſtinctly. Then did the Strangers alſo ſubſcribe among themſelves the Sum of 4900 l. Their Names, and the Sums they ſubſcribed, were as follows.

Riots made againſt the Strangers in Southwark.

In the Year 1595, the poor Tradeſmen made a Riot upon the Strangers in Southwark, and other Parts of the City of London; whereupon was a Preſentment of the great Inqueſt for the ſaid Borough, concerning the outragious Tumult and Diſorder unjuſtly committed there upon Thurſday, June 12. 1595, and the Leaders were puniſhed, and alſo the chief Offenders.

And in other Parts of the Liberties.

The like Tumults began at the ſame time within the Liberties (as they are called) where ſuch Strangers commonly harboured. And upon the Complaint of the Elders of the Dutch and French Churches, Sir John Spencer, Lord Maior, committed ſome young Rioters to the Counter. And when ſome of their Fellow-Apprentices and Servants gathered in a Body, and attempted to break open the Counter, and deliver the Priſoners, the Maior went out in Perſon, and took twenty, or more of them, and committed all to ſafe Cuſtody; and promiſed to proceed againſt them with all Severity, as he ſignified in a Letter to the Lord Keeper, dated 12th of June, 1595.

The State of the French Refugees.

The State of the poor French Proteſtant Refugees Anno 1687, was this. Their Numbers that were relieved by a Brief that Year, were 15500 Perſons; whereof 13500 were in and about London, and 2000 in ſeveral Sea-port Towns. Of theſe were 140 Families of Perſons of Quality; 183 Miniſters with their Families; 144 Families of Lawyers, Phyſicians, Merchants and Citizens; the reſt Artificers, Husbandmen, &c. And conſiderable Numbers of them more were ſtill at that time coming over. The Collection that was made for them in London, and other Parts of the Nation in the aboveſaid Year 1687, amounted to 40000 l. paid into the Chamber of London; and not long after 2000 l. more was paid in. Fifteen French Churches, or convenient Places for the Worſhip of God, were erected by means of this Collection; viz. three in London, and twelve in ſeveral Counties; beſides thoſe great Numbers before-mentioned, relieved thereby.

The Chriſtian Hoſpitality of King Charles II. towards theſe Refugees, in the Reception of them ſome Years before, appears by this that follows:

Order for Reception of Refugees.

On the 21ſt of July, 1681, there was a Memorial preſented to King Charles II. in behalf of the diſtreſſed Proteſtants abroad: Which he referred to the Conſideration of the Lords Committees of the Council Board for Trade and Plantations, with Directions to report their Opinion thereupon. Which they accordingly did, July 28. following in Council. And then the King in Council at Hampton Court did declare, ‘That he held himſelf obliged in Honour and Conſcience to comfort and ſupport all ſuch afflicted Proteſtants, who, by reaſon of the Rigors and Severities which were uſed towards them upon account of their Religion, ſhould be forced to quit their native Country, and ſhould deſire to ſhelter themſelves under his Majeſty's Royal Protection, for the Preſervation and free Exerciſe of their Religion: And in order hereunto, his Majeſty was pleaſed further to declare, that he would grant unto every ſuch diſtreſſed Proteſtant, who ſhould come hither for Refuge, and reſide here, his Letters of Denization under the Great Seal, without any Charge whatſoever; and likewiſe ſuch further Privileges and Immunities as were conſiſtent with the Laws, for the Liberty and free Exerciſe of their Trades and Handicrafts; and that he would likewiſe recommend it to his Parliament at their next Meeting, to paſs an Act for the general Naturalization of all ſuch Proteſtants as ſhould come over as aforeſaid; and for the further enlarging their Liberties and Franchiſes granted to them by his Majeſty, as reaſonably might be neceſſary for them. And

‘ for their Encouragement his Majeſty was likewiſe pleaſed to grant unto them, that they ſhould pay no greater Duties in any Caſe than his Majeſty’s own natural born Subjects; and that they ſhould have all the Privileges and Immunities that generally his Majeſty’s native Subjects had, for the Introduction of their Children into Schools and Colleges.

‘ And his Majeſty was likewiſe pleaſed to order, that all his Officers, both Civil and Military, ſhould give a kind Reception to all ſuch Proteſtants as ſhould arrive within any of his Majeſty’s Ports in this Kingdom, and to furniſh them with free Paſſports, and give them all Aſſiſtance and Furtherance in their Journeys to the Places to which they ſhould deſire to go. And the Lords Commiſſioners of his Majeſty’s Treaſury were to give Orders to the Commiſſioners of his Cuſtoms, to ſuffer the ſaid Proteſtants to paſs free with their Goods and Houſhold-ſtuff, whether of a greater or ſmaller Value, together with their Tools and Inſtruments, belonging to their Crafts or Trades, and generally all what belonged to them, that might be imported according to the Laws then in Force, without exacting any thing from them.

‘ And for the further Relief and Encouragement of the ſaid neceſſitous Proteſtants, the King would give Order for a general Brief through his Kingdom of England, for collecting the Charity of all well diſpoſed Perſons, for the Relief of the ſaid Proteſtants, who might ſtand in need thereof.

‘ And to the End, when any ſuch came over, being Strangers, they might know where to addreſs themſelves to fitting Perſons, to lay their Requeſts and Complaints before his Majeſty, he was graciouſly pleaſed to appoint the Moſt Reverend Father in God the Lord Archbiſhop of Canterbury, and the Right Reverend the Lord Biſhop of London, or either of them, to receive all the ſaid Requeſts and Petitions, and to preſent the ſame to his Majeſty; to the End ſuch Order might be given therein as ſhould be neceſſary. And this Order, for the more public Knowlege thereof, was printed by the King’s Printers.

French Refugees Addreſs to Queen Anne, 1707.

Queen Anne, of later Years, was not behind in her Compaſſion of the Miſery of theſe poor Proteſtants, ſtill under grievous Perſecution. For in the Year 1707, theſe Refugees, viz. the Earl of Lifford, Monſieur Le Coq, Monſieur St. Leger, and ſeveral other French Proteſtant Gentlemen and Miniſters, introduced by the Earl of Sunderland, one of the Principal Secretaries of State, April 2. 1707, preſented to her Majeſty an Addreſs ſigned by a great Number of them; expreſſing their Gratitude for her gracious Protection, and charitable Aſſiſtance they had received from the Engliſh: And laying before her Majeſty the diſtreſſed and calamitous Condition of their Brethren in France under the preſent Perſecution. And prayed, that her Majeſty would be pleaſed to take the ſame into her Royal and tender Conſideration.

Her Anſwer.

To which Addreſs her Majeſty was pleaſed to return the following Anſwer: ‘ I have always had a great Compaſſion for the unhappy Circumſtances of the afflicted Proteſtants of France. I will communicate my Thoughts upon this Matter to our Allies: and hope ſuch Meaſures may be taken as may effectually anſwer the Intent of your Petition.

And laſtly, upon the Bill about Occaſional Conformity in that Queen’s Reign, fearing ſome Reſtraint might be put upon them in reſpect of the Exerciſe of their Religion, they recommended their Caſe to the Parliament as follows:

The CASE of the Dutch and French Proteſtant Churches in England.

THAT they were firſt Eſtabliſhed in the Reign of King Edward VI. and afterwards in the Reign of Queen Elizabeth; and have now continued in this Nation upwards of 150 Years.

That thoſe Churches were, and are compoſed of ſuch Perſons, who themſelves and their Anceſtors fled out of the Netherlands, France, and other Parts beyond the Seas, from Popiſh Perſecution.

That they have Introduced and Eſtabliſhed a great Number of very profitable Woollen, Silk, and other Manufactories in this Realm, particularly at London, Canterbury, Norwich, Colcheſter, &c.

That they have always continued very Dutiful and Loyal to the Crown and Government.

That in the Act of Uniformity, made in the 13th and 14th Years of King Charles II. there is Proviſion made, and a Clauſe inſerted in favour of the ſaid Churches.

That King James I. of Glorious Memory, in 1614, ſent his Royal Letters to the National Synod of the French Churches, expreſſing his great Care and Concern for their Peace and Preſervation.

That in 1618, his ſaid Majeſty ſent one of his Biſhops, and four of the moſt famous Doctors of the Church of England, to the Synod of Dort, who acted with the whole Body, and ſigned all their Acts.

That the Convocation of the Clergy in England, were pleaſed to take Notice of the Proteſtant Churches Abroad, in ſeveral Addreſſes made to the Crown, and to declare how much they were concerned for the Preſervation of their Religion.

That in the Prayers appointed for the public Faſts, and upon ſolemn Occaſions, the Reformed Churches Abroad, are therein recommended to God.

That the Crown of England hath, on the behalf of the Proteſtants, been Guarantee in ſeveral Treaties of Peace between the Proteſtants and Papiſts.

That many of the Engliſh Nobility and Gentry, when Abroad, do repair to the Proteſtant Churches and Aſſemblies, and there receive the Sacrament.

That the Papiſts Abroad will revile the Proteſtants, that they are not of the ſame Religion with the Church of England, altho’ they have a Liturgy, and Form of Prayer.

That the Dutch and French Churches maintain (by voluntary Contribution) great Numbers of poor People; which they will be diſabled to do, in caſe Perſons of honourable Offices and Imployments are prohibited, under Penalties, to reſort to their Churches, and thereby the Poor (which are numerous) will become a great Charge to the ſeveral Pariſhes.

That by the Bill depending concerning Occaſional Conformity, the ſaid Churches will be greatly prejudiced in their eſtabliſhed Privileges, and their Members may become liable to ſeveral Penalties and Forfeitures, unleſs a Clauſe be inſerted for their Exemption.

That not only they will be prejudiced, but alſo all the Reformed Churches Abroad: For one of the Advantages of thoſe Churches is, being look’d upon by their Enemies as Churches which are of the ſame Communion with the Church of England; but when it is known, that thoſe which are in this Kingdom in any Place of Honour or Truſt, incur Penalties for being preſent in the Aſſemblies where their Rites and Diſcipline are followed, they will become contemptible and deſpicable to their Adverſaries; and their Members will be deprived of the Comfort and Incouragement they find in their glorying of being of the ſame Religion with the Church of England; and that the Queen's moſt Excellent Majeſty is Defender of their Faith, and of their Intereſt in the World.

Wherfore it is humbly hoped, That a Proviſo or Clauſe may be added, for their Exemption in the ſaid Bill concerning Occaſional Conformity, they performing their Exerciſes in the Dutch and French Languages.]

Laws and Cuſtoms of the City. J. S.

AND thus at length by the Order and Government of the City in general, and in particular of the Trade and Traffic in the ſeveral Societies and Corporations, it hath maintained it ſelf for many Ages in great Wealth, Splendor, and Reputation. Now we deſcend to more ſpecial Matters relating to the Government, and without which no Political Body can ſubſiſt, namely, the Laws, Uſages, and Cuſtoms obſerved and practiſed in the City.

Cuſtoms, their Commendation.

And as a Preface I ſhall begin with a few things in general concerning the Cuſtoms of London, and in Vindication of them; taking them from an ancient Tract, written in Queen Elizabeth's Reign, reprinted Anno 1652. the Author ſome Learned in the Law, unknown (whom I gueſs might be Fleetwood Recorder) entitled, A brief Diſcourſe, declaring and approving the neceſſary and inviolable Maintenance of the laudable CUSTOMS of London.

‘ Laudable Cuſtoms are the principal Joints, and very Sinews of all good Corporations and Fellowſhips; and alſo the Maintainers of a ſacred Unity and natural Amity between the Husband and his Wife, the Parents and their Children; which (as the wiſe Philoſopher termed it) is the Beginning of a City. For what is a City, but a manifold and joint Society, conſiſting of many Houſholds, and living under the ſame Laws, Freedoms and Franchiſes? And ſo the ſaid Cuſtoms muſt needs be the Procurers and Cauſes of ſundry good Effects to the general Eſtate of the City, wherein they be obſerved, &c.

‘ And to come nearer to the Matter, this famous and renowned City of London hath many laudable and ancient Cuſtoms; which, tho' they derogate and differ from the Rules of the Common Law, yet have they been not only approved by inviolable Experience of ſundry Ages, but alſo have been of old ratified and confirmed by ſundry Acts of Parliaments, and Charters of Princes: And namely, by Statute of Magna Charta, by theſe Words following, Quod Civitas London habeat omnes Libertates ſuas antiquas, & Conſuetudines, quas habere conſuevit: i. e. That the City of London have all their ancient Liberties and Cuſtoms, which they have uſed to have. The Words following for other Cities be, Quod habeant omnes Libertates & liberas Conſuetudines ſuas. Which ſignifieth, that they ſhall ſtill retain their Liberties and free Cuſtoms; that is to ſay, their Freedoms and Immunities, as to be diſcharged of Toll, Pontage, and ſuch like; whereas the City of London hath Proviſion made by that Eſtatute for all Uſages and Cuſtoms whatſoever. Verily, as the City of London beareth Odds and Prerogative over other Cities in England, being the Metropolis, or Mother City thereof, ſo are the Inhabitants of it no leſs neceſſary, than profitable Members of the Commonwealth, in tranſporting our Commodities into other Lands, and enriching us with the Benefits and Fruits of other Countries, &c.

‘ London, being worthy of the Title, Epitome totius Angliæ, in reſpect of the neceſſary Repair and frequent Aſſembly of all Eſtates therein, whether it be for Juſtice by the Laws of this Land, which are here adminiſtred, or by Trade of Merchandize, which is here ſo great, that it may be termed Totius Occidentis Emporium; and chiefly becauſe of the favourable and often Sojourn of our moſt Royal and Gracious Sovereign, whoſe Majeſties Chamber this is, (as it always hath been of her moſt noble Progenitors) the ſame is no leſs worthy of ſundry Pre-eminences, which by Cuſtom and Charter it enjoyeth above other Cities of this Land, &c.

A Prerogative of the City.

‘ That concerning the Prerogative given this City above other Cities in this Realm [in reſpect of her Cuſtoms] we read in the 7th Year of Henry VI. that in a Nativo habendo, brought by the Lord to recover his Villain, it was adjudged a good Return made by the Sheriff of London, that ſuch was the Cuſtom of London, that a Villain having remained there the ſpace of one whole Year and a Day, could not be fetched or removed out thence. For ſo great is the Prerogative of that Place, that it giveth Protection to the Villain, or Bondman, againſt his Lord, while the ſaid Bondman ſhall be reſiant there.

7 H. 6. 32. And the ſame Caſe was adjudged in 2 Ed. 3.

‘ Likewiſe it was taken for a good Cuſtom in the City of London, that no Attaint ſhould be maintained for a ſuppoſed falſe Verdict given in that City. In the which Caſe the Sheriff of London made Return upon a Writ of Attaint, ſued againſt a Londoner; that ſuch was and had been always the Cuſtom of the City, that no Attaint ſhould be allowed againſt a Commoner, or other Citizen of the ſame; for which Cauſe he might not, Salvis Libertatibus, without Impeachment of their Liberties, ſerve or execute the Writ. Then was there a Writ directed out of the Chancery to the Juſtices of the King's Bench, with expreſs Commandment to allow to the Maior, Sheriffs and Citizens all their Liberties, Immunities and Cuſtoms. And further, out of that Writ was a Venire facias, directed to the Maior and Sheriffs; whereby was Day given them to come and make Declaration of their Cuſtom. At which Day the Parties, Plaintiff and Defendant, being preſent, the Maior and Sheriffs had full Allowance of their Cuſtoms; the Sheriffs were holden excuſed for their Return; and the Parties Writ was abated, and ‘ himſelf puniſhed by Impriſonment for his Vexation.

‘ I have here (ſaith the Writer) at large remembred this Caſe, to the end it may appear, both what Credit and Opinion of Conſcience and Truth the Law aſcribed to the Citizens of London; and alſo how careful and vigilant the Maior and Sheriffs have always been to preſerve and uphold their Cuſtoms. Altho' ſithence that only Cuſtom was, for ſpecial Cauſes, abrogated by the Statute of 11 H. 7. and an Attaint given in London.

‘ Moreover, we find it recorded in M. 2. E. 3. that whereas a Citizen of London brought an Appeal of Robbery, and the Defendant would have tried his Innocency by Battail, as he may in ſemblable Caſe againſt another Man, Wilby, then Juſtice, anſwered him, that he was not to have allowance of Battail in an Appeal commenced by a Citizen of London. For that by Cuſtom of their City they were exempted from it. The like Appeal was ſued, P. 20. E. 3. wherein the Defendant made offer of the ſame Tryal. And altho' he that ſued the Appeal would have joined Battail without regard of this Franchiſe, the Lord Maior, with the reſt of the Corporation, ſued a Writ out of the Chancery, reciting their Cuſtom or Franchiſe, and prayed Allowance of it, in diſturbance of the Battail.

P. 20. E. 3. Cor. pl. 125.

Saxon Laws and Cuſtoms of London. Fab. Chron. Vol. 2. fo. 1.

What the Laws and Cuſtoms of this City were in the Times of the Saxons, we might have known, if the old Record called Doomſday, writ in Saxon, ſometime kept in the Guild-hall, were extant. This Book was a Regiſter of the Laws and Cuſtoms of the City, and alſo of the Names of the Portgreves, or Rulers and Guardians of London from William the Conqueror. But after, when the Laws and Cuſtoms were changed, it was laid aſide, and leſs regarded; eſpecially, it being writ in a ſmall Hand, and worn with Age: Sore defaced, ſaith Fabian, it was at laſt embezelled and loſt. And hence it comes to paſs, that as we have no Footſteps of the Saxon Cuſtoms and Uſages of London, ſo no Remembrance of ſuch Rulers as were before King Richard I. except two or three retrieved by Stow.

But here we ſhall firſt ſet down ſome few of the Laws and Cuſtoms (however imperfect) tranſcribed by A. M. out of a little Book printed 1562, for the Citizens Uſe, with various and large Improvements and Additions to them, to render them the more uſeful and beneficial to the Freemen and Inhabitants.

And firſt, we begin with the Statutes for keeping Cleanlineſs and good Order in the Streets.

Aſſiza Nocumentorum.

There were formerly held in the City Aſſiza Nocumentorum, which were appointed for avoiding Annoyances or Nuſances in the City, and for the keeping of all Lanes and Paſſages open: Wherein Informations were to be made of the Stoppages or Encroachments into the Streets by any jetty Buildings by Shops, Cellars, &c. And for theſe Aſſizes of Annoyances there were Carpenters and Bricklayers ſworn. Cementarii & Carpentarii jurat. pro Aſſiz. Nocumentor. And an Order was made another time, that Hurds and Grees, and other Annoyances in the Streets be removed. And a Wall being built up once that ſtopt up a Paſſage from Paternoſter Row to Blowbladder-ſtreet, at the Gate of St. Michael ad Bladum, i. e. St. Michael the Quern, (or rather at Corn) a Judgment was given to pull it down.]

CHAP. XXIII.

Laws and Cuſtoms of the Wardmote Inqueſt. The Maior's Precept to the Aldermen. Articles of Inquiry. Exemplary Puniſhments inflicted upon Bawds, Harlots, &c. An Act of Common Council about the Wardmote.

Wardmote Inqueſt. J. S. IN the next place we ſhall ſhew the Cuſtoms of the Wardmote, an ancient Court, kept in every Ward of the City: the chief Officer whereof is the Alderman of the reſpective Ward. Who hath a Precept iſſued to him from the Maior, with Inſtruction when the Court muſt be kept, and what is by him then to be done, and the Articles he is to give in Charge to his Wardmote Inqueſt, to inquire into. And all Matters found by the ſaid Inqueſt muſt be preſented to the Alderman. And here we ſhall firſt ſhew the Maior's Mandate or Warrant to the Alderman of the Ward to ſummon the Inqueſt, and other Particulars by him at this Wardmote to be obſerved: Next, the Articles that he is to give in Charge to them. To which ſhall be added an Act of Common Council for Reformation of divers Abuſes formerly uſed by thoſe of this Inqueſt.]

The Maior's Precept is to this Tenor:

By the MAIOR.

To the Alderman of the Ward.

WARDMOTE INQUEST for a Year.

WE charge and command you, that upon Saint Thomas Day the Apoſtle next coming, you do hold your Wardmote, and that you have afore us at our general Court of Aldermen to be holden in the Guild-Hall, the Monday next after the Feaſt of the Epiphany next coming, all the Defaults that ſhall be preſented afore you by Inqueſt in the ſaid Wardmote, and the ſaid Inqueſt ſhall have full Power and Authority by one whole Year, to enquire and preſent all ſuch Defaults as ſhall be found within your ſaid Ward, as oftentimes as ſhall be thought to you expedient and needful, which we will, ſhall be once every Month at the leaſt.

INQUEST dying.

AND if it happen any of your ſaid Inqueſt to die, or depart out of your ſaid Ward within the ſaid Year, that then in place of him or them ſo dying, or departing out of your ſaid Ward, you cauſe to be choſen one able Perſon to inquire and preſent with the other in Manner and Form aforeſaid.

NON-APPEARANCE.

AND that at the ſaid general Court, you give afore us the Names and Surnames of all them of your ſaid Ward, that come not to your ſaid Wardmote, if they be duly warned. So that due Redreſs and Puniſhment of them may be had, as the Caſe ſhall require, according to the Law.

WATCH, LIGHT, VIZARD.

AND that ye do provide, that at all times convenient, covenable Watch be kept: and that Lanthorns with Light by Nightertail in old manner accuſtomed, be hanged forth. And that no Man go by Nightertail without Light, nor with Vizard, on the peril that belongeth thereto.

COMMON COUNCIL.

AND alſo that you do cauſe to be choſen Men, of the moſt ſufficient, honeſt, and diſcreet Men of your ſaid Ward, to be for your ſaid Ward of the Common Council of this City for the Year enſuing, according to the Cuſtom in that behalf yearly uſed. And alſo that you do cauſe the ſaid Men ſo to be choſen to be of the Common Council, to be ſworn before you and in your Preſence, according to the Oath for them uſed, and of old Time accuſtomed, the Tenor of which Oath hereafter enſueth.

The OATH.

Ye ſhall ſwear, that ye ſhall be true to our Sovereign Lord the King that now is, and to his Heirs and Succeſſors, Kings of England, and readily ye ſhall come when ye be ſummoned to the Common Council of this City, but if ye be reaſonably excuſed: and good and true Counſel ye ſhall give in all things, touching the Commonwealth of this City, after your Wit and Cunning: And that for Favour of any Perſon ye ſhall maintain no ſingular Profit againſt the common Profit of this City. And after that you be come to the Common Council, you ſhall not from thence depart, until the Common Council be ended, without reaſonable Cauſe, or elſe by the Lord Maior's Licenſe. And alſo any ſecret things that be ſpoken or ſaid in the Common Council, which ought to be kept ſecret, in no wiſe you ſhall diſcloſe, as God you help.

J. S. And after this Oath, the Oaths of Supremacy and Allegiance of later Times were wont to be adminiſtred, by vertue of an Act of Parliament in King Charles the IId's Time, for the regulating of Corporations.]

CONSTABLES, SCAVENGERS, BEADLE, RAKER.

AND that alſo in the ſaid Wardmote you cauſe to be choſen certain other honeſt Perſons to be Conſtables, and Scavengers, and a common Beadle, and a Raker to make clean the Streets and Lanes of all your ſaid Ward, according to the Cuſtom yearly uſed in that behalf. Which Conſtables have, and ſhall have full Power and Authority to diſtrain for the Salary and Quarterage of the ſaid Beadle and Raker, as oftentimes as it ſhall be behind unpaid.

ROLL of NAMES.

ALSO, that you keep a Roll of the Names, Surnames, Dwelling-places, Profeſſions and Trades of all Perſons dwelling within your Ward, and within what Conſtables Precinct they dwell. Wherein the Place is to be ſpecially noted by the Street, Lane, Alley, or Sign.

CONSTABLE, ROLL.

ALSO that you cauſe every Conſtable from time to time to certify unto you the Name, Surname, Dwelling-place, Profeſſion and Trade of every Perſon, who ſhall newly come to dwell within his Precinct, whereby you may make and keep your Roll perfect: and that you cauſe every Conſtable for his Precinct to that purpoſe to make and keep a perfect Roll in like manner.

INNHOLDER, LODGER, SOJOURNER.

ALSO that you give ſpecial Charge that every Innholder, and other Perſon within your Ward, who ſhall receive any Perſon to lodge or ſojourn in his Houſe above two Days, ſhall, before the third Day after his coming thither, give Knowlege to the Conſtable of the Precinct where he ſhall be ſo received, of the Name, Surname, Dwelling-place, Profeſſion, and Trade of Life, or Place of Service of ſuch Perſon, and for what Cauſe he ſhall come to reſide there; and that the ſaid Conſtable give preſent Notice thereof to you: and that the ſaid Innholder lodge no ſuſpected Perſon, or Men or Women of evil Name.

It was upon great Reaſon that this was made one of the Articles of Inqueſt, becauſe of ſo many Miſdemeanors and Exorbitances committed uſually in the public Houſes in London, in former Times as well as later, by ſuch as uſed them. As far back as the Reign of King Edward II. which was near four Hundred Years ago, many Robberies and Murders were committed by looſe People that took harbour in ſuch Houſes, and were concealed or maintained there. Which occaſioned that King to write to the Maior and Sheriffs of London, ‘For the redreſſing and remedying of many Robberies, Murders, and other Tranſgreſſions, done, maintained, and wickedly ſuſtained by Receivers of Gueſts and public Bauds, in divers Inns and other Places in the City and Suburbs. And the King very much wondred that they, who were obliged more ſtrictly to the as well honeſt as ſecure Cuſtody of the ſaid City and Suburbs, ſhould permit ſuch Evils and Wickedneſſes to be done, maintained and ſuſtained, to the King's Diſgrace, and the City's Scandal, and not without their own Negligence and Defect hitherto.]

Robbers and Murderers commonly harboured in public Houſes.

J. S.

Per Receptatores & Receptatrices, & publicas Lupanatrices in diverſis Hoſpiciis. Clauſ 4. Ed. 2.

SEARCH, NEW COMERS.

ALSO that you cauſe every Conſtable within his Precinct, once every Month at the fartheſt, and oftner, if need require, to make diligent Search and Inquiry, what Perſons be newly come into his Precinct to dwell, ſojourn, or lodge: and that you give ſpecial Charge, that no Innholder or other Perſon ſhall reſiſt or deny any Conſtable, in making ſuch Search or Inquiry, but ſhall do his beſt Endeavour to aid and aſſiſt him therein.

FRANK PLEDGE.

AND for that of late there is more reſort to the City of Perſons evil affected in Religion and otherwiſe than in former Times have been: You ſhall diligently inquire, if any Man be received to dwell or abide within your Ward, that is not put under Frank Pledge, as he ought to be by the Cuſtom of the City: and whether any Perſon hath continued in the ſaid Ward by the ſpace of one Year, being above the Age of twelve Years, and not ſworn to be faithful and loyal to the King's Majeſty, in ſuch ſort as by the Law and Cuſtom of the City he ought to be.

BEADLE.

TO all theſe Purpoſes the Beadle of every Ward ſhall employ his Diligence, and give his beſt Furtherance.

STOCKS, &c.

ALSO, you are to take Order, that there be provided and ſet up a Pair of Stocks, and a Whipping-Poſt, in ſome convenient Place in every Pariſh within your Ward, for the Puniſhment of Vagrants, and other Offenders.

This added of later times.

FIRE.

ALSO, that you have ſpecial regard, that from time to time there be convenient Proviſion for Hooks, Ladders, and Buckets, in meet Places within the ſeveral Pariſhes of your Ward, for avoiding the peril of Fire.

STREETS.

ALSO, that the Streets and Lanes of this City be from time to time kept clean before every Church, Houſe, Shop, Warehouſe, Door, dead Wall, and in all other common Paſſages and Streets of the ſaid Ward.

HUCKSTERS of Ale and Beer.

AND where by divers Acts of Common Council, afore time made and eſtabliſhed for the Common-weal of this City, amongſt other things it is ordained and enacted, as hereafter enſueth:

Alſo it is ordained and enacted, That from henceforth no Huckſter of Ale or Beer, be within any Ward of the City of London, but honeſt Perſons, and of good Name and Fame, and ſo taken and admitted by the Alderman of the Ward for the time being, and that the ſame Huckſters do find ſufficient Surety afore the Maior and Aldermen for the Time being, to be of good guiding and rule: and that the ſame Huckſters ſhall keep no Bawdry, nor ſuffer no Letchery, Dice-playing, Carding, or any other unlawful Games, to be done, exerciſed, or uſed within their Houſes: and to ſhut in their Doors at nine of the Clock in the Night from Michaelmas to Eaſter, and from Eaſter to Michaelmas at ten of the Clock in the Night, and after that Hour ſell none Ale or Beer. And if any Huckſter of Beer or Ale, after this Act publiſhed and proclaimed, ſell any Ale or Beer within any Ward of the City of London, and be not admitted by the Aldermen of the ſame Ward ſo to do, or find not ſufficient Surety, as is above rehearſed, the ſame Huckſter to have Impriſonment, and make Fine and Ranſom for his Contempt, after the diſcretion of the Maior and Aldermen: and alſo that the ſaid Huckſters ſuffer no manner of eating and drinking within their Cellars or Vaults contrary to the Ordinance thereof ordained and provided, as in the ſaid Act more plainly appeareth at large: we charge you that you do put the ſame in due Execution accordingly.

J. S. As Notice was taken in former Times of the Inconveniency of ſuffering public Houſes to entertain Perſons at unſeaſonable Hours, ſo later Times have not been unſenſible of it; and have therefore appointed, when ſuch Houſes ſhould be ſhut up, as in this Order of Quarter Seſſions, Edwyn Maior.

COMMONS, DINNERS, BANQUETINGS.

ITEM, Where the Wardmote Inqueſts within the ſeveral Wards of this City, for the Maintenance of Honeſty, Virtue, and good Living, and for the Aboliſhment, Exiling, and Suppreſſing of all kind of Vice, evil Rule, and Iniquity, according to the ancient laudable Laws and Cuſtoms of the ſaid City, are yearly ſeverally charged and ſworn, upon the Day of St. Thomas the Apoſtle, before the Aldermen of the ſaid Wards, chiefly and principally to the End and Intent, that they with all Diligence ſhould truly and duly inquire and preſent all ſuch Enormities, Nuſances, Miſorder, and Offences as are, or at any time within the ſpace of one whole Year then next enſuing, ſhall be ſeverally uſed, committed or done within the ſaid Wards, and have a Day yearly to make their ſaid Preſentments, until the Monday next after the Feaſt of the Epiphany: The ſaid Inqueſts heretofore little or nothing at all regarding (as it is very manifeſt, and not unknown, the more is the pity) their ſaid Oaths, or yet the great Commodities, Utility, Quietneſs, Honour, and Worſhip, that might or ſhould grow and enſue to the ſaid City, and Inhabitants of the ſame, thro' their good, induſtrious, and indifferent Proceedings, for the advancement of Virtue, and repreſſing of Vice, have drawn it in a manner into a very ordinary Courſe, and common Cuſtom, to conſume and ſpend a great part of their ſaid Time, that they have yearly given unto them, when they receive their ſaid Charge, partly in ſetting up among themſelves a certain Commons, and making and keeping many coſtly and ſumptuous Dinners, Suppers, and Banquets: inviting and calling to the ſame at ſundry times, in a manner, all the Inhabitants of the ſaid ſeveral Wards, to the no little charges of the ſame Inhabitants; and partly in paſſing and occupying much part of the ſaid time in playing at Dice, Tables, Cards, and ſuch other unlawful Games, both to the great coſts, charges, and expences of the ſaid Inqueſts (whereof the greater part moſt commonly are but very poor Men) and alſo to the very lewd, pernitious and evil Example of all ſuch as have any acceſs or recourſe unto the ſame Inqueſts: And where alſo the ſaid Inqueſts have of late uſurped to diſpenſe with ſuch Perſons, as they by their ſearch, and otherwiſe, have founden to offend and tranſgreſs the Laws, in uſing and occupying of unlawful Weights and Meaſures; taking of the ſaid Offenders certain Fines; (which as it is ſaid) the ſaid Inqueſts have commonly uſed to employ toward the maintainance of their ſaid Feaſting and Banqueting: directly againſt the due order of our Sovereign Lord the King's Laws, and the publick Wealth of all his Highneſſes Subjects within the ſaid City, and much to the reproach and diſhonour of the ſame City:

For remedy and reformation thereof, be it ordained, enacted and eſtabliſhed by the Lord Maior, Aldermen, and Commons in this preſent Common Council aſſembled, and by authority of the ſame, That all and every the Wardmote Inqueſts of the ſaid City, from henceforth to be yearly charged and ſworn within the ſeveral Wards at the time afore rehearſed, ſhall at all times and places meet, and for the due execution of their Charge, meet and aſſemble themſelves together; and that they, and every of them, after their ſaid Meetings, Inquiſition, and treating of their ſaid neceſſary Matters, ſhall go home to their own ſeveral Houſes, to Breakfaſt, Dinner, and Supper, during all the ſaid accuſtomed time of their Charge and Seſſion aboveſaid; and that none of the ſaid Inqueſts ſhall from henceforward ſet up any manner of Commons, or keep or maintain any manner of Dinners, Suppers or Banquets among themſelves, or uſe at their Aſſemblies and Seſſions, any of the Games above mentioned, or any other whatſoever unlawful Games or Plays at any time, before the giving up of the ſaid Preſentments at the time above remembred, or ſhall take or receive any manner of Fine or Fines, for the concealment and diſcharging of any of the Offences afore recited; but truly preſent the ſame Offences, and every of them, according to their Oaths, upon pain of Impriſonment by the Diſcretion of the Lord Maior and Aldermen of the ſaid City for the time being.

FIRE and CANDLES, &c. RECREATION.

PROVIDED alway, and be it enacted by the Authority aforeſaid, that it ſhall be lawful for all and every the ſaid Inqueſts, to take and receive, towards the Charges of their Fire and Candles, and other Neceſſaries during the time of their ſaid Seſſion, all and every ſuch matter of Money, as any honeſt Perſon or Perſons, of their free Will, and benevolent Mind, will give or offer unto them; and when they have made their ſaid Preſentments, to go and aſſemble themſelves together for their Recreation and Solace where they ſhall think it good, and there not only to beſtow and ſpend the twenty Shillings which every Alderman within his Ward, according to a certain Order lately taken, ſhall yearly give unto them, at the time of the Delivery of the ſaid Preſentments, towards their ſaid Charges in this behalf, but alſo the Reſidue of the ſaid Money received and gathered, as it is aforeſaid, of the Benevolence of their ſaid loving Friends, if any ſuch Reſidue ſhall fortune to remain, any Clauſe or Article in this preſent Act contained, to the contrary notwithſtanding. Not failing hereof, as ye tender the Common-weal of this City, and advancement of good Juſtice, and as ye will anſwer for the contrary at your uttermoſt Peril.

The Laws and Ordinances for Orphans and Children of Freemen. The Order taken for them by Act of Common Council, 5 Edward VI. The Act for the Orphans An. 5 & 6 of William and Mary of 4 l. per Cent. Freemen and Apprentices. Habit of Apprentices. An Apprentice loſes not the Degree of a Gentleman. Apprentices a conſiderable Body. Exaction of Fees upon Apprentices. Some Notes out of the Records concerning the Freedom of the City.

Cuſtome for Orphans of Freemen.

IN the next place ſhall be ſhewn the ancient Cuſtom and Laws for the Orphanage, that is, the Care the City hath taken for ſecuring the Eſtates of ſuch Children, whoſe Fathers being Freemen, have deceaſed, before they be come to Age, or diſpoſe of themſelves in Marriage, while their Parents are alive. This Order was made by a Common Council in Edward the VIth's Time, and was as follows:

Ad commune Concilium tentum in Guildhaldia Civitatis Londini xiii die Octobris Anno regni EDVARDI Sexti, Dei gra. Angliæ, Franciæ & Hiberniæ Supremi Capitis, quinto: Coram Andrea Judde Milite, tunc Maiore, & Aldermannis Civitatis illius, ordinata ſunt, interalia, inactitata, conceſſa & ſtabilita omnia & ſingula ſubſequentia.

Orders taken for them, and their Portions.

FOrasmuch as the City of London is of late Years ſore decayed, and daily is like to decay more and more, a great Cauſe and Occaſion whereof, among other hath been, for that Freemens Children (Orphans of the ſaid City) ſometimes in the Lives of their Parents, and ſometimes after their Deceaſes, being left wealthy and rich, do beſtow themſelves in ungodly Marriages, for the moſt part in their young Age, at their own Will and Pleaſures, without the Conſents, and againſt the Minds of their Friends, ſaying and affirming, that the Law and Cuſtom of the ſaid City giveth unto them their Portions, whether they Marry by the Aſſent of their Friends or not; and ſo do daily caſt away and undo themſelves, in Truſt to have their ſaid Portions, whether their Parents or Friends will, or will not.

And thereby do they beſtow themſelves upon ſimple and light perſons, having neither Cunning, Knowledge, Subſtance, nor good or honeſt Conditions. By reaſon whereof ſuch Orphans, inordinately, and inſolently, do ſpend and conſume their Patrimony and Portions in ſhort time, not only to the undoing of themſelves, and to the great Ignominy and Shame of their Friends, but alſo to the great Slaunder of the Lord Maior and Aldermen of this City, (who been reputed and taken as Fathers and Protectors of the ſame Orphanes) and to the great loſs and hindrance of the ſaid City.

And forasmuch as the ſaid Lord Maior and Citizens, have by their Laws and Cuſtoms, power and authority to make Laws and Ordinances, by their Common Council, for redreſs of the ſame:

It is therefore now (to the intent to reduce the ſame to a more godly, more profitable and decent Order and Conformity) by the ſaid Lord Maior, and Common Council, and Citizens, in this preſent Common Councel aſſembled, and by authority of the ſaid Common Councel ordained, enacted, authorized, and eſtabliſhed for a Law perpetually to bee obſerved and kept within the ſaid City: That if any Orphane, or Child of any free Man or free Woman of the ſaid City, do offend in any the things hereafter expreſſed, and bee thereof lawfully convicted, afore the Lord Maior and the Aldermen or elſewhere, that then they and every of them, ſhall to all entents, purpoſes, conſtructions and meanings, be unabled and barred to demand and claime their Portion or Portions, and alſo ſhall loſe and forgoe and bee barred for ever, of all and every his, her or their part or parts, and Portions to him or them belonging, by and after the death of his or their ſaid Father or Mother, of the Goods and Cattals, of every ſuch Father and Mother, by reaſon of any Law, Cuſtome, Ordinance, Uſage, Franches, Privilege, Act of Common Councell, or other thing heretofore had or uſed within the ſaid City: The ſame Law, Cuſtome, Ordinance, or other thing whatſoe're, heretofore had, made, ordained, allowed, and put in ure, to the contrary in any wiſe notwithſtanding. That is to wit: Firſt, if any Man-child, or Woman-child, ſhall maliciouſly go about or attempt to do, or cauſe to be done, any bodily harme, death, or deſtruction to his or their Father or Mother: Or if any Man-child doe hereafter marry or contract marriage in the life of his Father or Mother (by whom he will claime any Portion) under the age of one and twenty Yeeres, without the conſent of his ſaid Father or Mother, by whom he will claime any Portion: Or if any Woman-child doe hereafter marry or contract Marriage in the life of her Father, or other Parent, by whom ſhe ſhall claime any Portion, before the age of eighteene yeeres, without the conſent of her Father, or ſuch other Parent by whom ſhe ſhall or may claim any Portion: Or if any Man-child be a Theefe, or a Fellon, or a common Whore-haunter, a common Dicer, or a common player at unlawful Games, notoriouſly known: Or if any Woman-child ſhall hereafter commit any Whoredome, or be a common Picker; That then every of the Perſons ſo offending, ſhall be barred and excluded to have, of demand any Portion.

Provided alwaies, that it ſhall be lawfull for the Father or Mother of any ſuch Child or Children, to give and bequeath in Legacy, to ſuch Child or Children, as much as the Portion of ſuch Child ſo offending ſhall amount unto, by the Cuſtome of the ſaid City. And then ſuch Child thereby to be enabled to have and demand the ſame, as Portion, this Act notwithſtanding, ſo that the ſame Legacy be contained in his or their Teſtament in writing, and not otherwiſe.

And that then, and from henceforth his ſaid Child or Children, to be admitted and reſtored to claime ſuch Legacy, or Legacies, in ſuch ſort, manner, and forme, as if there had beene never any ſuch offence done or committed by any ſuch Child.

Item, It is further ordained, enacted, authorized and eſtabliſhed, by the Authority aforeſaid, that if any Woman-child, being an Orphane, and under the the age of one and twenty Yeeres, at any time hereafter, after the Death of her Father, doe enſure or contract her ſelf in Marriage, or elſe, according to the Eccleſiaſticall Lawes of this Realme, do perfitly ſolemnize or conſummate Marriage, with any free Man of this City, the conſent and agreement of the Lord Maior and Aldermen of this ſaid City of London for the time being, not obtained and had; that then for every ſuch default and offence committed or done by any Orphane, or Orphanes, of the ſaid City, the ſame being confeſſed, or ſufficiently proved by two Witneſſes; or otherwiſe before the ſaid Lord Maior and Aldermen of this ſaid City of London, for the time being, at and in a Court of Aldermen, ſhe or they that ſo happen to behave her or themſelves, as is aforeſaid, ſhall forfeit, foregoe, and loſe two Pence of and for every Pound, ſo due, or to bee due unto her, or them, by reaſon of any ſuch Orphanage, the ſum of twelve Pence of every Pound, to goe, or to be to the uſe of the Chamber of the ſaid City, according to the ancient Cuſtome before this time, in ſuch Caſe uſed.

And if the ſaid Contract or Marriage of the ſaid Orphane or Orphanes, bee made with any Foreine, not being free of this City, at the time of any ſuch Contract or Marriage made, that then the ſaid Orphan or Orphanes, and every of them, ſhall forfeit and loſe three Shillings of every Pound, or to be due unto her or them, by vertue of any Orphanage or Cuſtome had and uſed within the ſaid City.

The one Shilling of the ſaid three Shillings of every Pound, to goe, or to be, to the uſe of the Chamber of the ſaid City, in ſuch a manner and forme as is aforeſaid.

And the other two Shillings ſo forfeited of every Pound, to goe to the uſe of ſuch other Orphane or Orphanes, as ſhall then remain unmarried. Or elſe, for default of ſuch Orphanes, or Orphane, to remain to the next of the kindred of the Orphane ſo offending.

Alſo, be it further ordained, enacted, and eſtabliſhed by Authority aforeſaid, for, and in eſchewing of divers variances, contentions, and ſuits, that daily heretofore have, and hereafter may enſue: that if any Freeman's Child, Man or Woman, fortune to be married hereafter in the Life time of his or their Father, by his conſent, and not fully advanced of, and to his, or her full part, or portion of his or her ſaid Fathers Goods, as he ſhall be worth at the time of his deceaſe, according to the ancient Lawes and Cuſtomes of this ſaid City; that then every ſuch Freeman's Child, ſo being married in the life time of his, or her Father, ſhall be to all intents and purpoſes, diſabled to demand any further part or portion of his or her Fathers Goods, after the deceaſe of his, or her Father, but ſhall be adjudged, reputed, and taken to be fully advanced, according as the Law and Cuſtom of this City hath been long time out of minde, except his or her ſaid Father do mention certainly in his laſt Will or Teſtament, or by other Writing ſigned with his own proper Name, or Marke, the Certainety of the Summe or Summes of Money, Goods and Cattels, and the Value of them that the Father gave, payed, or departed withal, or otherwiſe aſſured, or hereafter ſhall give, pay, depart withal, or otherwiſe make Aſſurance of unto him, or her, before, at, or after the Marriage of him or her, or otherwiſe in his Lifetime, for and towards their Advancements, in the name of his or her Part or Portion.

And then every ſuch Orphane or Child, which after the Deceaſe of his or her ſaid Father, can bring forth the ſaid Teſtament, or other Writing ſigned or marked with the Father's Hand or Mark, wherein the Certainety of ſuch Money, Goods, or Cattels, as they have, or ſhall have received of their ſaid Father, or by the ſame Father, aſſured by Eſpecialty, or otherwiſe, ſhall have as much of the Ready Money, Goods, Cattels and Debts of the ſaid Father, as (with that which he or they ſhall have received towards their Advancements, in the Life of their ſaid Father) ſhall make up a full Child's Part of his Goods and Cattels, as he ſhall be worth at the time of his Deceaſe. The ſame to be demanded, asked, and claimed or ſued for againſt the Executor or Executors, Adminiſtrator or Adminiſtrators, of the Goods and Cattels of the ſaid Father, by Bill Original, to be commenced to our Soveraigne Lord the King's Court, holden in the utter Chamber of the Guild Hall of the ſaid City, before the ſaid Lord Maior and Aldermen of the ſame City for the time being, any Law or Cuſtom heretofore made or uſed to the contrary notwithſtanding. In which Action, no Wager of Law, or Eſſoine, ſhall be admitted or allowed.

Provided alway, and it is farther enacted, that if any Freeman's Sonne, being of full Age (which ſhall hereafter be married with the Conſent of his Father, or any other Perſon, being of full Age, which ſhall hereafter marry any Freeman's Daughter) do at the time of the Eſpouſals, or any time after, confeſs themſelves by Writing fully ſatisfied of his or their Portion, or do otherwiſe acquit and diſcharge the Father of ſuch Freeman's Sonnes or Daughters, of all their Part and Portion due, or to be due, by the Law and Cuſtome of the City; that then every ſuch Perſon ſo confeſſing, acquitting, or otherwiſe diſcharging, ſhall be reputed and taken as fully advanced of his or their whole Part or Portion; and ſhall not be enabled to demand any farther or greater part of the Subſtance, Goods and Cattels of his or her Father: This Law, or any other Law or Cuſtome heretofore had, made, or uſed to the contrary notwithſtanding.

And further; Foraſmuch as it is thought very prejudicial and hurtful to the Fatherleſſe Children and Orphans, when the Mother or Mother in Law, being Executrix of the laſt Will and Teſtament of her late Husband, by whom and after whoſe Death the Orphans are intituled to an Orphanage, (according to the ſaid laudable Cuſtomes of this City) doe divers times marry, or contract Matrimony, ſome with Forriners and Perſons unknowne, and ſome with Freemen, or ever an Inventory of the Goods, Cattels, Plate, Jewels, Ready Money of the Teſtator's, be by them brought in; by reaſon whereof, many times they (either for Fear or Affection of their Husbands, or for ſome other ſiniſter Cauſe) doe bring in very ſuſpicious Inventories, omitting therein either Ready Money, Plate, Jewels, or Debts, or ſome other Thing or Things, whereby ſome Benefit ſhould redound to the Fatherleſs Children, to the great Loſs and Hinderance of the Orphanes, and ſometimes Slaunder to the Lord Maior and Aldermen of the City, notwithſtanding their great Care and Travaile that they take for the good ordering, and true anſwering of the ſaid Orphanes.

It is therefore by like Authority ordained, eſtabliſhed, and enacted, that if after the firſt Day of November next enſuing, any Widow which is or ſhall be made Executrix of the Teſtament and laſt Will of her late Husband (being a Freeman) or ſhall take upon her the Adminiſtration of the Goods and Cattels of her late Husband (being a Freeman) doe not upon her Oath bring in and exhibit, or cauſe to be brought in and exhibited before the Lord Maior and Aldermen of this ſaid City for the time being, at and in a Court of Aldermen, a juſt and perfect Inventory (to their Knowledge) of all the Goods, Cattels, Plate, and Jewels, Ready Money, and Debts, as were her ſaid Husband's at the time of his Death, appraiſed according to the Law of the ſaid City, before ſhe do enſure her ſelf in Marriage, or contract Marriage, or elſe according to the Lawes of the Realme, doe perfectly ſolemnize or conſummate Marriage with any Perſon before ſuch time as aforeſaid; that then every Perſon ſo offending, ſhall forfait and loſe eight Shillings of every Pound of her Portion of the Goods of her late Husband, due to her by the laudable Cuſtome of the ſaid City: The ſame to go to the uſe of ſuch Orphane, or Orphanes, as then ſhall be entituled to have or demand any Orphanage or Portion, after the Death of his or her late Father: the ſame to be demanded, asked, claimed, or ſued for, againſt ſuch Executrix or Adminiſtratrix, by Bill Original of Debt, to be commenced in our Soveraigne Lord the King's Court, holden in the utter Chamber of the Guild Hall of the ſaid City, before the Lord Maior and Aldermen of the ſame City for the time being, any Law or Cuſtom heretofore had, made, or uſed to the contrary notwithſtanding. In which Action no Wager of Law or Eſſoin ſhall be admitted or allowed.

This Law ſometimes diſpenſed with.
J. S.
Lex Londin.

This Law or Act is called Judd's Law; and though not repealed, yet the Lord Maior and Aldermen ſometimes, for eſpecial Reaſons, thought fit to diſpenſe with the ſame Act in Favour of Orphans that ſought Relief againſt the Penalties mentioned.

The Orphans Debt ſettled by Act of Parliament.

But of later Years, namely, in the Reign of King Charles II. the City Stock was ſo low, that there was not ſufficient to pay the Orphans their Portions of Money that had been brought in for their Uſe. Which made no ſmall Clamour and Noiſe againſt the City.

A Petition of the Orphans to the Common Council, An. 16,0.

The Orphans Condition being thus bad by reaſon of the Inſolvency of the City, they made a Petition to the Court of Common Council in their own behalf, and propounded therein ſome Ways and Means that their Debts might be ſatisfied. And Feb. 3. 1690. the Common Council ordered Sir William Turner, Sir William Pritchard, Sir John Moor, Sir Samuel Daſhwood, Aldermen; Sir Thomas Vernon, Sir Ralph Box, Arthur Baron, John Morrice, Francis Griffith, John Johnſon, John Midgeley, and Thomas Blackmore, Commoners, to conſider the Petition of ſeveral Orphans, and to receive the Propoſals of the ſaid Petitioners, or any other, and to report their Opinions concerning the ſame to this Honourable Court.

The Report thereupon.

Accordingly they made this Report, ‘That they thought it reaſonable, as well for the Honour of the City, as for the Satisfaction of this Court, and of the ſaid Orphans, humbly to offer their Opinion, viz. That ‘be appropriated and ſettled, free of all Charges, by Act of Common Council, towards Payment of 4 l. per Cent. per Annum, for the preſent Relief of the Orphans.’ And they propoſed, that this Fund be offered to be confirmed in Parliament; and that Application be made to that moſt Honourable Court for farther Aid, as they in their great Wiſdom ſhall think fit. Whereby a Fund of 24000 l. per Annum may be veſted in the Maior and Citizens of London for Satisfaction of the Debts due to the preſent Orphans: And for a further Security of all Orphans Money that hereafter ſhall be paid into the Chamber of London. This Report they gave in May 11th, 1691, with the Subſcription of their Names. And upon this the Act of Parliament Anno 1693, the 5th and 6th of William and Mary, was grounded, for raiſing an annual Sum of 8000 l. to be appropriated a perpetual Fund for the Payment of the City Orphans. Whereby 4 l. per Cent. per Annum was allowed for ever, for every Orphan's principal Money, with the Intereſt of 5 l. per Cent. to the Year 1683, and of 3 l. per Cent. from thence to 1694. And the Common Council had Power to aſſeſs upon the perſonal Eſtates of the Inhabitants of the City, 2000 l. a Year for the raiſing this perpetual Fund. And other Ways and Means were appointed for the making up the ſaid Fund, ſpecified in the Act.

None obliged hereafter to pay into the Chamber any Orphan's Money.

And for the time to come, no Perſon is obliged or compelled by vertue of any Cuſtom within the City, or by Order or Proceſs of the Court of Orphans, to pay into the Chamber any Sum of Money, or perſonal Eſtate belonging to an Orphan of any Freeman.

More will be ſaid of the Orphans of the City, when we come to treat of the Courts belonging to the City. Only it may be obſerved in this Place, that in the Year 1716, an Act of Common Council was made for the Aſſeſſment of this 2000 l. yearly. Which Act was as follows.

An ACT for Raiſing and Levying the Sum of 2000 l. for one Year, upon the Perſonal Eſtates of the ſeveral Inhabitants within this City and Liberties thereof, payable to the Orphans and other Creditors thereof.

WHEREAS in and by a late Act of Parliament, intituled, An Act for the Relief of the Orphans and other Creditors of the City of London, it is, amongſt other things enacted, That for and towards the Raiſing a perpetual Fund to pay the yearly Intereſt of Four Pounds for every Hundred Pounds principal Money, and Intereſt thereof, and proportionably for any grreater or leſſer Sum, due to any Orphan or other Creditor of the ſaid City, or the Executors, Adminiſtrators, or Aſſigns of any ſuch Orphan or Creditor, That from and after the Twenty fourth day of June, in the Year of our Lord God 1694, the Maior, Commonalty, and Citizens of the ſaid City, ſhall and may, and they are required yearly to raiſe the Sum of Two Thouſand Pounds, by an equal proportionable Aſſeſſment upon the Perſonal Eſtates of the Inhabitants within the ſaid City and Liberties thereof, to be yearly aſſeſſed, collected, received and paid, or in default of Payment, diſtrained for, in ſuch manner as the ſaid Mayor, Commonalty and Citizens in their Common Council aſſembled, or otherwiſe, ſhall from time to time annually direct and appoint:

ThisCuſtom oppoſed Ann. 1586. J. S.

But long before this, viz. in the Year 1586, this ancient Cuſtom was ſhook. For ſome there were, who diſliked and oppoſed this Practice of the City, to take into their Cuſtody the Portions and Eſtates of Orphans, and to ſtint Freemen in making their laſt Wills, as to the Diſpoſition of their own Eſtates; thinking it hard that they might not have the Liberty of beſtowing what they had gotten, according to their own Minds and Pleaſures.

Sir James Harvey's Will contrary to this Cuſtom. Anno 1586.

That which gave occaſion to this Complaint at this time, was, the laſt Will and Teſtament of Sir James Harvey, Knt. late Alderman of that City of London. Who had left Sebaſtian Harvey, his eldeſt Son, his Executor, and given him ſo largely, that the younger Children had not their Share allowed by the Cuſtom of Orphanage. Sir James had done this out of a partial Kindneſs to the ſaid Sebaſtian, and ſome conceived Diſguſt againſt the reſt of his Children, Sebaſtian being a principal Party in that hard Action and Device of his Father. So that he was charged with the endeavour of Couzening his Brother and Siſters of their Share in their Father's Eſtate by indirect Practices. And ſo he for his own Ends laboured to overthrow this Cuſtom of the Orphanage; which was done by him, contrary to two Oaths that he had taken. But hereupon at length the Orphans made their Complaint to the Lords of the Council. And ſo there was a Bill depending between the Orphans of Sir James Harvey, Knt. and Sebaſtian Harvey, Executor of the ſaid Sir James, Defendant.

The Maior and Aldermen interpoſe with the Council, for the Orphanage.

Sir Wolſtan Dixie, Lord Maior, and the Court of Aldermen, ſince they had taken divers Oaths for the Maintenance of the ſaid Cuſtom, wrote a Letter to the ſaid Lords, and recommended to their Conſideration a brief Note concerning the Benefits and Neceſſity of that Cuſtom, and the dangerous Inconvenience that might enſue to the State of the City by infringing thereof. Therefore they prayed their Lordſhips by their Providence to prevent ſo great a Prejudice toward the good Eſtate of the City, and to patronize and protect the ſaid Cuſtom and other the Laws and Cuſtoms of the City, being conſonant and agreeable to Reaſon and Equity, if they ſhould be unjuſtly encountred by any. For theſe were the Contents of his Letter, viz.

The Lord Maior to the Lords in behalf of the Orphanage.

'That where the 'moſt neceſſary and beneficial Cuſtom of the 'City touching Orphans, is drawn in queſtion up'on a Bill depending before your Honours, be'tween the Orphans of Sir James Harvey, Knt. 'late Alderman of this City, Complainants, and 'Sebaſtian Harvey, Executor to the ſaid James, 'Defendant: We the Maior and Aldermen '(having taken divers Oaths for the Mainte'nance of the ſaid Cuſtom) have therefore thought 'it good, and in our Duties, humbly to recom'mend to your Honours Conſideration a brief 'Note encloſed, containing the Benefits and Ne'ceſſity of that our Cuſtom, and the dangerous 'Evil that may enſue to the Eſtate of this City 'by infringing thereof. And becauſe the ſame 'Cuſtom is ſome Impediment to the Defendant 'Harvey, to execute his indirect Practices againſt 'his natural Brother and Siſters, it is not there'fore to be doubted, that he will withal endea'vour (contrary to his Oath taken) to ſeek to 'make Shipwrack thereof. Which we are the 'rather induced to ſuſpect, for that the ſaid Har'vey was a principal Party and Practiſer in that 'hard Action and Device of his Father Sir James 'Harvey, intending as ſhould ſeem, to the Over'throw of the ſaid Cuſtom; for maintenance 'whereof, the ſaid Sir James had taken two ſe'veral ſolemn Oaths. By which ſiniſter Practice 'the ſaid Defendant Harvey thought to appropri'ate all his Father's Eſtate in Land and Goods 'to himſelf, and utterly to exclude his Brother 'and Siſters from any Benefit thereof.

'Wherefore we humbly beſeech your good 'Lordſhips, not only with Providence to prevent 'this ſo great a Prejudice, intended toward the 'general State of this City by the ſaid Harvey; 'but alſo by your honourable Favour to patro'nize and protect the ſaid Cuſtom, and other the 'Laws and Cuſtoms of this City (being conſo'nant and agreeable to Reaſon and Equity) if 'the ſame ſhall be unjuſtly encountered, or ad'verſed by any others. So ſhall you not only 'bind us, but the whole City alſo, in all Hum'bleneſs with devout Prayer to recommend your 'moſt Honourable Eſtates to the Almighty.

Your Honours moſt humbly at Commaundment,

Guildhall in London,
June 7, 1586.

WOLSTAN DIXIE, Maior.

To the Lords and others of her
Majeſty's moſt Honourable Privy Council.

It is pity to let ſuch conſiderable Letters of the Maior and Aldermen be utterly loſt and vaniſh, if we can retrieve them and bring them to light; and therefore I have inſerted it. And the Plea encloſed they put in to the Lords for this Cuſtom, was to this Tenour.

The City's Plea for Orphanage.

‘How agreeable the Cuſtom for the Device of the Goods of the Dead into three parts, was to the ancient Laws of this Realm, and uſually put in Practice in moſt Parts of the Realm by a Writ De rationabili parte bonorum.

‘That the Maior and Aldermen being by the Cuſtom, Patrons, and Guardians, as well of the Bodies as of the Goods of Orphans; by reaſon whereof, during their Nonage, the Court of Orphans took care for their reaſonable Maintenance and vertuous Education, foreſaw that they were not defrauded by the Executors, by Concealment or miſpraiſing the Goods by falſe Accompt, nor abuſed by Diſparagement in Marriage, provided ſafeguard for their Portions; ſo that neither themſelves nor others might miſpend the ſame; and in the behalf of the Orphans, did proſecute Suits for Recovery or Defence of their Right; where otherwiſe the Children, for want of Ability, Diſcretion, and Friends to follow their Suits, would often prejudice their Titles, and ſometimes loſe their Rights. And that by this Cuſtom, if any Orphan died within Age, the Intereſt of his Portion was preſerved to his Brothers and Siſters ſurviving; where otherwiſe they might (by Flattery or other Abuſe) be induced to beſtow the ſame by their Wills upon Strangers. Which provident Care had of the Orphans, as aforeſaid, did not only extend to their Benefit, but ſtretched farther to the Good of the Widows, Creditors and Legatories of the Dead, who might by ſiniſter Practices of the Executors be greatly prejudiced, if ſuch exact Care were not had. And which was more, that there were a great number of young and towardly Merchants and Occupiers within the City, relieved and profited by the uſe of Orphans Portions; yielding but an eaſy Allowance to the Orphans for their competent Maintenance. And therefore they hoped this their Cuſtom would ſeem to their Lordſhips, with all favour, the more worthy to be ſupported.

‘Where, on the contrary part, if it ſhould be holden or deemed as a thing lawful and arbitrable for every Freeman at his own Diſcretion and Pleaſure, by fraudulent Deed of Gift in his Lifetime, or by his laſt Will, to diſpoſe of all his Goods after his Death, hereof it would enſue, that many counterfeit Wills and Deeds of Gift would be forged, and, for maintenance thereof, much Perjury committed; many true Wills would be ſuppreſſed; many wilful Men, to advance one Child, for Affection, would leave the reſt Beggers. That hereby alſo Men would defraud their Wives. So that neither rich Woman, nor wiſe Woman would marry with a Citizen, not having Lands of Inheritance. And Women already married would all perſuade their Husbands to become Purchaſers. That hereby would be opened a Gap to much Perjury in theſe Devices. For that every Freeman was ſworn to defend, obey, and maintain this Cuſtom. That hence alſo it might proceed that the Court of Orphans being diſcouraged, might ſlack the Care and Diligence which was taken in Orphans Cauſes; and Orphans, having preſent Poſſeſſion of their Portions, being very young at the time of the Death of their Parents, would preſently depart out of the City, and be in danger, before they were of reaſonable Diſcretion, to be defrauded of their Portion, and to be abuſed in Marriage, either to Beggers, Perſons irreligious, or of light Name. Whereby the Trade of Merchandize would wax cold, the City in Strength and Wealth feebled, Navigation neglected, her Majeſty's Subſidy and Cuſtom diminiſhed, rich Mens Children (deprived of their Birthright) ſhould become Beggers, the Hoſpitals ſurcharged, and an intolerable Burthen impoſed on the City, and all by Fraud; where Fraud, even in things of themſelves lawful, was not favoured in Law.

Who had the Cuſtody of an Orphan formerly. Lib. Alb.

Now who ſhall be Guardians to the City Orphans, I meet with this Caſe about an Orphan in the Reign of King Henry III. when the Mother ſtrove to be its Guardian. And for ſecuring the Child the better in her own Poſſeſſion, went with it into Alhallows Breadſtreet Church. The Caſe was this. Chriſtian, the Wife of Joſce le Spicer, appealed Simon Fitz-Mary, and Robert de Herbyntone, [Aldermen, as it ſeems] before the King's Juſtices ſitting at the Tower; that they on Saturday after the Invention of the Holy Croſs, Anno 25 Hen' III. about the Hour of Three came to the Church of All Saints, Bredſtreet, and by force entred that Church, and took William Fitz William, who was under Age, and in her Cuſtody, from Place to Place, and led him away, and detained him in Perſon, until the Feaſt of St. Lucie following, ſo that he died in their Priſon. And ſhe ſaith, that ſhe was the worſe for it, to the Value of 200 l. Then comes one Joſce [of Kin, as it ſeems, to the Father] and he pleads, that the Cuſtody of the ſaid William was bequeathed to him, with ſix Marks and four Shillings Rent, and the Appurtinences in the City of London, to put it in Uſe and Profit for the ſaid Child till he came of Age.

It was enquired by the ſaid Juſtices concerning the Cuſtom of theſe Legacies; viz. to whom after the Death of Father and Mother, the Cuſtom of their Children ought to belong. They [the Maior and Citizens] ſay, that it is lawful for any of the City to bequeath in his Will, to whom he will, the Cuſtody of his Child, with his Goods and Inheritance, until he come of Age, to the Uſe and Profit of the Child. But if he ſhall not make any ſuch Legacy, and an Inheritance comes from the Father, then the Mother of the Child, or the Kin of the Part of the Mother, ſhall have the Cuſtody, with all his Goods. But if the Inheritance come of the Part of the Mother, then the Kin of the Part of the Father ſhall have the Cuſtody. So that theſe Cuſtoſes are bound to anſwer to the Heir, when he comes to Age, for all the Iſſues of the Inheritance.

Cuſtoms about Freemen and their Apprentices.

And this for the Children of Freemen. To which may be ſubjoined the Oath that every Freeman takes, an ancient Act of Common Council concerning Freemen and their Apprentices, and certain Inſtructions given to Apprentices for their good and dutiful Behaviour. And then this material Caſe ſhall be conſidered, Whether Apprenticeſhip extinguiſhes Gentility in Blood, and degrades from the Degree of a Gentleman. Next ſhall be added certain old Ordinances for the Aſſize and Weight of Bread in the City, together with the Aſſize of ſeveral Trades, employed about the proviſion of Meat and Drink.]

Ye ſhall know no Foreigner to buy or ſell any Merchandize with any other Foreigner within this City or Franchiſe thereof, but ye ſhall warn the Chamberlain thereof, or ſome Miniſter of the Chamber. Ye ſhall implead or ſue no Freeman out of this City, whiles ye may have Right and Law within the ſame City. Ye ſhall take none Apprentice, but if he be free born, (that is to ſay) no Bondman's Son, nor the Son of any Alien, and for no leſs Term than for ſeven Years, without Fraud or Deceit: and within the firſt Year ye ſhall cauſe him to be enrolled, or elſe pay ſuch Fine as ſhall be reaſonably impoſed upon you for omitting the ſame: and after his Terms end, within convenient time (being required) ye ſhall make him free of this City, if he have well and truly ſerved you. Ye ſhall alſo keep the King's Peace in your own Perſon. Ye ſhall know no Gatherings, Conventicles, or Conſpiracies made againſt the King's Peace, but ye ſhall warn the Maior thereof, or let it to your Power. Behaviour of Apprentices. J. S.

YE ſhall conſtantly and devoutly on your Knees every Day ſerve God, Morning and Evening, and make Conſcience in the due hearing of the Word preached, and endeavour the right Practice thereof in your Life and Converſation. You ſhall do diligent and faithful Service to your Maſter for the Time of your Apprenticeſhip, and deal truly in what you ſhall be truſted. You ſhall be of fair, gentle, and lowly Speech and Behaviour towards all Men, and eſpecially to all your Governours. And according to your Carriage, expect your Reward, for good or ill, from God and your Friends.

Lib. C. fo. 88.

I read in the Liber Albus, that none was made Apprentice, or at leaſt admitted into the Freedom of the City, unleſs he were Liberæ Conditionis, that is, of the Quality of a Gentleman born. And that if after he was made free, it was known he was of ſervile Condition, he loſt his Freedom. As certain Citizens, Thomas le Bedel, and others did, that held Lands of the Biſhop of London in Villenagio. And about the Year 1386, or 1387, Nicolas Exton, Maior, this Order was confirmed, that no Apprentice ſhould be taken, no Freedom given, but to ſuch as were Gentlemen born.

Ancient Habit of Apprentices.

City's Advocate, printed 1628.

The ancient Habit of the Apprentices of London, was a flat round Cap, Hair cloſe cut, narrow falling Bands, coarſe ſide Coats, cloſe Hoſe, cloth Stockings, and other ſuch ſevere Apparel. When this Garb had been urged by ſome to the Diſparagement of Apprentices, as a Token of Servitude, one, many a Year ago, undertaking the Defence of theſe Apprentices, wrote thus, That this imported the commendable Thrift of the Citizens, and was only the Mark of an Apprentice's Vocation and Calling, [and which anciently, no queſtion, was the ordinary Habit of a Citizen,] which Point of ancient Diſcipline, he ſaid, the grave common Lawyers do ſtill retain in their Profeſſion. For the Profeſſors of that Learning, we ſee, do at this preſent retain the party-coloured Coats of Serving-men at their Serjeants Feaſts. And he wiſhed, that the Remembrance of this ancient Livery might be preſerved by the grave Citizens, in ſetting apart a particular Time or Day for the Feaſt of their Apprenticeſhip, when they ſhould wear their former Apprentice's Garb; making Profeſſion in this way, that they gloried in the Enſigns of their honeſt Apprenticeſhip.

In the Time of Queen Mary, and beginning of Queen Elizabeth, as well as many Years before, all Apprentices wore blue Clokes in the Summer, and blue Gowns in the Winter. But it was not lawful for any Man, either Servant or other, to wear their Gowns lower than the Calves of their Legs, except they were above threeſcore Years of Age. But the Length of Clokes being not limited, they made them down to their Shoes. Their Breeches and Stockings were uſually of white broad Cloth, viz. round Slops, and their Stockings ſowed up cloſe thereto, as if they were all but one Piece. They alſo wore flat Caps both then and many Years after, as well Apprentices as Journymen and others, both at home and abroad. Whom the Pages of the Court in Deriſion called Flat Caps.

When Apprentices and Journymen attended upon their Maſters and Miſtreſſes in the Night, they went before them carrying a Lanthorn and Candle in their Hands, and a great long Club on their Necks. And many well grown ſturdy Apprentices uſed to wear long Daggers in the Daytime on their Backs or Sides.

They carried Water Tankards.

Anciently it was the general Uſe and Cuſtom of all Apprentices in London (Mercers only excepted, being commonly Merchants, and of better Rank, as it ſeems) to carry Water Tankards, to ſerve their Maſters Houſes with Water, fetched either from the Thames, or the common Conduits of London.

What Money was given with Apprentices.

It was a great matter in former Times, to give 10 l. to bind a Youth Apprentice; but in King James the Firſt's Time, they gave 20, 40, 60, and ſometimes 100 l. with an Apprentice. But now theſe Prices are vaſtly enhanced, to 500 or 600, or 800 l.

A Proclamation for the Apparel of Apprentices. J. S.

But becauſe the Apprentices of London were often Children of Gentlemen, and Perſons of good Quality, they did affect to go in coſtly Apparel, and wear Weapons, and frequent Schools of Dancing, Fencing, and Muſic: Therefore by an Act of Common Council in May, Anno 1582, theſe things were thought fit to be forbidden; and this remarkable Proclamation was iſſued out by the Lord Maior for that Intent and Purpoſe.

By the MAIOR.

WHere of late time Seruantes and Apprentiſes within this Citie, are by indulgence and lacke of conuenient ſeneritie, growne to great enormitie and diſorder, in exceſſe of Apparell, and the Faſhions therof, vncomely for theyr calling, and in haunting of inconuenient places and exerciſes, to the great waſte of their owne thrift, corruption of maners, maintenance of pride and diſobedience, and manifeſt occaſion of vntrue dealing towardes their Maiſters and Frendes, and great ſclaunder of this Citie and the gouernaunce thereof. For redreſſe hereof, be it enacted and ordayned by the Lord Maior, and the Aldermen his brethren, and this preſent Common Counſell aſſembled, and by the authoritie of the ſame, That there ſhall be vniformitie vſed, and no difference appoynted of the Apparell of Aprentiſes in this Citie for one Company aboue another, in the Formes or Faſhions hereafter expreſſed.

Alſo, that no Apprentiſe ſhall weare any Doblet other then of Canuaſe, Fuſtian, Sackcloth, Lether, or Wollen Cloth; and of thoſe ſortes, no Spaniſh or forreine Lether, nor cut, nor ruffed, other then a playne edge of the ſame about it, nor ſtriped in the weauing with Silke or Metall, nor garniſhed nor mingled with any other Stuffe, nor with any Silke, or Lace, or Stiching, or ſilke Buttons.

Alſo, that no Apprentiſe ſhall weare in his Hoſe any other ſtuffe then Wollen Cloth, Kerſey, ſuch Canuaſe or Sackcloth as is before allowed for Doblets, or Lether dreſſed in England, and no Lether but in Breeches onely.

Alſo, that no Apprentiſe ſhall weare any Breeches made great, but in moſt playne maner and cloſe, or a ſmall playne ſloppe, and with no other lining then cloſe to the legge for ſtrengthening of the Hoſe, and not otherwiſe ſtuffed or filled with any thing, and without any ſtitching, lace, garde, welt, or other garniſhing: nor any Poyntes other then of Lether or Thred.

Alſo, that no Apprentiſe ſhall weare any outermoſt Garment, other then a Gowne of Cloth of the vſuall faſhion of Apprentiſes Gownes; and not lined or faced with any other then Wollen Cloth, Cotten, or Bayes, blacke, or of the coulor of the outſide: Or els a playne Cloke, with a round ſtanding collar onely, and reaching down to the knee at the leaſt. And that ſuch Gowne or Cloke ſhall not be welted or garded, nor haue any Silke or Cruell in Lace, ſtitching or otherwiſe in or about it, nor otherwiſe lined or faced then is aforeſayd for the Gowne.

And be it enacted, That this preſent Acte, for ſo much as concerneth wearing Apparell aboue forbidden, ſhall be put in execution onely for offences to be committed agaynſt this Acte, from and after the Feaſt of the holy Trinitie next comming, and not before. And for ſo much as concerneth reſorting to the ſayd Schooles and Exerciſes, ſhall be put in execution for all ſuch offences from the laſt day of this preſent moneth of Maye.

None to be a Citizen without ſerving an Apprenticeſhip. J. S.

But to ſpeak here a few things more concerning thoſe we call Apprentices, which are that Rank of Men that are brought up to be the Stay of the City, that is, to be the Citizens of it. For without ſerving a certain number of Years with ſome Freeman of the City, no Man, be he born in London, or of Parents Londoners, is admitted to be a Citizen or Freeman of London, to follow a Trade there. And that becauſe it is ſo neceſſary, that he who ſhall take upon him to ſet up a Trade in the City, ſhould firſt employ ſome competent Time in the learning thereof, and dwell with ſomebody that may teach him; as the Word Apprentice doth denote. For Polydore Virgil (who was a Stranger, and ſo unacquainted with our Language) miſtook, when he derived Apprentice quaſi pro Emptitio, as all one with one bought with Money, as the Roman Bondſlaves were; but it is (as Sir Thomas Smith more truly and more rightly ſhews) a French Word, and betokeneth a Learner: For Apprendre, in French, is to Learn. Whence Apprentice ſignifies a Scholar, or one that learns. And ſo he to whom he is bound, is called his Maſter, or his Teacher, not his Lord. Nor is it a Bondage, ſince there is a mutual Agreement and Covenant between both Parties, put into Writing, ſigned and ſealed by both, and regiſtred for more Aſſurance: And that only for a Time. The Sum whereof is, That the Maſter is to teach his Apprentice his Trade, and he to learn and obey his Maſter. But yet, during the Time, ſaith the ſaid Smith, it is Vera Servitus, i. e. a true Servitude. He means ſurely hereby, not to equal Apprenticeſhip to the Roman Bondage of Slaves, but in reſpect of certain Points of Subjection and Hardſhip that reſemble it. As, 'That whatſoever the Apprentice gets of his own Labour, or of his Maſter's 'Occupation or Stock, he getteth to him whoſe 'Apprentice he is. He muſt not lie forth of his 'Maſter's Doors; he muſt not occupy any Stock 'of his own; nor marry without his Maſter's 'Licenſe. And he muſt do all ſervile Offices 'about the Houſe, and be obedient to all his 'Maſter's Commandments. And ſhall ſuffer ſuch 'Correction as his Maſter ſhall think meet: and 'is at his Maſter's clothing and nouriſhing. And thus, as he concludes afterwards (ſpeaking of hired Servants) 'the Neceſſity and Want 'of Bondmen hath made Men to uſe Freemen 'as Bondmen, to all ſervile Services; but yet 'more liberally and freely, and with a more E'quality and Moderation, than in Time of Gen'tility, Slaves and Bondmen were wont to be 'uſed.

De Rep. Anglor.

The Condition of Apprentices.

The falſe Conceit that Apprenticeſhip is Bondage.

Yet ſome there have been, that from ſuch Repreſentations of the State of an Apprentice, have falſely concluded it to be a real Bondage, as it is taken in the Civil Law. And this Conceit hath prevailed ſo much, that they have imagined, that as a Conſequence from hence, it hath deprived a Gentleman born, of his Quality, and corrupted his Blood. So that no Apprentice might take place as a Gentleman, in whatever gentile Quality he were born, as the Apprenticeſhip left them under the Blemiſh of Bondage, and the Penalty of loſing their Gentry. On this account it is, that the Citizens are ſo deſpiſed by the Country Gentry, and it is lookt upon as ſuch a Diſparagement for any of them to inter-marry with the Child of a Citizen. Hence alſo it comes to paſs, that many Gentlemen in the Country utterly refuſe to ſend up their younger Children to learn honeſt Trades to get Wealth, and improve their Fortunes by Merchandize, or other Traffic; chuſing rather to keep them always in the Country, to live idly, and to depend ſometimes on their elder Brother, or on ſome ſmall Annuity: Whereby not ſeldom they take naughty Courſes for a Subſiſtence.

An Apprentice different from a Slave.

Whereas in Truth, all this is built upon Miſtake. For Apprenticeſhip is quite a different thing from Bondage or Slavery. Neither can a Man forfeit his Gentility, by the Laws of the Engliſh Heraldry, but by ſome particular unworthy and diſhonourable Acts of his own, (as Treaſon, Cowardice, &c.) as I have heard aſſerted by the late learned Sir Henry St. George, Kt. Garter. For we take no Notice what the Civil or Imperial Laws determine in ſuch Caſes.

An Accident that happened for the further clearing this matter.

But for further and more particular Satisfaction in ſo weighty a Matter as this is, both for the Honour of the City, whoſe Magiſtrates and Members are conſtituted of ſuch as have firſt been Apprentices, and for the Encouragement of Gentlemen to ſend up their Sons to London, to take Buſineſs and Employments upon them, and to become uſeful Members of the Commonwealth, and to advance themſelves in the World, I ſhall declare a Matter that fell out above fourſcore Years ago, and what happened thereupon, tending to the clearing this Buſineſs. A young Gentleman whoſe Father had been an Apprentice in London, but of a good Family, was affronted in Company for this very thing, as tho' he were no Gentleman born; implying that his Father's Apprenticeſhip had corrupted his Blood. The Gentleman the Father was ſtirred at this not a little; and was fully bent to get this Matter fully debated. And again, another Gentleman's Son, Apprentice in London, being much diſcouraged at this ſuppoſed Degradation, wrote to his Father, that by reading certain Books at his ſpare Hours, and conferring with ſome who took upon them to have Skill in Heraldry, he was brought to believe, that by being an Apprentice he loſt his Birthright, and the Right of his Blood, both by Father and Mother; which was, to be a Gentleman: Which Diſhonour, added he, I had rather die than to endure. The Gentleman upon this Letter of his Son, was very earneſt, as was the other, to have the Point cleared, and to receive Satisfaction from ſuch as were ſkilful in ſuch Matters: Nor cared he for Charge, for the getting it decided. And proteſted, that if it were as his Son had writ, he ſhould not ſtay in London, tho' it coſt him 500 l.

For the Satisfaction of both theſe Gentlemen, a certain learned Herald, (ſuppoſed to be Philipot, Somerſet) to whom the former had writ, ſet himſelf to ſtudy the Point, himſelf reckoning it very fit to be reſolved, becauſe nothing lightly could be a greater Diſparagement, than for the Free to become a kind of Bondman, or to be ſprung of ſuch as were ſo. And becauſe ſuch an Opinion was ſo apt to breed bad Affections among People of the ſame Nation, whence great Miſchiefs often aroſe, even to Hatred, Quarrel, and Homicide. And laſtly, becauſe of that Diſdain in ſome, to ſeem either Citizens and City-bred, or to owe any thing of their Worſhip or Eſtate to either.

Apprenticeſhip no Bondage.

The Herald ſhewed, that Apprenticeſhip was no true Bondage, nor no Bondage at all. For the Indentures that paſs'd between the Maſter and Apprentice were nothing but Civil Contracts; namely, that by an indented Inſtrument for the true and faithful Service of a few Years, the Maſter ſhould teach his Apprentice his own Trade or Myſtery, and how to gain thereby honeſtly, and raiſe himſelf. Which kind of Contracts, all the World knows, Bondmen were uncapable of doing. It is a mutual Obligation or Convention between both Parties. And the Act of binding is no more, but that the Maſter might be determinately for the Time, and ſufficiently for the manner, ſure to enjoy his Apprentice. And only ſuch as are free born are capable to make a Contract with Effect.

What makes a Bondman.

That which conſtituted a Bondman among the old Romans, was ſuch a Power and Right veſted in the Lord over the very Body of his Bondman or Slave, as deſcending to him under ſome received Title, or other Jure Gentium, and was maintained by him Jure civili Romanorum. By vertue whereof, he became Proprietary in the Perſon of his Bondman, as in the Body of his Ox, Horſe, or any other Beaſt he had. Which Propriety was indeterminable, but only by Manumiſſion. And that Act meerly depended upon the Will of the Lord, without any Indenture or Condition on behalf of the Slave. Finally, Servus, a Slave, among them nullum Caput habuit; i. e. had no Head in Law, and neither was in Cenſu, nor in Luſtro condita: as much as to ſay, they were out of the number of Men, their Names being neither put (as among ſuch as had wherewith to pay) in the Rolls of their Exchequer, or Tables of their Capitol, nor as Bodies wherewith to ſerve in the general Muſters of the Commonweal; but were reputed Civiliter mortui, dead in Law; Death and Bondage being alike among them; and without any more Reputation of being Members in the Body than brute Cattel. For Bondmen were reputed Nobody. And in caſe of Manumiſſion, the Bondman after Manumiſſion continued in ſuch a relation to his late Lord, that in certain Caſes (as that of Ingratitude) he who was once enfranchiſed, was adjudged back to his Patron, and condemn'd again to a far more miſerable Service than ever. But nothing like all this in Apprenticeſhip.

Servi pro nullis habiti.

Two ſorts of Bondmen.

He ſhewed further, that by the old common Law of England, deſcending from the Civil, there are two ſorts of Bondmen, viz. Villains in groſs, and Villains regardant to a Manour. Now it is certain, our Apprentice or Scholar in City Myſteries, is neither one nor other of them.

Work, Reſtraint and Correction makes not a Bondman.

And as for Work, Reſtraint, and Correction, which were things Bondmen were ſubject to: but ſo are Scholars and Soldiers; who were never look'd upon to be in a State of Bondage, or to loſe their Quality for being ſo. Reſtraint and Correction is but for a Year or two, while the Apprentice is commonly at the Age of a Boy, or at the moſt but a Lad or a Stripling. And as for the Work and Labour he is to do, 'tis true ſome things there are ſometimes impoſed upon him which a Gentleman would not do, that lived ſui Juris. Yet on the other ſide, we conſtantly deny, that he does any of theſe as ſervile, or as ſervilely, but propter finem nobilem; i. e. for a noble End; that is, to learn an honeſt Myſtery, to enable him to the Service of God and his Country in the Station, Place and Calling of a Citizen. And all is in Ordine, in order, and in the way to Maſterſhip, and to the Eſtate of a Citizen. And the Maſter in the mean while ſerves his Apprentice with Inſtruction, and univerſal Conformation and moulding of him to an Art; as the Apprentice ſerves his Maſter with Obedience, Faith and Induſtry. So that an Apprentice's Condition is but like the well being of a Child under his Father, who may reſtrain, rebuke, and correct him, and lay Work upon him; yet he doth all for his Good.

The Maſter's Power is not deſpotical.

For the Maſter's Power is not Deſpoticum Imperium; that is, not ſuch a Power as an abſolute Lord hath over his Slave; but as it were Curatura, a Guardianſhip, and a Truſt; and he is in very Truth a Diſcipliner or Teacher, endued with Authority of uſing moderate Correction as a Father, not as a Tyrant.

Apprentices no Slaves. City's Advoc. printed 1629.

Whatſoever their Indentures do purport, and howſoever they ſeem conditional, Servants are in Truth not bound to do or ſuffer things more grievous than young Soldiers in Armies, or Scholars in Schools, or Novices in Noviceſhips. Each of whom in their kinds uſually do and ſuffer things as baſe and vile in their own Quality, ſimply and in themſelves conſidered, as perhaps the very meaneſt of Five thouſand Apprentices in London.

Apprenticeſhip an Honour, and a Degree.

So that Apprenticeſhip in London is no Diſhonour, nor Degradation; but rather an Honour, and a Degree. He is very hardy that ſhall embaſe honeſt Induſtry with diſgraceful Cenſures, and too unjuſt, who ſhall not cheriſh and encourage it with Praiſe and Worſhip, as the ancient Policy of England did and doth, in conſtituting Corporations, and adorning the Companies with Banners of Armes, and eſpecial Members thereof with Notes of Nobility. And as it is an Honour, ſo it is a Degree, or Order of good regular Subjects: Out of whoſe (as it were) Noviceſhip or Colleges, Citizens are ſupplied from time to time. We call them Colleges, according to the old Roman Law Phraſe, or Fellowſhips of Men. For ſo indeed they are, comprehended within ſeveral Corporations, or Bodies of Free Perſons, intended to be conſociated together for Commerce, according to Conſcience and Juſtice, and named Companies. So that Apprentices, according to the Eſteem of our Commonwealth, when firſt they come to be Apprentices, firſt begin to be Somebody, who before were young Men without any Vocation in the World. And ſo by other Aſcents or Steps come to be Freemen of London, or Citizens: thence to be of their Companies Liveries, Governors of Companies, as Wardens and Maſters; and Governors in the City, as Common Council Men, Aldermens Deputies, Sheriffs, and Aldermen; and laſtly, the principal Governors, or Heads of the City, that is, Lord Maiors: And ſome alſo have been advanced from being Citizens to be Counſellors of Eſtate to the Prince.

Citizens, why called Barons. Mat. Paris.

So that the very being a Citizen is an Honour: and anciently they were called Barons. Mathew Paris obſerves, how the Citizens were honoured with that Title in his Time, which was about 1253, and the reaſon why: Quos propter Civitatis Dignitatem, & Civium antiquam Libertatem, BARONES conſuevimus appellare: i. e. Whom we have accuſtomed to call BARONS, by reaſon of the City's Dignity, and the ancient Liberty of the Citizens. This Term is found in this City's ancient Charters. So in that of Henry I. whoſe Favours are granted to the Church, the Barons, and the Citizens: (Eccleſiæ, & Barones & Cives habeant & teneant, bene & in pace, Socas ſuas cum omnibus Conſuetudinibus) including therein (as it ſeems) the three Ranks that make up the City, viz. the Churchmen, the Barons, that is, the Aldermen, and the reſt of the Freemen of the City. But it muſt be known, that this Term is not peculiar to the Citizens of London, but was common to other Cities and eminent Places; as to York, and Cheſter, and Warwick; as Dr. Brady obſerves. The Word is French; for ſo the Citizens of Orleans and Bourges were termed BARONES.

How Gentility comes to be forfeited.

It is further evident, that Apprenticeſhip doth not deprive of Gentry; for no Man loſeth his Right to bear Armes, or to write Gentleman, unleſs he be attainted in Law for ſuch a Cauſe; the Conviction whereof doth immediately procure Corruption in Blood. Which in this Caſe no Man yet hath dreamt of. The Apprentice hath no more loſt his Title and Right to Gentry, than he hath done to any Goods, Chattels, Lands, Royalties, or any thing elſe, which if he had never been any Apprentice, either had, might or ought to have come unto him. The Rights of Blood are more inherent than the Rights of Fortune, according to the Law Rule, Jura Sanguinum nullo jure civili dirimi poſſunt: i. e. The Law of Bloods cannot be deſtroyed by any civil Right. That Gentry is a Right of Blood, may appear by this, that no Man can truly alienate the ſame, or veſt another in it, tho' legally he may in caſe of Adoption, which is but a humane Invention, in Imitation of Nature; and in the Truth of the thing, no Alienation at all; but a Fiction, or an Acceptation in Law, as if it were ſuch. Gentry is a Quality of Blood, as Virtue and Learning are of the Mind.

The Miſchief of this Opinion.

This is the Sum of what that learned Herald argued in Confutation of that Opinion, that Apprenticeſhip extinguiſheth Gentry. And he ſent this his Diſcourſe to the Gentleman who deſired his Judgment herein. Whence, no queſtion, he received full Satisfaction. And the Herald took the more pains in confuting this falſe Conceit, that it was a thing unbeſeeming a Gentleman to be an Apprentice to a Citizen or Burgeſs; becauſe it had filled England with more Vices, and ſacrificed more ſerviceable Bodies to odious Ends, and more Souls to ſinful Lives, than perhaps any one other uncivil Opinion whatſoever. For they who held it better to rob by Land or Sea than to beg or labour, did daily ſee and feel, that out of Apprentices roſe ſuch as ſet upon them, ſtanding out for Lives as Malefactors; when they, a Shame and Sorrow to their Kindred, underwent a Fortune too unworthy.

Garter's Approbation.

About ten or twelve Years after, this uſeful Diſcourſe was made public, and printed under the Title of the City's Advocate, with the Approbation of Sir William Segar, Garter, at the End of the Book. Whoſe Words I ſhall inſert, to ſignify the Judgment of the Heralds, who are the proper Judges in Matters of this Nature, and Garter the Principal of them: 'I have viewed 'this Book, and peruſed the Contents of it, 'and find nothing diſſonant to Reaſon, or contrary to Honour or Armes.

Will. Segar, Garter.

And ſomething more largely in the beginning of the Book, the ſame Garter thus gives his Opinion of the Author and his Work, 'That ſeeing 'he only lay upon the defenſive and affirmative 'againſt Aſſailers and Deniers, with due Sub'miſſion for the judicial part to the proper 'Court of Honour, the illuſtrious High Marſhals 'of England by Commiſſion, he ſaw no Cauſe 'why his learned Work might not receive the 'Glory of public Light, and that moſt renowned 'City the Benefit of Honours Increaſe, for the 'Encouragement of enriching Induſtry.

The Author dedicated his Book to the Senate and City, 11 Cal. Novemb. 1628. And in his Dedication he tells them, 'That in this one Act of 'his, [he means the Argument of his Book] he 'did not only ſeem to be Patron and Defender 'of Birthrights, and of the Rights of Fortune, 'but the Champion alſo of civil Arts, and of 'flouriſhing Induſtry among them, the Sinew 'and Life itſelf of Commonweals. And that 'tho' the Schools and Camp were moſt proper 'for Honour and Armes, yet the ancient Wiſ'dom of our Sages did ever leave the Gates of 'Honour open to City Arts, and to the Myſte'ries of honeſt Gain, as fundamental in Com'monweals, and ſuſceptive of external Splendor, 'according to the moſt laudable Example of 'riſing Rome under her firſt Dictators and Con'ſuls.

Inſurrections made by the Apprentices of London.

The Apprentices of London are ſo conſiderable a Body, that they have ſometimes made themſelves formidable by Inſurrections and Mutinies in the City, getting ſome Thouſands of them together, and pulling down Houſes, breaking open the Gates of Newgate, and other Priſons, and ſetting the Priſoners free. And this upon Occaſion ſometimes of Foreigners, who have followed their Trades in the City, to the ſuppoſed Damage of the native Freemen, or when ſome of their Brotherhood have been unjuſtly, as they have pretended, caſt into Priſon and puniſhed. But they have been commonly aſſiſted, and often egged on and headed by Apprentices of the Dreggs of the Vulgar, Fellows void of worthy Blood, and worthy Breeding; yea, perhaps not Apprentices at all, but forlorn Companions, maſterleſs Men, and Tradeleſs, and the like. Who prying for Miſchief, and longing to do it, have been the very Authors of all that is vile, diſcourteous to honourable Strangers, (all travelling Strangers ought to be uſed as ſuch) rude towards Natives, ſeditious among their own, and villainous every where.

The Apprentices make an Inſurrection againſt Foreigners

The Apprentices in Queen Elizabeth's Days ſometimes made ſuch Mutinies. And ſo they did in the beginning of September, 1586. when they made a formidable Inſurrection, (amounting to little leſs than Treaſon) againſt the French and Dutch: And they had, it ſeemeth, premeditated this Inſurrection, and had a Captain: So that it threatened as much Miſchief as that Evil May-Day in the Reign of King Henry VIII. But by the timely Care that was taken by the Magiſtrates, it was prevented, and ſome of them taken. And ſo the Recorder, Mr. Fleetwood, acquainted the Lord Treaſurer in a Letter writ the 6th of September, ‘That that Day from two of the Clock until ſix, the Lord Maior, with ſome of the Aldermen his Brethren, and himſelf, had examined certain of theſe Apprentices for conſpiring an Inſurrection in this City againſt the French and Dutch; but eſpecially againſt the French. A thing as like unto Ill May-Day, (as the Recorder added) as could be deviſed, in all manner of Circumſtances, mutatis mutandis. There wanted nothing but Execution. That they had taken five, all of an Age, yet all under 21. Four of them Darbyſhire born, the fifth born in Norhamſhire. And that they were ſearching and ſeeking for the principal Captain, and hoped that they ſhould hear of him that Night; for he had been walking all that Day in the Whitehall at Weſtminſter; and at his coming home they truſted to have him. That they had that Night ſet a ſtanding Watch armed, from nine until ſeven in the Morning; and meant to continue the ſame ſo long as it ſhould be thought convenient unto his Honour, and the reſidue of the Lords. And that that Night Mr. Atturny General ſent his Man to him [the Recorder] to ſet his Hand and Seal unto a Warrant, to ſummon an Inqueſt of Inquiry to appear to morrow at Weſtminſter-Hall. And that the Citizens, when they ſhould hear of it, would like it very well: For they all cried out, that Juſtice might be done upon theſe Traytors. The foreſaid Apprentices, who were of the Myſtery of Plaiſterers, were committed to Newgate, upon the Queen's Highneſs and her Council's Commandment; where they were like to remain, till they were delivered by ſpecial Warrant. And ſo concluded, beſeeching God to preſerve, firſt her Majeſty, and then his Lordſhip, from all theſe Traitors, and ſuch other like People. Written from Guild-hall.

Libels diſperſed.

Abuſive Ballads and Libels were too common in the City in Queen Elizabeth's Time, therein reflecting too boldly and ſeditiouſly upon the Government; particularly in caſe of a Dearth: often againſt the Strangers that came and ſettled here, and followed their Trades: Which the Apprentices and others took grievouſly, without conſidering their miſerable State, being forced to leave their own native Countries, by reaſon of Cruelty and Perſecution. But of theſe ſeditious Practices, the Magiſtrates of the City took Notice, and committed the Diſperſers and Authors, when they found them; and withal informed the Court thereof. Thus in the Year 1595, Sir John Spencer, Maior, wrote to the Lord Treaſurer in the Month of June, ‘That that Morning coming from the ordinary Place of the meeting of him and his Brethren, in St. Paul's Church before Sermon, at the Steps, a Libel (a Copy whereof, literatim, was encloſed) was delivered unto him by one of Sir Richard Martins's Servants, who told him, that it was that Morning found under the ſaid Sir Richard's Door. And hereof he thought it his Duty by his Letters humbly to advertiſe his Lordſhip. In this Libel he, the Lord Maior, was reproached, and the ſaid Alderman, in whoſe Houſe it was found, was commended. Concerning which, and what might be gathered thereof, he left to his honourable Conſideration.

Apprentices riſe.

And as tho' this Libel were an Introduction to a Mutiny, (or a Mob, as we call it) ‘That while the Maior was writing this, he underſtood of ſuch great Diſorder of a Multitude of rebellious Apprentices in ſeveral Parts of this City, as, he feared, the ſame would not be ſuppreſſed, until ſome of them were puniſhed by Martial Law; and their Maſters alſo fined and puniſhed: Whom he, the Maior, by ſeveral Precepts had commanded to keep their Servants within their Doors. And ſo he expected to underſtand further of his Lordſhip's Will or Advice. Informing his Lordſhip in the Concluſion, That ſince his Writing, he had apprehended divers, and ſent them to Ward. But that his Sword-bearer was hurt at the Tower, being held by the Lieutenant's Man himſelf, and the Sword pulled down. For commonly theſe Mutineers met in Tower-Hill, or in ſome Parts near the Tower.

The Sword-bearer hurt at the Tower.

And the next Year, Sir Stephen Slany, Maior, in the Month of July was brought to his Hands a certain Ballad, containing a Complaint of great Want and Scarcity of Corn within the Realm. ‘And foraſmuch as it contained in it certain vain and preſumptuous matters, bringing in the Queen, ſpeaking with her People Dialogue-wiſe, in very fond and undecent ſort, (as the ſaid Maior in his Letter, wrote alſo to the Lord Treaſurer, ſhewed) and preſcribing Order for the remedying this Dearth of Corn; which was extracted, as it ſeemed, out of a Book publiſhed by the Lords the laſt Year; but done in that vain and indiſcreet manner, as that thereby the Poor might aggravate their Grief, and take occaſion of ſome Diſcontentment: Therefore he thought fit to acquaint the ſaid Lord, that he called before him both the Printer and the Party by whom it was put to print; who pretended a Licenſe for it. But that finding it to be untrue, he committed him to one of the Counters, and took Sureties of the Printer himſelf for his Appearance.

And then the Maior deſired the Lord Treaſurer's Direction, whether he thought it fit to inflict any further Puniſhment upon him.

A Libel for the Silk-Weavers. Delonie the Writer.

The Maker of this ſcurrilous Ballad was one Delonie, an idle Fellow, and one noted with the like Spirit, in printing a Book for the Silk Weavers: Wherein was found ſome ſuch like fooliſh and diſorderly matter. Him the Maior alſo was in Search for, but could not yet find him; as he ſignified alſo to the ſaid Lord, and ſent him a Copy of the foreſaid Ballad. The Magiſtrates of the City would by no means allow in thoſe Days any unworthy Reflections or Speeches againſt the Prince.

More Libels diſcovered.

A little after, the ſaid Slany, Maior, ſent the Lord Treaſurer two Libels more, which were found, and brought to him: and now in September two more were likewiſe found, that were diſperſed by ſome ſeditious Perſons in the City. Which he likewiſe ſent to his Honour, referring the matter unto his further Conſideration.

And this Fondneſs of Wit and Spight in abuſing Superiors, could hardly be remedied here in London by Puniſhment. For before this, when divers Apprentices, and ſuch like other diſorderly Perſons, had ſuffered Puniſhment in the beginning

A Libel by ſome Apprentice of St Katharines. ning of the ſame Year 1596, a Libel was taken up in April that Year, within the Warder's Room before the Tower Gate by the Under-Porter there. And of this the ſame Maior informed the Lord Treaſurer. It was eſpecially directed againſt one Man, (as his Lordſhip might perceive) yet foraſmuch as there was mention made of the late Juſtice done againſt thoſe diſorderly Perſons, Apprentices and others, with an Invective againſt the Council of the Land; whereby he meant, as the Lord Maior ſuppoſed, the learned Council and Judges of the Realm, he thought meet to make his Lordſhip acquainted withal. He added, that the Libel (as might be conjectured by the Stile and Manner of Writing, and the Place where it was found) ſeemed to have been deviſed by ſome Apprentice of St. Katharines, or thereabouts, or by ſome other leud and diſcontented Perſon, that could be contented to ſee ſome Stir and Diſturbance within this City and Commonwealth. He ſent that Lord both the Original, and an Extract, becauſe the Writing was ſomewhat hard to be picked out. And ſo craving his Lordſhip's Direction, whether he ſhould proceed by Examination to find out the Author, with the Advice and Help of Mr. Lieutenant, or rather ſuppreſs it till they heard more; conſidering the Times, and the End and Purpoſe of ſuch as ſcatter infamous Libels and ſeditious Writings: Who deſired nothing more, than to have them blazed and ſcattered abroad.

Fees of Apprentices. There was of late in the Year 1705, a Complaint made in behalf of the Apprentices of London, for the enhancing of the Fees of their enrolling, turning over, Copies of their Freedom, and other Exactions. The Particulars of which will more evidently appear by this Paper, drawn up by Mr. Bromley, a good Citizen, printed in their behalf.

The CASE of the Apprentices of London, and others, in Reference to the Complaints lately made to the Court of Aldermen of the Exactions in the Chamberlain's Office. Humbly offered to the Conſideration of the Lord Maior, Court of Aldermen, and Common Council.

WHereas a Committee of the Court of Aldermen was lately appointed to conſider of the Complaints made againſt ſome of the Officers in the Chamber of London, for exacting Money from Perſons enrolled, turned over, and made free, over and above the legal Fees and Duties, to the Oppreſſion of great numbers of her Majeſty's Subjects, eſpecially the poor Handicrafts, many of whom have not taken up their Freedom, becauſe they could not raiſe Money to anſwer the exorbitant Demands of the Officers;

Now, for the better Information of the ſaid Committee, and all others whom it may concern, the publiſhing the ſaid legal Fees and Duties hath been thought a uſeful piece of Service, which take as follows, viz.

	l.	s.	d.

NOTE, Theſe are the Legal Fees and Duties, and whatever is exacted over and above, is conceived to be Extortion, for which an Indictment or Information will lie.

'Tis ſaid, that the Fees demanded and taken of late by the Clerk of the Chamber, or his Deputy, for which Complaint hath been made, are as follows, viz.

For enrolling of an Apprentice, inſtead of Four Pence - - - - -	00	03	00
For turning over of an Apprentice, inſtead of Four Pence - - -	00	03	00

For the Copy of a Freedom, inſtead of 2 s. 6 d. &c. from Six Shillings and Six Pence, unto Sixteen Shillings and Six Pence, (including Two Shillings for the Stamps) beſides what is exacted by the Yeoman of the Chamber over and above the legal Fees he is appointed to receive.

What is given to the Under Clerks, Cuſhion-bearer, and Poors Box, is an Act of Grace, and not of Debt, and ought always to be ſo diſtinguiſhed.

See the Statute made the 22d of Henry VIII. Chap. 4.

The Abuſes of Maſters and Wardens of Fellowſhips and Fraternities, being ſet forth, in exacting exorbitant Fees of Prentices, &c. For Remedy whereof it is Enacted, That no Maſter, Wardens, or Fellowſhip of Crafts or Myſteries, or any of them, nor any Rulers of Fraternities, take from henceforth of any Apprentice or any other Perſon or Perſons, for the Entry of any Prentice into their ſaid Fellowſhip, above the Sum of 2 s. 6 d. nor for his Entry when his Years and Term is expired and ended, above 3 s. 4 d. upon pain of Forfeiture of Forty Pounds for every time that they do to the contrary, the one half to the King, the other half to the Party that ſhall ſue by Action of Debt, Information or otherwiſe, and that in the Action aforeſaid no Protection or Eſſoign ſhall be allowed. See the Statute of 28 Hen. VIII. cap. 5. where Proviſion is made to prevent the Evaſion of this Statute.

By this and many other Statutes it appears, how careful our Anceſtors have been to encourage rage Trade and Induſtry, and to prevent Extortion. And tho' Cities and Towns Corporate are not herein expreſly named, they are no doubt by an equitable Conſtruction included, and can by no means make Laws or Ordinances to oppreſs the Subject, by inhancing the ancient Fees of Offices, eſpecially where Trade and Induſtry are concerned. Extortion is puniſhable by the Common Law of England, in many Caſes where the Statute Law doth not reach it.

The Lord Chief Juſtice Coke's Definition of Extortion, Inſtit. 1. Folio 368. viz.

Extortion in its proper Senſe is a great Miſpriſion, by wreſting or unlawfully taking by any Officer, by Colour of his Office, any Money or valuable Thing, of or from any Man, either that is not due, or more than is due, or before it is due.

Ancient Rules and Judgments about Apprentices.

In the ancient Rolls of the Maiors are theſe ſeveral Rules and Judgments concerning the Apprentices of London.

Apprentices have been diſcharged from the Service of their Maſters for ſeveral Cauſes, as may be underſtood from what follows.

Rot. Whiting. & Rot. Brembre, 1 R 2. Rot. Hadley. Rot. Standon. Rot. Sevenoke. Rot Crowmer. Rot. Wotton. Rot. Lovekyn. Rot. Marow. Rot Otely. Rot. Olney.

One was diſcharged from his Maſter, becauſe his Maſter held no Shop, and withdrew himſelf from the City. Another, becauſe his Maſter did not teach him. Another, becauſe his Maſter was in Ludgate, and entruſted him not. Another, becauſe not enrolled within a Year. Another, becauſe his Maſter was diſtracted in his Mind. Another, becauſe his Maſter was ſo poor that he could not exhibit to him. Another, becauſe his Maſter diverted himſelf to other Occupations than his own Myſtery. Another, becauſe his Maſter was a Leper. Another, becauſe the Wife after the Death of her Huſband, taught him not. And laſtly, another, becauſe his Maſter inordinately chaſtiſed him.

A Bill was once put up in Parliament, for a Statute to annul an Order made by the City, that none ſhould put his Son Apprentice to a Citizen of London, unleſs he might expend twenty Shillings a Year.

Notes of the Freedom of the City.

Concerning the Freemen and Freedom and Liberties of the City, theſe things I have noted out of the Cities Records.

The Lord Maior might give the Freedom of the City to a certain Number: Which was ſo diſliked, that the City agreed yearly to give him forty Marks to make none free, or two Hogſheads of Wine.

That all Freemen remaining out of the City, return within a certain Time to the ſame.

That if a Freeman proſecute another Freeman without the City, he ſhall loſe his Freedom, and make a Fine.

A Brief from the King, to the City, that none within the City, having 40 l. Land by the Year, but he take Knighthood upon him.

Rot. Walworth.

An Act was commenced againſt one, who took Cuſtom of a Freeman of the City. [For the Citizens are free from Toll and Cuſtom throughout England by Charter.]

A Letter was ſent to the Men of Jernemute, [i. e. Yarmouth] that they hinder not the Citizens of London of their Liberties: But that they may buy and ſell freely, and exerciſe their Merchandizes. And a Petition was preferred by the Citizens in the Parliament againſt them, about the End of Edward II.

One loſt his Liberty, becauſe he was admitted to the ſame without the Conſent of twelve Men of every Ward.

Another loſt his Freedom, becauſe he was convict in Parliament of great Extortions. So commendably did the Citizens cut off from themſelves ſcandalous Members.

The King once ſent a Letter to the City for Foreigners to be admitted to the Freedom of it. But the Anſwer they made was, that the ſaid Strangers would colour the Merchandizes of other Strangers, if they were admitted into the Liberty.]

Orders for Bread and Bakers by Q Elizabeth's Privy Council. J. S.

The ancient Appointment of the juſt Weight and Quantity of each Loaf of Bread, was confirmed in the latter part of Queen Elizabeth's Reign, by the Lords of her Privy Council, with their Names ſubſcribed thereunto. And was to this Tenor, (according to a Book made by J. Powel, ſometime Clerk of the Market in King James the Firſt's Time, called the Book of Aſſize.)

Ancient Laws, Cuſtoms, and good Ordinances, ſet down for Bakers, in making, ſizing, and ſelling all ſorts of lawful Bread, which by the Laws are vendible unto the Queen's Subjects in the Commonwealth, retailing the ſame.

Bakers to be Apprenticed

Firſt, THAT no manner of Perſon or Perſons ſhall keep a common Bakehouſe in Cities and Corporate Towns, but ſuch Perſons as have been apprenticed unto the ſame Myſtery, and brought up therein for the more ſpace of ſeven Years, or elſe otherwiſe ſkilful in the good making and true ſizing of all ſorts of Bread; and ſhall put his own Mark or Seal upon all ſorts of his Man's Bread, which he or they ſhall make and ſell, as before is mentioned.

Lawful Bread to be made and ſold.

Item, That no Baker, or any other Perſons, do make, bake, utter and ſell any kinds or ſorts of Bread in the Commonwealth, but ſuch which the Statutes and ancient Ordinances of this Realm do allow them to bake and ſell: that is to ſay, they may bake and ſell Symnel Bread, and Waſtel, White, Wheaten, Houſhold, and Horſe Bread; and none other kinds of Bread, to put to Sale unto her Majeſty's Subjects.

What ſorts of Bread are to be made.

Item, They muſt make and bake Farthing White Bread, Halfpenny White, Penny White, Halfpenny Wheaten, Penny Wheaten Bread, Penny Houſhold, and Twopenny Houſhold Loaves: and none of greater Size, upon pain of Forfeiture, unto poor People all ſuch great Bread which they, or any of them ſhall make, to ſell, of greater Size, (the Time of Chriſtmas always excepted.)

Item, They ſhall not utter and ſell to any Innholder, or Victualler, either in Man's Bread or Horſe Bread, (which ſhall retail the ſame) but only 13 d. worth for 12 d. without any Poundage, or other Advantage.

13 Pence in Bread for 12 Pence.

Item, They ſhall ſell and deliver unto Innholders and Victuallers in Horſe Bread, but three Loaves for a Penny, and 13 pennyworth for 12 d. (as aforeſaid) every one of the ſame three Horſe Loaves weighing the full Weight of a Penny White Loaf, whether Wheat be good, cheap or dear.

Unlawful Bread forbidden. Spice Cakes, Buns, &c.

Item, That no Bakers, or other Perſon or Perſons, ſhall at any time or times hereafter, make, utter or ſell by Retail, within or without their Houſes, unto any the Queen's Subjects, any Spice Cakes, Buns, Bisket, or other Spice Bread, (being Bread out of Size, and not by Law allowed) except it be at Burials, or upon the Friday before Eaſter, or at Chriſtmas; upon pain of Forfeiture of all ſuch Spice Bread to the Poor.

Foreign Bakers to keep greater Size than the Townſmen.

Item, Whereas there are in Cities and Corporate Towns, common Bakers, uſing the Myſtery of baking there, and within the ſame Towns common Bakers, which come into the Market with their Bread to be ſold, they ſhall not only bring with them ſuch kinds or ſorts of ſized Bread as the Law and Ordinances do allow to be made and ſold, as aforeſaid; but alſo ſhall keep and obſerve this Order in the Weight of their Bread, as hereafter followeth. Becauſe the ſaid Foreigners do not bear and pay within the ſame Cities and Towns, ſuch Scot and Lot as the Bakers of the ſame Towns do.

Firſt, The Foreigners Halfpenny White Loaves ſhall weigh half an Ounce more in every Loaf than the Bakers of the ſame Towns Halfpenny White Loaves do.

Item, their Penny White Loaves ſhall weigh one Ounce more in every Loaf than the Bakers of the ſame Towns Penny White Loaves do.

Item, their Halfpenny Wheaten Loaves ſhall weigh one Ounce more in every Loaf than the Bakers of the ſame Towns Halfpenny Wheaten Loaves do.

Item, their Penny Wheaten Loaves ſhall weigh two Ounces more in every Loaf than the Bakers of the ſame Towns Penny Wheaten Loaves do.

Item, their Penny Houſhold Loaves ſhall weigh two Ounces more in every Loaf than the Bakers of the ſame Towns Penny Houſhold Loaves do.

Item, their Twopenny Houſhold Loaves ſhall weigh four Ounces more in every Loaf than the Bakers of the ſame Towns twopenny Houſhold Loaves do.

Penalty.

Provided always, that the Clerk of the Market of her Majeſties Houſhold, his Deputy or Deputies, Maiors, Bailiffs, and other Officers of Cities, Corporate Towns and Liberties, ſhall look unto, have diligent Care and Reſpect unto the due Performance and Execution of theſe Articles. And they ſhall and may, from time to time, freely give and diſtribute all ſuch unlawful Bread as ſhall be hereafter made and put to Sale, being contrary to theſe Articles before mentioned, unto poor Priſoners, or any other poor People. Willing and requiring all Juſtices of Peace, Conſtables, Bailiffs, and other Officers, to be aiding, aſſiſting, and helping all the aforeſaid Officers in the due Execution thereof, as they will anſwer the contrary at their Perils. The Orders for Bakers ratified by King James's Privy Council, 1604.

And in the beginning of the next Reign, viz. that of King James I. the ſame Care was again taken for the due and exact Aſſize of Bread, and for the Regulation of the Bakers, upon an Information brought by J. Powel, Clerk of the Market, unto the Lords of his Highneſs moſt honourable Houſhold; That divers Bakers and other Perſons, taking upon them the Myſtery of Baking, and uttering of Bread unto the King's Majeſties Subjects in the Commonwealth, for their own private Lucre and Commodity, did not only make and ſell to the Subjects, Breads of odd Sizes, made by their own Inventions, but alſo divers kinds and ſorts of Bread; which were both repugnant to the Laws and good Ordinances of the Realm, and likewiſe hurtful to the Commonwealth. Wherefore Orders and Articles were made and agreed upon by the Lords and others of his Majeſties moſt honourable Privy Council, appointing what kinds and ſorts of Bread were to be made and ſold. Which Orders were to the ſame Purport with thoſe above made under Queen Elizabeth; requiring the Clerk of the Market, &c. and all other Officers of Cities, Towns Corporate, and Liberties, eſpecially the Maſter and Wardens of the Company of BAKERS in the City of London, their Officers and Miniſters, to look unto, and have diligent Care and Reſpect unto the due Peformance of theſe Articles. Memorandum, The Bakers are allowed 12 s. Advantage upon every Quarter of Wheat, for baking and other Charges; as if Wheat be at 20 s. the Quarter, then the Aſſize is to be at 32 s. the Quarter.]

To

An Act 1710, for ſetting the Aſſize and Weight of Bread. J. S.

To which I add what was enacted concerning the Aſſize of Bread, and the Care and Proviſion made to prevent all Abuſes therein, Anno 8 Regni Annæ, cap. 18. That after May 1, 1710, the Lord Maior of London, the Maior, Bailiffs, Aldermen, and other chief Magiſtrate of any other Place, or two or more Juſtices of the Peace, where there ſhall be no ſuch Magiſtrate, may ſet the Aſſize and Weight of all ſorts of Bread, to be ſold by any Baker. Having reſpect to the Price the Grain, Meal or Flower, of which it ſhall be made, ſhall bear in the Market near the Place; and making a reaſonable Allowance to the Baker for his Livelihood.

The Aſſize to be ſet in Averdupois Weight.

No Perſon to ſell or expoſe to Sale, any other Bread, than the ſeveral ſorts of White, Wheaten, or Houſhold, and ſuch other ſorts as ſhall be publickly allowed by the Lord Maior, Magiſtrates, &c. All which ſorts of Bread to be made according to the Goodneſs of the ſeveral ſorts of Grain.

And the Aſſize and Weight of the White, Wheaten and Houſhold Bread, to be aſcertained according to a Table fixed to the ſaid Act of Parliament. Which conſiſteth of ſeveral Columns: The firſt and the laſt Columns ſhew the Price of the Buſhel of Wheat, from 2 s. to 15 s. the Buſhel, the Allowance of the Magiſtrates to the Baker for baking being included. And in the other Columns is the Weight of the ſeveral Loaves: So that for Example, when the Price of Wheat is 5 s. the Buſhel, and the Magiſtrates allow 1 s. 6 d. the Buſhel to the Baker for baking, then even with 6 s. 6 d. in the firſt or laſt Column, will be found the Weight of the ſeveral Loaves. But if the Price is 3 s. the Buſhel, and the Allowance 1 s. then the Weight of the ſaid Loaves will be found even with 4 s.

Note, That the White Loaves are one half, and the Wheaten three quarters of the Weight of Houſhold Loaves.

Every Baker to mark on every Loaf the Price and Weight of that Loaf; or any other Mark the Lord Maior, or other Magiſtrate, ſhall appoint: Who ſhall have Power to appoint what Mark ſhall be uſed. The Penalty to the Baker is Forfeiture of 40 s.

The Lord Maior, &c. may in the Day-time enter into Bakers Houſes, &c. and ſearch for, try, and weigh the Bread: and if wanting in Weight or Goodneſs, or not well baken, or not truly marked, &c. in ſuch Caſe the Maior ſhall cauſe it to be diſtributed to the Poor of the Place. The Baker or other Perſon not permitting the Search, or reſiſting, to forfeit 40 s. This Act to continue for three Years, and to the end of the next Seſſion of Parliament.

Old Orders for Bakers.

There be alſo theſe ancient Laws and Orders for Bakers and their Bread; as I find in a Manuſcript Book of Robert Brook and Thomas Weſt, Eſquires, Clerks of the Market in King Edward the Fourth's Time, about the Year 1468.

Memorandum, The Baker' ſhall be allowed in every Quarter of Whete bakyng, as it is provyd by the Kyngis Bakers, as it ſhal appere hereafter.

Firſt, he ſhal have 4 d. and all his Branne to avauntage; and two Loſis for Fornage; and three halfpence for three Servauntes; and for Coles, ob. and for Yeſte, ob. and for Salt, ob. and for Wood 3 d. and for the bultelle,* ob. and for the ſealing, ob. and for Candele, q. Summ 11 d. q. beſide his Branne, and the two Loves.

* That is, the bolting of the Meal.

This is proved by the Statutis: And alſo by an Acte maad in William Conquerours tyme; and the tyme of Henry the Third; and in the tyme of King Edward the Third: and never reverſid ſithen.

Memorandum, It is ordayned bi Statute, that alle maner of Bakers dwelling out of Cities and Burgh Townes, as Bakers dwelling in Villagis, and upon Londe, their Peny Lof, what Corne ſoever it be, be it white Brede or browne, it ſhall wey more then the Peny Lof in the Town or City by x s. and the Halfpeny Lof by v s. becauſe they bere nat ſiche chargis as Bakers in the Citees doon, and Townes. And yet they ſhal kepe the Aſſize truly according unto the Statute upon peyne of 6 s. 8 d. for his Offence, as often as he doth the contrary, beſide his Merſement for brekyng of the Size, if his Lof wey nat as they do in Cities and Burgh Townes. And in likewiſe ſhal the Ferthing Lof wey after the Statute.

How the Aſſize of Bread was made every Year. Lib. Horn. fo. 234.

I find alſo this Care taken for the Aſſize of Bread about Edward the Second's Reign, in the Book Horn, at this Title, Incipiunt Statuta & Proviſiones Civium London de Aſſiza Panis.

Secundum Conſuetudinem Civitatis London, &c. According to the Cuſtom of the City of London, an Aſſay ought to be made of Bread every Year after the Feaſt of St. Michael, by four diſcreet and ſworn Men, choſen for this purpoſe: And according to the proportion of the common Weight of that Aſſay, the Bakers ought to bake their Loaves throughout the whole Year: namely, ſo, that if afterwards Bread-corn be ſold dearer than it was ſold at the making the Aſſay, then the Bread ought to be of leſs Weight than it weighed in the Aſſay. And if it were of leſs Price, then the Bread ought to weigh more. Only we ought cautiouſly to provide, that accordingly to the Quantity whereby the Corn increaſeth in Price, or decreaſeth, the Bread increaſe or decreaſe in Weight.

The manner of ſetting the Price on Bread.

The exact manner of making the Aſſay was thus: That the ſaid four ſworn Men ſhould buy three Quarters of Bread Corn [or Meal] in the Sack upon the Pavement in the three Markets, one at Graſſechurch, another at St. Botolph Billinſgate, and the third at Queenhith. Of which they were to make a Waſtell, and another Loaf leſs fine (which I think they called Coket.) And after they had baked theſe Loaves with the greateſt diligence, then they went and preſented them hot before the Maior and Aldermen in Guild-Hall. And thus hot they were weighed. And then (ſaith the Statute) the buying of the Bread-corn ſhall be conſidered: and eight Pence for every Quarter ſhall be allowed to the Baker for his Charges. The ſelling alſo of the Brann ſhall be conſidered, and ſhall be withdrawn out of the Sum that the Meal was bought for. And if [after divers exact Rules for the weighing of the Bread] there be more Loaves in number, than there ſhall remain Halfpence in the Sum of the Meal bought, when the Charge is allowed, then let there be a Partition of the Weight of thoſe Loaves, remaining over and above. And ſo every Loaf ſhall be made of juſt Weight.

Theſe were Halfpenny Loaves.

And if there be fewer Loaves than the number of Halfpence in the Sum the Meal was bought for, when the Charge is allowed, then let it be withdrawn from the Weight of each Loaf equally, ſo far until there reſult ſo many Loaves of equal Weight, as there are Halfpence in the number of the Sum the Meal was bought at, when the Charge is allowed.

If there ſhall be more Loaves than the number of Halfpence, let the Part exceeding be taken from the number of Loaves, and ſee the how manieth part it will be of the number of Halfpence; and according to that Proportion, let the Weight of each Loaf be augmented. For Example ſake, if there be 20 Halfpence, and 24 Loaves, every Loaf of the Weight of 40 Shillings, then the number of Loaves increaſeth above the number of Halfpence, which are but 20; and it is the fifth Part, ſince five times four make twenty. Therefore the Weight of every Loaf increaſeth by the fifth part of its Weight; and the Weight of the Loaf was 40 Shillings, whoſe fifth part is 8 Shillings. Therefore 20 Loaves ſhall be each Loaf of the Weight of 48 Shillings. And ſo each Loaf ſhall be of juſt Weight.

If there were more Halfpence than the number of Loaves, we muſt ſee the how manieth part was the number increaſing, of the number of Loaves: and if it were a third part, a fourth part is to be leſſened from every Loaf: and if it were a fourth part, a fifth part is to be leſſened: and if it were a fifth part, a ſixth part is to be leſſened. For Example, if the number of Halfpence were 24, and the number of Loaves 20, then is the number increaſing 4, as before, which is the fifth part of 20. Therefore each Loaf decreaſeth of the ſixth part of its Weight. If the Weight therefore ſhall be 40 Shillings, it ſhall be 33 Shillings and 4 Pence. And ſo the number of Loaves is equalled to the number of Halfpence, and the Weight is the ſame.

The Bakers had four Halimotes in the Year. Lib. Horn. J. S.

Thus there was formerly extraordinary Care taken in the City about Bread, and for ordering the Bakers in the making and ſelling of their Bread. For that Purpoſe there were four principal Halimotes in the Year, when all the City Bakers were bound to meet together. Whereof the firſt was to be kept after the Feaſt of St. Michael, for the Profit of the City and the Kingdom. That the Bakers being aſſembled together, take and know their new Sheriffs, and retain in their Memories the Statutes of the City belonging to the Bakers, and receive the Aſſay of Bread.

The ſecond Halimote was held after the Nativity of our Lord; that if there be any Tranſgreſſion made in the firſt Term of the Year, it may be there without difficulty more fully amended.

The third Halimote was accuſtomed to be called together after the Cloſe of Eaſter; as well for the coming of the King as of the Nobles of his Kingdom: leſt there might ſeem to fall out a Want of this kind of Service; that is, in a convenient Supply of the City and Inhabitants with good Bread.

The fourth Halimote was after the Nativity of St. John Baptiſt; that what ſhould be ſolemnly appointed by the Common Council and Providence of the City in the firſt three Terms, in this fourth Term might be profitably confirmed. So that the Goodneſs of ſo great a Work might not turn to Diſprofit by Ignorance or by Negligence.

To theſe four Halimotes all the Bakers muſt come. And if they come not, nor excuſe and eſſoin themſelves reaſonably, they forfeited to the Sheriff 21 d.

Aſſay of Bread.

Now further as to the Aſſay of Bread (whereof ſomewhat was ſaid before) according to which the Price of Bread was to be ſet. At the Feaſt of St. Michael, in the 12 of Edw. II. were bought three Quarters of Bread-corn, to make an Aſſay of White Bread according to Cuſtom, for 17 s. 4 d. ob. And 3 s. 4 d. was allowed for all Expences about making the ſame Bread. Whence the whole Sum ariſeth to 20 s. 8 d. Subtracting thence 12 d. for eight Ounces of Bran, there remains 19 s. 8 d. ob. the third part is 6 s. 8 d. ob. which make 157 Halfpence. And ſo many Loaves ſhall be made of Waſtell, of an Halfpenny: and ſo many Loaves of Levat* Bread, of an Halfpenny: and ſo many Loaves of Biſſe*, of an Halfpenny, of the whole Weight of the Bread forth coming of the ſaid three Quarters of Bread-corn. The Bakers Gains.

And we muſt know, that the Baker may gain in every Quarter 3 d. with the Bran, and two Loaves of the Furnage, of the Price of 2 d. And to his Servants three Halfpence; and for his two Boys three Farthings; and for the Seal an Halfpenny; and for Yeſt an Halfpenny; and for Candle a Farthing; and for Buſhes three Pence; and for bolting* an Halfpenny.

* Pro bultello.

Note, That Coket Bread of the ſame Corn, and of the ſame bultel, or bolting, [ſhall weigh] more than Waſtels by 2 s. and of Corn of leſs Price, more by 5 s.

Alſo, Bread of Artocope* ſhall weigh leſs than Waſtel by 2 s.

* Artocopi.

Alſo whole Bread, or Loaf of a Farthing, ſhall weigh Coket and half, &c.

Capitula dicenda Piſtoribus in Halimoto ſuo. Lib. Horn. fo. 199.

In the Bakers Halimote were theſe particular Laws and Charges given to all the City Bakers.

Let two or four Loaves be made for a Penny: And let the Baker make no kind of Bread of greater Price to ſell, but only two or four Loaves to a Penuy; and that according to the Aſſize ſet for the preſent Year.

Let no Bran Loaf be made; nor being made of Bran, which is worſe in breaking than [it appears] without.

Let every Baker have his Seal appearing in his Bread; ſo that it may be the better and more openly known, whoſe it is. And let this manner of ſealing be as well in biſſe [brown] Bread, as in white.

Let no Baker ſell Bread in his own Houſe, nor before his own Oven.* But let him have a Baſket with his Bread in the King's Market. So that if his Bread ſhall not be competent according to the Market of Corn, the Baker's Body be at the Mercy of the Juſtice.

Let no Baker go into St. Michael [Cornhill] Churchyard [where Bread-corn was ſold] nor the Market of Weſt-chepe, of Garſecherch, or Billynſgate, nor to Botolves Wharph, nor Queenhithe, nor go aboard any Ship to buy Corn, before the firſt ringing. [There ſeemed of old to be Bells rung in ſeveral Church Steeples of the City, as Bow for one, at certain Hours of the Day, and that both for Devotion and Buſineſs: and before the firſt ringing in the Morning, none might go out to buy Proviſion.]

Let no Baker make Meal of Felger,* of Sticks, of Straw, nor of Ruſhes.

* Farinare faciat felgera.

Let no Baker entertain any one beyond one Night, unleſs he have him ſuſpected* of ſome Tranſgreſſion.

* Ad rectum.

Bakers keeping Hogs may ſafely nouriſh them for themſelves in their own Houſes, or elſewhere, without the Streets and Lanes of the City.

Let no Regratereſs paſs London Bridge towards Suthwerk, nor elſewhere, to buy Bread, to carry it into the City of London to ſell: becauſe the Bakers of Suthwerk, nor of any other Place, are not ſubject to the Juſtice of the City.

Let no Baker draw away his Neighbour's Servant from his Service, as long as he ought to tarry in his Service, whether by Hire, or by Obligation of Truſt. And this under pain of 40 s. for the Uſe of the Sheriff.

If any Baker's Servant make a Tranſgreſſion againſt his Maſter, ſo that he hath preſumed to depart unlicenſed from his Service, we decree under Forfeiture to the Sheriff, that none of the Bakers receive him, and retain him, until he have fully ſatisfied his Maſter.

Whereas it is common for Merchants to give Credit,* and eſpecially for Bakers commonly to do the ſame with Regrateresſes: under the pain before taxed we forbid, that no Baker make the benefit of any Credit to a Regratereſs, as long as he ſhall know her to be involved in her Neighbour's Debt.

* Creantiam facere.

For the avoiding the innumerable and intolerable Dangers and Scandals which are often wont to ariſe between Fellow-Bakers; we firmly forbid, that none preſume to enter into this Trade, unleſs of his own, or the help of his Friends, he can ſufficiently fulfil the ſaid Trade to our Lord the King, and the City of London, with 40 s. moveable Chattels, and find Pledge to perform it.

Let no Loaf be made to ſell, of three Farthings, or five Farthings, nor of an Halfpenny, nor of a greater Price. But in caſe ſuch a Loaf ſhall be found to be carried in one's Arms, or under any Towels, let it be taken to the Uſe of the Sheriff, without any Recovery.

Bread made out of London, and brought into the City to be ſold, we decree to be adulterate: and therefore we firmly enjoin, that no Baker nor Regratereſs preſume to buy any ſuch Bread to ſell, unleſs it be of competent Weight according to the Bread made in the City of London, according to that which the Year requireth.

Let no Bread be taken cold, but warm, as it is delivered to the Baker by Aſſay.

Let no Turtary* ſell Bread to a Regratereſs, neither in their Shops, but only in their Cheſts [or Baskets] and in the King's Market; and not in their Houſe, under pain of 40 s.

* Turtarius.

Let no Turtary make White Bread to ſell, nor on the contrary,

Let no Bread be ſold in the King's Market but on Wedneſday and Saturday. And if any Bread ſhall be found to be ſold at the foreſaid Place but on thoſe ſaid Days, it ſhall be called a Forfeiture without Recovery.

Six or eight of the Trade of Bakers ſhall ſwear before the Sheriff to keep the foreſaid Statutes, and to accuſe thoſe that go againſt them.

Now for the Occupations that concerned Proviſions of Meat and Drink, and Apparel, this was the ancient Aſſize of them; as I extracted it out of an ancient Book of the Clerk of the Market.

The true Standard for Weights wanting.

The true Standard for Weights was once not to be found. Which occaſioned great Wrongs for want of right and juſt weighing of Goods, bought and ſold. Sir James Harvey, Maior, informed the Lord Treaſurer thereof, (before whom this Buſineſs ſeemed more eſpecially to be brought) by his Letter, dated Decemb. 12, 1581, importing,

The Maior informs the Lord Treaſurer thereof.

‘ That where there was a great Abuſe and Fraud daily uſed to the Queen's Majeſties loving Subjects, by reaſon of falſe Weights, as well within this City as in other Cities and Places elſewhere in the Realm: and whereof, as he was informed, his Lordſhip had heretofore been made privy, and had taken Care for the Reformation thereof. And that notwithſtanding, the Abuſe did yet continue: for that the true Standard made according to the Statute, for the ſizing of all Weights, could not be found. And he [the Maior] being this Year charged in Conſcience, by reaſon of his Office, and Oath taken, to ſee That Falſhood and Deceit puniſhed, he thought it his Duty not only to remember his Lordſhip thereof, but alſo humbly to beſeech him, that it would pleaſe him, to give him [the Maior] his favourable Help and Advice, what Order or Courſe he ſhould take with the City for the Reformation thereof. And ſo he committed his Lordſhip to the merciful keeping of the Almighty, &c.

Your Lordſhip's humble

James Harvey, Maior.

The next Maior applied to the Lord Treaſurer to give Order for the ſame.

As this Addreſs had been made to the Lord Treaſurer by the former Maior, concerning the Deceits practiſed by means of falſe Weights, for want of the true Standard, and a Verdict touching the regulating the ſame, delivered into the Exchequer: So it ſticking there, Application was made again by the next Maior, Blank, for an effectual Diſpatch of this neceſſary Affair; and that an Order might be ſent to him and his Brethren, the Aldermen, to ſize Weights; whoſe Letter to the Lord Treaſurer ran in theſe Words:

His Letter.

‘ My Duty moſt humbly don to your Lordſhip. Having lately entered with my Brethren, and the Common Council of this City into eſtabliſhing of Orders for true and upright Uſe of her Majeſties Beam, with the Weights thereto belonging: which upon Continuance do daily wear, and need to be renewed and ſized from time to time; we have found it neceſſary to be humble Suitors to your Lordſhip, that your Lordſhip will have in your honourable Remembrance the great Want that this City and the whole Realm findeth, for lack of Order to ſize Weights. Whereby the Common-weal taketh Detriment; and private Men preſume without Order to ſell, and uſe unlawful Weights, both in the City and in the Country, that are accuſtomed to take their aſſizing from hence.

‘ We have thought the Time more convenient now to move your Lordſhip, becauſe we hear, that the later Verdict touching Weights is long ſince delivered before your Lordſhip, and the reſt, in the honourable Court of Exchequer. It may pleaſe your Lordſhip to take Order with ſuch Speed as your Lordſhip ſhall think meet, for Certainty in this behalf. And that your Reſtraint be ſo releaſed, as our Officers may be at liberty to ſize accordingly. And ſo I leave to trouble your Lordſhip. At London, the laſt of July, 1583.

Your moſt humble,

Tho. Blank, Maior.

Meaſures for Sea-Coal. Contention thereabouts with the Lord Admiral.

To this Affair of Weights, wherein the City took ſuch Care, I add ſomething not long after concerning their Meaſures. A Conteſt happened between the City and Lord Admiral about the meaſuring of Sea-Coal, and other things brought in upon the Thames, whether the Privilege thereof belonged to the City. For the bringing this to ſome Concluſion, the Lord Treaſurer was again, in the Year 1591, addreſſed to, and the Buſineſs brought into the Exchequer. And a Book was there drawn up, and committed to the Judgment of the Queen's Attorny and Sollicitor General. And being paſs'd their Correction, and having the Conſent of the ſaid Lord Admiral, the Lord Maior, Sir William Webb, prayed the ſaid Lord Treaſurer, to iſſue his Warrant to the Queen's Council for the ſigning of it. That ſo they might enjoy their Meaſurage, as formerly they uſed to have it. To make this brief Relation the more plain and full, I give here the Lord Maior's own Letter, faithfully tranſcribed.

The Maior's Letter to the Lord Treaſurer about it.

'My humble Duty remembred unto your good 'Lordſhip. Where it pleaſed your good Lord'ſhip to refer to Mr. Atturny and Solicitor, for 'peruſing of the Book that is to paſs from the 'Queen's Majeſty to the City of London, as 'touching the Meaſurage of Sea-Coal, and other 'things meaſurable upon the River of Thames; 'it may pleaſe you to underſtand, that they have 'accordingly peruſed the ſame, and have reform'ed it in what Points they thought good. Which 'now we return again to your good Lordſhip, in 'that Form as by them is corrected and ſet down. 'And foraſmuch as the ſaid Mr. Atturny and So'licitor (beſides Allowance from my Lord Ad'miral, which they have already) do further re'quire your Lordſhip's Warrant, for their Ap'probation of the ſame under their Hands, we 'humbly beſeech your good Lordſhip to peruſe 'the ſaid Book, and to vouchſafe us your good 'Favour, in directing your Warrant to her Ma'jeſties ſaid learned Council, for the ſigning of 'the ſame. That this Controverſy being ended 'between my Lord Admiral and this City, we 'may enjoy the ſaid Meaſurage peaceably, as in 'Times paſt we have done. Wherein, as for 'many other honourable Favours and good Turns 'towards this City, we ſhall be much bound to 'your good Lordſhip. And thus humbly I take 'my Leave from London, the 5th of Jan. 1591.

Your Lordſhip's moſt humble,

William Webb, Maior.]

A further Account of the Laws of the City. J. S.

IT is acknowledged, the Laws and Conſtitutions of the City have been as yet but very imperfectly repreſented. And therefore to improve this Part of the Knowledge of London, (which ſeems indeed to be the uſefulleſt part of the whole Book) here ſhall moreover,

Firſt, Notice be taken of the Charters of the Kings and Queens granted to the City, which is the Ground of all their Laws, Liberties and Privileges. Then ſhall be ſhewn the ſeveral Courts belonging to the City, and kept in Guild-Hall, London, or elſewhere; where the Laws of it are explained, and Cauſes adjudged and decided. And laſtly, to ſubjoin ſome Collections of ſpecial Laws and Orders, by way of Journal, through the Reign of Queen Elizabeth.

Edward the Confeſſor's Grant to the City. Rec. Turr.

And here, whereas the Charters of the City, when they are recited, are commonly begun at William the Conqueror, I ſhall firſt mention ſomewhat more early, namely, a Liberty belonging to the City, by the Grant of St. Edward, [commonly called Edward the Confeſſor, that deſerveth to be taken Notice of; and that is, That whoſoever of ſervile Condition abode in it peaceably for a Year and a Day, was from thenceforth ever free from his Lord or Maſter, and a Freeman. King Henry VI. in the ſeventh of his Reign, which was Anno 1428, ſent his Letters to the Lord Maior and Aldermen, to be informed about this particular Privilege, and other like Cuſtoms of the ſaid City. To whom they ſent an Anſwer worthy Remark. I ſhall ſet down both as they were communicated to me by my Friend, the Deputy-Keeper of the Tower Records.

Mr. G. Holms.

Then follow two Extracts: One out of the Book Repertorium, fo. 21. of the ſecond Part, beginning Inter nobilis urbis, &c. which I have exemplified in the firſt Book.

The ſecond Extract is taken out of the Book in the Chamber, De antiquis Legibus, Libertatibus & Conſuetudinibus Civit. London. Which Book is called Speculum; wherein is a certain Record contained to this Tenor:

Memorandum, quod tempore, &c. i. e. 'Be it re'membred, that in the Time of holy King Ed'ward, heretofore King of England, and before 'from all Time no Memory of Man then was 'extant, ſuch Dignity, Liberty and Royal Cu'ſtom, among others, was had, uſed and appro'ved, in the City of London, which is, and from 'all Time hath been called, The Free Chamber of 'the King of England, as from antient Time it 'was uſed and had in the great City of Troy; 'to wit; that every Servant, whoſoever he were, 'that came to the City of London, and tarried in 'it for a Year and a Day, without reclamation 'of his Lord there; afterwards he may, ought

‘ and hath accuſtomed through his whole Life, ſo freely and ſecurely to tarry there, as it were in the Houſe or Chamber of the King. And thence it is, that the ſame holy King Edward, among other things, by his Laws remaining of Record in the Treaſury of Guyhald of the ſaid City, and reciting the City itſelf to be the Head of his Kingdom, and that it was founded like, and after the manner of old great Troy; and that it containeth in it the Laws, Liberties, Dignities and Royal Cuſtoms of great Troy; he appointed and ordained, that the ſame City of London may have and keep every where, by one Inviolability always, all her old Uſages and Cuſtoms, wheresſoever the King himſelf ſhall be, whether in an Expedition or otherwiſe.

‘ And afterward King William the Conqueror, King of England, by his Charter, which remaineth of Record in the ſame Treaſury, granted to the Men of London, that they be worthy of all that both Law and Right, as they were in the Days of the aforeſaid Edward. And moreover the ſame William the King, among other their Laws, at the ſaid City made, with the Conſent of the noble and wiſe Men of the whole Kingdom, and remaining in the ſaid Treaſury, likewiſe remaining of Record, appointed and ordained, that if Servants remain ſine Calumpnia, i. e. without Complaint, by a Year and a Day in a Burgh compaſſed with a Wall, or in Caſtles, or in the Cities of the ſaid King: whence the ſaid City of London to that Time, and from all Time before, was one, and the more principal of the whole Kingdom, as is ſaid before, from that Day let them become Freemen; and let them be for ever free and quit from the Yoke of their Servitude. It follows out of the ſaid Tower Record.

‘ It is to be noted, that the Laws, Recitements and Statutes of holy King Edward, of which mention is made above, are contained in fo. 34. of this Book, in the Title De Heretochiis & Libertatibus London. And in fo. 113. of the Book of Cuſtoms of the ſaid City: and in fo. 36. of the Book called Recordatorium London, &c. It is alſo had in fo. 162. of the Red Book of the Exchequer, called, The true Charter by which the foreſaid Lord, the Conqueror, hath confirmed to the Citizens of London all Rights and Laws which they had in the Time of Holy King Edward: together with certain other Charters, by which the ſaid Lord, immediately after the Conqueſt, gave the whole Hyde and Land of the City of London, whereof he then had been poſſeſſed in his Demeſne, to the Men of the ſaid City, Patent and remanent under the Seal of the ſaid King in the Cuſtody of the Chamberlain in the Treaſury of the ſaid City. Which Charters are contained and incorporated in the Great Charter of the Liberties and Cuſtoms of the City of London; and are confirmed by the Lord the King [Henry VI.] and his Progenitors. But the Tenors of the ſaid Charters are patent in the Latin Tongue, in fo. 238. of the Book of Ordinations of the ſaid City.’ This is the Sum of what Account the City ſent to King Henry VI. of their Liberties; which they fetched from Edward the Confeſſor, and how they were confirmed by the Conqueror. Now to proceed in the Charters given to the City.

William the Conqueror's Charter.

The firſt Charter commonly remembred among the Royal Charters granted to the City, is that of King William the Conqueror; from whom, by means of William, a Norman, Biſhop of London, the City obtained, in thoſe rough Times, the Continuance of their Laws, Liberties and Privileges, according as they enjoyed them in the Times of the Saxon Kings. This venerable Charter (which is ſtill extant in the City Archives, where I have ſeen it) conſiſted not of above eight or nine Lines, with a Seal of green Wax, carefully preſerved in Silk, and (which was a Favour) was writ, not in the French, but Saxon Language, in theſe Words, according to a Copy taken from it by Horne, Anno Dom. 1314. which I tranſcribe exactly as followeth, only changing the Saxon Letters into the modern, (which I do the rather, becauſe of ſo many Tranſcripts wretchedly miſwrit.)

WIlliam Kyng gret William Biſceop, and Gosfregth Portereſan, and ealle tha Burhwarn binnen Londone, Frenciſce and Engliſce frendlice. And ic kithe eow thaet ic wille thaet get ben eallra theera laga weorde the git weeran on Eatwerdes daege Kynges. And ic wille theet aelc child beo his faeder yrf nume after his faeder daege. And ic nelle ge wolian thaet aenig man eow canig wrang beode. God eow ge healde.

Under which the Tranſcriber, Horne, wrote thus: Hoc eſt Tranſcriptum Carte Regis Willielmi Conqueſtoris facte Civibus London, que ad modum ſupraſcriptum in veteri lingua Saxonica, I. Anglica, mirabil. quantum ad modernam ſcripturam, que taliter nunc ſcribitur. Videlic. Aº Dni MCCCXIIII. That is, ‘ This is the Tranſcript of the Charter of William the Conqueror, made to the Citizens of London, which after the manner above written in the old Saxon, that is, Engliſh Language, it is wonderful how much it comes to the modern Writing, which is now Anno 1314. thus written.

And then followeth the ſame Charter writ in the Saxon then in Uſe; which differed ſomewhat, but very little, from the Saxon in the original Charter.

Which Tranſcript was thus rendred into Latin by the ſame Hand:

Wilhelmus Rex ſalutat Wilhelmum Epiſcopum, & Gosfridum Portgrevium, & omnem Burgware infra London, Franciſcos & Anglicos, amicabiliter. Et ego vobis notum facio, quod ego volo, quod vos ſitis omni lege illa digni, qua fuiſtis Edwardi diebus Regis. Et volo quod omnis filius ſit patris ſui heres poſt diem patris ſui. Et ego nolo pati, quod aliquis homo aliquam injuriam vobis inferat. Deus vos ſalvet.

And laſtly, take an old Engliſh Tranſlation of this Charter with the reſt; which is as followeth:

Old Fook of Cuſtoms.

‘ William Kynge grete William Byſſhop, and Godfrey Portreve, and al the Burgeis within London, French and Engliſh. And I graunte you, that I wyl that yee be al your Law worth that yee were in Edwardys days the Kynge. And I wyl that ech child be hys faders eyer: And I nill ſuffur that ony man you any wrong beed. And God you kepe.

Other Kings that granted their Charters. Lib. Horn.

After William the Conqueror, the City obtained divers large Grants from the ſucceeding Kings of England. As one Charter from King Henry I. Wherein he grants to his Citizens of London to hold Middleſex to Ferme for 300*l.* to account to him and his Heirs. And that the Citizens chuſe a Sheriff, ſuch as they will of themſelves. With ſeveral other Privileges.

The which Charter of Henry the Firſt granted to the City of London, was in theſe Words, viz.

King Stephen, who reigned next, his Charter was in theſe Words:

Tho' this Charter was granted to the whole Kingdom, yet the City placed it among its Charters, as claiming a ſpecial Share in the Benefit thereof.

Henry II. that next ſucceeded to the Crown, by his Charter confirmed the firſt; only this inſerted, that none ſhould be impleaded without the City, exceptis monetariis & miniſtris meis, & præter placita de Tenuris exterioribus; i. e. Except the King's Moneyers and Miniſters, and except Pleas of Foreign Tenures. This King granted two.

King Richard I. alſo granted two; and King John granted the City Charters of Confirmation, in number five. The next King Henry III. granted nine. A part of the ſecond remains to us tranſcribed out of a Copy extant in the old Book of the Cuſtoms of London, and was in the laſt Edition of the Survey, and is as followeth:

HENRICUS Dei gratia Rex Angliæ, Dominus Hiberniæ, Dux Normanniæ & Aquitaniæ, Com' Andegav' *Archiepiſcopis, Epiſcopis, &c. Salutem. Moreover, one Charter was granted from King Edward I. One from King Edward II. Five from King Edward III. One at leaſt from King Richard II. in the Seventh of his Reign. Witneſſes to which were William Archbiſhop of Canterbury, Robert of London, William of Winton, Thomas of Eli, Biſhops; Edmond of Cambridge, Thomas of Bucks, his Uncle, Hugh of Stafford, William Montague of Salisbury, Henry Percy of Northumberland, Earls; John Nevyl of Raby, Michael de la Pole, Lord Chancellor, Hugh of Segrave, Treaſurer, John of Montague, Steward of the Hoſtel [i. e. Houſhold.] It was dated at Weſtminſter, 26th of November, the Seventh of his Reign. This I the rather mention, becauſe it is wholly omitted in a late Book, intituled Privilegia Londini, where, among the Enumeration of the Charters, this is left out. This Charter of King Richard II. is at large tranſlated into old Engliſh in the Book of the Cuſtoms of London.

Again, King Henry IV. granted one Charter: King Edward IV. four: King Henry VII. one: King Henry VIII. two: King Edward VI. one. King James I. three: King Charles I. two.

Table of all the Charters of London.

In one of the City's Books is a Table in Latin of the Charters of the Liberties of the City; wherein are ſet down the Heads of every Charter from the Charter of William the Conqueror to that of King Henry VII. incluſive.

Lib. Alb. fo. 40.

Firſt, a Charter of King William, heretofore King of England, (called The Conqueror) in the Saxon Language.

Alſo another Charter of the ſame King, in the ſame Language.

Alſo a Charter of King Henry I. wherein are contained the following Articles.

Firſt, Of the Sheriffwick of London and Middleſex, demiſed to Farm to the Citizens of London for 300 l.

Alſo, That the Citizens of London appoint what Sheriff they pleaſe of themſelves.

Alſo, That the Citizens appoint a Juſtice, whomſoever, and ſuch an one as they will, of themſelves; to keep the Pleas of the Crown, and to plead them: And that no other ſhall be Juſtice over the true Men of London.

Alſo, That the Citizens ſhall not plead without the Walls of the City, concerning any Plea.

Alſo, That they be quit of Schot and Loth, and of Danegeld, and of Murther [de Murdro.] And that none of them go to War [faciat Bellum.]

Alſo, That if any Citizen be impleaded of Pleas of the Crown, a Man of London may diſcharge himſelf [diſrationet homo London] by his Oath; which ſhall be judged in the City.

Alſo, That none be entertained, lodged, [hoſpitetur] within the Walls of London; whether of the King's Houſhold or of any other; none have Entertainment by force or Livery [per Vim vel Liberationem Mariſchalli. Chart. Hen. II.]

Alſo, That all the Men of London be quit and free; and that all their Things throughout England, and by the Sea Ports, be quit and free of Toll, Paſſage, and Laſtage [de Theolonio & Paſſagio & Laſtagio] and all other Cuſtoms.

That the Churches, and Barons, and Citizens have and hold well and in peace, their Sokes, with all Cuſtoms: So that Strangers [Hoſpites] that ſhall be entertained in the Sokes, give Cuſtoms to none unleſs to him whoſe Soke it ſhall be, or to his Servant, whom he ſhall place there.

That a Man of London may not be judged to pay a pecuniary Mulct, unleſs above 100 s. [in mitt. pecunie, niſi ad Sawere ad C s.] That is, of a Plea belonging to Money.

That there be no more Miskenning [i. e. unjuſt and vexatious citing into Court] in the Huſtenge, nor in the Folkſmot, nor in other Pleas within the City.

That the Huſtenge ſit once a Week, to wit, on Monday.

That the King cauſe the Citizens to have their Lands, Bonds and Debts within the City and without. And concerning Lands, whereof they claim, he ſhall do them right [rectum eis tenebet] by the Law of the City.

That if any ſhall take Toll or Cuſtom from the Men of London [the Citizens of London] the Citizens of London may take in the City, of the Burrough or Town where ſuch Toll or Cuſtom was taken, as much as the Man of London gave for Toll; and receive as much for the Damage.

That all Debtors that owe Debts to the Citizens of London, pay them in London; or in London diſcharge themſelves that they owe not. And if they will not do, neither one nor other, then the Citizens to whom they are indebted may take [namia ſua] their Goods by Diſtreſs in the City of of London, the Burrough, or Village, or County, in which he remains, who owes the Debt.

Alſo, That the Citizens of London have their Privileges for Hunting [Fugationes ad ſugandum] as their Anceſtors have had it, better and more fully, in Chiltre, Middleſex, and Surrey.

Then follow in the ſame Book the Articles of King Henry the Second's Charter.

In another Book belonging to the City, there is a Tract with this Title, De aliquibus Libertatibus Civitat. London, i. e. Concerning ſome Liberties of the City of London. Which are Extracts taken out of the former and other Charters of the City, by ſome judicious Perſons; that ſo Citizens might know their Privileges. And there is ſet before each Paragraph, Sciendum eſt, viz.

Lib. Horn. fol. 230.

Sciendum eſt, &c. We muſt know, that within the Space of three Miles on every part of the City of London, a Man ought not to retain or hinder another, nor to buy of him [cum eo mercatum agere] if he be minded, in the Peace of the City, to come to it. But when he ſhall have come into the City, then he may trade with him, whether rich or poor.

Sciendum eſt, &c. We muſt know, that a Man who is of the King's Court, or one of the Barons, ought not to take Harbour [hoſpitare] in the Houſe of any Citizen of London by Force or Livery [Liberatione] or Cuſtom; unleſs by the Free Will of the Entertainer [Hoſpite.] For if he uſe Violence upon him in his own Houſe, to take harbour there, and ſhall be ſlain there by the Inhabiter [ſi vim hoſpitandi ei in domo ſua intulerit, ibiq; ab hoſpite occiſus fuerit] let him chooſe ſix of his Equals [Parentibus. Quære, an Paribus?] and ſworn Men, himſelf the ſeventh, that he ſlew them for the Cauſe aforeſaid. And ſo he ſhall remain quit of the Death of the ſaid Slain, towards the King and his Equals, and the Lord of the Defunct.

Sciendum eſt, &c. It muſt be known alſo, that a Citizen of London ought not to plead before the King, nor any other within the Walls of the City.

It muſt be known, that if any of the Citizens ſhall make a Forfeiture, which may be ſatisfied by Money, he ought not to be to more than to his own Eere [ad ſuam Eere] or Court. Let not the Sheriff of the City preſume to retain any one's Money, or diſturb him. Nor ought he to call any remaining in the Socne of another, to the King's Pleas, or do Juſtice concerning them; until the keeper of that Socne [Liberty] in which he ſhall remain, or ſhall be deficient on the Parts or Part of retaining [de retro tenendo] Unleſs the Sheriff ſhall find him openly and plainly forfeiting in the King's Socne.

A Citizen of London, if he ſhould come to the Folkſmote, or to the Huſtenge, without [* intention] of Pleading, hath not there need to anſwer to any one concerning any Complaint, unleſs he will of his own accord.

* The Word difficult to be read.

A Citizen of London, if by occaſion of Want he ſhall be willing to ſell his Land, they cannot poſſibly forbid his Son, nor his Parent, unleſs they ſhall be willing to buy with his Conſent [ad conceſſum ipſius.]

Item, A Citizen of London, if he ſhall hold any Land for a Year and a Day without Claim or Challenge [ſine Calumpnia] he ought not to anſwer to any in the City remaining; unleſs who after he ſhould have claimed the Law, ſhall be of ſuch Age, that he knew not to claim it, or Sickneſs hindred, or was not in that Country, or was in the War.

A Merchant Stranger [Foraneus] after that he ſhall enter into the City, may be harboured whereſoever it ſhall pleaſe him: But let him take care he do not ſell his Ware by Retail [ad inciſionem] As if he ſhall bring Cloths died, let him ſell not leſs than twelve together. Or if he ſhall bring Pepper, or Cummin, or Ginger, or Allum, or Braſil, or Lacem, or Frankinſence, he ſhall not ſell leſs than 25 l. together. Or if he ſhall bring Girdles [Zonas] he ſhall not ſell leſs than M and Twelve Girdles. And if Cloths made of Silk or of Wool, or of Linnen, let him ſee that he cut them not, but ſell them whole. But if he bring Wax, let him not ſell leſs together than one Quarter.

A Merchant, thus a Foreigner, cannot ſell wet Cloth, or dye his Cloth in the City; nor do any Work that belongeth to Citizens.

Alſo a foreign Merchant cannot make any Merchandize with his extraneous Sac [Sacio] Cloth within the City, to ſell it again in the City, nor to make any Market, nor tarry longer in the City than forty Days.

The Citizens of London ſhall not make War; nor ought they to go in any Expedition, either by Sea or Land. Becauſe they are free and quit of all Exerciſe. They ought to keep the City, as the Refuge and Fortification [Propugnaculum] of the Kingdom. For the Citizens have their Refuge and Egreſs. [As it were in a Caſtle; where they preſerve themſelves, and iſſue out when they ſee Occaſion to defend themſelves.]

The Privileges and Favours granted by theſe Charters

Divers were the Privileges, Liberties, and Favours granted by all theſe Charters. The brief Contents of each were as follow. King William I. called the Conqueror, confirmed the antient Liberties of the City. And by a Charter demiſed and granted to the Citizens the ſaid City and Sheriffwick thereof. And afterward confirmed the ſame in Parliament. Which how ſtrange ſoever a Parliament ſeemed to be then, the Words of the Record are, Auctoritate Parliamenti Wilhelmus demiſit tunc Civibus London. totam dictam Civitatem, & Vicecomitatum London. cum omnibus Appendiciis, &c. Henry I. Son to William, confirmed the Liberties of the City of London, and granted to them their Heirs and Succeſſors for ever, the Sheriffwic of Middleſex, at the Farm of 300 l. per Annum. So that the Citizens ſhall appoint Sheriffs whom they pleaſe from among themſelves. This was the better to enable the City to keep the Peace. For many Murders, Rapins and Violences being committed in the City, the Offenders would thereupon fly into Middleſex; and the Citizens having no Power or Juriſdiction before in that County, the Guilty by that means eſcap'd unpuniſhed. 3. King Stephen, by his Magna Charta, among other things, confirmed the Liberties of the City, which they not only had in the time of William the Conqueror, William Rufus, and Henry I. but thoſe they enjoyed before, viz. in the time of Edward the Confeſſor. 4. Henry II. did the ſame: And ſo did, 5. King Richard I. his Son; who by Letters Patents granted the Citizens all their ſaid Cuſtoms, and all other Liberties and free Cuſtoms, which they had in the time of King Henry, Grandfather to King Henry his Father; whenſoever they were beſt and moſt free Cuſtoms. 6. King John in the firſt of his Reign, by a particular Charter, confirmed to the Citizens and their Heirs, the free Election of their Maior and Sheriffs, with a Power to diſplace and remove the Sheriffs at their own Pleaſure. 7. King Henry the Third, by his Charter ratified and confirmed to the Citizens and their Heirs, the Sheriffwicks of London and Middleſex, for the ancient Fee of 300 l. per Annum. Which was the original Rent in King Henry the Firſt's Time. And after the Citizens ſhould preſent their Sheriffs, ſo choſen by them, at the Exchequer.

Confirmation of theſe Charters by ſucceſſive Kings;

And by Parliaments.

The ſaid Charters of King Henry I. King John, and King Henry III. have by Inſpeximus's been confirmed, by all the ſucceſſive Kings, under the Great Seal of England, one of the greateſt Obligation of the Kings to their People. They were confirmed afterwards by Parliament; and eſpecially the great Charter of King John; wherein there was a Clauſe for all the ancient Liberties and free Cuſtoms of London, as well by Land as by Water. This Charter was ratified and confirmed by ſeveral Parliaments in King Henry the Third's time; and particularly in the Parliament of the Fifty ſecond of Henry III.

Moreover, King Edward III. in his firſt Year, did by his Charter grant and confirm, as a perpetual Law for him and his Heirs for ever, that ſince in Magna Charta of the Liberties of England, it was contained, that the City of London ſhould enjoy her ancient Liberties and Cuſtoms: And becauſe the ſaid Citizens had at the time of the ſaid Charter, and in the time of St. Edward the Confeſſor and William the Conqueror, and his other Progenitors, divers Liberties and Cuſtoms, as well by the Charters of his Progenitors, as without Charters by ancient Cuſtoms; he granted and confirmed to the Citizens, their Heirs and Succeſſors, that they ſhould enjoy their Liberties and Cuſtoms. And becauſe theſe Liberties had been oftentimes impeached, and ſome of them forejudged in the tempeſtuous time of Edward II. and other preceding Kings, contrary to Magna Charta: Therefore both the King and the Lords and Commons, did ſet a Brand upon ſuch illegal Proceedings; and by their ſolemn Act did publickly condemn them as Uſurpations, to prevent the ſame in Ages to come; and alſo to put a mark of Infamy upon the Name of Henry de Stanton, and his Fellow Juſtices, who in the Quo Warranto 14 Ed. II. refuſed to do the City Juſtice. And further, by the ſame Authority it was enacted, that the Liberty of the City ſhould not be taken into the hand of the ſaid King Edward III. or his Heirs, for any perſonal Treſpaſs or Judgment of any Miniſter of the ſaid City; nor that a Cuſtos ſhould be ſet over the City upon any ſuch like Occaſion; but the Miniſter that tranſgreſſed ſhould be puniſhed according to the Quality of his Offence.

And when King Richard II. endeavoured to ſhake the antient Government of the City, the Commons conſidering the high Conſequences that would unavoidably affect the whole Kingdom by the Invaſion of the Liberties of the City, they preſently took the Alarm, and thereupon petitioned the King, That for the greater Quiet and maintenance of Peace between his liege People and for common Profit, his Citizens of his City of London ſhould be in the then preſent Parliament entirely reſtored to their Franchiſes and free Uſages: And that it might pleaſe his moſt dread Highneſs of his eſpecial Grace to grant and confirm to his ſaid Citizens and their Succeſſors, by his Letters Patents, all their Liberties and free Uſages, as intirely and fully as they or their Predeceſſors enjoyed them, in the time of any of his moſt noble Progenitors, with the Clauſe of Licet uſi non fuerint vel abuſi fuerint, i. e. Although they uſed them not, or miſuſed them: As alſo with the Franchiſes which they enjoyed from his moſt gracious Grant or Confirmation, notwithſtanding any Statutes, Judgments given, Ordinances or Charters late made or granted to the contrary, as well in the time of any of his ſaid Progenitors, as in his own Reign. Becauſe the Reſtraint of their Liberties and frank Uſages had ſeveral ways before that time empaired and put back their Eſtates, and was not available to the common Profit of the Realm, &c. And further, to grant that no Maior of the ſaid City for the future ſhould take, nor be conſtrained to take, in the Court of Exchequer, any other Oath, but only the ancient Oath uſed in the time of King Edward his moſt noble Grandfather (whom God abſolve) any Statute or Ordinance to the contrary thereof notwithſtanding. To which the King anſwered, De aſſenſu Prælatorum, Dominorum, Procerum & Magnatum ſibi in eodem Parliamento aſſiſtentium, le Roy le voet, i. e. So it pleaſeth the King.

Thus in former times have Parliaments favoured the City in the Confirmation of their juſt Privileges. But to return to the Confirmations which the Kings and Queens of the Land have granted the ſame. The three great Charters beforeſaid of King Henry I. King John, and King Henry III. have been confirmed under the Great Seal to the People, by theſe Kings and Queens; viz. Edward I. Edward II. Edward III. Henry IV. Henry V. Henry VI. Edward IV. Rich. III. Henry VII. Henry VIII. Edward VI. Queen Mary, Queen Elizabeth, King James I. King Charles I. And laſtly,

All former Charters confirmed by K. Ch. II.

All theſe Charters were confirmed to the City by King Charles II. Which Charters were ſome Years ago printed: And the Book called The Royal Charter of Confirmation granted by King Charles the Second to the City of London; it was printed in the Year of Sir Robert Clayton's Maioralty, and dedicated to him; wherein are recited verbatim all the former Charters at length, taken, as the Book avoucheth, out of the Record. To which printed Charter of King Charles II. any may have recourſe, that deſires to know the Contents of all the Charters of London, and the Privileges of the Freemen thereof.

The City Charter ſeiſed into King Charles's Hands.

But in the 35th of the ſame Charles II. the City's Franchiſes were ſeiſed into that King's Hands, upon a pretended Forfeiture. But firſt in the 34th of the ſaid King a Quo Warranto was iſſued forth againſt the City, Sir Robert Sawyer being then the King's Attorney General; and the City was caſt. In the Year 1690, a Book was publiſhed in Folio, containing the Pleadings and Arguments, and other Proceedings in the Court of King's Bench upon the Quo Warranto touching the Charter of the City, with the Judgment entred thereupon; the whole Pleading pretending to be faithfully taken from the Record.

Book of the Pleadings, &c. upon the Quo Warranto, pr. 1690.

Some Account of the Quo Warranto.

Now this being ſo remarkable a Matter happening to the City, the like whereof had not happened in ſome Ages before, it may be worth taking ſome particular Notice of it: Which I ſhall do from the aforeſaid Account.

The Occaſion of the King's Diſpleaſure againſt the City.

That which gave the occaſion of the King's cauſing this Quo Warranto to be brought againſt the City Charter, was a Petition the Court of Aldermen and City made to the King upon his Prorogation of the Parliament, when they were going to try ſeveral Noble Perſons upon the Popiſh Plot; and for their printing and publiſhing the ſaid Petition, which was look'd upon as ſeditious. For the which the City made their Plea in the Rejoynder to the Attorney General's Replication. The Petition is remarkable: and upon it hung ſo much Diſpleaſure to the City, that it may not be amiſs for them that are minded to look more narrowly in the City's Concerns, to peruſe it in the ſaid printed Rejoynder.

Rejoinder, p. 31.

The Information in the nature of a Quo Warranto ſet forth, that the Maior and Commonalty, and Citizens of the City of London, by the ſpace of a Month laſt paſt and more, uſed, and yet did claim to have or uſe without any lawful Warrant, or Regal Grant, within the City of London aforeſaid, the Liberties and Privileges of the ſame City, viz. theſe Liberties and Privileges following: 1. To be of themſelves a Body Politick, by the name of Maior and Commonalty and Citizens of the City of London. 2. To be Sheriffs of the City of London and County of Middleſex, and to name, elect, make and conſtitute them. 3. That the Maior and Aldermen of the ſaid City were Juſtices of Peace, and held Seſſions of the Peace. All which Liberties, Privileges, and Franchiſes the ſaid Maior and Commonalty and Citizens of London, upon the King, had by the Space aforeſaid uſurped, and yet did uſurp.

The Judgment was, that the Liberties, Privileges and Franchiſes of the City, to be of themſelves one Body Corporate, by the name of Maior, Commonalty and Citizens, to be taken and ſeiſed into the King's hands; and that the ſaid Maior and Citizens of London be taken to ſatisfy the King for his Fine, for the Uſurpation of the Laws and Privileges.

The Arguments uſed, that the City had forfeited their Liberties.

The great Arguments inſiſted upon, whereby it was endeavoured to be proved that the City had forfeited their Liberties and Privileges, were theſe.

1. Becauſe they took Authority to levy Money upon the King's Subjects to their proper Uſe, by colour of Laws and Ordinances by them de facto ordained. And in the Proſecution thereof, the 17th of Sept. 26 Car. II. in Common Council, publiſhed a Law for the levying of ſeveral Sums of Money, of all that came to the Public Market within the City to ſell Proviſions; viz. Of every Perſon for every Horſe-load of Proviſions, 2 d. per Day: Of every Doſſer of Proviſions, 6 d. per Day. For every Cart not drawn with more than three Horſes, 4 d. per Day; if drawn with more than three Horſes, 6 d. per Day. And if any paid them not, then to be removed from their Place in the Market. And that by colour of this Law, the Maior, &c. had for ſeven Years received great Sums of Money, amounting to 5000 l. per Annum. This was repreſented as an Oppreſſion of the King's Subjects for their own private Gain.

2. That the Maior, Commonalty and Citizens, on the 13th of January, 32 Car. II. [Sir Patience Ward then being Maior] in their Common Council did give their Votes, that a certain Petition under the Name of the Maior, Aldermen and Commons of the City of London in Common Council aſſembled, ſhould be exhibited to the King. The Import whereof was, that by the Prorogation of the Parliament (which was from the 10th of Jan. 32 Car. II. to the 20th of January then next enſuing) the Proſecution of the public Juſtice of the Kingdom, and the making neceſſary Proviſions for the Preſervation of the King and of his Proteſtant Subjects, had received Interruption. And that they did order the ſaid Petition to be printed; and the ſame was printed accordingly. Which was charged and aggravated upon the City to be done unlawfully, maliciouſly, adviſedly, and ſeditiouſly, with intention that the ſaid Petition might be diſperſed among the King's Subjects, to the Hatred of the King's Perſon and Government, and to diſturb the Peace of the Kingdom.

The Maior, Commonalty and Citizens, in Rejoynder, (as to the former Argument) pleaded by proteſting, that thoſe Pleas by the Attorney pleaded, were inſufficient in Law to forejudge or exclude the Maior and Commonalty from being a Corporation; Proteſting alſo, that no Act or Deed, or By-Law made by the Maior, Aldermen, &c. is an Act or Deed of the Body Corporate. Laſtly, proteſting that they, the Maior and Commonalty, &c. never took upon them any unlawful or unjuſt Authority to tax the King's Subjects coming to Market, ſuch yearly Sums as were alledged.

As to the Petition, the City in their ſaid Rejoynder, ſhewed the imminent Danger the King and his Subjects were in at that time from a Popiſh Plot; That Sir Edmundbury Godfrey, who took Examination of Witneſſes, and Information concerning the ſame, was lain in wait for, and murdered by the Conſpirators. That Green and others were hanged for it. And that others were tried for the ſaid Conſpiracy. That the Lord Powis, and ſeveral other Lords, were impeached by the Commons in Parliament for High Treaſon, and ſent to the Tower. And that the King, in his Speech to the Parliament, had recommended to them the farther Purſuit and Examination of that Conſpiracy; declaring, that he thought not himſelf nor them ſafe, till that matter were gone through withal. And therefore, that it was neceſſary that the ſaid Lords ſhould be brought to Trial. And the Parliament made an Addreſs to the King, both Lords and Commons, declaring their being deeply ſenſible of the ſad Condition of the Realm, by means of the Conſpiracy. Theſe Impeachments and Bills thus depending, and the Parliament thus prorogued, the Citizens and Inhabitants thereof were much diſquieted with the Senſe and Apprehenſion of the Dangers threatning the King's Perſon, his Government and Realm, by reaſon of this Conſpiracy: And conceiving no other means to prevent it, than the ſitting of the Parliament, and receiving a Petition from divers faithful Subjects, Citizens, to the ſame Effect. And laſtly, it being lawful to petition, the Maior and Aldermen in Common Council aſſembled, did cauſe the Petition to be written, and did order, that after the ſame was preſented to the King, it ſhould be printed, for the Satisfaction of the troubled Minds of the Citizens.

This great Cauſe was twice only argued; firſt by Mr. Finch, the King's Sollicitor, for the King, and Sir George Treby, the Recorder of the City, for the City. And next, by Sir Robert Sawyer, the King's Attorney-General, for the King, and Henry Pollexfen, Eſq; for the City.

Memorandum, That when the Demurrer in this Caſe was joined [viz.Michaelmas Term, 34 Car. II.] Mr. Serjeant Pemberton was Chief Juſtice of the King's Bench. But before Hillary Term, that it came to be argued, he was removed, and made Chief Juſtice of the Common Pleas, and Sir Edmund Saunders, who had been Council for the King in drawing and adviſing the Pleadings, was made Chief Juſtice of the King's Bench. Some adviſed, that the City ſhould ſurrender their Charter to the King, but the Majority were againſt it; and ſo it was ſeized into the King's hands.

Ballads upon the Loſs of the City Charter.

But though the City were thus deſpoiled of all its ancient Privileges, Freedoms, and Franchiſes, on which depended each private Citizen's Honour, Wealth, and Safety; yet many of them did make but a matter of Sport of it, as though the City was well enough met with, becauſe of the want of Loyalty in ſome of its Members, and for their ſtanding up ſo ſtrenuouſly for their pretended Rights and Privileges. And Songs were merrily ſung at Entertainments in the City on this Occaſion. As one to the Tune of Packington's Pound, that began thus:

YOU Freemen and Maſters, and Prentices mourn,
For now you are left with your CHARTER forlorn,
Since London was London, I dare boldly ſay,
For your Riots you never ſo dearly did pay.

In Weſtminſter Hall
Your Dagon did fall,

That cauſ'd you to riot and mutiny all.

Books printed upon the Quo Warranto.

Upon occaſion of the Quo Warranto brought againſt the City, were divers Books and Pamphlets printed and ſent abroad; viz. 1. The Citizens Loſs when the Charter of London is forfeited, or given up. Printed in 1683. 2. The Caſe of the Charter of London ſtated. Printed in 1683. This Tract is to ſhew, that London had forfeited its Charter. 3. The Rights and Privileges of the City London, proved from Preſcriptions, Charters, and Acts of Parliament; alſo the Coronation Oath of ſeveral of the Kings of England. Printed in 1682. 4. Seaſonable Reflections of diſſolving Corporations in the late two Reigns, by ſurrendring of, and giving Judgment againſt Charters; particularly that of the City of London, manifeſtly deſtructive to the moſt ancient and famous Conſtitution of our Engliſh Government. Printed in 1689. But it was intended to have been printed at the time of the taking away the City's Charter, but for fear of the Severity of the Times, hindred. Moreover beſides theſe, 5. The City of London's Plea to the Quo Warranto, in an Information brought againſt the Charter in Michaelmas Term 1681. Wherein it will appear, that the Liberties, Privileges and Cuſtoms of the ſaid City cannot be forfeited or loſt by the Miſdemeanour of any Officer or Magiſtrate thereof; nor their Charter be ſeized into the King's hand for any Miſuſage or Abuſage of their Liberties and Privileges; they being confirmed by divers ancient Records and Acts of Parliament, made before and ſince Magna Charta. Publiſhed both in Latin and Engliſh 6. The Replication to the City of London's Plea to the Quo Warranto brought againſt their Charter by our Sovereign Lord the King. 7. The City of London's Rejoinder to Mr. Attorney General's Replication in the Quo Warranto, &c. Wherein is pleaded, that, Firſt, By Preſcription they have a Right, 1. To appoint, alter, and change the Markets within the City from one Place to another; 2. To regulate Markets, and to aſcertain Tolls and Prizages, which were levied upon Freemen as well as unfree Men.

Secondly they pleaded, That upon ſerious Conſideration had of the Proceedings of the late damnable Popiſh Plot by them mentioned, for the Deſtruction of the King's moſt Sacred Perſon, the Extirpation of the Proteſtant Religion, and the Subverſion of the Civil Government, the Common Council, out of the great Zeal and Loyalty to the King, agreed to the Petition inſerted in Mr. Attorney General's ſaid Replication. Theſe were anſwerable to the two Charges contained in the Quo Warranto; the one for taking Money of the Market-folks, the other for a Petition, that the Maior, Aldermen, and Citizens preferred to the King, for the ſitting of the Parliament to examine the dangerous Popiſh Plot, the King having prorogued them when they were going about it: And for printing this Petition, and diſperſing it abroad, which was ſaid to be to the Diſturbance of the Peace and Tranquility of the Kingdom.

When the City's Liberties were thus ſeiſed by King Charles II. they found it neceſſary to preſent a Petition to him in Council at Windſor, upon Monday the 18th of June, 1683. when the Lord Keeper made a Speech concerning this Affair. The Petition ran to this Tenour;

The City's Petition when the Liberties were ſeized.

'Shewing, That his Majeſty's Petitioners were 'moſt heartily ſorry for the Miſgovernment of 'this his City of late Years, whereby the Citizens 'had fallen under his Majeſty's Diſpleaſure. 'Which occaſioned a Quo Warranto to be brought 'againſt them; upon which Judgment had been 'pronounced for Seiſure of their Liberties and 'Franchiſes into his Majeſty's hands. They 'acknowledged the great Favour of this Opportunity of Application to his Royal Grace vouch-‘ſafed them, by reaſon of his Majeſty's not requiring Judgment to be immediately entred thereupon. That conſidering their diſtreſſed Condition, they humbly caſt themſelves at his Feet, imploring his Princely Compaſſion and Grace to be extended towards this his ancient City, and begging his Majeſty's Pardon for all Offences that they did, in the Name of themſelves and all the Citizens humbly tendred: And prayed his Majeſty to accept their moſt ſolemn Promiſes and Aſſurance of conſtant Loyalty and Obedience to him, his Heirs and Succeſſors; and of their regular and dutiful Adminiſtration of the Government of the City for the future; ſubmitting to his good Pleaſure, and begging his Commands and Direction.

Ld. Keeper's Speech to the Petitioners.

Upon the reading of which Petition, the Maior, Aldermen, and Citizens, were commanded to withdraw. And after a while being called in again, the Lord Keeper ſpake to this purpoſe: ‘That for the ſake of ſo many of the preſent Magiſtrates and other eminent Citizens of undoubted Loyalty and Affection to his Majeſty and his Service, the King would ſhew the City all the Favour they could reaſonably deſire, &c. That it was not for Puniſhment, but meerly for the Good of the City, that he took this courſe. That it was not his Intention to prejudice them, either in their Properties or Cuſtoms. Nay, leſt entring a Judgment upon Record might have Conſequences fatal to them, he had cauſed his Attorney to forbear the ſame at preſent, that the City might have ſome time to conſider their own Condition. That the City had not been well adviſed to defer their Application to his Majeſty thus long, till even the Court had pronounced Judgment. That his Majeſty's Affection was too great to reject their Suit for that cauſe. That he had reſolved to make the Alterations as few and as eaſy as might be conſiſtent with the good Government of the City, and Peace of the Kingdom. And they to be theſe following:

New Regulations of the City, required by the King.

That no Lord Maior, Sheriff, Recorder, Common Serjeant, Town Clerk, or Coroner of the City, ſhould be capable of, or admitted to, the Exerciſe of their reſpective Offices, before his Majeſty ſhall have approved them under his Sign Manual.

That if his Majeſty ſhall diſapprove the Choice of any Perſon to be Lord Maior, and ſignify the ſame under his Sign Manual to the Lord Maior; or, in default of a Maior, to the Recorder, or ſenior Alderman, the Citizens ſhall within one Week proceed to a new Choice. And if his Majeſty ſhall diſapprove the ſecond Choice, he may, if he pleaſe, nominate a Perſon to be Lord Maior.

That if his Majeſty ſhall in like manner diſapprove the Perſons choſen to be Sheriffs, or either of them, he may appoint Perſons to be Sheriffs.

But this Election of Officers may be according to the ancient Uſage of the City.

That the Lord Maior and Court of Aldermen may, with Leave of his Majeſty, diſplace any Alderman, Recorder, Common Serjeant, Town Clerk, Coroner of the ſaid City, and Steward of the Borough.

Upon the Election of any Alderman, if any preſented by the Ward to the Court ſhall be judged unfit; upon ſuch Declaration by the ſaid Court, the Ward ſhall proceed to the Choice of other Perſons in their room. And if the Court ſhall diſapprove ſuch ſecond Choice, then the Court may appoint others in their room.

The Juſtices of Peace to be by the King's Commiſſion. Which his Majeſty will grant according to the uſual Method; unleſs upon extraordinary Occaſion, when his Majeſty ſhall think it neceſſary.

Then the Lord Keeper went on thus:

My Lord Maior,

‘Theſe Regulations being thus made, his Majeſty will not only pardon this Proſecution, but confirm your Charter in ſuch manner as may be conſiſtent with them. That the City ought to look upon this as a great Condeſcenſion on his Majeſty's part; it being but in the name of a Reſervation of a ſmall part of what is already in his Power by the Judgment. That if the City ſhould look upon it with another Eye, and neglect a ſpeedy Compliance, yet his Majeſty hath done his part. And if there ſhould be any heavy Conſequence of this Judgment (which would behoove them well to conſider) the Fault would lie at their own Door. That it was his Majeſty's Pleaſure, that the Maior ſhould return to the City, and conſult with the Common Council, that he might ſpeedily know their Reſolution hereupon, and give his Direction. And that they might ſee the King was in earneſt, he [the Lord Keeper] was commanded to let them know, that the King had given order to the Attorney General to enter up Judgment on Saturday next, unleſs they prevented by their Compliance.

And in this Condition ſtood the City from thence, viz. from 33 Car. II. and all along King James the Second's Reign, the Maiors and Sheriffs being appointed by Commiſſion from thoſe Kings.

King James ſends back the Charter.

Indeed, in the laſt Year of King James, when he was in the uneaſy Apprehenſion of the Prince of Orange's invading of him, he appointed the Lord Jefferies Lord Chancellor (who had been very inſtrumental to have Sentence pronounced againſt the Charter of the City in the Reign of King Charles II. Anno 1683.) to carry back the Charter to Guildhall, in great Formality, and to make a Reſignation of the ſame to the City; that King hoping hereby to ſweeten the City that was weary of his Government.

The City reſtored to its Franchiſes by Parliament under K. William.

And thus it ſtood, till by a Statute of the 2d of William and Mary, the Proceedings were declared illegal and arbitrary, and that Judgment, and every other Judgment given and recorded in the ſaid Court, for ſeizing the Franchiſes of the ſaid City, were reverſed and made void, and Vacats entred upon the Rolls; and that the Maior, Commonalty, and Citizens of London did remain a Body Politick, by the name of Maior and Commonalty and Citizens of the City of London; and to have and enjoy all their Rights and Charters: And that all Charters, Letters Patents, &c. concerning any of the Liberties, Lands and Tenements, Rights, Titles, &c. made ſince the ſaid Judgment by the late Kings, Charles and James, were thereby declared void. Alſo, the Officers, Companies, and Corporations were reſtored.

Divers Citizens petition the Parliament concerning ſuch as had obtained Places, the Charter being ſeiſed.

This Act of Parliament that had reverſed the Judgment of the Quo Warranto, ſeemed to require another for the Explanation of it. For many worthy Citizens, and of eminent Rank, had taken a diſguſt againſt ſuch as were put in, and held Places of Honour and Wealth in the City by King James, when the Charter was gone; as certain Aldermen, the Chamberlain, and divers Members of the Common Council: who ſtill, after the Act for reſtoring the City Charter, remained, and acted as before. They were generally (though not all) hot Diſſenters, and buſie Men, and no Friends to the good old Orders and Cuſtoms of the City. Whereupon a great many conſiderable Members of the Common Council preferred a Petition to the Parliament Anno 1690, to this Purport: ‘That they hoped ‘the late Act of Parliament for reverſing the Judgment in the Quo Warranto againſt the City would have reſtored it to its ancient Rights and Privileges. But that the contrary happened. For notwithſtanding the ſaid Act, ſeveral Aldermen made, or elected by vertue of Commiſſions or Charters from the late King James under the Great Seal, acted as Aldermen by that Authority; under pretence, that by ſome doubtful Expreſſions in the ſaid Act, they were continued as well as miniſterial Officers. That by colour of the aſſumed Authority and illegal Proceedings, Sir Tho. Pilkington was by them on the Day of Election appointed by the ſaid Act, declared and made Maior; though not duly returned by the Common Hall, according to the Uſage of the City. That by the contrivance of the ſaid Maior, Leonard Robinſon was impoſed upon the Citizens as Chamberlain of the City, notwithſtanding another Perſon was duly elected into that Office, and declared ſo to be by the Sheriffs, and the Hall thereupon diſſolved. That divers Members of the Common Council were illegally excluded, and others, duly elected, were refuſed Admittance. That the Place of Town Clerk having been vacant three Months and upwards, and only eligible by and in Common Council, the Maior and Aldermen had of their own Authority appointed ſeveral Perſons to the Execution thereof, without the Conſent of the Common Council, againſt their conſtant known Rights. That the Petitioners had not been ſuffered to meet and conſult about the neceſſary Affairs of the City, according to their ancient Rights and Cuſtoms. That a Common Council being ſummoned, and aſſembled about the 3d of October, many Debates ariſing concerning the Premiſſes, and ſeveral Motions being made, and the Majority of the Common Council agreeing that for ſettling the Rights of the City, an humble Addreſs ſhould be made to that Honourable Houſe, to explain the ſaid Act; and the Queſtion being thereupon deſired to be put, the Maior refuſed it, and, to prevent any Application, immediately diſſolved the Court, and went away. The Petitioners ſubſcribed their Names to the number of about 117. The firſt Names were, William Dodſon, Ralph Box, Robert Alye, William Withers, Richard Holder, Robert Bedingfield, John Midgely, John Alexander, John Wright, John Genew, ——— Thomas Blackmore, ——— Robert Bearcroft, ——— Thomas Gardiner, ——— Benjamin Aloff, John Johnſon, Francis Brerewood, William Lewen, Peter Floyer, Robert Littlebury, Samuel Gerard, Richard Hoare, Samuel Ongley, Thomas Short, &c.

Great Sums parted with by the City for their Privileges.

And here let me ſubjoin the vaſt Sums of Money that have been paid to the Crown by the City, for their ſeveral Grants and Confirmations, as they are taken out of the Rolls and other authentic Records. Some of theſe Sums were parted with to gain their Privileges again, when ſeiſed upon by ſome of the Kings of England, for ſome Diſpleaſure taken againſt them.

In the 9th of Richard I. the Citizens gave 1500 Marks, for the preſerving of their Liberties.

The Citizens pay K. John 3000 Marks. 1 *Johan.M.*20.

The Citizens of London gave 3000 Marks for the Confirmation of their Liberties granted them by King John in the firſt of his Reign; as appears by the Oblata Roll, which ran thus: Cives London' Domino Regi tria Millia Marcar' pro habend' Confirmatione Domini Regis de Libertatibus ſuis. Et liberabitur Galfrido Filio-Petri, &c. i. e. The Citizens of London give to the Lord the King 3000 Marks for having the King's Confirmation of their Liberties. And it ſhall be delivered to Geffery Fitz-Peter on theſe Terms, that if they will give thoſe 3000 Marks, they ſhall have the Charter; but if not, they ſhall not have it.

In the ſecond of Henry III. they paid the fifteenth part of their moveable Goods, that the City might have all its ancient Liberties and free Cuſtoms.

In the ninth of Henry III. they paid another Fifteenth of their Moveables, that London might have all the old Liberties and Cuſtoms, which it had been uſed to have.

In the 36th of Henry III. the King granted to all the Citizens of London, all their Liberties, Laws, and Cuſtoms; and which they alſo had in the time of King Henry I. uſed and not uſed. And the King granted the Sheriffs 7*l.* yearly for certain Privileges or Ground belonging to St. Paul's Church. Which was long after allowed by the Barons of the Exchequer to every Sheriff, when he made up his Accounts in the Office of the Pipe. And they then paid the King 500 Marks for having that Charter.

Fab. Chron.

In the 38th or 39th of King Henry III. An. 1254. the King ſeiſed the Liberties of the City, becauſe the Maior had not done Execution upon the Bakers, for lacking of their Aſſizes; but reſtoring it ſoon again, that is, within four Days following the Feaſt of Edmund the Biſhop, or by the 19th of November; the Citizens agreeing with the Earl of Cornwall, and giving him 600 Marks.

Again, Anno 1255 (but a Year after) the King ſeiſed the Liberties again. And the Cauſe pretended was, for certain Monies which the Queen claimed as her Right. And now for a time the King made his Under-Treaſurer Cuſtos of the City. But giving the King 400 Marks, they were reſtored to their Liberties, and the King's Under-Treaſurer diſcharged.

K Henry III. his Addreſs to the City upon the Barons Commotions, An. 1259. Record. Turr.

Yet it is remarkable what a Regard King Henry the Third had to the Citizens of London in the Barons Diſcontents; when he was jealous of the City's joining with them; being minded to call a Parliament there without him. There is extant in the Records of the Tower, a common Letter of that King, writ in the 44th of his Reign, from St. Audoens in France, to the Barons of the Five Ports, to the Archbiſhops of Canterbury and York, and to the Maiors and Commonalty of London and York, concerning this riſing of his Subjects and their meeting in London; exhorting them to Obedience, and to obey H. de Bygod, his Juſticiary, till his coming into England. He obſerved to them, how they of his Kingdom did accompany together with Horſes and Arms, in diſturbance of his Peace, and againſt his Command, as unmindful of their Fealty; and ſo intended to ruſh into a Parliament to be called in his City of London: Whence, he added, any one might clearly ſee, that this Meeting ſounded more to draw the Sword, than to further Peace. And were it granted, that the Intention of each of them were good, yet the Manner was very bad, and the Example pernicious to all Kings and Kingdoms of the Earth, &c. And thus by the Addreſs of a Letter, and Arguments uſed therein, did that King think it worth his Time to ſecure the City's Loyalty.

But yet in the 50th of the ſame King were 20000 Marks paid, for a further Confirmation of their Liberties.

Fab. Chron.

King Edward I. in the 26th of his Reign, reſtored the City their Liberties and Franchiſes that had been kept from twelve Years and more. But theſe were not redeemed, ſaith Fabian, without great Sums of Money. And ſome ſay, the Citizens paid 3000 Marks.

The City in the 6th of Edward II. to defer his laying a Tallage upon their Rents and Chattels, on pretence the City was the King's Demeſnes, and to forbear it till next Parliament; lent him 1000 l. and two Years after, 400 l. more on the ſame Account.

Anno 1392, King Richard II. took Ill Will to the Citizens, becauſe they would not lend him 1000 l. Finding therefore ſomewhat to charge them with, he impriſoned the Maior with the Aldermen, and took from them their Privileges: which afterwards they redeemed at 10000 l. and beſides gave him other 10000 l. for his Entrance into the City, with many other Jewels, as a Crown, then preſented to him, and another to his Queen.

The Contents of all the Charters.

For a Concluſion of this Chapter of the Charters of London, I ſhall only add the Contents of them Alphabetically, by way of Repertory, as they may be found in the printed Book, intituled, The Great Charter of Confirmation of King Charles II. according to the Page. Where all the Charters are rehearſed, and avouched to be taken out of the Records, and tranſlated into Engliſh by S. G. Which Book is dedicated to Sir Robert Clayton, then Maior, as was mentioned before.

The City inſiſt upon their Charters. J. S.

UPON theſe their Charters, and the Liberties and Privileges granted by vertue thereof, the City hath been wont to inſiſt, and to conteſt ſometimes with the Prince, and ſometimes with others. Whereof I have collected a few Paſſages out of the Records of the Chamber, or of the Tower, or elſewhere.

King Edward to the City, to obſerve the Statutes of Winton. Lib. Horn. fo. 314. b. In lib. majori nigr.

To which the City anſwer, refuſing to comply in certain Articles.

EDWARDUS HENRICI Filius exiſtens in Scotia, &c. Edward [the Firſt] Son of Henry, being in Scotland at Lanercoſt, directed his Brief to the Maior and Sheriffs of London, in the 35th Year of his Reign, that they ſhould obſerve the Articles and Statutes ſet forth at Wynton. And this was the Return of the City to the ſaid Brief:

'Adhuc reſpondemus, &c. We anſwer further, 'That at the Eves, as it is fit, in Wards, and alſo 'at taking Inquiſitions of Tranſgreſſions and 'Felonies, when need requires in the City, in 'each Ward, about Malefactors and Receivers; 'we were always ready, and will be, for the 'keeping of the King's Peace. But to keep the 'Statute of Wincheſter, in all its Articles, in the 'ſaid City, as it is contained in that Brief, onerari non poſſumus, i. e. We cannot be charged in 'the foreſaid City, by reaſon of divers CUSTOMS 'in the ſaid City hitherto uſed. Yet Vagrants, 'Wanderers up and down, and ſuch as are ſuſpected of Evil in the ſaid City, being found, we 'have arreſted; and always, when there ſhall be 'need, will cauſe to be arreſted, and will have 'them forth coming before the Juſtices of the 'Lord King, as it hath been appointed before, 'and after hath been accuſtomed to be done in 'the ſame City.

'Concerning the Inquiſitions, as to returning 'under Seals the Articles contained in the Brief 'before you, without the City, it never was accuſtomed to be done; and therefore we have 'returned none thence.

In the Reign of King Edward II. there was an Order made by the King's Council to lay a Tax upon the Eſtates of thoſe that held Demeſn Lands of the King. And under that Denomination, it was concluded upon, to tax the City alſo. Upon which the City had a notable Struggle with the Court. The Particulars are ſet down in one of the City Records, and are to be ſeen in the Book Horn, under this Title, Memoranda de Allegationibus; i. e. Some memorable things concerning the Allegations that were made by the Maior and Citizens of London, before Lord King Edward, Son of King Edward, viz. that they ought not to be taxed of their Rents and Catalls, as they who are of the Demeſns of the Lord the King.

The City contend with the King about taxing them. Lib. Horn. fo. 324.

Memorandum, That on Saturday next before the Feaſt of the Circumciſion of the Lord Chriſt, in the ſixth Year of King Edward, Son of King Edward, John de Giſors, Maior of London, the Aldermen and Sheriffs, were called before the Council of the Lord King; viz. Lord Walter Biſhop of Worceſter, then Chancellor of the King, the Lord Adomar de Valentia, Earl of Pembroke, Lord John de Sendale, the ſaid King's Treaſurer, and others of his Council, met together at the Friers Carmelites, [i. e. White Friers.] To which Maior and Aldermen on the King's part it was intimated, That it was provided by the King's Council, that he ſhould lay a Tax upon his Demeſns, Cities, and Boroughs throughout England; as he might well by the Right of his Crown. By whom it was asked of the foreſaid Maior and Citizens, if they would make a Fine for their Tallage, or that they be aſſeſſed by their Heads, as well of their Rents as Catalls. And when the ſaid Maior and Aldermen hath ſpoken together upon the Premiſſes, they ſued, that they might from hence have Conference with the Commonalty of the City. And it was granted them. Afterwards Conference being had with the Commonalty, the Maior, Aldermen and Citizens came, and ſaid, that altho' the ſaid Lord King at his Will might tax his Demeſns, Cities and Boroughs, yet they underſtood, that they of the City of London were not talliable. For, they ſay, that they and their Predeceſſors were free, and ought to be ſo. And this, by the Charter of the Kings of England, the Progenitors of the Lord the King, and of the King now. Wherein it was contained, that the Citizens of London, have all their Liberties and free Cuſtoms, which they have had in the Time of King Henry, Grandfather of King Henry, Great Grandfather of King Edward, the King's Father now. From which Time hitherto, as they underſtood, they had been quit of ſuch Tallages.

That moreover, it was contained in the Great Charter of the Liberties of England, that the City of London might have all her ancient Liberties and free Cuſtoms. Whence from the Time that they anciently were ſo free, that in the before noted Form they had not been accuſtomed to be taxed, they ſue, that now, if it pleaſe the King, they may not be taxed.

Beſides, they ſay, that becauſe as well the Prelates, Earls, Barons, and the reſt of the Nobles of the Realm, as the Citizens themſelves, do poſſeſs ſome Rents and Tenements in the ſaid City, the Citizens themſelves, without the Counſel of the ſaid Nobles, cannot grant ſuch Tallage. Becauſe this would be to the diſinheriting of the ſaid Nobles, and the too heavy burdening of their Tenements.

In like manner they ſay, that the Citizens themſelves hold the foreſaid City of the Donation and Grant of the now Lord King his Progenitors, heretofore Kings of England, for a certain Fee Farm per Ann. to be paid to the Lord King's Treaſury, for all Services. By which it ſeems to them, that they ought not to be taxed in the foreſaid Form.

And they ſue, if it pleaſe the Lord King, that this Tallage be deferred until the next Parliament, that then they, together with others the Nobles of the Kingdom of England, who poſſeſs Tenements and Rents in the ſaid City, may obtain that which is juſt in this behalf.

The foreſaid Reaſons, and many other, being propounded, at length it was granted to the ſaid Citizens by the aforeſaid Council of the Lord King, that if they would lend the ſaid Lord King for the preſent 2000 Marks, they would ceaſe to aſſeſs the aforeſaid Tallage, until the next Parliament.

And becauſe the Citizens would not preſently yield this, there came Lord William Jagge, Gilbert de Ronberi, Maſter John de Everdon, and John Abel, Juſtices appointed to aſſeſs the ſaid Tallage at Gyhald: And they cauſed their Commiſſion to be read, &c. And by reaſon of the Shortneſs of the Day, they prefixed to the ſaid Citizens a Day to begin the Aſſize of the ſaid Tallage, unto Friday next following, &c.

Afterwards, on Wedneſday next after the Epiphany of our Lord, the ſaid Maior and Citizens came before the Lord King's Council, and granted to the Lord King 1000 l. by Loan for the preſent. And ſued from thence Letters of the Lord King to be made to them, that any Tallage ſingly by Poll, or in common upon their Goods, Cattals, Rents or Tenements, be not aſſeſſed before the next Parliament.

And hereupon the King made to them certain his Letters Patents; the Tenor whereof is ſuch:

The King's Letters, acknowledging 1000 l. lent him by the City, and to repay it.

EDWARDUS Dei gratia, &c. ‘Edward by the Grace of God, &c. To all to whom the preſent Letters ſhall come, Greeting. Know ye, that whereas our Beloved, the Maior and Aldermen, and the reſt of the Citizens of our City of London, have lately cauſed to be lent to Us a Thouſand Pounds Sterling, We, willing to ſatisfy them, the Maior, Aldermen and Citizens of the ſame Sum of Money, as we are bound, have granted unto them, that in the next Aid to be granted unto Us in our foreſaid City, or in the County of Middleſex, or in levying Money in the ſaid City and County for Our Need, for whatever Cauſe next to be levied, We will cauſe the foreſaid Thouſand Pounds to be allowed them.

‘We have granted alſo to the ſame Maior, Aldermen and Citizens, that we will by no means cauſe to be aſſeſſed any Tallage ſingly by Poll, or in common upon them, their Goods, Cattals, Lands and Tenements, or Rents, in the ſaid City, or Suburbs of the ſame, before our next Parliament, or to be levied upon them, Saving always to the Maior, Aldermen and Citizens of the ſaid City, the Aſſignments before made by Us to them for Debt, concerning which they undertook to ſatisfy Us; as in our Letters Patents made to them thereupon, more fully is contained. In Witneſs whereof We have cauſed theſe our Letters to be made Patents. Witneſs myſelf at Windeſore, the 13th day of February, Anno Regni noſtri Sexto.

And accordingly the ſaid 1000 l. was paid to the Lord Ingelarde de Warlee, then Keeper of the King's Wardrobe, by a Brief of the King, in theſe Words:

EDWARDUS Dei gratia, &c. ‘Edward by the Grace of God, &c. To the Maior, Aldermen and Citizens of the City of London, Greeting. Whereas ye lately freely lent Us a Thouſand Pounds Sterling, under certain Conditions, as in Our Letters Patents made to you thereupon, more fully is ſpecified; We command you, that you deliver in Our Name the ſaid Sum of Money to Our beloved Clark Ingelarde de Warlee, Keeper of Our Wardrobe, without delay; receiving from him his Letters Patents, teſtifying the Receipt of the ſaid Money. Witneſs myſelf at Windeſore, the 15th day of February, in the 6th Year of Our Reign.

And accordingly the ſaid Thouſand Pounds were paid to Lord Ingelarde, by five his Letters Patents; which remain here [ſaith Horn the Writer] in the Chamber, among the Acquittances of the Account of John Mayeliner, then Chamberlain.

Afterward, notwithſtanding the King's Grant, for that the Lord King had held his Parliament at York, on the next Lord's Day after the Feaſt of the Nativity of the Bleſſed Virgin Mary, the 8th Year of his Reign, about executing ſome certain Cauſes, then relating to his Affairs in the Premiſſes, as well for arduous Buſineſſes touching the King's Crown, by reaſon of his Wars in Scotland, which were only handled in the ſaid Parliament; as alſo for that the ſaid Parliament was held in Parts ſo remote, the Maior and Citizens did not at all proſecute, whether they were talliable or not; the foreſaid Lord King notwithſtanding ſent his Juſtices to tax the ſaid City, viz. the Lord Henry de Staunton, Henry Scrop, John de Markfield, and Raſe de Stoke. And thereupon commanded the Sheriffs of London by his Brief in theſe Words:

The Cit of Londo
to be ta
at Henly
Lib. Horn

REX Vicecomitibus London ſalutem, &c. ‘The King to the Sheriffs of London, Greeting. Whereas We have conſtituted Our beloved and faithful Henry de Staunton, Henry de Scrop, &c. three or two of them, to aſſeſs Our Tallage within the foreſaid City, and in the Suburbs thereof, ſeparately by Poll, or in common, as they ſhall ſee to be more expedient for Our Profit; as in Our Letters Patents to the ſame Henry, Henry, John and Raſe made, more fully is contained; We command you, that when ye ſhall be warned by them, three or two of them, ye cauſe to come before them, &c. all thoſe of the City and Suburbs foreſaid, whom ye ſhall ſee neceſſary for the ſaid Tallage. And that ye be aiding and attending for this, to the ſaid Henry, Henry, John and Raſe, three or two of them, as they ſhall enjoin you on Our Part. Witneſs Myſelf at Spalding, the 24th of October, the eighth Year of Our Reign.

There was alſo another Letter to the Sheriffs of London in theſe Words:

EDWARDUS, &c. ‘Edward by the Grace of God, &c. to the Sheriffs of London, Greeting. We command you, that ye cauſe to come before our beloved and faithful Henry de Staunton, &c. at Gyhald, London, on this inſtant Sunday, next after the Feaſt of St. Leonard's, twelve of the honeſter, richer, and loyaller ſort of Men of every Ward of the ſaid City, according as the ſame Wards ſhall be greater or leſs, to hear, do, and receive what ſhall be there enjoined them on Our behalf. And that ye have there then their Names, whom ye ſhall ſo cauſe to come there, &c. Witneſs Henry de Staunton at Weſtminſter, the 6th day of November, the eighth Year of Our Reign.

And the ſaid Juſtices came to Gyhald, to begin the foreſaid Taxation. And upon this the Maior and Citizens repaired to the King's Council, and prayed Reſpite, until the next Parliament, as before. And they granted to the King 600 Marks in Loan: So that the ſaid Tallage ſhould be put off to the next Parliament. And the Lord King granted them Reſpite of the ſaid Tallage. And thereupon made to them his Letters Patents under this Form:

EDWARD by the Grace of God, King of ‘England, &c. to all to whom theſe preſent Letters ſhall come, Greeting. Know ye, that whereas the Maior, Aldermen, and the reſt of our Citizens of London, have lent Us 400 l. by the hands of our beloved and faithful Walter of ‘ Norwich, our Treaſurer, to diſpatch certain our Affairs therewith, We willing to ſatisfy the ſame, the Maior, Aldermen, and other Citizens, as We are bound, of the ſaid Sum of Money, have granted to them, that in the next Aid to be levied for Us in our foreſaid City, or to be granted in the County of Middleſex, or in Money to be next raiſed in the ſaid City and County for our Need, on what Cauſe ſoever, We ſhall cauſe the ſaid 400 l. to be allowed them. We have granted alſo to the ſame, the Maior, &c. as in the foreſaid Letter on the former Loan. Witneſs Myſelf at Langele, the 16th of December, the eighth Year of Our Reign.

What became of this Buſineſs between the King, (who was an extravagant Prince, and wanted Money) and the Citizens, I cannot tell. But by this it appears, how the Princes would ſometimes encroach upon the Liberties of the City, to ſqueeze Money out of them; and how the Citizens inſiſted upon their Charters and Privileges: However, this Tallage upon Cities, Boroughs, and Demeſn Lands of the King, ſeemed in the aforeſaid ſixth Year of this King, to go through the Realm: As may be conjectured by this Brief that follows: Wherein alſo may be obſerved, the King's Care of the Privileges of London, and doing Juſtice to them.

A Brief of the King, directed to the Aſſeſſors of the County of Oxon, that they ceſs not the Citizens of London among them to the Tallage.

The Citizens of London not to be taxed at Henly. Lib. Horn.

‘ THE King to his beloved and faithful Servants William Merre, Adam de Shobenhange, and Galfride de Padenham, appointed to ceſſe the Tallage in our Cities, Boroughs, and Demeſns in the County of Oxon, greeting. The Citizens and Merchants of our City of London, have ſhewn to Us, that whereas ſome of them cauſe to be brought divers their Things and Merchandizes from London, as far as Henly in the County aforeſaid, to ſell them there on Market-days, and to trade in them from Week to Week; and whatſoever their divers Things and Merchandizes they buy there, and in the adjacent Parts, to bring to London, to make their Profit of; and cauſe to be hired ſmall Houſes and Places in the ſaid Town of Henly from Term to Term, as well for to lay up the ſaid Things and Merchandizes there bought, till they can conveniently ſell them, as the ſaid Things and Merchandizes there and in the ſaid Parts bought to be laid up, until they may conveniently carry them thence; and have not certain Houſes or Lands or Tenements there, nor make Abode there; nor are in Lot and Scot with the Men of that Town; you notwithſtanding do not make the ſaid Citizens and Merchants, upon occaſion of ſuch their Houſes and Places, and Things and Merchandizes ſo put into them, to yield Tallage to Us thence, &c. And that it is not agreeable to Right that our ſaid Citizens and Merchants ſhould be taxed with the ſaid Men [who dwell there] on the ſame occaſion. Eſpecially, when they may exerciſe their Merchandizes through the whole Kingdom freely [by their Charters:] And they are taxed for them in our ſaid City, with their Fellow-Citizens there, as often as it ſhall happen a Tallage to be aſſeſſed upon the Commonalty of that City. We command you, that you do not tax thoſe our Citizens and Merchants with the foreſaid Men upon the abovesaid Occaſion; but that ye permit them to have Peace hereupon, &c. Witneſs, &c. the 13th day of February, in the 6th Year of Our Reign.

Upon another Infringement of their Privileges in the Time of King Edward II. by reaſon of a Cauſe brought before the King's Bench, which ſhould have been tried within the City, the City Jury (however cited) would not appear there. And the Maior, &c. came before the Juſtices of that Bench, and aſſerted their Liberties; which accordingly were allowed. The Caſe and Iſſue is thus recorded in the Chamber of London.

A Liberty of the City claimed by the Maior at the King's Bench, and allowed there. Lib. Horn. fo. 128. b.

Galfrid Fitzwilliam de Say, was ſummoned to anſwer to Johane, that was the Wife of Galfrid de Parys, and to certain others, viz. Roger le Graunt and William Lovechild, Executors of the Teſtament of the ſaid Geffry de Paris, on Plea that he render to them 18 l. which he unjuſtly detained from them. After ſome Proceedings, the ſaid Parties appear by their Atturneys, but no Juryman comes. But the Maior and Bailiffs of the City of London come and ſay, that an Oath among them ought not to be taken in the Court here, [in King's Bench] but within their City, where the Contract was made. And they ſue Allowance of their Liberty; and that the Juſtices come within the foreſaid City to take the foreſaid Oath. And becauſe by Inſpection of the Rolls of Juſtice here, this ſame thing is found, as to the Allowance of the foreſaid Liberty, in the like Caſe and others: Therefore let them have their Liberty. And moreover the Juſtices have prefixed a Day to the Parties at St. Martins the Great, London, within the City; to wit, the next Sunday after the Feaſt of St. Valentine next coming. And then let the Oath be taken. And it was told the Maior and Bailiffs, that then they cauſe to come there the Jurats of the aforeſaid Oath. And in like manner it was told the Party complainant, that he produce the Record and the Brief with the Panel.

Afterward on the Sunday aforeſaid, there at St. Martins, the Parties came, and in like manner the Jurymen of the foreſaid City, of the Neighbourhood of the Pariſh of St. Michael at Corne in Chepe, with the Conſent of each Party, before H. de Stantone, one of the Judges, who ſay upon their Oath, &c.

St. Michael Querne.

The like Contention happened in the ſame King's Reign, about Pleas to be held before the Lord Steward, or Marſhal of the King's Houſehold, wherein any Citizen was concerned; and of drawing them into Plea out of the City. Which it ſeems ſometimes the ſaid Steward or Marſhal would do, contrary to the City Charter. Which cauſed the City to petition. To which this favourable Anſwer was given:

The Steward or Marſhal of the King's Houſhold not to draw Citizens to plea out of the City. Lib. Horn. fo. 302.

Ad Petitionem, &c. i. e. ‘ To the Petition of the Citizens of London asking Remedy, in that the Steward and Marſhal of the King's Houſhold draw them into Plea without the ſaid City, againſt the Form of the Liberty, and againſt the Tenor of the Charters made to them upon this by the King and his Progenitors; it was thus anſwered: That the King willeth, that if a Tranſgreſſion be made to any of the King's Houſhold within the Liberty of the City of London, and within the Verge of the King, the Plea of ſuch Tranſgreſſions be held before the Steward and Marſhal of the King's Houſhold. And if Inquiſition muſt be made, let that Inquiſition be taken within the ſaid City. And it is enrolled in the Rolls of John de Kirkeby, of the Parliament of the King held in quindena S^ti^ Johannis Baptiſtæ, Anno Regni ſui 30.’ And further,

Memorandum quod ad Parliamentum, &c. ‘ Be it remembred, that at the Parliament of our Lord King Edward, in the 30th Year of his Reign, by the ſaid King it was granted and commanded, that this Conceſſion be firmly obſerved; namely, that whereas before the Steward of the ſame Lord the King, and his Marſhal, the King being at London, or at Weſtminſter, or elſewhere near the foreſaid City, certain Inquiſitions ought to be made upon Tranſgreſſions, or other Facts within the foreſaid City, between any of the ſaid City, or between them and other Foreigners, or between ſome of the King's Houſhold, and another of the City, or any Foreigner whatſoever: And of which Tranſgreſſion the Cognizance belongs to the ſame Steward and Marſhal by Right:

‘That all thoſe Inquiſitions be taken within the City, and not elſewhere, altho' the Parties of thoſe Inquiſitions have pleaded without the City before the Steward and Marſhal, and have put themſelves in the former Inquiſition, whilſt ſome Jurors of that Inquiſition were of the ſaid City, and remained within the ſame.

‘And this the Lord King granted in favour of the poor Workmen of the ſaid City, who lived of the Work of their own Hands; that they want not their Food, or be more impoveriſhed. And it was enrolled in the Rolls of Lord Gilbert Fitz Robert, the King's Juſtice.

A Charter to free ſome from their Tallages, complained of, as againſt the City's Liberties.

Nor would the Citizens bear a Practice of the Court, ſometime done in the latter end of King Henry III. his Reign; which was, to grant a Freedom to ſome of the Aldermen, and great rich Men of the City, from paying their Shares in the Taxes; when the Burden muſt thereby lie heavier upon the reſt of the Commonalty and meaner Rank. Which Favour, it is likely, was obtained by ſome Services or Gratifications done to the King, or ſome of his Great Men about him. Hence it was, that in an Inquiſition made 3 Ed. I. by the King's Juſtices, the Jury of ſome of the Wards preſented this Grievance as an Infringement of their Liberties. The Inquiſition ran to this Tenor: Dicunt, quod cum Communitas London ſeſſata ſit libertatib. &c. i. e. ‘They ſay, that ſince the Commonalty of London hath been ſeized of Liberties, and the Liberties confirmed from King to King, and the ſame Liberties ought to be uſed and enjoyed communiter, indifferently by all in common; certain of the City coming againſt themſelves, viz. Thomas Fitz Adam de Baſing, Henry de Waleis, and others, ſhewed Charters of King Henry, whereby they are quitted of Tallage, and are not taxed with their Fellow Citizens. Whereupon the whole Burden of the Tallage falls upon the ordinary Sort, and not upon the Rich. Which is altogether ad exheredationem [Regis] & deſtructionem totius Communitatis; i. e. to the diſinheriting [of the King] and deſtruction of the whole Commonalty.

Quo Warr. Bag in the Exchequer.

This was thus complained of and preſented by the ſworn Men of another Ward: ‘That Stephen de Cornhul, Gregory de Rokeſly, and others, [chiefly Aldermen] have uſed, and do uſe certain Charters from the Lord Henry, Father of the Lord Edward the King; which were granted againſt the Crown and Dignity of the Lord King, and againſt the Liberties of the City, as it ſeemed to them; becauſe by occaſion of the ſaid Charters, they were quitted of Tallages, Quarterages, and from all other Aids which belong to the City of London. By reaſon whereof, the greater Part of the City, viz. the middling Sort, and the Poor, are beyond meaſure burdened, and worſted, and not a few who were rich before, now are Beggars.

It was cuſtomary in former Times, that to what Places ſoever the King came with his Court to reſide for any Time, an Officer of the Maſter of the Houſhold took up Harbours in any Man's Houſe thereabouts, for the King's Retinue: A thing ſometime very burdenſome to the Subject. A Freedom from this the City obtained by their Charter. Notwithſtanding, ſometimes on this Occaſion the King's Officer would take up Lodgings in the Houſes of the Citizens. A ſtout Sheriff of London once withſtood this with Force; as we meet with the Paſſage in one of the Books of the Chamber, relating the Pleas of the Court of the Lord the King at the Tower of London, before Tho. Le Blunt, Steward and Maſter of the King's Houſhold, 19 Edw. fil. Reg. Edw.

The Sheriff refuſeth to harbour the King's Secretary, the King being at the Tower.

Lib. Alb. lib 3 fo. 207. 19 Ed. 2.

John de Cauſton, one of the Sheriffs of London, was attached to anſwer to the King for Contempt within the Verge of the Tower, as Alan de Lek, Serjeant Steward of the Houſhold, who ſues for the King, ſaith: That when the ſaid Lord the King with his Family was come to the Tower of London, on Monday next after the Tranſlation of St. Thomas the Martyr, the 10th Year of the ſaid King, there to abide for his Pleaſure; and the ſame Alan had taken up Harbour for Richard de Ayermynne, the King's Secretary, at the Houſe of the foreſaid John de Cauſton, ſituate in the City of London at Billinſgate, as was incumbent upon him [Alan] to do, according to his Office: And for the knowledge of ſuch Livery,* had made the accuſtomed Sign with a Cup upon the Doors of the ſaid Houſe, as was cuſtomary, and had likewiſe placed Men and Serjeants with the Horſes and Harneſſes of the ſaid Richard, within the ſaid Livery: The ſaid Sheriff, the foreſaid Day and Year, in the King's Preſence, and within the Verge, &c. permitted not the ſaid Alan to make this Livery, and pulled down maliciouſly the ſaid Sign, and drove away thence the ſaid Men and Servants, in contempt of the King.

*Liberation.

John de Cauſton came and defended the Force and Injury, &c. and all the Contempt. And ſaith, that he is guilty in nothing. And upon this he puts himſelf upon his Country. In the Proceſs, the Maior and Citizens come and ſay, that in the Charter of King Henry, Grandfather of the preſent King, made to the Citizens concerning divers Liberties, it is contained that none ſhould take Harbour by Force, or by Livery of the ſaid Maſter of the Houſhold within the Walls of the City, nor in the Portſokne. Which Charter the preſent King granted and confirmed by his own Charter; which they produced. And they produced alſo the ſaid King's Writ, directed to the Steward and Marſhal, by which he commanded them, that they permit the ſaid Citizens to uſe and enjoy their foreſaid Liberties without Impediment, according to the Tenor of the Charter of Confirmation; and that they moleſt not, nor grieve them in any thing, contrary to the Tenor of the ſame. And they ſay, that by vertue of the foreſaid Grant, that ſuch Liveries [i. e. aſſigning of Harbour] in the City, were wont to be done at any coming of the King, by the Maior, Sheriffs, and Officers of the City, in the Preſence of the Maſter of the Houſhold, and not by others. Whereupon they deſired their foreſaid Liberty to be allowed them.

A Day was given to hear Judgment. In the mean time they [the Steward and Maſter of the Houſhold] ſpeak with the King. And at the Day the foreſaid John was brought in faulty in nothing. And formerly it was teſtified before the King and his Council by John de Weſton, late Maſter of the Houſhold, that in the Times preceding, ſuch Aſſignations of Harbours were wont to be made by the Maior, Sheriffs, and Officers of the City, in the Preſence of the Maſter of the Houſhold, and not by others. And it was conſidered, that the ſaid Maior, &c. ſhould for the future uſe this Liberty of Livery of Entertainment within the City, as he and his Predeceſſors hitherto had uſed. Salvo jure Regis.

Upon the Charters alſo depended the good Order and Government of the City, and the Power the Magiſtrates of it had from time to time, of rectifying Abuſes, and changing and abrogating Cuſtoms and Practices found incommodious, and of conſtituting Rules and Laws for Trade and Traffic, and of ordering and ſettling Matters for the Benefit and common Good of the whole. And for the doing theſe things, ſometimes the King called upon the Maior and Aldermen; and ſometimes the Commoners complained and petitioned. And many good Articles and Laws have hereupon been made. Which alſo the King now and then gave his own Conſent to, for the better Confirmation of.

Articles for the Government of the City, confirmed by King Ed. II.

And firſt, to mention ſome Articles, which the City Anno 1318, upon mature Deliberation, drew up, for the reforming divers things. Which they held of ſuch Weight and Moment for the Good of the Citizens, that they preferred them to the King to eſtabliſh by his Authority. Which he did by Letters Patents; yet making ſome Alterations and Corrections as he thought good. And they were as follow:

For the Citizens of London, concerning new Articles there made to be obſerved.

*Rec. Tower. Pat.*12. E. 2. P. 2. M. 2.

THE King to all whom, &c. Greeting. ‘Know ye, that whereas our beloved and faithful the Maior and Aldermen, and other Citizens of our City of London, had lately ordained and appointed among themſelves, for the bettering of the ſame City, and for the common Benefit of ſuch as dwell in that City, and reſort to the ſame, certain things to be in the ſame City perpetually obſerved, and had, inſtantly beſeeched, that we would take care to accept and confirm them.

‘We, having ſeen certain Letters, Patentwiſe, ſigned with the Common Seal of that City, and the Seal of the Office of the Maioralty of that City upon the Premiſſes, and to Us exhibited; have cauſed certain Articles to be choſen out of the foreſaid Letters, and cauſed them in ſome things to be corrected; as they are underneath inſerted, viz.

1. That the Maior and Sheriffs of the ſame City be elected by the Citizens of the ſaid City, according to the Tenor of the Charters of our Progenitors, heretofore Kings of England, made to them thence, and no otherwiſe.

2. That the Maior remain only one Year together in his Maioralty.

3. That the Sheriffs have but two Clerks and two Serjeants; and that they take ſuch for which they will anſwer.

4. That the Maior have no other Office belonging to the City, but the Office of the Maioralty; nor to draw to himſelf the Sheriffs Plea in the Chamber of London, nor hold other Pleas than thoſe the Maior according to ancient Cuſtom ought to hold.

5. That the Aldermen be removed from Year to Year, on St. Gregory's Day, and not re-elected; and others choſen by the ſame Wards.

6. That Tallages or Aids henceforth to be aſſeſſed for the King's Buſineſs, or for the State and Benefit of the City, after they ſhall be aſſeſſed by the Men of the Wards elected and deputed for this, be not increaſed or heightened but by the common Conſent of the Maior and Commonalty. And that the Monies coming from theſe Tallages and Aids, be delivered into the Cuſtody of four honeſt Men, Commoners of the City, to be choſen by the Commonalty, to be further delivered by the Teſtimony of the ſaid four Men. So that they may inform the Commonalty, to what Profit, and for what Uſes thoſe Monies go.

7. That no Stranger be admitted into the Freedom of the City in the Huſting; and that no Inhabitant, and eſpecially Engliſh Merchant, of ſome Myſtery or Trade, be admitted into the Freedom of the City, unleſs by Surety of ſix honeſt and ſufficient Men of that Myſtery or Trade of which he ſhall be of, who is ſo to be admitted into the Freedom. Which ſix Men may undertake for him, of keeping the City indemnified in that behalf. And that the ſame Form of Surety be obſerved of Strangers to be admitted into the Freedom in the Huſting, if they be of any certain Myſtery or Trade. And if they are not of ſome certain Myſtery, then that they be not admitted into the Freedom without the Aſſent of the Commonalty. And that they who have been taken into the Freedom of the City, (ſince We undertook the Government of our Realm) contrary to the Forms preſcribed, and they who have gone contrary to their Oath in this behalf, or contrary to the State of the City, and are thereof lawfully convicted, loſe the Freedom of the ſaid City.

Saving always, that concerning Apprentices the ancient Manner and Form of the ſaid City be obſerved.

8. That each Year in the ſame City, as often as need ſhall be, Inquiry be made, if any of the Freedom of the ſame City, exerciſe Merchandizes in the City, of the Goods of others not of the ſame Freedom, by calling thoſe Goods their own, contrary to their Oath, and contrary to the Freedom of the ſaid City. 10. And that all, and every one, being of the Freedom of the City, and living without the City, and that either by themſelves or by their Servants, exerciſe their Merchandizes within the City, be in Lot and Scot, with the Commoners of the ſaid City, for their ſaid Merchandizes, or elſe to be removed from their Freedom.

11. And that the Common Seal of the City remain in the Cuſtody of two Aldermen, and two others Commoners, to be choſen for this purpoſe by the Commoners. And that that Seal be not denied neither to the poor nor rich Commoners, when they ſhall need it; yet ſo that they reaſonably prove the Cauſe of their Demand. And that for the putting to of the Seal nothing be taken. And that the giving of Judgments in the Courts of the City, and eſpecially after the Verdicts of Inquiſitions taken, in Caſes where Inquiſitions have been taken, be not deferred, unleſs Difficulty intervene. And if Difficulty ſhall intervene, by reaſon of this, giving Judgment ſhall not be put off beyond the third Court.

12. That Weights and Scales of Merchandizes to be weighed between Merchants and Merchants, the Iſſues coming of which belong to the Commonalty of the ſaid City, remain in the Cuſtody of honeſt and ſufficient Men of the ſame City, expert in that Office, and as yet to be choſen by the Commonalty, to be kept at the Will of the ſame Commonalty; and that they be by no means committed to others than thoſe ſo to be choſen.

13. That the Sheriffs for the time being, commit Toll, and other Cuſtoms belonging to their Farm, and other public Offices belonging to them, and to be exerciſed by others, to ſufficient Men, for whom they will anſwer, and not commit them to others. And if any deputed by the ſaid Sheriffs to any of the foreſaid Offices, take undue Cuſtom, or carry himſelf otherwiſe in that Office than he ought, and is thereupon convicted at the Suit of the Complainant, let him be removed from that Office, and puniſhed according to his Demerits.

14. Merchants, who are not of the Freedom of the City, not to ſell by Retail, Wines or other Wares within the City or Suburbs.

15. That there be no Brokers hereafter in the City of any Merchandizes, unleſs elected to this by Merchants of the Myſteries, in which the Brokers themſelves may have to exerciſe their Offices: and at leaſt upon this to make Oath before the Maior.

16. That the common Harbourers in the City and Suburbs, altho' they are not of the Freedom of the ſame, be Partakers of the contingent Burdens, for maintaining the ſaid City, according to the State of it, as long as they ſhall ſo be common Harbourers, as other like Dwellers in the City and Suburbs ſhall partake, on the account of thoſe Dwellings.

Saving always, that the Merchants of Gaſtoin, and other Foreigners, may one with another inhabit and be harboured in the ſaid City, as hitherto they have accuſtomed to do.

17. That the keeping of the Bridge of the ſaid City, and the Rents and Profits belonging to that Bridge, be committed to be kept, to two honeſt and ſufficient Men of the City, other than the Aldermen, to be choſen to this by the Commonalty, at the Will of the ſaid Commonalty, and not to others; and who may anſwer thereupon to the ſaid Commonalty.

18. That no Serjeant of the Chamber of Guyhald, take Fee of the Commonalty of the City, or do Execution, unleſs one choſen for this by the Commonalty of the City: And that the Chamberlain, Common Clark, and Common Serjeant be choſen by the Commonalty of the City, and be removed according to the Will of the ſame City.

19. And that the Maior and Recorder, and the foreſaid Chamberlain and Common Clerk be content with their Fees, anciently appointed and paid, on account of their Offices, and take not other Fees for the aboveſaid Offices.

20. That the Goods of the Aldermen, in Aids, Tallages, and other Contributions, concerning the ſaid Ciy, be taxed by the Men of the Wards in which thoſe Aldermen abide, as the Goods of other Citizens, by the ſaid Wards.

'Which Articles, as they are above expreſſed, and the Matters contained in the ſame, We accept, approve and ratify; and We yield and grant them, for Us and our Heirs, as much as in Us is, to the foreſaid Citizens, their Heirs and Succeſſors in the foreſaid City and Suburbs, for the common Profit of thoſe that inhabit therein, and reſort thither, to obtain the ſame, and to be obſerved perpetually.

'Moreover, We willing to ſhew ampler Grace to the Maior, Aldermen and Citizens, at their Requeſt, have granted to them, for Us and our Heirs, that the Maior, Aldermen, Citizens and Commonalty, of the Commoners of the City, and their Heirs and Succeſſors, for the Neceſſities and Profits of the ſame City, may among themſelves, of their common Aſſent, aſſeſs Tallagies upon their own Goods within that City, as well upon the Rents as other things, and as well upon the Myſteries, as any other way as they ſhall ſee expedient, and levy them, without incurring the danger of Us or Our Heirs, or Our Miniſters whomſoever. And that the Money coming from ſuch Tallagies remain in the Cuſtody of four honeſt and lawful Men of the ſaid City, to be choſen to this by the Commonalty, and be laid out, of their Cuſtody, out for the Neceſſities and Profits of the ſaid City, and not otherwiſe. In Witneſs whereof, &c. Witneſs the King at York the 8th day of June.

By the KING.

The Commoners relieved.

Theſe Articles were drawn up and agreed to, upon a great Diſcontent in the Commoners againſt the Magiſtrates, who in theſe Times had aſſumed too much Power and Authority to themſelves in appointing Officers, abiding divers Years in the Maioralty, laying arbitrary Taxes upon the Citizens, and ſparing or favouring themſelves in ſuch Impoſitions, and the like. Which occaſioned King Edward I. Father of Edward II. to ſend his Juſtices into the City to make Inquiſition into theſe and ſuch like Diſorders. And upon certain Articles given to ſelect ſworn Men in every Ward, Preſentments were made. And it may appear by thoſe Articles abovementioned, corrected and confirmed by the King, that he favoured the Commons, and reſtored to them ſuch Privileges as ſeemed to have been wreſted from them by Maiors, Sheriffs and Aldermen.

Articles by the King for keeping Peace in the City.

King Edward I. interpoſed his Authority for the keeping of Peace and Safety in the City; preſcribing divers Orders to prevent Ruffians that revelled at Taverns, and walked in the Streets with drawn Weapons at unſeaſonable Times of the Night, and made Uproars, and did much Miſchief. And this was when the King had aſſumed the City Privileges into his own Hand, and had appointed Cuſtodes or Guardians over it. Now there are in the Book Horn, ſeveral Articles in French, confirmed by the ſaid King, touching the State of the City, and for firmly keeping the Peace. Which were ſigned under the King's Seal. And they are ſuch as follow:

Lib. Horn. fo. 272 in maximo libr. nig. & in fol. 15.

Ces ſont les, &c. Theſe are the Articles which Our Lord the King commandeth to be well kept in the City of London, for to obſerve and maintain his Peace.

Firſt, For that many Miſchiefs and Murders, Robberies and Manſlaughters have been done heretofore, within the City both by Night and by Day, and People beaten and ill treated, and other ill Adventures happening againſt his Peace; it is forbidden, that none be ſo hardy to be found going nor wandring within the Streets of the City after Covrefeu ſounds at St. Martins le Graund; nor to have Sword, nor Buckler, nor other Arms, to do Harm, nor whence ill Suſpicion might happen, not in no other manner: If it be no great Lord, or other diſcreet Man, well known, or their certain Meſſage: which ſhall be warranted by them. Otherwiſe to be taken by the Guardians of the Peace, and put in the Tonnel *, appointed for ſuch Illdoers. And on the morrow to be brought and preſented before the Guardian [i. e. the Cuſtos] or the Maior, or the Aldermen. And according to what they ſhall find he hath treſpaſſed, let him be puniſhed, as hath been accuſtomed.

*The Ton upon Cornhil, a Priſon.

No Taverner to keep open his Tavern, or to ſell Wine or Beer after Covrefeu ſounds; but to ſhut up his Tavern cloſe after ſuch Hour, as he will anſwer to the Peace of the King: And being found guilty, to forfeit 40 d. the firſt time; and found again, to be amerced half a Mark; and the third time 10 s. and the fourth time to pay the whole Pain double, that is, 20 s.

And for that thoſe that delight themſelves to do ill, will learn to skirmiſh with Bucklers; and ſo much the more boaſt themſelves to do their Follies; It is provided and forbidden, that none keep School, nor learn to skirmiſh with Bucklers within the City by Night or by Day. And if any do it, to forfeit 40 Marks.

None in ſuch manner impriſoned, to be delivered by the Sheriff, or Officer under him, or of the Agent of the Guardian, or of the Maior, or of the Aldermen, if the Treſpaſs be not ſmall; nor unleſs good Mainprize and ſolempne be taken, to appear at a certain Day to receive Judgment according to his Fault.

Laſtly, It is required, that every Alderman in his Wardmote intentively enquire of ſuch Ill-doers, repairing and dwelling in his Ward. And if any ſuch ſhall be found by Preſentment or Indictment of the good People of the Ward, or of ill Suſpicion, preſently let them be attached of their Body, and come before the Guardian, or the Maior, or Aldermen: and let them be arreſted for it, until they be indicted, and preſented by them. And thoſe that cannot acquit themſelves, let them be puniſhed by Impriſonment, or other Puniſhment, according to their Diſcretion, and according to that the Fault requires.

And becauſe any People have come and dwelt in the City, ſome from beyond Sea, and ſome without Habitation ſeek Umbrage and Refuge here, being baniſhed out of their own Countries, or for great Treſpaſs, or other Forfeit are ſent away from their Country; and of all theſe, ſome become Brokers, Hoſtilers, and Harbourers within the City of private Perſons and Strangers, ſo openly as if they were good and loyal Men of the Franchiſe of the City; and each of theſe do nothing by Night or by Day, and are well attired, and feed of coſtly Viands; nor do they uſe Trade or Merchandize, nor have Lands nor Tenements, nor have whereof to live, nor Friend to find them. From ſuch come many Dangers in the City oftentimes, and many Robberies, Breakings of Houſes by Night, Murders and other Evils. It is provided therefore, that none of a ſtrange Land, nor others, be received, harboured, nor hoſteled within the City, unleſs he be a Freeman of the City, received or affirmed before the Guardian, or the Maior and Aldermen, as a good Man and a loyal; and there be good Teſtimony of him whence he came, and that he find ſafe Pledges, juſtifiable to the Bailiffs of the City, to be reſponſible to the King's Peace. And that no Broker be within the City, unleſs they be received and ſworn before the Guardian, the Maior and Aldermen.

So that, beſides Charters and Acts of Grace made to the City, it was not unuſual for the Kings of this Land to ſend their Letters Mandatory in any Emergence, for the well governing and ordering thereof. Such a Letter, beſides thoſe before, was that of King Edward II. upon the great riſing of the Prices of Proviſions in the Year 1314, ſetting reaſonable Rates upon Fleſh and Fowl.

The King to the Sheriffs, for rating Proviſions. Lib. Horn.

EDWARDUS Dei Gratia, &c. ‘Edward by the Grace of God King of England, Lord of Ireland, Duke of Aquitain, to the Sheriffs of London, Greeting. WE have heard the Complaint of the Archbiſhops, Biſhops, Earls, Barons, and others of the Commonalty of our Kingdom, by their Petition exhibited before us and our Council; containing, that there is a great and as it were intolerable Dearth, in theſe Days, of Oxen, Cows, Sheep, Hogs, Geeſe, Capons, Hens, Chickens, Pigeons, and Eggs; to the no little Loſs and Grievance of them, and all others dwelling within the ſame Kingdom. For which they have beſought us inſtantly, that we would take care to provide upon this, concerning ſome ſuitable Remedy:

‘WE therefore yielding to the foreſaid Supplication, for the common Profit of the People of the ſaid Kingdom, as it ſeemed expedient to Us, have ordained, with the Counſel and Aſſent of the Prelates, Earls, Barons, and others being of our Council, in our laſt Parliament held at Weſtminſter,

‘That a better ſort of Ox, alive, ſaleable, fat, not fed of Grain, be ſold for the time to come for 16 s. and not above.

‘Or if it be fed with Grain, and be fat, then to be ſold for 24 s. at moſt.

‘And that a better ſort of Cow alive, and fat, be ſold for 12 s.

‘A ſheared Mutton, fat, for 14 d.

‘Two Chickens for 1 d. and 1 d. ob.

‘And that if it happen to be found, that any Perſons, or any one Perſon will not ſell theſe ſaleable things for the Price appointed, as is before ſet forth, then the ſaid ſaleable things ſhall remain forfeited to us. And we will, that the foreſaid Ordinance from this time be firmly and inviolably obſerved in our ſaid City.

‘We command, firmly enjoining you, that in our City foreſaid, and Suburb of the ſame*, where yee ſhall ſee it to be expedient, that the foreſaid Ordinance be publickly and diſtinctly proclaimed; and that ye cauſe the ſame from time to be inviolably obſerved in all and each its Articles, under the foreſaid Forfeiture, throughout the whole Bailifwic. And this omit by no means, as you will avoid our Indignation, and preſerve your ſelves without blame. Witneſs my ſelf at Weſtminſter this 14th of March, in the Eighth Year of Our Reign.

* It ran alſo, Throughout our whole Kingdom, in all Cities, Boroughs, Villages, &c.

But the King was fain the next Year to ſend a Brief of Reclamation of his former Ordinance, finding it did more harm than good. It was as follows:

The King to the Sheriffs of London, Greeting.

The former Order revoked.

‘ALTHOUGH we lately commanded you, that in each Place in the foreſaid City, where it ſhould ſeem to you to be beſt expedient, yee ſhould cauſe it to be publickly proclaimed, that Oxen, Cows, Hoggs, Sheep, Geeſe, Capons, Hens, Chickens, Pigeons, and Eggs, ſhould be ſold at a certain Price: Becauſe nevertheleſs we have underſtood that ſuch a Proclamation, which at that time we believed would be for the Profit of the People of our Realm, redounds to their greater Damage than Profit: We command you, that in the ſaid ſeveral Places ye cauſe publickly to be proclaimed, that Oxen, Cows, Hoggs, Sheep, Geeſe, Capons, Hens, Chickens, young Pigeons and Eggs, be ſold for a reaſonable Price, as was accuſtomed to be done, before the ſaid former Proclamation; Certifying all and ſingular, that the former Proclamation was not made by vertue of the Ordinances late made by the Prelates, Earls, and Barons, and Nobles of the ſame Realm, and by us accepted, nor was contained in them. Witneſs My ſelf at Lincoln, the ‘20th of February, in the ninth Year of Our Reign.

And this ſetting Prices upon Victuals in the City, was no more than what Kings had interpoſed in before. King Edward I. in the beginning of his Reign, Anno 1274, commanded the Maior and Aldermen to make Statutes for governing the Huckſters of Fiſh and Fowl: And accordingly remarkable Statutes were made, appointing alſo Prices for all ſorts of Fowl and Fiſh. Which remain ſtill in one of the Books of the Chamber of London, and have this Title, Statuta de Poletria & Piſce facta tempore Maioratus Henr. de Waleys, viz.

Statutes for buying and ſelling Poultry and Fiſh. Lib. Horn. fol. 312, 313.

‘T*Empore Henrici de Waleys*, &c. i. e. In the time of Henry de Waleys, Maior of London, Nicolas de Winton, Henry de Coventre, Sheriffs, by the Command of the Lord the King, with the Aſſent and Conſent of the Great Men of the Kingdom and Citizens aforeſaid, it was ordained, that no * Huckſter of Fowle [or Poulter] go out of the City to meet them that bring Poultry into the City, to make any buying from them; but buy in the City, after the Buyers of the Lord the King, of the Barons, and the Citizens have bought and had what ſhall be needful for them, namely, after three a Clock, and not before. And then let them buy thus. That they may afford an Hen of the better ſort for 3 d. ob. And two Pullets of the better ſort for 3 d. ob. And one Capon of the better ſort for 2 d. ob. And from Eaſter to Whitſuntide a better homefed Gooſe for 5 d. And from Whitſuntide to St. Peter ad Vincula, for 4 d. And from that Feſtival throughout the whole Year always, one of the better ſort, for 3 d. Alſo for a Wild-Gooſe of the better ſort, 4 d. Three young Pigeons of the better ſort, for 1 d. One Mallard for 3 d. ob. And two Cercels for 3 s. And two Wydek [Wild Ducks] for 3 d. ob. One better Partridge for 3 d. ob. And four Begaters, 1 d. And a dozen of Larks, 1 d. One better Feaſant for 4 d. One better Botor for 6 d. A better Heron, 6 d. One better Corlune, 3 d. One better Plover, 1 d. One Swan for 3 s. One better Crane for 3 s. A better Peacock for 12 d. A better Coney with the Skin, 4 d. And without the Skin, 3 d. The Fleſh of a good Hare, 3 d. ob. One Kid from Chriſtmas to Lent, of the better ſort, for 10 d. At other times of the Year for 6 d. One better Lamb between Chriſtmas and Lent for 6 d. And at other times of the Year for 4 d.

* Mango avium.

‘It is alſo ordained, that no Huckſter of Fiſh, or Fiſhmonger who ſells Fiſh again to others, go out to meet thoſe that bring or carry in Fiſh to the City, to make a Foreſtal thence; nor have any Partnerſhip with a Stranger, who brings Fiſh from Sea to the City: but let them ſeek for Fiſh in their own Ships, and permit Foreigners to bring it, and to ſell when they are come, in their own Ships. Becauſe by ſuch Partnerſhip they who are of the City, and have known the State of the City, and the Defect of Victuals, will hold the Fiſh at a greater Dearneſs than Foreigners who ſhall not have known it. And alſo, that they who are of the City, when they cannot ſell as they will, lay it up in Cellars, and ſell dearer than the Strangers would do, if they came without Partnerſhip, and knew [not] where they might be harboured.

‘Nor let them buy any thing in the City until the King's Servants, &c. have bought, and not before three a Clock. And if they who have brought Fiſh ſhall come after three a Clock, let them not ſell that Day, but let them ſell on the Morrow morning. And if they expect more, let the Fiſh be taken into the Lord King's hand; and let them keep no Fiſh, except Salt Fiſh, beyond the ſecond Day of their coming. Which if it ſhall happen to be found, let them loſe their Fiſh, and be at the Mercy of the Lord the King [to fine them.]

‘And thus let the Huckſters, i.e. the Fiſhmongers buy, that they afford,

‘A better Plaiſe for 3 ob. a middling one for 1 d. and other leſs, as conſequently they ſeem to be worth.

‘Alſo 12 better Soles for 3 d. and others as they are worth.

‘Alſo, a better freſh Mulvel for 3 d. a middling one for 2 d. a leſs for 1 d.

‘A better Barky for 4 d. a middling for 3 d. Leſs, as they are worth.

‘A better Mulet for 2 d. and others as they are worth.

‘A better Conger for 12 d. others as they are worth.

‘A better Turbet for 6 d. others as they are worth.

‘A better Dorac for 5 d. others as they are worth.

‘A better Gurnard for 1 d. others as they are worth.

‘Four freſh Merlings for 1 d. the better ſort. And twelve better Merlings powdered for 1 d.

‘A thouſand better Herrings powdered, for 4 s. that is twenty for 1 d.

‘Of freſh Herring, from the Feaſt of the Aſſumption of the Bleſſed Mary the Virgin to the Feaſt of the St. Michael, ſix of the better ſort for 1 d. And after the Feaſt of St. Michael, twelve for 1 d.

‘A better Bugeſtokefiſh for 1 d. a middling, to wit, a Mulvil Stokfiſh for 3 farthings. A leſs for an halfpenny; ſaving a Cropling, of which three of the better ſort for 1 d.

‘A Gallon of Oiſters for 2 d.

‘A better freſh Salmon between Chriſtmas and Eaſter, for 5 s. And after Eaſter for 3 s. And other middling and leſs, as they are worth.

‘A Piece of Rumb, groſs and fat, for 4 d. Other as they are worth.

‘An hundred better Balenes of the ſame Year ſalted, for 16 s. that is, 2 d. per Pound. And an hundred better Balenes of above a Year for 8 s.

‘One Lucy [Cod perhaps] of three Foot for half a Mark; and of two Foot for 2 s.

'Alſo, One better freſh Lamprey of Severne 'or Thames, between the Purification of the 'Bleſſed Virgin Mary and the middle of Lent, for '4 d. And after the middle of Lent to Eaſter, 'for 2 d.

'And let the Lampreys of Nauntes be ſold in 'the publick Market, wherein they are accuſto'med to be ſold, and not in Houſes, unleſs they 'be hid by Night.

'Alſo let Merchant Strangers come to the City, 'make their abode there, and do as they have 'been wont to do.

I cannot explain theſe ancient Names of Fiſh, nor ſhew to what kinds of Fiſh they anſwer in our times; but leave that to the conjecture of Readers.

It will not be amiſs to add here certain Prices ſet upon Fowl by the Lord Maior long after, viz. in the Year 1572; Imprinted in a Sheet, by J. Day, the City Printer.

BUT for Proviſion of Bread, and for a ſtanding Supply of the City with Corn againſt dear Years, the Magiſtrates were eſpecially concerned; that Care might be taken for the poorer and laborious ſort, which were the greater number. To give a Proof or two of this commendable Care.

Corn for the Bakers ſtopt in the Country.

In the Year 1586, a ſcarce Year (as it ſeems) for Corn, a Stay was made of the London Bakers Proviſion of Grain; the Bringers in of Grain being ſtopt by the Country Juſtices. The Tidings whereof coming to London, forthwith the Maior and Aldermen jointly apply to the Court: and direct their Suit particularly to the great Stateſman, their Friend, to this Tenour. 'That he would 'pleaſe to take it in good part, that in theſe 'their more neceſſary and important Suits for the 'Behoof of their City, they were bold to make 'their ſpecial repair to his Lordſhip, for their 'better Aſſiſtance, and Furtherance of their Suits 'with the reſt of their Honours [of the Privy 'Council.] That his Lordſhip beſt knew, how 'great proportion of Corn was neceſſary for the 'Year's Proviſion of that City: which could not 'be ſupplied by any other means (eſpecially at 'that time [in the Winter] the number of People 'being ſo great as it was) if the ordinary Proviſion made by their Bakers in the Markets about 'them, in no other ſort than the Laws of the 'Realm did permit, or brought in by Badgers 'and Sellers of Grain, were ſtayed and intercepted from coming to them; which by certain 'Juſtices of Peace and other Officers of late had 'been done. Of this they had already advertiſed 'their Honours, and alſo had made their humble Petition for their favourable Aid and Aſſiſtance for redreſs of the ſame. And that herein 'if it ſhould pleaſe his good Lordſhip to vouchſafe them [the Maior and Aldermen] his Favour, for the furthering of their reaſonable and 'neceſſary Suit, ſo far forth as to his Wiſdom 'and Equity ſhould ſeem meet, all of that City, 'eſpecially thoſe of the poorer ſort, ſhould be 'very much bound to his good Lordſhip; being 'otherwiſe like to be ſore diſtreſſed with great 'Extremities within very ſhort time, if their neceſſary Proviſion ſhould be thus intercepted, and 'cut off ſtill from them.

A Redreſs thereof deſired by the Maior and Aldermen.

And ſo concluded with their humble Duties and Thanks to his Lordſhip for his continual Favours toward their City, and Readineſs to procure the Good of the ſame. This was dated from London, Feb. 1ſt, 1586. The Subſcription was, Your Honour's moſt humbly to be commanded, The Maior and Aldermen of the City of London.

A Proviſion of Corn to be laid up in the Bridge-Houſe.

And further, this that follows may deſerve to be related alſo in this Matter, that to provide againſt a Dearth in the City, the Companies were by the L. Maior's means, to buy each of them ſuch a Quantity of Corn, and to lay it up in a Garner [or Granary] in the Bridge-Houſe. And ſuch a dear Year was that of 1594, Sir John Spencer Maior. Who therefore (it being now Winter time) called upon the Companies, viz. thoſe of them that had not laid in their Proportion, to do it within ſo many Days; Corn being then brought in from foreign parts. But ſuch an Obſtacle juſt in this Interval happened, that cauſed the Maior to ſend an earneſt Meſſage to the Lord Burghley, the great Patron of the City. For Sir John Hawkins, that great Seaman, to whom the Care of the Queen's Fleet then belonged, required now the Bridge-Houſe himſelf, for the bringing in and laying up there his Proviſions for the Uſe of the Navy, and the Ovens likewiſe there for baking their Ship-Bread. In this Strait thus that Maior addreſſed to the ſaid Lord.

A Granary there required for the Navy. Which the Maior refuſed. And why?

'That according to the Care that his Place required at his Entrance therein, by his means, it was ordered, that the ſeveral Companies of the City ſhould preſently make Proviſion, and furniſh themſelves of Wheat and Rye brought from foreign Parts, according to their ſeveral Portions allotted to them. Wherein they had not been ſo forward as they ought to have been, and were yet unprovided of the greateſt part thereof. That he had therefore ten Days paſt enjoined them to furniſh their Wants of theſe, that were then brought in from foreign Parts, and to have the ſame laid up in the Bridge-Houſe, in their ſeveral Garnets [Garners] and before the 8th Day of January next coming [it being then, at this writing, within a Day or two of Chriſtmas.]

'But that hereupon Sir John Hawkins, by his Men deſired, or rather commanded, room in the Bridge-Houſe to lay in Wheat, and alſo the Ovens for baking. But that he [the Maior] anſwered, that they could with no Convenience ſpare the ſame: alledging truly to him, that if the ſame ſhould be yielded unto, that the Companies would thereby take occaſion to neglect their Proviſion, and alledge that they could not do the ſame, for that he [the Maior] had lent away their Garnets. And that ſo thereby the City, which in that time of Dearth was furniſhed only from Foreign Parts, ſhould be unprovided, and the Fault wholly laid upon him. And that then, either that which ſhould be brought for the Proviſion of the City, of force muſt have been tolerated to be brought up by the Badgers, and carried from the City, as it had been; or elſe the Merchants diſcouraged from bringing any more. The which he hoped his Lordſhip would well conſider.

'And that for the Ovens, it was told them, the ſame were uſed for baking Bread for the Poor, that they might have the more for their Money; and that therefore they could not be ſpared. And alſo the Maior ſaid, that as he was informed, her Majeſty had Garnets about Tower-Hill, and White-Hall, and Weſtminſter. And alſo, that if they would not ſerve, her Majeſty had in her Hands Wincheſter Houſe, wherein great Quantity might be laid.

But upon this ſtout Anſwer of the Maior, they told him, 'That he ſhould hear more to his further Diſlike. And he bade them, that if they did procure any Letters for the ſame, he doubted not, but to anſwer them to their Lordſhips [of the Privy Council's] good Acceptance. And that now having received Letters for the ſame from ſome of the Council, he humbly prayed the Lord Treaſurer's good Favour, that the ſame Garnets being the City's, might be employed for the Uſe of the ſame. That there might be no Want, nor Outcry of the Poor for Bread. Or elſe, that if there fell out a greater Want and Dearth of Grain than yet there was, and that the City were unprovided, his Lordſhip would be pleaſed to hold him excuſed. And ſo moſt humbly ſubmitted himſelf to his Honour's good Pleaſure.

This good Magiſtrate's Letter was dated the 23d of December, from London, the Year abovementioned.

Now we proceed to the ſeveral Courts kept in the Government of this CITY.

Of the ancient Court of the Huſtings.

The Court of Huſtings, whence the Name R.

I Find it diverſly written in Latin, Huſtingum, Huſtingus, Huſtingia, and ſometimes (but falſely) Huſtangus. It is the ancienteſt and the higheſt Court of Juſtice of the famous City of London. The Name it takes from the Place of keeping that Court, (as Prytaneum did at Athens) for the Saxon Word huꞅ, Hus, among the old Saxons, ſignified an Houſe, and ðinᵹ, dhing or thing, a Cauſe or Plea; ſo that huꞅðinᵹ, Huſthing, ſignified the Houſe of Cauſes or Pleadings: whereupon in the Saxon Tongue ðinᵹeꞃe, Thingere, Thingarius, ſignified an Advocate or Lawyer: which others would perchance derive rather from ðunᵹ or ᵹeðunᵹ, thung or gedhung, which ſignified Honourable. For that the moſt honourable Magiſtrates of the City held their Court there; like as the Lord Maior and Sheriffs, and in abſence of the Sheriffs, ſix of the Aldermen at this day do.

The Antiquity of this Court.

Statute for the Huſtings in the Time of S. Edward, to be holden in London J. S.

The Antiquity of this famous Court of Huſtings, is much magnified by the Compiler of King Edward's Laws, cap. 35. Sicut continetur in Lege Sancti Edwardi, Capit. 46. viz. Quod debet in London quæ Caput Regni eſt & Legum, & ſemper Curia Domini Regis, ſingulis ſeptimanis die Lune Hustings ſedere & teneri. Fundata enim erat olim, & edificata ad inſtar magne Troje, & ad modum & in memoria in ſe continet. In qua fuit, ſemper fuit ardua compota & ambigua placita Corone, & Cor. Domini Regis [&] totius Regni predict. Quia Uſus & Conſuetudines ſuas una ſemper inviolabilitate conſervat ubique, ubicunque ipſe Rex fuerit; ſive in Expeditione, ſive alibi, propter fatigationes gentium & populorum Regni, juxta veteres Conſuetudines bonorum Princip. & Predeceſſorum & omnium Principum & Procerum & ſapientum Seniorum totius Regni predict. &c.

Which ſomebody tranſlated into Engliſh after this manner, [not ſo exactly as were to be wiſh'd.] ‘There ought always in the City of London, which is the head City of the Kingdom, and of the Laws, to be held upon every * Monday weekly, a Court of our Sovereign Lord the King, at the Huſtings. This Court was founded and built of old, after the Faſhion and Manner, yea, and in the Memory of the ancient City of Troy; and even unto this day contains within itſelf the Laws, and Rights, and Dignities, Liberties, and Cuſtoms Royal of that ancient and great Troy. There be handled the intricateſt † Accounts and the doubtful Pleas of the Crown, and of the Court of our Lord the King, of the whole Kingdom aforeſaid: and this Court hath even to this day preſerved her own ancient Cuſtoms moſt inviolably.’ Thus far my Author: who (by his leave) ſmells too rankly of that Fabler, Geffrey of Monmouth.

And yet ſomething there is in the Huſtings, which might give countenance to this Compariſon of old Troy; namely, that the well known Weight uſed for Gold and Silver, called Troy-Weight, was in the Time of the Saxons called, the Huſtings Weight of London, and kept there in the Huſtings. So an ancient Record in the Book of Ramſey, Sect. 32. & 127. ‘I Æthelgina, Counteſs, &c. bequeath two Silver Cups of twelve Marks of the Huſtings Weight of London.

The former Law of the ſaid King Edward the Confeſſor, commands the Huſtings Court to be held every Monday, tho' at this day it be held upon the Tueſday: which, that it may not be perceived by the Monuments and Rolls of the Court, to have differed too much from the firſt Inſtitution, is yet ſaid and written to be holden upon the Monday. It is as it were diſtinguiſhed into two Courts; for one Week the Judges ſit upon Pleas meerly real, and the next Week upon Actions mixt, or of any other nature whatſoever.

Out of the ſame Book of Ramſey Abbey, Sect. 268. will I here ſet down the ancient Form of purchaſing and giving of Poſſeſſion, uſed in the Huſtings: which is far different from the Faſhion uſed at this day. ‘Be it known unto all the Sons of holy Church, that Wlfnoth of Walbroc, London, have ſold unto Reynold, Abbot of Ramſey, a certain Piece of Land which he had * in Walebroc, whence he was called Wlfnoth of Walbroc. As alſo a certain Houſe of Stone, and a Shop which he had built upon that Land, with doors of yron, and windows above and beneath, &c. Which ſaid Wlfnoth hath ſold that Land unto the Abbot of Ramſey, and hath given him ſeiſin of it, by delivery of a certain Staff, and hath † quite claimed unto it to be free and quiet, and void of all encumbrance; both he, and Mahald his Wife, and his firſt Wife's Daughter; and Mahald his ſecond Wife, and Henry his Son by his ſecond Wife, and Chriſtine her Daughter, before the whole Huſting of London, in the Houſe of Alfwine, Son of Leofſtan: to be held from this day forth for ever by the Church of Ramſey, in conſideration of ten Pounds of Pence, which he gave unto him in Preſence of the whole Court of Huſtings. Of which ten Pounds, he the ſaid Wolfnoth gave forty Shillings unto Maud his Daughter for her * good will, becauſe he had the Land by her Mother. And the Abbot for his part gave her half a Mark of Silver; and unto Wlfnoth's Wife, and other two Children, for their good wills, he gave five Shillings. Of this Bargain and Sale, be on the part of the Huſtings theſe Witneſſes, William of Einesford, Sheriff of London, and John his Under-Sheriff, and Gervaſe his Clark; Andrew Bucuint, and Ralfe his Son, and Ralfe his Couſin; Gilbert Proudfoot, William Bukerell, and many others.

This Deed hath no date mentioned; but I find this Reinold to have been made Abbot of Ramſey by King Henry the Firſt, as his Charter ſhews, Sect. 214. The Succeſſor to this Reinold was one Walter, but what Year he was made Abbot in, I find not; but I find that he flouriſhed Anno 1149. that is, the fourteenth Year of King Stephen. By this you may judge of the Antiquity of the Deed, tho' the preciſe Day be not dated.

* This is altered unto Tueſday, becauſe of the Sheriffs intending of the Markets: which being kept upon Monday, would hinder their ſitting in the Huſtings.

† Compota, perchance the word ſignifies Meaſures rather than Accounts; for Compotus ager, is a Field ſurveyed, whoſe quantities were ſet down in the Land-Mark, or Terrier. And here, perchance, was kept a general Survey of all the Lands of the Kingdom, as now in the Domeſday Book in the Exchequer. The form whereof, the Conqueror perchance took from the Huſtings.

* Super Walbroc.

* Propter conceſſum ſuum. For giving up her right in it, perchance.

By this Paſſage it clearly appeareth, that London was honoured with her Sheriffs Office, even in the Age of King Henry the Firſt,* altho' our Chroniclers affirm the Sheriffs to be made firſt by King Richard the Firſt,† at his coming to the Crown: from whoſe Time our ſaid Chroniclers begin to reckon the firſt Maior and Sheriffs, that is, from the Year of our Lord 1189. But that the Sheriffs were granted unto the City, together with the County of Middleſex, plainly appears by the ſaid King's Charter concerning the Liberties of London, given in the beginning of his Reign: nor do the Maior and Sheriffs much differ from thoſe former Magiſtrates of the City, the Portreve and Provoſt, as might be proved.]

* Which was above 500 Years ſince.

† Which was almoſt 100 Years after.

J. S.

Moreover, the Cities of York, Wincheſter, Lincoln, the Iſle of Shepey, with other Boroughs and Cities, are alſo ſaid to have had their Huſtings. See Fleta, Lib. 2. Cap. 55. [De differentiis Curiarum. Habet Rex curiam ſuam, &c. Et in Civitatibus & Burgis & in HUSTINGIS London, Lincolm, Winton & Eborum, & alibi in Libertatibus, &c. Wherefore the Lord Coke concludes, that neither the Name, nor the Court is appropriated to London.

Coke's Inſtit. 3 & 4 P.

An ancient Court of Record.

This Court of Huſting is a very ancient Court of Record, and of the greateſt Concern. For it preſerves the Laws, Rights, Cuſtoms, Franchiſes, and Dignities of the City; and hath for many Ages preſerved its own Cuſtoms and Prerogatives.

This Court is held at the Guild-Hall, before the Lord Maior and Sheriffs of London, for the time being. And when any Matter is to be argued or tried in this Court, the Recorder ſits as Judge with the ſaid Maior and Sheriffs, and directs them in the Point of Law, and gives Rules and Judgments.

Two ſorts of Huſtings.

Two ſorts of Cauſes are pleadable in this Court, Pleas of Land, and Common Pleas: which are commonly called, Huſting of Pleas of Land, and Huſting of Common Pleas. And theſe Huſtings are held diſtinctly. For one Week the Judges ſit upon Pleas meerly real; and the next Week upon Actions mixt.

Held on Mondays and Tueſdays.

The Court is held upon Mondays and Tueſdays weekly. Upon Mondays, to enter Demands, to award Nonſuits, and allow Eſſoins. And on Tueſdays, to award Defaults, and to plead: unleſs it happen upon an Holiday. But a Court is always held upon a Monday; except upon certain particular Times.

In this Court, Deeds may be enrolled, Recoveries may be paſſed, Wills may be proved, and Replevins, Writs of Error, Writs of Right, Patent, Writs of Waſte, Writs of Partition, and Writs of Dower, may be determined, for any Matters within the City of London and Liberties.

Attorneys of this Court.

The Attorneys of the Lord Maior's Court are Attorneys alſo in this. And the ſecond Attorny is always Clark of the Enrollments, and enrolls all Deeds that are brought for that purpoſe.

Fees and Practice of this Court.

For the Knowledge of the Fees of this Court, and the Practice of it, and the ſeveral particular Writs and Cauſes here pleadable, recourſe may be had to the Lex Londinenſis, or the City Law, printed Anno 1680, and to the Privilegia Londini, printed Anno 1702, taken for the moſt part from the former Book; where theſe Matters are at full ſet down. And ſo likewiſe for the Fees and Practice of the reſt of the Courts of London, Satisfaction may be had in the ſame Books.

Proceedings here reverſed. Prinn's Brief Animadverſ.

For this Court of Huſtings, its Proceedings, and Form of correcting and reverſing erroneous Judgments given in it, Mr. Prinn (who was well acquainted with the Records of the Tower) refers us to theſe Records following; viz. to the Patents and Clauſe Rolls of King Henry III. of Edward I, II, III. of Richard II. of Henry IV, V, VI. and Edward IV. Where, he ſaith, he met with many Precedents in this kind, over numerous to inſert.

The Courſe and Practice of all manner of Juridical Proceedings in the Huſtings, may be alſo ſeen in a little Book printed Anno 1647, with that Title.

Elections of Citizens for Parliament here.

Before we leave this Court of Huſtings, it is not to be omitted, that the Citizens who are to be Repreſentatives for the City in Parliament, have their Elections in this Court. But at a Common Hall (which is an Aſſembly of the Maior, Aldermen and Livery Men) are choſen by the Livery the Maior, Sheriffs, Chamberlain, Bridgemaſters, Auditors of the Chamber and Bridgehouſe, Accomptants and Aleconners.]

Elections at Common Hall. Gibſon Town-Clerk.

R. B.

Firſt, the Citizens to ſerve for the City of London in Parliament, are here elected by the Livery-Men of the Companies.

Election of Maior;

Here, at a Common Hall, upon every Michaelmas Day, the Lord Maior for the Year following is choſen. And the Uſage is, to put up all the Aldermen under the Chair, and which have held the Office of Sheriff. Of theſe the Commoners chuſe two, and return their Names to the Lord Maior and Aldermen. Of which two they elect him whom they think moſt fit, and ſignify their Choice to the Commons: And the Perſon ſo choſen, muſt be preſented to the Lord Chancellor, or Lord Keeper; and afterwards is ſworn at Guild-Hall on St. Simon and St. Jude's Day; and the Day after, at the Exchequer.

And of Sheriffs;

Here likewiſe, at a Common Hall, upon Midſummer Day, the Livery-Men of the reſpective Companies do chuſe Sheriffs. But it hath been ſaid, that the Lord Maior, by his Prerogative, may ſome time before that Day, drink to any Citizen whom he thinks qualified, and nominate him to be one of the Sheriffs; and the Uſage hath been (till of late Years) for the Commons to confirm ſuch Perſon; and then to elect another to ſerve with him.

And other Officers.

After the Sheriffs are elected, the Commoners here chuſe two Auditors for the Chamber and Bridgehouſe Accounts, a Chamberlain, two Wardens (or Maſters, as they are called) for the Bridgehouſe, and four Aleconners.

The Sheriffs are Judges of theſe Elections, and do declare, by the Common Serjeant, who are the Perſons elected.

After the Sheriffs are ſo elected, they take an Oath in this Court, on Michaelmas Eve; and the Day after Michaelmas Day, muſt be preſented to the Barons of the Exchequer; and when they are ſworn, it is not in the Power of the Commons to remove them.

The Chamberlain and Bridge-Maſters, after Election, take the uſual Oath before the Lord Maior and Court of Aldermen.

The Court of the Lord Maior and Aldermen.

The Recorder Judge.

THIS Court is commonly called the Maior's Court. It is a Court of Record, and is held in the Chamber of the Guild-Hall: The Recorder of the City, as being a Lawyer, is the Judge of this Court; yet the Lord Maior and Aldermen ſit as Judges with him, if they pleaſe.

This Court is held by Cuſtom; and all the Proceedings are ſaid to be before the Maior and Aldermen.

The Uſe of the Court, and its Power.

In this Court all manner of Actions may be entred and tried by a Jury, as in other Courts, for any Debt, Treſpaſs, Account, Covenant, &c. or other Matter ariſing within the Liberties of this City, to any Value whatſoever.]

The Juries. J. S. The Juries for the trying Cauſes in this Court and the Sheriffs, are returned by the ſeveral Wards, at their Wardmote Inqueſts. Which they do by an Indenture under their Hands and Seals. In which Indenture they return alſo the Names of the Common Council Men, Conſtables and Scavengers. The particular Wards appointed to ſerve as Jurymen for every Month, are divided as followeth:

The Wards of Aldgate, Portſoken, Cornhil, ſerve for the Month of January.

The Ward of Cheap, ſerves for the Month of February.

The Wards of Baſſiſhaw, Cripplegate within, Cripplegate without, for March.

The Wards of Vintry, Breadſtreet, for April.

The Ward of Tower, Billinſgate, for May.

The Ward of Farringdon without, for June.

The Ward of Bridge, for July.

The Wards of Alderſgate, Colemanſtreet, Broadſtreet, for Auguſt.

The Wards of Faringdon within, Caſtle Bainard, for September.

The Wards of Queenhith, Dowgate, Walbrook, for October.

The Wards of Langborn, Limeſtreet, for November.

The Wards of Candlewick, Cordweyner, Biſhopſgate, for December.

A Copy of the Names of the Jurymen returned by the ſeveral Wards, is given by the Town-Clerk to the Officers of this Court, and to the Officers of the Sheriffs Court. And none other Perſons muſt ſerve as Jurymen in theſe Courts; unleſs in ſome ſpecial Caſes: as ſometimes there is a Jury of Merchants.

This Court was inſtituted, and ſtill continueth for the redreſſing and correcting the Errors and Defaults, with other Affairs, which happen in the Government of the City.

Attorneys of this Court. To this Court of the Maior, there belong four Attorneys, and no more: Who upon their Admiſſion by the Court of Aldermen, take an Oath.

The manner of entring Actions here. The manner of entring Actions in this Court is different from that in the Sheriffs Court. For you cannot enter an Action in this Court at either of the Compters, but muſt go to the public Office belonging to that Court upon the Royal Exchange, and enter your Action with one of the four Attorneys there: Whether the Action be of the Caſe, of Treſpaſs, for Accounts, for Covenants broken, for Debt at the Chamberlain's Suit, or for Debt upon a penal Statute.

A Court of Equity. This Maior's Court is alſo a Court of Equity, or Chancery, for all Matters within London and the Liberties; but not a Court of Equity only, as many Citizens ſuppoſe. The Recorder Judge. The Recorder uſually ſits as Chancellor or Judge, to determine ſuch Matters. And Cauſes are managed here much after the manner as in the High Court of Chancery.

Six Serjeants. There are ſix Serjeants belonging to this Court, and do not belong to either of the Sheriffs. Moſt of them attend daily at the Attorneys public Office; and one of them is conſtantly attending at the Lord Maior's Houſe. If you give any of them a Note of your Action, he will arreſt the Defendant. And in caſe he cannot find Bail, the Officer will carry him to one of the Compters, that being the Priſon as well for this Court, as the Sheriffs Court.

Actions. An Action entred in this Court will remain in Force for ever, altho' no Proceedings be had thereupon. Whereas an Action entred at either of the Compters dies, and may be croſſed after ſixteen Weeks. The Charge of entring an Action in this Court is but Four Pence, beſides the King's Duty.

An Action commenced in this Court may be brought to Trial for thirty Shillings Charge, and in fourteen Days time. Whereas in the Sheriffs Court they require more Time, and much more Money.

Attachments. Attachments, grounded upon Actions of Debt, are tried in this Court, or in the Sheriffs Court. When either Money or Goods of the Defendants are attached, either in the Plaintiff's own Hands, or in the Cuſtody of a third Perſon. But Attachments made in this Court of the Maior, have advantages over thoſe made in the Sheriffs Courts, both in reſpect of the Charges, and quickneſs of Diſpatch. Concerning the Laws and Cuſtoms and Pleadings of Attachments, conſult the Law-Books of London.

Day for Trial. The Day for Trials in this Court is every Tueſday: But every Day is a Court for entring Proceedings, as Appearances, Rules, Pleas and Judgments, except Holidays, the Week before Eaſter, the firſt three Weeks in Auguſt, and from the 16th of December till the Monday after Twelfth-Day.

The ORPHANS Court.

Who are to take Care of City Orphans. THIS Court is held before the Lord Maior and Aldermen of the City: Who are Guardians to the Children of all Freemen, that are or ſhall be under the Age of One and twenty Years at the Deceaſe of their Fathers: and have the Ordering and Management of all the Goods and Chattels of ſuch Orphans. And the Chamberlain is a ſole Corporation, to him and his Succeſſors, for the Orphans: and a Recognizance taken to him and his Succeſſors, relating to Orphans, ſhall by the Cuſtom of London, go to his Succeſſor.

The Maior and Aldermen may by the Cuſtom impriſon ſuch as preſume to convey away their Orphans.

An old Act for the City Orphans. Rot. Pat.* 1 R. 2. N. 130.

There was an old Act of Parliament 1 R. II. That the Maior and Chamberlain of London for the time being, ſhould have the keeping of all the Lands and Goods of ſuch Orphans, as happened within the City; ſaving to the King, and other Lords, the Rights of ſuch as held of them out of the ſame Liberty. But it is a Cuſtomary Court, Time out of Mind; and the Cuſtom of Orphanage, one of the moſt conſiderable Cuſtoms of London.

Officers of the City, their Concern for Orphans.

The Common Serjeant is the only Perſon intruſted by the Court of Aldermen, to take all Inventories and Accounts of Freemens Eſtates. And the Common Cryer is intruſted to ſummon all Executors and Adminiſtrators of Freemen, to appear before the Court of Aldermen, to give Inventories and Accounts of the Perſonal Eſtate of ſuch Freemen. The youngeſt Attorney in the Lord Maior's Court is always Clerk of the Orphans, and is appointed to take all Securities for Orphans Portions. Which Securities are conſtantly taken in the Name of the Chamberlain of London for the time being. And the Cuſtom is, that in caſe the Security live out of London, they are bound by Bond; but if they live within London, they are conſtantly bound by Recognizances.

Orphanage Money allowed by the Chamber.

If the Executor of an Orphan's Father pay the Money into the Chamber of London, the Proportion of Intereſt allowed by the Chamber in Sir Thomas Player, Chamberlain, his Time, was, to 800 l. Orphanage 5 l. per Cent. From 800 l. to 1200 l. Orphanage Money, 5 Marks per Cent. i. e. 3 l. 6 s. 8 d. From 1200 l. to all above, 5 Nobles per Cent. i. e. 1 l. 13 s. 4 d. And for all Legacy Money, 5 Marks per Cent. i. e. 3 l. 6 s. 8 d.

Bonds for Payment of Orphans cancelled.

When any Orphan is of full Age, and ſhall acknowledge Satiſfaction in the Court for all Monies due to him or her, the ſaid Court, upon Motion made by the Common Serjeant, doth conſtantly order, that all Bonds entred into for the Payment of ſuch Orphans Portions, ſhall be delivered up and cancelled. And if the Security become bound by Recognizance, the Clark of the Orphans will croſs and diſcharge all ſuch Recognizances: for which his Fee is 2 s. for each Recognizance.

The Chamber of London hath been accounted the ſafeſt and beſt Security in and about London, for the Monies paid therein, to the Uſe of the City, or any Orphans, and as conſtantly paid upon Demand, without any Trouble. And when Orphans came to Age, or were married with the Conſent of the Court, they received their Portions at a Days Notice.

The Intereſt, or finding Money, uſed conſtantly to be paid, as it became due, the Court always taking care, that every Orphan received his or her Portion without paying any other or greater Fees than had been anciently taken.

A Table in the Orphans Court of the Fees to be paid.

A Table of which Fees did hang up in the Orphans Court in Guild Hall, for all Perſons to inſpect.

The Widow of every Freeman, if ſhe ſhall be Executrix, or Adminiſtratrix, of her Huſband's Eſtate, ought, by the Cuſtom of London, to exhibit a true Inventory of her Huſband's Eſtate into this Court, before ſhe contract Marriage to another, otherwiſe the Court may impoſe a reaſonable Fine upon her, to the Uſe of the Orphans.

Monday after Mid-Lent Sunday, the Names of the Sureties are called over, &c.

The Lord Maior and Court of Aldermen do meet at Guild-Hall, and ſit in the Orphans Court, once in every Year, viz. on the Monday Morning next after Mid-Lent Sunday, purpoſely to hear the Names of all Securities that ſtand bound for Orphans Portions, called over; wherefore that Day is called Call-Day. Upon which Day one of every of the Sureties ought to appear, to give an Account whether the other Securities are living, and in good condition, and whether the Orphans are living, or married or not. And if none of the Securities appear at that Day, they forfeit their Recognizances and Bonds, and the Clerk of the Orphans, in ſuch caſe, muſt make out Proceſs againſt the Security, and force them to give the Account hereby required, and pay the Charges of the Proceſs.

The Securities muſt take particular Care that none of the Orphans marry, or be put Apprentice with their Conſents, without Leave of the Court firſt obtained. And as the Orphans come to the Age of One and twenty Years, or ſhall be married with the Conſent of the Court of Aldermen, they muſt take care to bring them to Guild-Hall, with a Perſon to prove the Age of ſuch an Orphan; and then Satiſfaction muſt be acknowledged by the Orphan, for the Money due to him or her, of the Teſtator's Eſtate. Which muſt be done in the Court of Aldermen.

Puniſhment of ſuch as marry Orphans without Conſent.

This Court doth commit the Cuſtody of Orphans to ſuch Perſon or Perſons, as they ſhall think fit. And if any Perſon whatſoever do intermarry with any Orphan without the Conſent of the Court firſt obtained, ſuch Perſon may be fined by the Court, according to the Quality and Portion of the ſaid Orphan. And unleſs ſuch Perſon do pay the Fine, or give Bond to pay the ſame in ſome reaſonable Time, the Court may commit him to Newgate, there to remain until he ſubmit to their Order.

Jud's Law. J. S.

Jud's Law, ſo called becauſe made in Jud's Maioralty, 5 Edw. VI. whereby Orphans are reſtrained from throwing away themſelves in Marriages with unfitting Perſons, and for preventing other Miſdemeanors in Orphans, is ſet down at large before in Chap. XXIV.

The Cuſtom of Orphanage defended. See the Occaſion of this at Chap. XXIV.

In or about the Year 1586, ſome there were that oppoſed this Cuſtom of Orphanage, and complained of it above: inſomuch that the Maior and Aldermen were fain to beſtir themſelves, and draw up certain Arguments in that behalf, which were offered to the Privy Council. The Paper was to this Tenor:

A brief Note of the Benefit and Neceſſity of the Cuſtom of Orphanage within the City of London: Exhibited to the Right Honourable the Lords of her Majeſties moſt honourable Privy Council.

FIrſt, The ſaid Cuſtom for Diviſion of the ‘ Goods of the Dead into three Parts, is a‘ greeable with the ancient Common Laws of this ‘ Realm; and now uſually put in Practice in moſt
‘ Parts of this Realm, by a Writ De rationabili
‘ parte bonorum.

‘ The Maior and Aldermen (being by the Cu-
‘ ſtom, Patrons and Guardians, as well of the Bo‘ dies as of the Goods of Orphans) are ſolemnly ‘ ſworn to maintain and defend the Rights of ‘ Orphans. By reaſon whereof, during their ‘ Nonage, the Court of Orphans taketh care for ‘ their reaſonable Maintenance and virtuous Edu‘ cation, foreſeeth that they be not defrauded
‘ by the Executors, by Concealment or miſprai-
‘ ſing the Goods, or by falſe Account; nor a-
‘ buſed by Diſparagement in Marriage; provi‘ deth Safeguard for their Portions. So that ‘ neither

‘ neither themſelves, nor others, may miſ-ſpend the ſame: And, in the behalf of the Orphans, do proſecute Suits for Recovery or Defence of their Right. Where otherwiſe the Children for want of Ability, Diſcretion, and Friends, to follow their Suits, do often prejudice their Titles, and ſometimes loſe their Rights.

‘ And by this Cuſtom, if any Orphan die within Age, the Intereſt of his Portion is preſerved to his Brothers and Siſters ſurviving: Where otherwiſe they might (by Flattery, or other Abuſe) be induced to beſtow the ſame by their Wills upon Strangers.

‘ Which provident Care had of th'Orphans, as aforeſaid, doth not only extend to their Benefit, but ſtretcheth further to the Good of the Widows, Creditors and Legatories of the Dead. Who might (by ſiniſter Practice of the Executors) be greatly prejudiced, if ſuch exact Care were not had. And that which is more, there be a great number of young and towardly Merchants and Occupiers within the City, relieved and profited by the Uſe of Orphans Portions: yielding but an eaſy Allowance to the Orphans, for their competent Maintenance. And therefore this our Cuſtom, we hope, ſhall ſeem to your Lordſhips, with all Favour, the more worthy to be ſupported.

‘ Where on the contrary Part, if it ſhould be holden and deemed as a thing lawful and arbitrable, for every Freeman, at his own Diſcretion and Pleaſure, by fraudulent Deed of Gift in his Life-time, or by his laſt Will, to diſpoſe of all his Goods after his Death; hereof it would enſue, that many counterfeit Wills and Deeds of Gift would be forged: and for Maintenance thereof, much Perjury committed; many true Wills would be ſuppreſſed; many wilful Men, to advance one Child (for Affection) would leave the reſt Beggars. Hereby alſo Men would defraud their Wives. So that neither rich Woman, nor wiſe Woman would marry with a Citizen, not having Lands of Inheritance. And Women already married would all perſuade their Husbands to become Purchaſers. Hereby alſo would be opened a Gap to much Perjury in theſe Devices. For every Freeman is ſworn to defend, obey, and maintain this Cuſtom. Hence might it alſo proceed, that the Cry of Orphans being diſcouraged, might ſlack the Care and Diligence which now is taken in Orphans Cauſes. And Orphans having preſent Poſſeſſion of their Portions, being very young at the time of the Death of their Parents, would preſently depart out of the City; and ſhould be in danger (before they were of reaſonable Diſcretion) to be defrauded of their Portions, and to be abuſed in Marriage, either to Beggars, Perſons irreligious, or of light Name. Whereby the Trade of Merchandize would wax cold, the City in Strength and Wealth feebled, Navigation neglected, her Majeſties Subſidy and Cuſtom diminiſhed, rich Mens Children, deprived of their Birthright, ſhould become Beggars; Hoſpitals ſurcharged, and an intolerable Burden impoſed on the City: and all by Fraud. Where Fraud, even in things of themſelves lawful, is not favoured in Law.

But now the City being inſolvent, theſe Obligations about Orphans are ceaſed.

The Act of Parliament for the Orphans.

The great Law now in force for relieving and doing Juſtice to the Orphans of the City, who had long wanted their Monies, by reaſon of the City's Inability to pay them, after the great Fire of London, was made in the fourth and fifth Years of King William and Queen Mary. Whereby a perpetual Fund was to be raiſed, to pay the yearly Intereſt of 4 l. for every 100 l. Principal, and of all the Intereſt thereof, due to any Orphan of the City, or the Executors, Adminiſtrators, or Aſſigns of ſuch Orphan. And this Proviſion made by the ſaid Act, for Payment of the ſaid Intereſt Money for ever, was to be in full Satiſfaction of the Debts and Intereſt thereof, due to the Orphans, or their Creditors. And they to acknowledge Satisfaction of their reſpective Debts according to the uſual Cuſtom, &c. And the City and their Succeſſors to be acquitted of the ſame. And this to be raiſed out of all the City Rents. And beſides, for the ſame purpoſe 2000 l. a Year to be raiſed by an Aſſeſſment upon the Inhabitants of the City and Liberties: and 600 l. a Year to be reſerved for the ſame Uſe, out of the Profits ariſing to the City by the Glaſs Lights, commonly called the Convex Lights: Moreover, for the ſame Uſe, every one bound Apprentice is to pay Half a Crown; and every one made Free, five Shillings; and 4 s. per Tun upon all Wines imported into the Port of London; and 4 d. upon every Chaldron of Coals imported to London, to the 29th of September 1700; and from thence a further Sum of 6 d. per Chaldron ſo imported; that is, 10 d. every Chaldron: and for Coals ſold by the Tun, for every 2000 Weight 6 d. This laſt Impoſition to continue for fifty Years only.

The Chamberlain, or other Officer, that ſhall miſapply any of the Money ſo appointed, to forfeit treble the Sum; to be recovered by any the Orphans or Creditors that will ſue for the ſame, in any of the Queen's Courts of Record.

And any Perſon to whom any Money is payable by this Act, may by Writing under his Hand and Seal, transfer his Right and Intereſt therein. And being regiſtred in a Book to be kept for that Purpoſe, ſuch Aſſign ſhall be entitled to the Benefit thereof: and ſuch Aſſign may in like manner aſſign again; and ſo toties quoties.

No Perſon hereafter to be compelled by vertue of any City Cuſtom, or by any Order or Proceſs in the Court of Orphans, to pay or deliver into the Chamber of London any Sums of Money or Perſonal Eſtate due, or to be due, to any Orphan of any Freeman.

This Act is entitled, An Act for Relief of the Orphans, and other Creditors of the City. To which Act it is eaſy to have Acceſs, for any that have occaſion to make uſe of it, being in the printed Acts of Parliament, Ann. 5 & 6 Guliel. & Mariæ.

An Expedient to get the City free of the Orphans Debt. Rich. Bromley.

It was ſome Years ago propounded by a good Citizen, in order to get the City free of this Burden, that if the fifteen Coal-Meeters, who pay about 1700 l. each for their Places, and the ten Corn-Meeters, who pay about 1400 l. each for their Places, were admitted to their Places without Money, but for yearly Rent, the former would pay (inſtead of 80 l. as they do) 350 l. per ann. each, and the latter about 250 l. per ann. each. Which would bring 7000 l. per ann. into the Chamber. And this, appropriated by Act of Parliament to the Orphans, would effectually ſecure the Payment of 4 l. per Cent. Intereſt, granted them by Act of Parliament, and eaſe the Citizens of the Tax of 2000 l. per Ann. levied upon them towards the Payment of the Intereſt aforeſaid.

Concerning Wills, Widows and Children of Freemen. Lex Londini.

To add here, for a Concluſion, a few Cuſtoms relating to Freemens laſt Wills, and of their Widows and Children, as to the Diviſion of the Eſtates that the ſaid Freemen died poſſeſſed of, and properly lying before this Court.

By the Cuſtom of London, a Freeman's Widow may require a third part of his Perſonal Eſtate, after his Debts paid, and Funeral Charges diſcharged, beſides her Widows Chamber furniſhed. To his Children belong another third part. And the laſt third part he may by Will give away to Wife or Children, or what other Perſon ſoever he pleaſeth. But if he ſhall have no Children, then his Widow hath a Right to half his Perſonal Eſtate, together with her Widows Chamber furniſhed. And if he ſhall make his Will contrary to this Cuſtom, and give away more than a Third of his Eſtate from his Wife and Children, they may be relieved againſt ſuch Will, by exhibiting their Bill in this Court againſt the Executor. And ſo much of his Will as ſhall be contrary to the Cuſtom, will be declared void, and of no Effect.

If a Freeman ſhall, in the time of his laſt Sickneſs, give and deliver any Part of his Goods, Chattels or Monies to his Wife or Child, or any other Perſon, with intent that ſuch Perſon ſhall keep the ſame to her or his own Uſe; ſuch Gift is againſt the Cuſtom of London; and the Monies and Goods ſo given, ſhall be accounted Part of the Eſtate that belonged to ſuch Freeman at the time of his Death; and may be recovered by Bill in this Court.

If an Unfreeman, or any other Perſon, ſhall by his Will give a Legacy to an Orphan, the Court of Aldermen may compel the Executor of ſuch Teſtator to pay the Money bequeathed into the Chamber of London, or give Bond to pay the ſame, according to the Purport of the Will.

If a Freeman die without a Will, and leave a Wife and Children, Adminiſtration of his Eſtate will be granted to his Widow; and ſhe will claim a third Part of his Eſtate by the Cuſtom of London; and one other Third muſt be divided among his Children. And of the Third remaining, one Third is by the Act 22 & 23 Car. II. cap. 10. for ſettling of Inteſtates Eſtates, allowed to the Widow; and the Children take the other two Thirds.

If a Freeman ſhall give Part of his Eſtate to any of his Children in Marriage, or otherwiſe, in his Life-time; and afterwards die, and make a Will, and give away his Eſtate to his other Children; and ſhall declare, that the Child he ſo diſpoſed in Marriage, had received 500 l. or more, of his Eſtate, and was thereby fully advanced; ſuch Declaration ſhall not bar the Perſon ſo married, but he or ſhe may recover an equal Share, with the other Children, of the Perſonal Eſtate that belonged to ſuch Freeman at the time of his Death. But then ſuch Perſon muſt bring in the Money received of his Father in his Life-time, and reckon it Part of the Eſtate left by ſuch Freeman at his Death. And ſuch bringing in the Money is called bringing it into Hotchpot.

If a Freeman ſhall ſettle or make over any Part of his Eſtate to the Uſe of his Children, with deſign to defraud his Wife of her full third Part, the Widow may, after his Death, ſet aſide ſuch Settlement, by a Bill in this Court.

This Court will alſo take care, when Inventories are brought in, wherein any of the Freemens Goods are omitted or undervalued, or Debts charged to be owing from the Deceaſed which were not real and juſt: And it compels Executors of Freemen to give Bond to render a true Account from time to time. For which, and the like, and for the Fees of this Court, Recourſe may be had to the Book called The City Law, and other Books.

The Court of ALDERMEN.

THIS is a Court of Record: All Matters touching Lights, Water Courſes, and Party Walls, may be tried and determined in this Court. In this Court alſo the Aſſize of Bread is always appointed. And here all Bonds and Leaſes that paſs under the City Seal, muſt be ſealed. The Place where this Court is held, is the inner Chamber of Guild Hall: the Days are, Tueſdays and Thurſdays, except Holidays, and the three firſt Weeks in Auguſt, and in the time of the Seſſions of Goal Delivery.

The yearly Election of eleven Overſeers and Rulers of all the Wherrymen, Watermen, and Lightermen, that exerciſe rowing between Graveſend and Windſor, is in the Maior and this Court of Aldermen, by vertue of an Act of Parliament 11 & 12 W. 3. and likewiſe by an Act 2 & 3 Ph. & M. this Court has Power to limit, ſet, and aſſeſs the Price that Watermen ſhall take of their Paſſengers, as their Fare and Reward; the ſaid Aſſeſſments being firſt brought to be viewed by ſome of the Privy Council, and ſigned and ſealed with the Hands of any two of them. And accordingly, Sept. 7. in the Year 1671, Sir Richard Ford being Maior, the Fares of the Watermen were appointed; which ſtand to this Day. The Liſt whereof ſhall be ſet down in its Place.

This Court alſo may puniſh any of the City Officers, miſbehaving themſelves, upon Complaint made to the ſaid Court, and Proof of the Fact; by ſuſpending them from the Profits of their Places, during the Pleaſure of the Court. Theſe Officers are divers; moſt of whoſe Places are beſtowed by the Lord Maior and this Court of Aldermen; and are theſe which follow:

The Court of Common Council.

Reſembles the Eſtates in Parliament, Coke in his Inſtit. P. 4. p. 249.

THE Court of Common Council is another Court of the City, of great Uſe and Authority: and ſo much the more honourable, as it is obſerved by ſome, to have a Reſemblance to the High Court of Parliament, as conſiſting of two Ranks of Men, like the Upper and Lower Houſe, viz. the Lord Maior and Aldermen, reſembling the Houſe of Peers; and the Common Council Men, anſwering the Commoners. And theſe are ordinarily ſuch as are of the beſt Abilities, both for Diſcretion and Wealth; and elected by the Inhabitants of each of the twenty ſix Wards, as their reſpective Repreſentatives. And the Matters here agreed and concluded upon, are ſtiled Acts. And in this Court are made Laws for the Advance of Trade, and for the good Government of the City, according to the Emergencies thereof. Which are obligatory to all the Inhabitants, as conſiſtent with the Laws of the Land. The Commons do give their Aſſent by holding up their Hands.

It is held in the Chamber of Guild-Hall, by the Lord Maior, Aldermen, and Common Council of the City, at ſuch times as the Lord Maior ſhall appoint and direct. And it is in the ſaid Maior's Power both to call and diſmiſs this Court at his Pleaſure.

The great Lords of the Realm, 2 R. I. ſwear to preſerve the Commonalty. J. S.

How ancient this Common Council was, is uncertain; but I find that in the 2d of Rich. I. (which was about the Year when the City began firſt to be governed by a Maior) on the 11th of October, there was a ſolemn Meeting in St. Paul's Church-Yard; it is likely in that Place where the Folkmote uſed to aſſemble. At this Meeting came John Earl of Moreton, the King's Brother, the Archbiſhop of Roan, and all the Biſhops, Earls and Barons, with the Citizens of London. Where, among other things done, the ſaid Earl, the Archbiſhop, (who was Chancellor of England) and other the King's Juſtices, granted to the Citizens of London, to have and enjoy Communiam ſuam; i. e. their Commonalty: which it ſeems had ſome time before been reſtrained or interrupted. And the ſame Year the ſaid Earl Moreton, the Archbiſhop, and almoſt all the Biſhops, Earls and Barons of the Realm, took an Oath, that they would firmly and ſteadily keep the ſame Commonalty, as long as it ſhould pleaſe their Lord the King; as Dr. Brady ſets it down from Hovedon.

Brady's Hiſtorical Treatiſe of Cities and Burghs, p. 20.

And becauſe ſeveral other things, beſides making Laws, are neceſſarily required to be lookt after, for maintaining the good Eſtate of the City, as the Letting of the City Lands, as alſo thoſe in Ireland, and the taking care of the common Sewers, and ſuch like; particular Committees are yearly appointed by the Common Council, to order, and direct, and act in ſuch Matters. And ſuch Committees make Report to the ſame Court of their Doings and Proceedings, as occaſion requires. The Committees are theſe:

Committees.

1. There is a Committee of ſix Aldermen, and twelve Commoners, for letting and demiſing the City Lands and Tenements. Who uſually meet every Wedneſday in the Afternoon at Guild-Hall, for that Purpoſe.

2. There is another Committee of four Aldermen, and eight Commoners, to let and diſpoſe of the Lands and Tenements given by Sir Thomas Greſham. And they commonly meet at Mercers-Hall, at ſuch time as the Lord Maior directs and appoints; it being the Cuſtom to elect the Lord Maior one of this Commitee.

3. Other Perſons are elected Commiſſioners for the Sewers and Pavements.

4. This Court alſo elects a Governor, Deputy Governor, and Aſſiſtants, for Management of the City's Lands in Ulſter and London-Derry in Ireland, purſuant to a Charter of the King; whereby he granted, that the Society of the Governor and Aſſiſtants of London, of the new Plantation in Ulſter, ſhould be yearly elected and appointed by the Maior, Aldermen, and Commonalty of the ſaid City, at the firſt Common Council to be holden next after the Purification of the Bleſſed Virgin MARY. Accordingly, the Governor, Deputy Governor, and Aſſiſtants do meet as occaſion requires, in a Chamber in Guild-Hall, called the Iriſh Chamber.

See this Charter in Lex Londin. p. 118.

There be moreover theſe Proprieties of this Court. A Stranger born, may be made free of this City by Order of this Court, and not otherwiſe.

The Places of Common Serjeant, Common Clerk or Town Clerk, Judges of the Sheriffs Courts, Common Cryer, Coroner, Bailiff of the Borough of Southwark, and Garbler, are in the Gift of this Court.

The Clerk of the Court of Requeſts, commonly called the Court of Conſcience, was once elected by this Court, viz. Major Gunſton, upon the Death of John White. But by the Judgment of Counſel learned in the Law, the Right of Election of the ſaid Clerk of Requeſts, is not in this Court, but in the Court of Aldermen.

The Commoners in this Court are 234 Perſons, and in Repreſentation many Thouſands.

The Election of Chamberlain and Bridgemaſter.

This Court of Common Council, in the 6th of Hen. VII. April 15. conferred a Power upon the Lord Maior and Aldermen, that at the Election of the Chamberlain, the Lord Maior and Aldermen ſhould preſent two Men to the Commonalty, and the Commonalty to chuſe one of them to be Chamberlain. In the ſame Act of Common Council, this Court conferred a Power upon the Lord Maior and Aldermen, that at the Election of Bridge-Maſter, the Lord Maior and Aldermen ſhould preſent four Men to the Commonalty, and the Commonalty to chuſe two of them to be Bridge-Maſters. But June 21, 1643, this Court of Common Council repealed the former Act of Common Council of Hen. VII. and took away that Power from the Maior and Aldermen, which before was by the Law conferred upon them: and ſo ſettled the Choice of Chamberlain and Bridge-Maſters in ſtatu quo prius.

Plea for the Commonalty of London, p. 13.

A Debate in Common Council about electing City Officers.

In the Year 1644, Sir Thomas Atkins Lord Maior, there happened a Controverſy between the Commoners of the City, and the Maior and Aldermen, claiming their long loſt Liberties and Privileges, in the Choice of City Officers, which they pretended were encroached upon by former Maiors and Aldermen. This occaſioned John Bellamy, one of the Common Council, and, as it ſeems, well ſeen in the Laws, eſpecially of the City, to make a Motion in a Common Council Jan. 16, 1644, to the Maior and Aldermen, to this Purport: 'That one ſpecial means, that he 'had oft obſerved to obſtruct the good Proceed'ings of that Court, might be removed. Which 'was, that the Maior cauſed the Sword to be 'taken up, and then went away; and ſo diſſolv'ing the Court, without the Conſent, yea, againſt 'the Deſire, of the major part.' The Remedy he propoſed, for the Redreſs of this Grievance, was, 'That by the Power of the Council, there 'might a Law be eſtabliſhed, that the Court 'might not at any time be diſſolved or adjourn'ed, without the Conſent of the major Part, 'both of Aldermen and Commons, in Common 'Council aſſembled.' Upon this Speech, and their foreſaid pretended Claim, there was a Committee appointed to ſtate the Queſtion in Debate, between the Aldermen and Commoners, Members of this Court of Common Council. But after three days Debate, they found little Succeſs in their Buſineſs. And the foreſaid Bellamy, being one of the Committee, delivered a long Speech Feb. 24, to give an Account to the Court, how, in his Judgment, he conceived the Right and Truth therein did ſtand. Which was afterwards by him printed, and called, A Plea for the Commonalty of London; or, a Vindication of their Rights, (which have been long time witholden from them) in the Choice of ſundry City Officers. As alſo a Juſtification of the Power of the Court of Common Council, in making of Acts or By Laws, for the Good and Profit of the Citizens, notwithſtanding the negative Votes of the Maior and Aldermen, fully proved by ſeveral Charters granted to the City, &c. Therein he ſhewed, how the Charters of ancient Kings to the City, all ran To the Maior, Aldermen, and Commonalty of the City of London; or To the Maior and Commonalty of the City of London: He reminded them of the Charter of Edward III. in the 15th of his Reign; where the Maior and Aldermen, with the Aſſent of the Commonalty, have Power, as to explain, ſo to amend the old, or to make new Laws, for the common Benefit of the Citizens. And before him, of that of King John, in the firſt of his Reign; and of King Edward II. in the 12th of his Reign; where the ſole Power, both to elect and to amove the Sheriffs, the Chamberlain, the Common Clerk, and the Common Serjeant, is wholly left to the Pleaſure of the Commonalty, without any Reference to the Maior and Aldermen. Thus it was clear, he ſaid, that the Commonalty had by the Charters an equal Share with the Maior and Aldermen, in the Privileges granted to the City. And if there were any Difference, as there was in the Choice of ſome City Officers, the Advantage was unto the Commons.

Then he went about to prove it by Practice; ſhewing, that all the Acts of Common Council, which were the City's Laws, were made, as in the joint Names, ſo by the joint Power, of the Maior, Aldermen, and Common Council. And gave ſome particular Inſtances of Things done by the Power of this Court. As, March 4, 1641, the removing of Deputy Alden from being a Member of that Court. Sept. 5, 1642, the putting away of Mr. John Weld from being Town Clerk of this City. Feb. 18, 1642, the expelling of Thomas Wiſeman, the City Remembrancer, out of this Office. April 21, 1643, the amoving of divers Aldermens Deputies from their Place of Deputyſhip. And all by the joint and concurrent Power and Authority of the Lord Maior, Aldermen, and Commons, in this Common Council aſſembled. That the determinative Power of this Court, is in the Plurality of the Votes of the Maior, Aldermen, and Commons conjunctim. And that the Lord Maior and Aldermen have in this Court no more Power of a negative Voice, than other ſingle Perſons. For which he brought this Inſtance: Febru. 17, 1641, a Petition was brought into this Court, directed only To the Lord Maior and Aldermen; and becauſe it was not directed To the Lord Maior, Aldermen, and Commons, in Common Council aſſembled, this Court refuſed to take any Cognizance of it. But then Sir Richard Gurney Maior, with the major Part of the Aldermen then preſent, in that Common Council, would have the Court to admit of that Petition; and the Court refuſing, the Lord Maior and Aldermen would have the Court divided, and numbred by Poll: and ſo it was done. And there were for the Petition, the Lord Maior and ſeven Aldermen, and ſixty one Commoners; and againſt the Petition, five Aldermen, and eighty five Commoners. And thus the Members of this Court, both Aldermen and Commoners, being reckoned together by the Poll on both ſides, as Members of this Court, the Queſtion was determined, the Petition rejected, and the Power and Authority of this Common Council maintained.

But whereas it was objected, that the Choice of ſome City Officers had been time out of mind in the Power of the Maior, or Aldermen, and not in the Commonalty; he anſwered, That it was confeſſed, that a great while the Choice of theſe, (as the Sheriff to be choſen by the Lord Maior's Prerogative, and the Common Clerk and Common Serjeant by the Court of Aldermen) and ſome other City Officers, have been ſuffered to run along in theſe Chanels of pretended Prerogative, and unwarrantable Cuſtom; but from the Beginning it was not ſo. And if this were given away by Conſent, as I will not, added he, deny, but our Forefathers in their Times might be perſuaded, upon ſpecious Shews, and peradventure, in their Eſteem, upon ſolid Reaſons, to make over a Part of their Power into the hands of the Lord Maior and Aldermen; yet, if Reaſon and juſt Cauſe require, the Power of this Council may aſſume it again into the hands of the Commonalty. As it did upon the like Cauſe, June 21, 1643, reaſſume the ſole Power of chuſing the Chamberlain and Bridge-Maſter.

This was the Sum of Bellamie's Speech in the Common Council. Whereupon the Difference about the City's Privileges were by Order of the Court of Common Council, referred to a Committee of Aldermen and Commoners, to conſider of ſome Expedient for reconciling thereof. And the Committee after ſeveral Debates, concluded upon a probable means for the ending of it. And April 24 following, brought in their Report; and upon reading thereof, the whole Court did approve it. And hence perhaps the Elections ſtand upon the preſent foot.

The Commonalty uſed formerly to petition the Maior and Aldermen. J. S.

The Commonalty oftentimes, and at theſe Meetings, I ſuppoſe, when they were minded to have certain Inconveniences redreſt, or good Orders made for the preſerving of their Liberties, and the like, did formerly uſe to petition the Maior and Aldermen. Some of theſe Petitions I have ſeen in the Records of the Chamber. I ſhall ſpecify one or two in the Reign of King Edward II.

Petitiones Communitatis.

Petitions of the Commonalty, Lib. Horn.

DIE Mercurii, &c. 'On Wedneſday before the Feaſt of the Annunciation of the Bleſſed Virgin, in the fifth Year of the Reign of King Edward, Son of King Edward, a Congregation of the honeſt Men of the City was made, preſent John de Giſors, Maior, William Servat, John de Wengrave, Nigell Drury, &c. Aldermen; wherein they prayed the Articles underwritten.

'Firſt, That no Stranger for the time to come be admitted to the Freedom of the City, unleſs by the Conſent of the Commonalty, or in a common Congregation, or in a full Huſting, the Commonalty preſent.

'Alſo, that no Letters, by which the Commonalty may or ought to be charged, or obliged toward any thing, be made for the time to come, nor ſealed by the Seal of the Commonalty, before the Commonalty be met together for this purpoſe; and they yield unanimous Conſent to it.

'Alſo it was petitioned, that the Common Seal for the time to come, remain in ſome common Cheſt, under ſix Locks. Of which three Aldermen have three Keys, and three honeſt Men of the Commonalty, the three other Keys.

Whence we may gather, the Value the Citizens ſet upon their Freedoms; and how they were given underhand, and gotten often by Stealth, without the Conſent and Allowance of the whole Commons; and that the Seal was kept in private Hands, and too much at the Command of the Aldermen, or ſome of them.

The Year after this, they petitioned again, as follows.

A Petition exhibited to the Maior and Aldermen by the Commonalty.

Other Petitions of the Commonalty to the Maior, &c. Lib. Horn. fo. 427.

'ON Friday, next before the Feaſt of St. Nicolas, in the 6th Year of King Edward, the Son of King Edward, were gathered together at Gyhald, London, John de Giſors, Maior, and many Aldermen and honeſt Men of the City of every Trade. Who came to treat upon certain Articles and Buſineſſes for the whole Commonalty; and ſhewed certain Grievances following to the ſaid Maior and Aldermen. Upon which they propounded certain Articles ordained for the common Profit, requiring that for the Remainder they be firmly obſerved.

'Firſt of all, that firm Peace and good Concord be nouriſhed and preſerved in a neighbourly Unity through the whole City.

'Alſo, For that many Fellow Citizens of the ſaid City, whoſe Counſel and Aſſiſtance is always neceſſary to maintain the ſame City, are by reaſon of their juvenile Age, leſs ſufficiently inſtructed, as to the Laws and Liberties, and ancient Cuſtoms of the City; it is agreed, that ſuch Liberties, Uſages, and Cuſtoms, as concerning thoſe which belong to the Offices of divers Bailiffs, as well within the City as in the Gates of the ſame; and alſo the Statutes and Manners, whereby divers Trades, as well thoſe of Merchants or Workmen, ought to be regulated; be, according to Right, enrolled in ſome certain Regiſter; and be read once or twice every Year, in a common Aſſembly: And for the time to come it be not denied to the Citizens, that are minded, to have a Tranſcript thence, or an Inſpection.

'And alſo, that every Alderman, in the Terms accuſtomed in the City, hold their Wardmotes, and do more diligently ſuch things which are incumbent upon their Duties, as they are more firmly tied by the Bond of their Oath, under pain of Degradation from the Office of Alderman.

'Alſo, for that the Sheriffs, Aldermen, and Serjeants, by Authority of their Bailivery, do not deſiſt to make Extortions and Forfeitures, not to be ſuffered, without Conſideration or Judgment of the Maior and Aldermen, upon divers that bring Victuals to the City: And alſo, where they, the ſaid Bailiffs, ought to do ſpeedy Right to all complaining before them, according to the Laws and Cuſtoms of the ſaid City, the ſaid Bailiffs, for Malice and Covetouſneſs, are found ſo remiſs and impotent to do Right and Juſtice, that ſcarce any can be diſpatched before them in due manner: So that now no ſmall murmuring ariſeth anew in the People of the City; and a manifold Scandal beginneth thence to hang over us: It is agreed, that the ſaid Maior and Aldermen more diligently enquire upon theſe Grievances; and that they provide a ſeaſonable Remedy hereupon, as is fit.

'Alſo, becauſe in times paſt, whereof no Memory is, as alſo in modern times, the City is wont to be defended and governed by the Wealth and Counſel, as well of honeſt Men of Mercantile Trades, as of other Trades wrought by Hand; and it hath anciently been uſed, that no extraneous Perſon, be he homebred or Foreigner, of whoſe Converſation and State a certain Knowlege might not be had, ſhould be admitted into the Liberty of the City; unleſs firſt ſuch Merchants and Tradeſmen of the City, exerciſing the Trade which ſuch to be admitted intended to uſe, be lawfully called: that by the Citizens themſelves ſo called together, the Maior and Aldermen being certified of the Condition and Fidelity of ſuch Perſons to be admitted, might know, if they were to be admitted or refuſed.

'The whole Commonalty petitioneth, that the foreſaid Form, whereby the greater Trades of Merchants or Handicrafts Men were ordered, be for the future obſerved. Leſt any for time to come be admitted to the Liberty of the City, contrary to the foreſaid Proviſion.

Conteſts about Elections of Common Council Men.

Concerning the Election of Aldermen for the Wards, and eſpecially of Common Council Men, there have been of late Years great Conteſts, when upon Vacancies two Parties have been ſet up to be choſen, and the Perſons elected not allowed by one Side, on pretence of an undue Election, Petitions have been drawn up and preferred to the Common Council, complaining of the ſaid Election. And upon ſuch Petitions, the Common Council have appointed a Committee to conſider the ſame. And thereupon, by their Order, Suits in Law have been commenced. The Charges whereof have been out of the City Caſh. Which from Novemb. 8, 1711, unto the Year 1718, coſt the City 2827 l. 10 s. as it was brought into the Houſe of Lords in the Year 1719, by the Town Clerk and Chamberlain.

The Charges thereof to the City 2827 l.

For the ſtopping of this great Expence of the City for time to come, (being already ſo deeply in Debt) an Endeavour was made to find out an Expedient, by application to the King's Bench, upon ſuch a controverted Election. When, on the 6th of February, 1717, ſuch a Petition of an undue Election was exhibited to the Common Council by Edward Brigden, Peter Bolton, and others; complaining, (as I take it out of an Order of the Houſe of Lords, for the printing of the Report and Reſolution, 17 April, 1719.) that Robert Jeffs and Stephen King were declared duly elected Common Council Men for Tower Ward, in Prejudice of the Petitioners Brigden and Bolton's Right. Which Petition was received by the Common Council: Who the ſame Day appointed a Committee to examine the Allegations thereof, and to iſſue ſuch Money as they ſhould appoint for Advice, or other neceſſary Expences in this Matter. And their Lordſhips [viz. the Committee of the Lord's Houſe, before whom this Matter now was come] were informed, that this Practice of the Common Council, of iſſuing the City Caſh, in taking Part with Citizen againſt Citizen; and in aſſuming to themſelves a Right of judging conteſted Elections of the City Officers, grew ſo heavy, that it became neceſſary to apply for Remedy to the Court of King's Bench, to put a Stop to ſo growing an Evil.

The Common Council reſtrained.

And for this Reaſon, the ſaid Mr. Jeffs and Mr. King moved the ſaid Court; and thereupon obtained a Prohibition, to reſtrain the Common Council from intermeddling with the Examination of that Election: With Directions however, to declare in ſuch manner, as to bring the Point to be tried, Whether the Common Council had, or had not a Right of examining ſuch conteſted Elections. And accordingly, a Declaration was delivered: and therein, and in the Proceedings thereon, the Point was tendred to be put in Iſſue. But to avoid ſuch Trial, the Defendants demurred. Which coming to be argued, Judgment was given for the ſaid Jeffs and King. And then Writs of Error were brought, returnable in Parliament.

And after a conſiderable Delay, (on account of a pretended Loſs of the Rolls or Records) the general Errors being aſſigned by the Plaintiffs in Error, came to be argued; and no Council appearing for them, the Judgment of the Court of King's Bench was affirmed, with Coſts.

The Reſolution of the Lords concerning this Caſe.

This, with other things reported by the ſaid Lords to the Houſe, and Conſideration had thereof, and Debate thereupon, the Houſe came to the following Reſolution. ‘Reſolved, by the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, in Parliament aſſembled, that it is the Opinion of this Houſe, That the Common Council of London, having iſſued great Sums of Money out of the Chamber of London, in maintaining ſeveral Suits of Law between Citizen and Citizen, relating to controverted Elections, have abuſed their Truſt, and been guilty of great Partiality, and of a groſs Miſmanagement of the City Treaſure, and a Violation of the Freedom of Elections in the City.

Three chief Folkmotes. Lib. Alb.

I may ſubjoin here the ancient Meetings of the Citizens, called Folkmotes. Concerning the Folkmotes, there were three chief Folkmotes in the Year, according to the City Books. One, at the Feaſt of St. Michael, to know who is Sheriff, and to hear the Commandment. The ſecond at Chriſtmas, to make the Wards, [called Wardmotes.] The third at the Feſtival of St. John, [i. e. Midſummer] to guard the City.

The Chamberlain's Court or Office.

THE Chamberlainſhip of London was anciently in the King's Power. Thus Chamberlaria London, i. e. the Office of Chamberlain of London, was granted to William Jermer by King Henry III.

And when King Henry granted the Citizens the Choice of their Maior, it was Salva Skambergeria noſtra.]

The Chamberlain's Office. R. B.

This is an Office of great Honour, Power, and Truſt. He receiveth the Rents, and other Revenues of the City, as the Orphans Money, and keeps his Office in the Chamber of Guild-Hall, where he gives his Attendance in the Forenoons every Day, to enroll and turn over Apprentices, and to make them Free, having duly ſerved their Times. The Place being of ſuch Importance, he is choſen yearly, and muſt give good Security to the Court of Aldermen, to pay and make good whatſoever Caſh ſhall be delivered unto him: and once every Year he gives up his Account to Auditors appointed on purpoſe to inſpect the ſame.

Beſides the Orphans and City Caſh, he is intruſted alſo with the City Leaſes, and all Bonds and Securities taken by the Court of Aldermen, for Orphans Monies.

The Chamberlain concerned in letting the City Lands, &c. J. S.

To this Officer belongeth the letting of the City Lands. Which is commonly done by a Committee, after this manner: When any ſuch Lands or other Proprieties of the City, by expiration of Leaſes, or otherwiſe, are to be diſpoſed of to Tenants, Notice thereof is given in the Gazette. As in the Year 1717: ‘The Committee for letting the City Lands, in the Account of the Chamberlain of the City, give Notice, that they intend to let by Leaſe, the Profits ariſing by the Monument on New Fiſh-ſtreet Hill; and alſo two Tenements, and four Shops or Sheds without Aldgate, in the Poſſeſſion of .... And that the Committee will ſet in the Council Chamber of the Guild-Hall, London, on Wedneſday the 9th inſtant, at four of the Clock in the Afternoon, to receive Propoſals for the Premiſſes ſeverally. Of which more particular Information may be had at the Comptroller's Office in the Guild-Hall aforeſaid.

Such Notice likewiſe was given from the ſaid Committee in the Gazette, Sept. 21. the ſame Year, concerning three Tenements in Hounſditch, in the Poſſeſſion of P. B. &c. And that the ſaid Committee would ſit in the Council Chamber in Guild-Hall on Day of ...... at four of the Clock, to receive Propoſals. Of which more particular Information might be had at the Comptroller's Office, &c.

To which I add, the Committee for letting out the Bridgehouſe Lands, gave the like Notice in the Gazette, that they intended to let by Leaſe the new built Meſſuage or Tenement, ſituate at the South-Weſt End of London Bridge, near adjoining to the Bear Alehouſe. And the ſaid Committee would ſit at the Guild-Hall, London, on to receive Propoſals, &c. And particular Information ſhould be had at the Comptroller's Office, at the Bridgehouſe, Southwark.

The like Notice was given near the ſame time, for letting the Lay-Stall at Mile End, in the Poſſeſſion of W. W.]

Apprentices and their Maſters.

Before him, the ſaid Chamberlain, all Apprentices are enrolled, and made free; inſomuch that none can ſet up Shop or follow a Trade within the City and Liberties, if not a Freeman, and ſworn before him: neither can any one turn over an Apprentice, but by his Licenſe. To him all Complaints are brought for Differences betwixt Apprentices and their Maſters: who reconciles their Differences, and may puniſh, by Impriſonment, thoſe that diſobey his Summons, or any Apprentice that miſdemeans himſelf to his Maſter or Miſtreſs: But upon the Apprentices acknowledging his Fault, and begging Pardon, with Promiſe not to offend any more, his Fault is forgiven.

Such Apprentices as have juſtly ſerved their Term of ſeven Years, and not broken their Indentures by marrying, &c. are made Free.

Upon the Admiſſion of every Perſon into the Freedom of this City, the Chamberlain cauſeth an Oath to be adminiſtred unto him, to be true to the King, the Government, and obſerve and keep the Cuſtoms of the City; which ſaid Oath hath been mentioned before, Chap. XXIV.

If any Maſter ſhall refuſe to make his Apprentice Free, when the Term of his Indenture is expired, upon Complaint made to the Chamberlain, he will cauſe ſuch Maſter to be ſummoned before him, and if he cannot ſhew good Cauſe to the contrary, will make the Apprentice Free. And if an Apprentice ſhall be unruly or diſorderly in his Maſters Houſe, or commit any notorious Fault, upon Complaint made thereof, the Chamberlain will ſend one of his Officers for ſuch Apprentice, and ſend him to Bridewel, or otherwiſe puniſh him according to the Nature of the Offence.

If any Maſter ſhall miſuſe his Apprentice, by unreaſonable beating, not allowing him Neceſſaries, or by neglecting to inſtruct him, or the like, upon Complaint thereof made, the Chamberlain will ſend a Summons for the Maſter to appear before him; and upon due hearing both Parties, will relieve the Apprentice, if his Allegations be proved to be juſt; or elſe leave the Apprentice to take his Remedy againſt his Maſter in the Lord Maior's Court. And if the Maſter refuſe to appear according to his Summons, the Lord Maior and Recorder, upon Complaint thereof made to them, will grant a Warrant to take him and compel him to appear.

When an Apprentice, by the conſent of his Maſter, is to be turned over to another Maſter of the ſame Trade, it muſt be done before the Chamberlain. And it is obſerved, that if an Apprentice be turned over by the Company only of which the Maſter is free, it is no Obligation on the ſecond Maſter to keep ſuch an Apprentice; nor is the Apprentice compelled thereby to ſerve the ſecond Maſter, but may depart at pleaſure, by ſuing out his Indentures againſt the firſt Maſter. Which may be done without the Privity or Knowledge of the ſecond Maſter. And therefore it is abſolutely neceſſary, that all Apprentices ſhould be turned over before the Chamberlain. And thereby the firſt Maſter is diſcharged from him, and the ſecond obliged to keep him; and the Apprentice will be obliged to ſerve the ſecond Maſter the full Term of his Indentures, altho' the ſame were made for nine Years, or more. It is the Intereſt of every Maſter and Apprentice, when any Difference happens between them, to refer the Matter to the Chamberlain: who will freely hear both Parties, and decide the Controverſy for 3 s. Charge, viz. 1 s. to the Officer for the Summons, and 2 s. to the Clerk for the Order. Whereas if they proceed at Law for Relief, it may probably coſt both Parties ſix Pounds, or more, in Charges; and the Concluſion may be leſs ſatisfactory than if decided by the Chamberlain.

Turning over before the Chamberlain very neceſſary.

And by vertue of the late Act for Orphans, over and above theſe uſual Fees,

An Apprentice, when bound, muſt pay	00 02 06
And when admitted a Freeman - -	00 05 00]

R. B.

If an Apprentice ſhall omit to take his Freedom within convenient time after the Expiration of his Indentures, the Chamberlain may impoſe upon the Apprentice ſuch a Fine, in reaſon, as he ſhall think fit, for this Neglect, without juſt Cauſe to the contrary.

Every Freeman ought to take particular care not to make an Apprentice free of London, by teſtifying for his true Service, unleſs ſuch Apprentice ſhall have really ſerved him. For if he ſhall privately turn his Apprentice over to a Foreigner, and let the Apprentice ſerve ſuch a Foreigner, and yet teſtify to the Chamberlain, that the Apprentice ſerved a Freeman; in ſuch caſe, both the Maſter and the Apprentice may be diſſfranchiſed, and fined at the diſcretion of the Recorder, and the Chamberlain, and may cauſe the Freeman's Shop to be ſhut up.

There are three ſeveral ways to be made a Freeman; firſt, by Birthright, as being the Child of a Freeman; ſecondly, by Service, as aforeſaid; and, thirdly, by Redemption, or Purchaſe, by Order of the Court of Aldermen.]

The Chamberlain and Sheriffs concerned together.

J. S.

In former Times, the Chamberlain was commonly concerned with the Sheriffs in the Duties incumbent upon them, and took Place of them. As appears by theſe Inſtances, that happened in the Pleas of the Crown, before the King's Juſtices at the Tower, 28 H. III.

Quodam Knypulo. Lib. Alb.

One Henry de Buk ſlew one Le Ireis le Tynlour, with a certain Knypule [Knife] in the Street of Fletebrige, and fled to the Church of St. Mary of Suthwerk; and acknowledged his Fact, and abjured the Kingdom, in the Preſence of Gervaſe Le Cordwaner, and the Sheriffs.

Anno 18 H. III. John de Colmere, Chamberlain, Raſe de Aſheby, and John Norman, Sheriffs, on Sunday the Eve of St. Mark, a Clerk called Henry de Bello, a Foreigner, ſlew Thomas de Aula, in the King's Highway, near the Houſe of John Aubyn. He fled to the Church of St. Brigid, London, by Night. So that the Sheriff and Alderman of the Ward had him watched for that Night till the Morrow. And then came the Conſtable of the Tower, the Sheriffs and Aldermen to the foreſaid Church. And he the ſaid Henry acknowledged the Fact before them. And he abjured the Kingdom. It was enquired by the Maior and Citizens, of the King's Juſtices, if the Conſtable of the Tower, the Sheriffs and Aldermen could receive an Abjuration from any, without the Chamberlain. They ſaid, they might, if the Chamberlain were abſent upon the King's Buſineſs.

Formerly the Office of Chamberlain of the City was in the Gift of the King. King Henry III. in the ſeventh of his Reign, granted it to William Jerners by Patent. And the ſame King, in the 53 of his Reign, granted it to Walter Capets ad placitum; i. e. during Pleaſure.

The SHERIFFS Courts.

The Sheriffs Courts, and their Proceedings.

R. B.

THere are two Courts of Record, called the Sheriffs Courts, belonging to the two Sheriffs; and to each Court belongs a Priſon, called the Compters, to wit, the Poultry Compter, and Woodſtreet Compter. And each Court hath its peculiar Judge, who are Counſellors learned in the Law, and knowing in the Cuſtoms of the City.

Theſe Courts hold Plea for all Actions of Debt, Treſpaſs, Account, Covenants broken, and on the Caſe, as alſo Attachments, and Sequeſtrations; and if the Action be laid under five Pounds, it cannot be removed to a ſuperior Court.

Theſe Courts are held four Days every Week in the Guild-Hall, viz. on Wedneſdays and Fridays for Woodſtreet Compter, and on Thurſdays and Saturdays for the Poultry Compter.

J. Gibſon.

The Proceedings in theſe Courts, are in the manner of thoſe of the higher, that is, by Declaration, Pleadings, a Jury, &c. And in caſe of any erroneous Judgment given, the Party grieved may ſue forth of the Court of Chancery, a Writ of Error, returnable in the Court of Huſtings, whither the Record being tranſmitted, the Errors may be there examined and corrected, before the Lord Maior and Sheriffs.

Officers of theſe Courts.

To theſe two Courts, viz. the Poultry and Woodſtreet, there belong eight Attorneys, who are admitted by the Court of Aldermen, and take an Oath.

Theſe Attorneys may demand in each Cauſe three Fees, one for the Appearance, one at joining Iſſue, and another upon Summons for Tryal. But if the Cauſe ſhall be ſummoned more than once, then to have a Fee upon every Summons.

The Jurymen are Freemen of the City, and ſerve in their Wards according to the ſeveral Months; each Ward taking their Turn.

To each Court belongs a Secondary, a Clerk of the Papers, a Prothonotary, and four Clerks Sitters.

The Secondaries allow, and return all Writs brought to remove Cauſes out of theſe Courts.

The Clerks of the Papers file and copy Declarations upon Actions in theſe Courts.

The Prothonotaries draw and engroſs all ſuch Declarations.

The Clerks Sitters enter Actions and Attachments, and take Bails and Verdicts.

To each Compter belong ſixteen Serjeants at Mace, and to each their Yeoman, beſides Under Officers, and a Priſon Keeper. And if a Freeman is committed to Priſon in either of theſe Compters, he may remove himſelf to Ludgate.

The two eldeſt Clerks in the Sheriffs Court for the Time being, are Attorneys of the Pye Powder Court held in Cloth Fair, during the three firſt Days of Bartholomew Fair, for the examining and trying Suits brought for petty Matters and Offences committed in the Fair.]

The Court of Requeſts, commonly called, the Court of Conſcience.

This Collection was inſerted into the laſt Edition by A. M. R.

THIS Court hath been eſtabliſhed by Act of Common Council, for many Years paſt, and ſo continued, for the Relief and Benefit of poor Debtors in London and the Liberties, and likewiſe for poor Freemen, that have ſmall Debts owing to them. Firſt, I find that on the 1ſt of February, in the ninth Year of King Henry VIII. an Act of Common Council was made, that the Lord Maior and Aldermen of the ſame City for the time being, ſhould monthly aſſign and appoint two Aldermen, and four diſcreet Commoners, to be Commiſſioners to ſit in the ſame Court twice a Week, viz. Wedneſday and Saturday: there to hear and determine all Matters brought before them between Party and Party, (being Citizens and Freemen of London) in all Caſes, where the due Debt or Damage did not exceed forty Shillings.

Anno 9 H. 8. The firſt beginning of the ſaid Court.

The reaſons why the ſaid Court hath had continuation.

Other Acts made ſince to the ſame purpoſe.

This Act was to continue but for two Years then next enſuing: But being found charitable and profitable for the Relief of ſuch poor Debtors as were not able to make preſent Payment of their Debts; and to reſtrain malicious Perſons, from proceeding in their wilful Suits: and alſo to be a great Eaſe and Help to ſuch poor Perſons as had ſmall Debts owing to them, and were not able to proſecute Suits in Law for the ſame elſewhere; the ſame Act hath ſithence been continued by divers other Acts of Common Council. And hereby (beſides the ſaid two Aldermen monthly aſſigned) the number of Commiſſioners were increaſed from four to twelve. And ſo by that Authority, the ſame Court continued till the End of the Reign of Queen Elizabeth, &c.

The malicious Proceeding of cruel Creditors againſt poor Men that claimed the Benefit of the Court.

And then divers People, being Citizens and Freemen of London, (contrary to their Oaths formerly taken) repining at the Authority of the ſame Court, and not regarding the Expence of any Charges, how great ſoever, ſo they might have their deſires upon their poor Debtors, and being often animated thereunto by divers Attorneys and Solicitors (for their own particular Gain) did daily commence Suits, for ſuch petty Debts and Cauſes againſt poor Men (Citizens and Freemen of London) in the high Courts at Weſtminſter, or elſewhere, out of the ſaid Court of Requeſts, to avoid the Juriſdiction of the ſame Court, and to barr the ſaid Commiſſioners from ſtaying ſuch Suits, and examining the ſaid Cauſes, and thereby cauſed the ſaid poor Men, many times, to pay ſix times as much Charges as their principal Debts or Damage did amount unto, to the undoing of ſuch poor Men, their Wives and Children, and alſo to the filling of the Priſons with the Poor ſo ſued: where otherwiſe they might have got their Debts in the ſaid Court of Requeſts, for very ſmall Charge, and little Trouble.

Anno 1. Jac. An Act of Parliament for confirming the Power of the Court.

For Remedy whereof, and for the ſtrengthening and eſtabliſhing the ſaid Court, an Act of Parliament was then made, Anno primo Jacobi Regis, That every Citizen and Freeman of London, that had, or ſhould have any Debts owing to him, not amounting to forty Shillings, by any Debtors (Citizens and Freemen of London) inhabiting in London, or the Liberties thereof, ſhould or might cauſe ſuch Debtors to be warned to appear before the Commiſſioners of the ſaid Court: and that the ſaid Commiſſioners, or the greater number of them, ſhould from time to time ſet down ſuch Orders between ſuch Parties, Plaintiff and Defendant, Creditor and Debtor, touching ſuch Debts not exceeding forty Shillings, as they ſhould find to ſtand with Equity and good Conſcience.

But ſithence the making of that Act, divers Perſons (intending to ſubvert the good and charitable Intent of the ſame) have taken hold of ſome doubtful and ambiguous Words therein, and have wreſted the ſame for their own Lucre and Gain, to the avoiding the Juriſdiction of the ſame Court, contrary to the godly meaning of the ſaid Act.

Anno 3. Jac. Another Act of Parliament concerning all Debts under the Sum of forty Shillings.

For Remedy whereof, and to the Intent that ſome more full and ample Proviſion might be made for the further eſtabliſhing and ſtrengthening of the ſaid Court, and for the better Relief of ſuch poor Debtors, another Act of Parliament was made, Anno 3. Jac. whereby the Authority of the ſaid Commiſſioners were much enlarged, viz. that every Citizen and Freeman of London, [and every other Perſon and Perſons inhabiting, or that ſhall inhabit within the City of London, or the Liberties thereof, being a Tradeſman, Victualler, or Labouring Man,] which have, or ſhall have, any Debts owing to him or them, not amounting to forty Shillings, by any Citizen or Freeman, [or by any other Perſon or Perſons (being a Victualler, Tradeſman, or Labouring Man) inhabiting within the ſaid City, or the Liberties thereof,] ſhould or might cauſe ſuch Debtors to be warned to appear before the ſaid Commiſſioners of the ſaid Court of Requeſts. And the ſaid Commiſſioners, or any three, or more of them, ſhall have Power to ſet down ſuch Orders between Plaintiff and Defendant, Creditor and Debtor, touching ſuch Debts not amounting to forty Shillings, as they ſhall find to ſtand with Equity and good Conſcience. Alſo, the ſaid Commiſſioners, or any three, or more of them, have Power (by the ſaid Act) to miniſter an

Power of adminiſtring an Oath.

Oath to the Creditor or Debtor, and to ſuch Witneſſes as ſhall be produced on each part: And alſo to commit to Priſon in one of the Counters, ſuch Creditor or Debtor, as ſhall not appear upon lawful Summons, or not perform ſuch Order as the ſaid Commiſſioners, or any three, or more of them, ſhall ſet down. And by this laſt Act, the ſaid Court of Requeſts is eſtabliſhed and continued to this Day; and God grant it may ſo long continue to the Relief of the Poor, &c.

R. B.

The Lord Maior and Court of Aldermen, do monthly aſſign ſuch Aldermen and Commoners, to ſit as Commiſſioners in the ſaid Court, as they think fit: and the ſame Perſons, or any three of them, makes a Court, and do ſit in Guild-Hall every Wedneſday and Saturday in the Forenoon, to hear and determine ſuch Cauſes as are brought before them.

A Cauſe may be brought and determined in this Court for 10 d. Charge, viz. 6 d. for the Plaint and Summons, and 4 d for the Order. But if the Defendant doth not appear the ſecond Court-Day after Summons, an Attachment will be awarded againſt him, which will compel him to appear, and then the Charges are ſome ſmall matter more.

The Power of this Court.

If any Citizen ſhall be arreſted for a Debt under forty Shillings, this Court will grant a Summons for the Plaintiff in the Action; and if he appear not the firſt Court-Day after the Summons left at his Houſe, the Court will grant an Attachment againſt him, and force him to take his Debt, and pay the Defendant his Coſts. And if any Attorney in London ſhall preſume to proceed in any ſuch Suit, after Notice to the contrary, or ſhall refuſe to obey the Order of this Court, upon Complaint thereof to the Court of Aldermen, they will ſuſpend ſuch a Perſon from his Practice. And this was done to one Thomas Hutton, an Attorney in the Sheriffs Court in the Year 1610, Sir William Craven being Maior.]

The Court of Conſervacy of the River of Thames.

When held, and where. J. S.

THere is a peculiar Court for the taking care of this moſt important River of Thames, both for the Water and Fiſh of it. The Right of which is in the City. This Court is held before the Lord Maior, at ſuch times as he ſhall appoint and direct, within the Counties near adjacent to London and Weſtminſter; viz. Middleſex and Eſſex on the North ſide of the River, Kent and Surrey on the South.

Water Bailiff.

The Water Bailiff is the Lord Maior's Deputy, or Sub-conſervator, and ought to give Notice to him of all Offences committed by any Perſons, contrary to the Orders made for Preſervation of the Fry of Fiſh in the ſaid River: and every Fiſherman, by vertue of an Order made by Sir Robert Ducy, Maior, Anno 1630, from London Bridge unto Stanes Bridge, every Year upon St. Paul's Day, muſt appear before the ſaid Water Bailiff at the Chappel of Guild-Hall, to enter their Names into his Regiſter Book, and to hear the Orders made for the Preſervation of the ſaid River.

Within ſome convenient Places within the Counties aforeſaid, (as, among others, Graveſend in Kent, and Stratford Langton in Eſſex) the Lord Maior ſits judicially eight times yearly; and hath a Power of ſummoning four Juries out of the Inhabitants of thoſe Counties; to whom an Oath is adminiſtred, to make Inquiſition after Offences committed upon the River. And theſe go up the River as far as Stanes Bridge, and down the River, as far as the Points of the River next the Sea, in a Barge prepared for them, to examine and make Enquiries according to certain Articles to direct them therein, to the number of thirty. Which may be ſeen in the Book called the City's Law. And according to the Verdict of theſe Juries, the Court proceeds to Puniſhment of all Tranſgreſſions of Fiſhermen, or others, that create any Damage or Hurt to the Thames, or the Fry.

Lex Lond. p. 209.

But ſometimes theſe Seſſions of the Conſervacy have been omitted for a long time. The Lord Maiors in the Reign of King James I. had not held this Court in divers Years, till the Year 1616, when Sir John Jolls Lord Maior, and divers Aldermen, and other Officers and Gentlemen, went in their Barges in great State, taking Water at Billinſgate, and ſo to Graveſend: Where they ſat upon the Conſervacy.

In the Year 1630, Sir Robert Ducie, Bar. Maior, and Conſervator of the River, ſet forth very good and ſeaſonable Orders, in eighteen Articles, for the Preſervation of the Brood and Fry of Fiſh in the River of Thames, on the Weſt part from the Bridge of London: Which remain to be ſeen in the City's Law.

An Order of the Court of Aldermen for the River, Lex Lond. p.222.

There were other Orders ſet forth by the Court of Aldermen in the Year 1673, upon the great Decay of the Fiſhing Trade, the drawing of the Shores being apprehended to be the great Cauſe thereof. Wherefore it was ſtrictly ordered, that none ſhould preſume to draw the Shores of the River Thames, upon any Pretence whatſoever, or at any Times, ſave only for Salmons, in Rooms appointed for that purpoſe by the Court of Aldermen. And that none thus fiſh for Salmon in theſe Rooms, but only ſuch as ſhould be empowered thereunto, under the Seal of the Maioralty of this City. And that none fiſh with a Net under ſix Inches in the Meaſh, under pain of Forfeiture of 20 l. beſides Impriſonment, and Loſs of his Net, for every Offence.

The Lord Maior Conſervator of the Thames.

The Right of the Thames to belong to the City, and of the Lord Maior to be Conſervator of it, is indubitable from ſundry ancient Charters, Acts of Parliament, Preſcriptions, Inquiſitions, and the like: as was learnedly ſhewn by Jones, Common Serjeant, at a Court of Conſervacy, Anno 1616. Which may be ſeen and read in the Chapter of the River of Thames, in the firſt Book. To all which may be added, a Part of King James the Firſt's Charter to the City: Where it is inſerted, ‘ That the Maior and Commonalty and Citizens, Time out of Memory of Man, have exerciſed the Office of Bailiff and Conſervation of the Water of Thames, to be exerciſed and occupied by the Maior for the time being, or by his ſufficient Deputies.

By-Laws made by the Company of Fiſhermen. R. B.

Laſtly, as an Appendix to this Court of Conſervacy, wherein ſuch care is taken for the Fiſh, let theſe By-Laws and Ordinances of the Company of Fiſhermen be added, made 1689.

At a Court of Aſſiſtants of the Company of Free FISHERMEN of the River of Thames, &c. held the 25th Day of October, 1689. the following By-Laws and Ordinances were ordered to be printed and publiſhed, to the end that all Perſons concerned therein, might take care to avoid incurring the ſeveral Penalties for Breach of the ſame: And to be obſerved in the Weſtern Parts of the River of Thames; that is to ſay, from London Mark-Stone, Weſtwards of Stains Bridge, to London Bridge.

IMprimis, To the end Unlawful Nets and Engines, and other Abuſes offered to the Prejudice and Deſtruction of the Fiſhery, may be diſcovered, it is ordained, That no Perſon uſing the Myſtery or Craft of a Fiſherman, do ſhute, ſet, or draw any Draw-Net, at any time of the Year, before Sun-riſing, or after Sun-ſetting, within the Bounds or Limits aforeſaid, upon Penalty of ten Pounds for every ſuch Offence.

2. Item, That no Perſon uſing the Art, Myſtery or Craft of a Fiſherman, ſhall, within the ſaid Bounds or Limits, ſtill lie or bend over any Net, during the time of Flood, whereby both Salmons, and other kind of Fiſh, may be hindered or kept back from ſwimming upwards, to the Benefit and Profit of ſuch Fiſhermen as dwell in the Weſt part of the ſaid River, upon Penalty of ten Pounds for every ſuch Offence.

3. Item, That no ſuch Perſon ſhall ſhute, or place, within the ſaid Bounds or Limits, any Draw-Net, Cod-Net, or other Net or Engine, whereby any Salmon ſhall be taken after Holy-Rood Day is paſt, being the 14th Day of September, and before St. Paul's Day, being the 25th of January. Becauſe at that Time they are out of Seaſon, and remain here upon the Rivers only to ſpawn and breed, upon the Penalty of ten Pounds for every ſuch Offence.

4. Item, That no ſuch Perſon, uſing the Art, Myſtery or Craft of a Fiſherman, ſhall, within the ſaid Bounds or Limits, fiſh with any Net, or lay or hale any Weel, or uſe any other Net or Engine whatſoever, from Sun-ſetting on Saturday Night, until Sun-riſing on Monday Morning, at any time of the Year, it being a Profanation of the Lord's Day, upon the Penalty of twenty Shillings for every ſuch Offence.

5. Item, That no Perſon uſing the Art, Myſtery or Craft of a Fiſherman, ſhall, within the ſaid Bounds or Limits, at any time hereafter, ſhip their Draw-Nets,called Shipping a-ſtern into their Boats, before ſuch time as they have laid forth all their whole Net, as they do when they land towards a low Water; nor ſhall they ſhip ſome part of their ſaid Net, and land the reſt, upon the like Forfeiture and Payment of ten Pounds for every ſuch Offence.

6. Item, That no Perſon uſing the Art, Myſtery or Craft of a Fiſherman, ſhall, within the ſaid Bounds or Limits, uſe any Spear, called an Eel-Spear, at any time. For that they are very great deſtroyers of Barbel, and other kinds of Fiſh; nor ſhall work any Blay-Net, or Rugg-Net, upon the ſaid Water Weſtwards, from the 10th day of March, until the 10th day of May yearly, from Brainford upwards; nor any Smelt-Net, until Holy Rood Day be paſt, upon the Forfeiture of twenty Shillings for every ſuch Offence.

7. Item, That no Perſon uſing the Art, Myſtery or Craft of a Fiſherman, ſhall, within the ſaid Bounds or Limits, at any time of the Year, uſe or exerciſe any Flue, Trammel, or doubled walled Net, or Hooped Net whatſoever, not being three Inches and a quarter broad, at the leaſt, in the Meiſh. For that they are not only the utter deſtruction of all breeding Barbels, but alſo a great Spoil and Hurt to other ſorts of the young Brood, Spawn and Fry of Fiſh, being with thoſe kind of Nets greatly deſtroyed, upon the Forfeiture of forty Shillings for every ſuch Offence.

8. Item, That no Perſon uſing the Art, Myſtery or Craft of a Fiſherman, ſhall, within the ſaid Bounds or Limits, lay, ſet or place any Weels called Kills, in any place of the River of Thames, from the 10th of March until the 10th of May yearly. For that all Roaches do then ſhed their Spawn, upon the like Forfeiture and Payment of twenty Shillings for every ſuch Offence.

9. Item, That no Perſon uſing the Art, Myſtery or Craft of a Fiſherman, ſhall uſe within the ſaid River of Thames any Weel, called a Lomb, or Millpot, or any other Engine, with the Head thereof againſt the Stream, upon pain of Forfeiture of twenty Shillings; nor ſhall uſe, exerciſe, or occupy upon the ſaid River of Thames, any Net called a Purſe-Net, otherwiſe a Caſting-Net, upon the like Forfeiture and Payment of forty Shillings for every ſuch Offence.

10. Item, That no Perſon uſing the Art, Myſtery or Craft of a Fiſherman, ſhall, within the ſaid Bounds or Limits, be ſuffered to rud for Flounders, either Ebb or by Flood, at any time of the Year, unleſs their Rud-Nets be full two Inches and three quarters broad in the Meiſh, for the Safeguard of the Fry, Spawn and Brood of Fiſh: and that no Flounders ſhall be taken or killed by any ſuch Perſon, under the Aſſize of ſix Inches in the Length, from white to white, (being the Subſtance of the Body, excluding the Tails:) and that no ſuch Perſon ſhall, within the ſaid Bounds or Limits, fleet with any Blay-Net, not being two Inches broad in the Meiſh, wet and dry, from the 24th of September till the 10th of March in every Year, upon the like Forfeiture and Payment of forty Shillings for every ſuch Offence.

11. Item, That no Perſon uſing the Art, Myſtery or Craft of a Fiſherman, ſhall, within the ſaid Bounds, fiſh with any kind of Net, or uſe any Angle-Rod with more than two Hooks upon a Line, or ſaw or ſcratch for Barbel; nor ſhall uſe any other Engine nearer unto London Bridge than St. Buttolphs Wharf, and the Bridge-houſe Wharf on the Eaſt ſide, or nearer unto the Weſt ſide than St. Mary Overy Stairs, and the Old Swan, upon Forfeiture of ſix Shillings and eight Pence for every ſuch Offence to the Company: and alſo, ſix Shillings and eight Pence to the Chamber of London, for every ſuch Offence, as hath been anciently accuſtomed within the ſaid City.

12. Item, That no Petermen ſhall at any time hereafter, fiſh or work with any manner of Smelt-Nets, upon the ſaid River of Thames Weſtward, further than Richmond Crane, (unto which Place, or near thereabouts, the Water ebbeth and floweth.) For that the fiſhing beyond that Place hath cauſed a great deſtruction of Fiſh. Upon pain of forfeiting twenty Shillings for every time he or they ſhall ſo offend.

13. Item, That no Peterman ſhall hereafter, at any time of the Year, take the Tides, nor Pouſe upon the whole River of Thames, it having been found very prejudicial both to the River and Fiſhermen, and nothing available towards the furniſhing of any Markets, upon Forfeiture of forty Shillings, by every Perſon that ſhall commit ſuch Offence.

14. Item, That no Peterman, or Perſon uſing the Art, Myſtery or Craft of a Fiſherman, ſhall take any ſort of Fiſh, which are uſually called Kettle-Fiſh, not being ſix Inches of Aſſize, upon Forfeiture of ten Shillings for every ſuch Offence.

15. Item, That whereas many Inconveniences have heretofore ariſen to the River of Thames, by divers Fiſhermen keeping of Boys, who were not ſufficient to take the charge of Fiſhing; therefore, from henceforth it ſhall not be lawful for any Fiſherman to keep two Perſons in one Boat, unleſs one of them be of Man's Eſtate, or be thought ſufficient to take the charge of Fiſhing, or that one of them be an Owner, upon Forfeiture of twenty Shillings for every Week he or they ſhall offend herein, &c.

There is ſtill one Court (and that a Court of eminent Note) held in the City, that remains to be declared; namely,]

The Court of the King's Commiſſion of the Peace, of Oyer and Terminer, and Goal-Delivery for Newgate.

The Court for Malefactors.

R. B.

THIS Court is called The King's Commiſſion on the Peace of Oyer and Terminer, and Goal-delivery of Newgate for the City of London and County of Middleſex. Which Court is held at Juſtice-Hall in the Old-Bailey, commonly call'd the Seſſions Houſe, and generally eight times or oftner every Year.

The Judges are the Lord Maior, the Recorder, and other of his Majeſty's Juſtices of the Peace of the City of London, the two Sheriffs of London being always preſent; and oftentimes the Judges (being always in theſe Commiſſions) come and ſit to give their Aſſiſtance.

The Jurors for all Matters committed in London, are Citizens of London, choſen out of ſuch Wards as are appointed for Juries according to the Months of the Year. And the Jurors for Crimes and Miſdemeanours committed in Middleſex, are Freeholders of the ſaid County, choſen out of the reſpective Hundreds in the ſaid County.

In this Court are heard and determined all ſuch Crimes and Miſdemeanours as extend to Loſs of Life, Corporeal Puniſhment, Fine, Amercement, &c. of which theſe following are the chief, viz. High Treaſon, Petty Treaſon, Murther, Felony, Burglary, Forgery, &c. Now to declare what theſe Crimes are, and to ſhew the Puniſhments to be inflicted upon any Perſon or Perſons guilty of any of them, by the Laws of this Realm.

HIGH TREASON.

NOTWITHSTANDING that ſome High Treaſons are much more odious and heinous than others; yet the Puniſhment (according to our Law) is the ſame for all ſorts (Coining of Money excepted.) And that Law is,

The Death inflicted for High Treaſon.

That the Traitor is to be taken from the Priſon, and laid upon a Sledge, or Hurdle, and drawn to the Gallows, or Place of Execution, and there hanged by the Neck until he be half dead, and then cut down; his Entrails to be cut out of his Body, and burnt by the Executioner; then his Head is to be cut off, his Body to be divided into Quarters; and afterwards his Head and Quarters are to be ſet up in ſome open Places directed; which uſually are on the City Gates, on London Bridge, or upon Weſtminſter Hall. And to render the Crime more terrible to the Spectators, the Hangman, when he takes out the Heart, ſhews it the People, and ſays, Here is the Heart of a Traitor.

Moreover, beſides this Death, he doth forfeit all his Lands and Goods to the King, his Wife to loſe her Dower, his Children their Inheritance, and all their Part or Pretences to his Eſtate; and if he be a Perſon of any Degree of Honour, his Children are deprived of the ſaid Hereditary Honour. But Noblemen are not ſo ſeverely ſerved, as to have their Quarters and Heads ſet up; but by the King's Grace they are generally Beheaded only. The like Favour is oft ſhewed to Gentry of Quality.

For Coining of Money, the Puniſhment anciently was, and ſtill is, Drawing, Hanging, and for the moſt part Quartering.

PETTY TREASON.

PETTY TREASON is, when a Servant kills his Maſter or Miſtreſs, a Wife her Husband, a Clergyman his Prelate to whom he oweth Obedience. The Puniſhment for this Crime is to be drawn on a Sledge, as before, to the Place of Execution, and there to be hanged by the Neck until dead. The Puniſhment for a Woman convicted either for High Treaſon or Petty Treaſon, is to be drawn to the Place of Execution, and there to be bound to a Stake, with Faggots and combuſtible Stuff ſet about her, and ſet on fire, and ſo burnt.

Death for Petty Treaſon.

FELONIES.

Degrees of Felony.

FELONIES are of divers kinds: For any Offence that is a Degree next to Petty Treaſon, is accounted Felony; as Theft, Burglary, Sodomy, Rape, wilful Burning of Houſes, &c. For which, until the Reign of King Henry I. there were ſeveral ſorts of Puniſhments; but it was then ordained, that the Puniſhment for all Felonies ſhould be Hanging by the Neck until dead, as at preſent.

MURTHER. MANSLAUGHTER.

THIS is a high Crime, but yet the Death is but Hanging, as aforeſaid. But this Crime hath often too much Favour, by the frequent bringing in the Criminals guilty only of Manſlaughter; as, that he killed the other in his own Defence, or upon a ſudden Quarrel, and in Heat of Blood, without Malice prepenſe, or the like. And for this Crime of Manſlaughter, Burning in the Hand is the Puniſhment. But Duelling, if proved a Duel, is Death; and yet by Interceſſion with the Prince, this Crime ſometimes gets a Pardon: But if ſo, an Appeal may be brought, and the Criminal tried again, and then hanged. And this is ſometimes done.

Manſlaughter.

Note, That if a Peer of the Realm commit High Treaſon, Petty Treaſon, or Felony, altho' his Sentence for Death be the ſame with that of a common Perſon; yet the Prince doth uſually extend his Favour to ſuch ſo far, as to cauſe them to be beheaded with an Ax.

The Death for a Peer.

Note alſo, That if a Criminal indicted of Petty Treaſon or Felony, refuſe to plead to his Indictment, or to put himſelf upon a legal Trial; then for ſuch a Refuſal, he is ordered to be ſent to undergo that painful Death called Paine forte & dure, which with us is called Preſſing, which is thus executed: The Criminal is ſent back to the Priſon whence he came, and there laid in ſome low dark Room, upon the bare Ground on his Back, all naked, except his Privy Parts, his Arms and Legs drawn with Cords faſtened to the ſeveral Parts of the Room; and then there is laid on his Body, Iron, Stone, or Lead, ſo much as he can bear; the next Day he ſhall have three Morſels of Barley Bread, without Drink; and the third Day ſhall have to drink ſome of the Kennel Water with Bread. And this Method is in Strictneſs to be obſerved until he is dead.

Preſſing to Death for thoſe that will not plead.

This grievous kind of Death, ſome ſtout and reſolute Men have ſometimes undergone, but rarely. And if in caſe the Criminal can undergo ſuch a Death, then he ſaves his Eſtate for his Wife, Children, or Relations, nor is he attainted.

But if it be in caſe of High Treaſon, then his not pleading, ſignifieth nothing, and he forfeits Eſtate and Honour.

After Beheading or Hanging, the Criminal's Friends uſually interr the dead Body decently and where they pleaſe: But if the Crime be very heinous, as for Robbing and Murthering, then by Order the Criminal is hanged in the Place near the Fact done; and afterwards his Body is hanged in Chains in ſome public Road, or near the Place where the Crime was committed, until it rot. And in ſome caſes his Right Hand is firſt cut off, and then hanged. In all ſuch Felonies where the Benefit of the Clergy is allowed (as it is in many) there the Criminal is to be marked with a hot Iron on the thick or brawny part of the inſide of the Left Hand, with a T for Theft; and if for Manſlaughter, with M. But wandring Rogues and Vagabonds are burned with an R. And of late Years the Parliament did make an Act for Shop-lifters, and notorious Perſons, whoſe Crimes did not deſerve Death, to be burnt in the Cheek near the Eye.

Burning in the Hand;

Or Cheek.

PETTY LARCENY.

THIS is ſmall Theft, and of Things of a low Value, not exceeding 12 d. The Puniſhment was anciently ſometimes the Loſs of an Ear, ſometimes by Cudgelling, or the like; but ſince Edward the Third, by Whipping; the Criminal being tied by the Hands to the Tail of a Cart, and ſtripped naked to the Waiſt, whether Man or Woman; ſo following the Cart by or near the Place where the Felony was committed, and is laſhed with a Whip of four, five, or ſix Cords knitted, by one that follows the Cart for that purpoſe.

Whipping at the Cart's Tail.

PERJURY.

THIS is bearing of falſe Witneſs upon Oath before a Court of Judicature, or before Magiſtrates impower'd to take an Oath; as Maſters in Chancery, Juſtices of the Peace, and the like. The Puniſhment is the Pillory, with the Head put into it; but ſometimes only ſtanding upon the Pillory for an Hour's Space in Public Places; as the Royal Exchange, Temple Bar, the Maypole in the Strand, againſt Weſtminſter Hall, or near the Place where the Party injured reſides, or deſires he ſhould ſtand. By the Law, the Criminals ſometimes have their Necks put into the Pillory, and their Ears being nailed to it, to be cut off; ſometimes burnt with a P for Perjury. And the Trees growing upon his Ground, if he had any, were rooted up, and his Goods confiſcated.

FORGERY, CHEATING, LIBELLING, FALSE WEIGHTS and MEASURES, Offences in BAKERS, BREWERS, &c.

THESE Offences are commonly puniſhed by ſtanding on the Pillory, and ſometimes to have one or both Ears nailed to the Pillory, and cut off; or for Blaſphemy or the like, to be whipped to and from the Pillory, and whilſt they are in the Pillory, to have their Tongues bored thro' with a hot Iron.

The Priſon for theſe Criminals, and ſuch like Malefactors, is Newgate]

The Harm of Reprieves for Malefactors condemned. J. S.

The Executions of Malefactors, however they are done monthly (a Month ſeldom failing throughout the Year, but ſeveral ignominiouſly end their Lives at Tyburn) do not reſtrain wicked Men and Women from committing their Thefts, Burglaries, Murthers, and Felonies One Cauſe whereof are the Reprieves the Condemned do ſo frequently obtain. Which both encourage Sinners to go on in their evil Courſes, and hinder the Confeſſions of their Acceſſaries, and the ſincere Repentances which otherwiſe they would make. As the late Ordinary of Newgate obſerved in one of his Execution Papers in the Month of October, Anno 1705, concerning one Richard Lewis, a Butcher, condemned for Robbery: That one thing that made him backward to prepare for Death was, that a certain Perſon offered to uſe his Intereſt to get him a Reprieve. And for that received two Guineas and an half Guinea, and one Crown Piece; beſides a Guinea ſpent upon his Friends in Wine, and ſuch like Treat: And a Note alſo given him to pay him ten Guineas more when the thing was effected. And yet the Perſon, deſirous of more Ready Money, did to that purpoſe write to Lewis ſome Letters. And this was the Tranſcript of one of them.

“I have been at the Secretary's Office twice, “to know the iſſue of what I have been about, “but could get nothing more than what was told “me before; That what I had left, ſhould be “look'd into, and if things appear as I have un“dertaken to make them appear, I ſhould have “a Reprieve—— It coſt me more than what I “have had from you; and I expect more to“wards what Expences I may be at. And when “you have ſupplied me, I ſhall go and know “what muſt be depended on.

Pleas of the Crown held at the Tower anciently. J. S.

These Commiſſions of Oyer and Terminer afford great Eaſe and Commodity to the City: Whereas in former times the Kings of England appointed not the Maior, Recorder, &c. to be Judges of Miſdemeanors againſt the King within the City, at monthly Seſſions, but Judges Itinerants at the Tower, to ſit on the Pleas of the Crown now and then, at uncertain times, when the King was minded to ſqueeze, or humble the City. And when they came, they proceeded with ſuch Rigour in their Inquiſitions againſt the City, that the Citizens were often fined ſeverely, and ſometimes impriſoned, and ſometimes the City's Charter was ſeiſed into the King's hands: Which proved ſo burthenſome unto the City, that they at laſt got theſe Itineraries ſuperſeded by Act of Parliament, and the preſent Practice of holding the Commiſſions in the Old Baily by themſelves, eſtabliſhed in the room.

It may not be amiſs, to ſhew ſomething of the Manner and Practice of theſe Pleas of the Crown antiently by the ſaid Judges Itinerants, to ſhew how Matters ſtood with the City in former Days.

The Manner and Order thereof in reſpect of the Citizens. Lib. Alb. f. 16.

There is a Tract in the Cuſtody of the Town Clerk of London, with this Title, The Manner and Order how the Barons and the reſt of the Commonalty of the City ought to behave and carry themſelves towards the King and his Juſtices at the time, wherein it ſhould pleaſe the King to hold the Pleas of the Crown at the Tower, concerning Attachments, Accidents of Murder, &c. Some Collections out of which are as follow: as I tranſlate it from the Latin.

Magnates, &c. i. e. The great Men and the diſcreeter ſort of the City, were wont to meet in a certain convenient place, to pacify Angers, Rancors and Diſcords, which had before ariſen in the City. That ſo by renewing Peace and Amity among them, they might be in Will and Act as one Man and one People, ſave themſelves harmleſs, and their Cuſtoms and Liberties.

If by ſome Chance any made Diſturbance in the City, and diſquieted the Citizens, he was to be reckoned, among his Fellow Citizens, a public Enemy, and as well he, as his Heirs, were to be deprived of the City for ever. And that becauſe by reaſon of ſuch a turbulent Citizen, the King might take into his hands the City and Liberties, to the Grievance and Detriment of the whole City.

The King ſometimes ſent his Letters to ſummon the Attachments of his Crown. But if it happened that the Day of the Summons preſcribed, was dated to a leſs Term than to that of forty Days, then diſcreet and ſolemn Men were ſent, to ſhew the King and his Council that he would give them another Day; becauſe, according to their old Liberties and Cuſtoms, they ought not to be ſummoned to ſuch Attachments to a leſs Term than forty Days at leaſt.

When they received Commandment (the Liberties of the City being ſafe) to ſhew and plead the ſaid Attachments, Accidents of Death, &c. then all the Aldermen made all the Rolls through each Ward; wherein were contained Pledges and Attachments belonging to the Crown, to inſtruct and warn the Neighbours to meet at the Day appointed at Berking Cherche, and thence to go to the Tower of London, that they might anſwer diſcreetly and providently to the King and his Juſtices, of thoſe things that would be objected to them.

On the Day of making theſe Pleas of the Crown, the Cuſtom was, that early in the Morning, all the Laity of the City came together to Berking Cherche, and thence, all being decently and well clad, entred into the Tower; and while theſe Pleas laſted, no Sheds, Shops, Cellar, Solar, [or Chamber] wherein ſaleable things were either ſold or made, were opened.

The ſame Day, from the Common Council of the City, were ſent forth out of Berking Cherche, ſix or more of the more ſolemn, worſhipful, and diſcreet Barons of the City, who ſhould go into the Tower to our Lord King, and his Council and Juſtices, on the behalf of the City, to ſalute and welcome them; praying them, that if it pleaſed the King, they might appear before them in the ſaid Tower without Danger, and to keep to the Maior and the reſt of the Citizens, their Liberties and Cuſtoms ſafe: Becauſe the King and all his Predeceſſors Kings of England, and their Juſtices always preſerved to all the Citizens, their Liberties and Cuſtoms ſafe and indemnified.

The ſame Men alſo ſhewed to the King, his Council and Juſtices, that they forbid on the behalf of the King, that none preſume to keep the Gates and Doors but ſome of their Fellow Citizens, and ſuch as ſhould be deputed by them for this purpoſe: Nor any Marſhal or Cryer appear among their Fellow Citizen, unleſs of themſelves, and by the Will of the Citizens. Becauſe according to the Liberty of the City, they ought to have no Porter, Door-keeper, Marſhal or Cryer; nor were accuſtomed to have, unleſs of themſelves, and ſuch as pleaſed them. That all the Gates and Doors ſtand open to the Barons and to all the Citizens; becauſe the Pleas of the Crown were held; and that they might have free Ingreſs and Egreſs.

Then three diſcreet and moderate Men were choſen. One whereof repreſented in Order to the King, his Council and Juſtices, the Chances and Miſchances belonging to the Crown happening in the City, from the time wherein the old Pleas were laſt pleaded unto this time. The other two ſtood by the ſaid Preſenter, one on his Right and the other on his Left; that if he happened to be tired in repreſenting, the other might go on in making the Preſentments. And if perhaps he that preſented miſtook, he might in ſilence be rectified by the two ſtanding by; ſo that none elſe might by any means preſume to diſturb or correct the Preſenter.

No Tumult, Muttering, Chiding, or Talking together was to be heard among the People, as long as theſe things were preſenting; but all keep themſelves in Peace, as they tendred the Honour and Liberty of the City; and that the Preſenter be heard by all, and underſtood in Peace.

Whatſoever Matters were objected againſt the Barons and City, they anſwered nothing on the ſudden, altho' they were well inſtructed and certified to anſwer; but conſulting and diſcourſing together, they anſwer by the Common Council, ſaving the Liberties of the City. And to frame theſe Anſwers, twenty four or more were choſen out of the Common Council, who preſently went to the Common Council of the City, for the Safety and Defence of the whole City.

After the King's Juſtices had ſhewn and delivered to the Maior and Barons, Chapters [or Articles] of the Crown, they preſently required a competent Day to provide themſelves and conſult together, that they might give an Anſwer ſafely to the ſaid Chapters at the Day granted them by the Juſtices; and in the mean time diſcreetly to enrol thoſe Chapters and their Anſwers.

Out of the number of the four and twenty, or more beforementioned, four or more were provided and joined with the Maior, chiefly to make Anſwers to the Objections and the Chapters. And the Maior's Clerk, together with the Common Clerk of the City, and the Sheriff's Clerks ſat before them to note memoriter all the Matters objected; leſt for want of noting, they might be forgotten. And one was Protonotator, from whoſe Note all the reſt took each his Copy of Writing; as well the King's Objections, as the Commonalty's Anſwers.

The Sheriffs had their Servants preſent, and the Aldermen the Beadles of their Wards, decently and handſomely habited and ſhod, ready at hand to perform the Commands of the Maior and Barons of the City, and putting off their Caps and their Cloaks, to walk reſpectfully in their Coats and upper Coats, carrying ſtrait white Rods in their Hands. Of theſe, four were aſſigned to keep the Doors and Gates; and two Cryers and others were Marſhals, to perform what ſhould be injoined them.

According to the ancient Cuſtoms and Liberties of the City, there were three Purgations in the Pleas of the Crown, whereby ſuch as were called in and accuſed, might acquit themſelves. The firſt was De Morte, of Death or Murder. The ſecond De Maihemia, of Maiming. The third Purgation was De Inſultis, Baculis, Toſtis, Vulnerationibus, &c. of Aſſaults, Battery with Staves, Burnings, Woundings, and ſuch like Injuries done in the time of the Lord's Nativity, or in Eaſter and Whitſun Weeks.

As for him that would purge himſelf by the firſt, called The Great Law, the Appealed and Accuſed made ſix Oaths in his own Perſon, that he was innocent of Felony and breaking the King's Peace, and of the whole Crime laid upon him: And ſo let God help him and thoſe holy things. After that, ſix Men were to ſwear, that the other ſwore a ſound and ſafe Oath, according to their Conſciences and Underſtandings; and God help them, &c. And this Order was to be continued to the number of thirty ſix Men compleat. So that firſt the Accuſed ſwore, and then after him the ſix Men, until the Number above noted were full.

For the chuſing of the thirty ſix Men, the Accuſed choſe eighteen Men on the Eaſt ſide of Walbrook, and eighteen on the Weſt ſide; and they not of his Kin, or any way related to him by Marriage or otherwiſe.

He that was accuſed of Maiming, took three Oaths in his own Perſon, that he was free and innocent of Felony or Breaking the King's Peace. And then ſix Men ſwore, that he made a juſt and true Oath; according to their Conſciences and Underſtandings. And this Order was continued to the number of eighteen.

He that was accuſed of Aſſault, Battery, Burning, Wounding, Blows, Bloodſhedding, and other Injuries done at the Holy Times before mentioned, made an Oath in his own Perſon, as before. After him ſix Men ſwore as before, who were choſen out of the Neighbourhood, where he dwelt.

To obtain the Favour and Benevolence of the King and his Juſtices in theſe Pleas of the Crown, the Anceſtors of the Barons and Citizens beſtowed abundance of Gifts and Preſents upon them and their Clerks. It was impoſſible for the Barons and all the Citizens otherwiſe to paſs in thoſe Pleas elſewhere than through the King's Hand and of his Juſtices. Therefore they thought it no Diſgrace or Shame to do as thoſe did, who manfully and ſtrenuouſly governed and defended the City and its Liberties in the Times before them. And they thought it beneficial for them to do the ſame that they did, leſt by the Objections of them [viz. the King's Juſtices and their Clerks] the Citizens ſhould be brought into Law and Trouble.

In caſe it were demanded of the Maior and Barons of the City, who were the Preſenters and Finders of Perſons ſlain, of Murders, or other Miſchances, they were to anſwer from the Common Council, after this manner: That although the uſe of the Kingdom were ſuch out of the City, any one is eſteemed in London the Preſenter or Finder of ſuch Preſcripts, according to the ancient Cuſtom and Liberty of the City. For in ſo populous a City, ſuch Emergencies can by no means be concealed: Becauſe, before it hath been intimated to the Bailiffs, things are divulged through the Compaſs of the City. And therefore no ſuch is had, or is wont to be had, in the City, unleſs only a common Report of the People of the City.

Pleas of the Crown held divers times under King Hen. 3. Lib. Alb.

In the fifth Year of King Henry III. were theſe Pleas of the Crown held at the Tower before Hubert de Burgo and his Fellows, Juſtices: When many nice and captious Queſtions were put to the Citizens to anſwer. The firſt of all theſe Queſtions was, How Archbiſhops, Biſhops, Earls, and Barons, and others that have Rents in London, of certain Tenements, and cannot have their Rents, how they ſhall recover them, &c. All theſe Queſtions, with their Anſwers, were enrolled in the Tower, in the 15th of the ſame King, before the ſame Hubert, when there was another Itinerary. Again, the Pleas of the City of London were again held the 28th of the ſame King Henry, Son of King John, at the Tower, before William de Eboraco, Provoſt of Beverly, Jeremy of Caxton, and Henry of Bath. Which held from Eaſter Day for fifteen Days together. There had been no Pleas of London pleaded for eighteen Years paſt. It was then granted to the Barons of London, that as ſoon as they ought to begin to plead, they have, without the Gate of the Tower of London, their own Doorkeeper; and the Porter of the Lord the King to be within Doors: and that they have likewiſe their own Doorkeepeer without the Hall Door, when they are to plead, to bring in the Barons and others of the City, who were to plead, and of whom they have Knowlege: and that the Doorkeeper of the Lord the King be within: and that they have their own Serjeants with their Rods.

What was done by the King's Juſtices, 28 H. 3. Anno 1244.

It is worth ſeeing what was done at this ſitting of the aboveſaid Juſtices Itinerants at the Tower. Firſt, they delivered to the Maior, &c. Chapters concerning what they were to anſwer concerning the Pleas of the Crown. And here were terrible Retroſpections, and Matters long before paſt and gone, now called to Account. For the old Pleas of the Crown, which had been at another time before the King's Juſtices, and not determined, which were many, were all called over again; as well as the new Pleas of the Crown, which afterwards aroſe in Time of Peace. Pleas were alſo had of thoſe which were in the King's Mercy, (that is, ſubject to Forfeitures) and which were not: of Dues to King John, the Father of the Lord the King; due both before the War, and after; (and that was a long time before,) and who were the Debtors; and if dead, who their Heirs. Again, Pleas of thoſe who within the Liberty of the City, had maliciouſly thrown down ſome Mens Houſes, or burnt them, againſt the King's Peace: Who they were, and whoſe Houſes they were. And if they made Peace together without the King's Licenſe. Pleas of Valets and Boys, who are and ought to be in Cuſtody of the King: Whether they were married, or to be married: And if married, To whom? Of the Services of the Lord the King, what they are, and who holds them. Of Churches; what they are, and ought to be, of the King's Donation. Of the Eſcheats of the Jews; as well of the Tenements of the Jews as Chriſtians: and who holds them. Of Purpreſtures made upon the King, either on Land or Water, &c. And a great many more Enquiries concerning their Pleas.

Concerning theſe, if it might be proved, that it was not ſo uſed in the Times of former Kings, all the Barons were in the King's Mercy; that is, at his Mercy to fine them as he pleaſed. And ſo the Chapters were delivered them.

The third Day, according to the Cuſtom, the Barons came and anſwered. And Simon Fitzmary [one of the Aldermen] came and offered to the Lord the King an hundred Marks; ſo that the Pleas of the City might be held and pleaded as they were pleaded in the Time of King Richard and King John. And they were admitted. And he [Simon Fitzmary] putteth all his Goods in Pledge of the ſaid hundred Marks.

Then came the Maior; and he and the Aldermen anſwered concerning the old Pleas of the Crown before mentioned.

The Kings of England would ſometimes ſend their Juſtices to ſit upon theſe Pleas of the Crown, in ſome Diſpleaſure conceived againſt the City, or ſome of its Members. And the Juſtices would be very captious in watching for Advantages to mulct or impriſon them, or to take away the Charter.

Citizens ſpeak home for their Liberties.

And the Citizens in inſiſting upon their Liberties, would ſometimes ſpeak ſo plain, that it drew them into Danger, and their Liberties too. As it happened at the ſaid Pleas of the Crown 28 Hen. III. when one John de Coudres, [ſome public Officer, as it ſeems, of the City] had ſaid before the King's Juſtices, That the Liberties of the City, and the Life and Limbs of the Citizens, [which related to the Pleas of the Crown] ought to be equally regarded. The Juſtices concluded, that the King muſt be ſpoke with upon this. And he was arreſted by the King's Commandment at the Tower of London. After, at the Petition of the Citizens, the King delivered the ſaid John to them by Bail, under Danger of all their Liberties that they had, to have him before the King at his Pleaſure; thence to anſwer to our Lord the King. And ſo he was ſet at Liberty.]

Laws, Cuſtoms and Privileges. J. S.

ALTHO' under the Conſideration of the ſeveral Courts, divers Laws and Cuſtoms of the City, and Privileges and Immunities of its Magiſtrates and Members have been remembred; yet for a further and larger Declaration of them, I have ſet apart this Chapter: wherein perhaps a better Order might be required, in the ſetting them down, than will here appear: But conſidering to how many and ſundry things they relate, and how they were taken up here and there, as they could be met withal, any one ſees how difficult it is to write very methodically.

Whereon founded.

Some of theſe Laws and Practices of the City are founded upon ancient Uſage, and Acts of the City itſelf, and ſome upon Acts of Parliament, as may be obſerved by the Matters hereafter related.

Privileges of the L. Maior. Lex Londin.

Firſt, to mention a Privilege or two of the chief Magiſtrates of London, beſides what hath been ſhewn thereof already. The Lord Maior, for the time being, may cauſe any Perſon inhabiting within London, or the Liberties, to be ſummoned to appear before him, upon the Complaint of any Citizen; and for Non-appearance, may grant his Warrant to bring ſuch Perſon before him. And then (which is more than other Juſtices of the Peace can do) he hath Power to hear and determine the Differences ariſing between them.

If any Apprentice, or other Perſon, ſhall be carried from the City on Shipboard, or there detained againſt his Will, the Maior may ſend his Warrant by his Water Bailiff, and compel the Captain or Commander of the Veſſel to releaſe ſuch Perſon.

The Maior hath Power to grant a Warrant, by way of Certificate, to all Chriſtian People throughout England, in behalf of any Citizen of London, that he may freely uſe Commerce, buy and ſell any manner of Goods, whereſoever he ſhall come, without all manner of Toll, Let or Hinderance.

Privilege for Veniſon, granted to the Maior.

The Kings of England from ancient Times, granted unto the Lord Maior of London yearly, certain Warrants for Bucks. And ſo Queen Elizabeth granted. Which they had, in reſpect of their Privileges, granted to the City to hunt in all Foreſts, Parks and Chaces within the County of Middleſex. And accordingly, Sir John Langley, Maior, July 4, 1577, wrote a Letter to the Lord Treaſurer, in his own Name, and the Name of his Brethren, that he would move her Majeſty herein, as ſhe and her Progenitors anciently had been accuſtomed to grant yearly. And the Common Hunt was the Bearer of this Letter, and appointed to attend upon him for the ſame.

A Maior refuſeth to ſtand before the King's great Officer.

And ſuch an high Authority doth he bear within the City, that in former Times the Maior of London thought it not his Duty to ſtand before the higheſt Officer of the King, within the City's Juriſdiction. And in matter of Precedency, or taking Place, he would not give way to any Nobleman. As appears by theſe two remarkable Inſtances. The Lord Treaſurer Anno 1285, or thereabouts, had ſummoned Sir Gregory de Rokeſley, Maior, with the Aldermen and Citizens, to the Tower, to make Inquiſition, how the King's Peace had been kept in the City. But the Maior refuſed to go in the Quality of Maior. Therefore at Berkin Church he laid aſide his Maioralty, and committed his Office to one Aſly, and ſo went unto the Tower as an Alderman, or Commoner, upon the ſaid Summons. For which he was impriſoned, and many other Citizens at that Time. And the King [Edward I.] upon this, took away the City's Privilege to chuſe their Maior, and ſet over them a Cuſtos of his own making: with what Juſtice, I do not diſpute.

Lord Maior's Precedency.

Stow, 'Farringdon Ward.

And at the Serjeants Feaſt in Ely Place, Anno 1464, Matthew Philip Maior, and the Aldermen, and many Citizens, being invited to the Feaſt by the Serjeants, the Lord Grey of Ruthen, Lord Treaſurer, was ſeated above him: Whereat the Maior, Aldermen, and the reſt of the Commoners left the Place, would not ſtay, but departed home. And the Maior invited the Aldermen that Day to dine with him. And all the Citizens were wonderfully diſpleaſed.

The Precedency of an Alderman Knight.

An Alderman a Knight, may take Place of a Commoner Knight. In the beginning of King James the Firſt's Reign, a Conteſt happened in the City for Precedency. The Commoners being Knights, would take Place of other Knights, tho' they were Aldermen, if the Commoners were Knighted before them. The Aldermen that were Knights, tho' Knighted after them, nay, tho' they were not Knights at all, ſtood for Precedency as Aldermen, before all Commoners Knights. One of the chief Knights Commoners at this Time was Sir Baptiſt Hickes, a Mercer in Cheapſide: who had been often burſtling, he and his Wife, about this Ceremony; the Aldermen Knights, and their Wives, ſtriving for Precedency; and Sir Baptiſt and his Lady ſometimes, for Peace ſake, granting it. Sir Baptiſt kept his Shop after he was Knighted: which was looked upon as ſome Diſparagement to him; it not being uſual, as it ſeems, in thoſe Times, after Knighthood, to keep their Trade going. And this the Aldermen gave a Fling at, in their Petition to the King. For at laſt the Buſineſs came to this Upſhot, that they preferred a Petition to the King, for his Determination of this Matter, which was in the Year 1607. Which Petition was to this Tenor:

Petition of the Maior and Aldermen Knights, to decide the Precedency.

To the KING's moſt Excellent Majeſty.

The Humble Petition of the Maior, Knights and Aldermen of Your Honourable City and Chamber of LONDON.

Shewing,

'THAT whereas it hath pleaſed Your moſt ' Excellent Majeſty, of your Princely Favour, ' both at your Majeſty's Coronation, and ' ſithence, to dignify your Suppliants with the ‘ Degree of Knighthood, as alſo certain Commoners, yet keeping Shops, and continuing their Trades within this City: And foraſmuch as ſome of thoſe Knights Commoners do pretend a Priority before ſome of your Suppliants later Knighted, and ſtand with them in Contention for Place and Superiority in Precedency at public Meetings, even in their own Wards and Juriſdictions, contrary to the moſt ſeemly and beautiful Order of the ſaid City;

‘ Your Suppliants moſt humbly beſeech, that your Majeſty will be pleaſed to recommend the judicial Hearing and Determination of this Difference unto the Right Honourable the Lords in Commiſſion for the Office of Earl Marſhal of England; To the end, that the ancient Magiſtracy, which is derived and held from your Majeſty's ſupreme Authority, together with their ancient Cuſtoms and Privileges, being rightly underſtood, their Lordſhips may take ſuch Order therein, as your Highneſs be no further troubled herewith, nor the ſettled Order of the City's quiet Government, hereafter prejudiced nor diſturbed.

This was accordingly referred to the Court Marſhal. For under the Petition it was thus writ:

At the Court at Newmarket, 12 Mar. 1607.

‘ HIS Majeſty having a gracious Reſpect to the Lord Maior and Aldermen of his Highneſs City of London, is pleaſed to refer the Conſideration of this Petition unto the Lords Commiſſioners for the Office of Earl Marſhal of England; to the end, that ſuch Order may be ſet down in the Differences mentioned in this Petition touching Precedency, as ſhall be convenient for the Preſervation of the Credit of ſuch as, under his Highneſs, have Authority in the Government of the City.

The chief of theſe Commiſſioners was the Earl of Northampton.

The Caſe argued before a Court Marſhal.

What the Iſſue was, I proceed to tell. When the Caſe was heard before the Court Marſhal, the City aſſigned theſe Reaſons for their Knights Aldermen to take Precedency of any Knights Bachelors elſe: nay, and for Aldermen, tho' not of the Degree of Knights, to do the ſame.

The City of London, they argued, was a Corporation priviledged from much of the ordinary Courſe held throughout the Kingdom; and endued with many Liberties and Immunities, firſt granted thro' ſpecial Favour of the Kings of this Realm; and afterwards confirmed by divers Acts of Parliament: as aiming at the Benefit and Honour of the State. Which the Induſtry and Loyalty of the Inhabitants hath ſo well anſwered, that the Place hath thereby gained the Name of the King's Chamber.

Maior.

Aldermen.

That the Government of this City depended chiefly upon the Maior, as the King's Lieutenant. And ſecondarily, upon the Aldermen, as ſubordinate Magiſtrates, to govern the ſeveral Diviſions or Wards of the ſame. Whereof by like Authority, granted from Sovereign Majeſties, they were made Keepers. And to theſe Aldermen was left the Rule of the Inhabitants, reſiding in the ſame: which were known by the Name of the Commons of the City.

Commons.

That the Body of the Commons was divided into Guilds or Companies: which were anciently ranked in Degrees of Priority or Precedency, according to the Worthineſs of their Trades or Myſteries. And the Brethren of every Guild had their Places in the Company, either according to their Seniority, or as they held Offices in the ſame. Moreover, every Citizen knew his Place, not only in his Company, but alſo cæteris paribus, in reſpect of ſuch as were of other Companies. Which was not the leaſt Part of the Policy of this City.

That the Queſtion now was, whether a Common dignified with Knighthood, without any other Advantage of Honour, by Employment or otherwiſe, and uſing Trade and keeping Shop in the City, ſhould take Place of an Alderman Knight within the ſame City, contrary to this beautified Order, of ancient Time ſettled and confirmed, with ſuch Charters and Grants from his Majeſty. Or whether any other Bachelor Knight ſhall take Place of any Alderman within the City.

Honour, the End of it.

That in the Negative it may be thus argued. HONOUR is given to aſſiſt Government, not to derogate from it, or to diminiſh it. But if a Commoner Knight have Precedency of an Alderman in the Place of his Authority, it doth in ſome manner ſhadow and eclipſe his Authority and Government. He that hath Power upon juſt Occaſion to command, hath Precedency of him that is ſubject to that Command, in the ſame Place where he commandeth. But an Alderman hath Power, upon juſt Occaſion, to convent the Commoner within his Ward, notwithſtanding his Knighthood. Ergo, he hath Precedency before him in that Place.

A leſs Good in the State, is not admitted to prejudice a greater Good. But if a private Knight ſhall take Place of an Alderman, and conſequently prejudice Magiſtracy, and diminiſh the Honour of the City, a leſſer Good doth hinder a greater Good. Ergo,

That in the Court of Pleas of Law holden in Guild-Hall, pro Domino Rege, the Aldermen are Judges. And in that regard, they wear their Scarlet Robes. But Judges have Precedence of others within their Circuit. Ergo, Precedents for it.

Neither hath it in former Times been queſtioned, whether an Alderman ſhall take Place of a Commoner Knight. For it appeared by ancient Journals, or Repertories of the City, (wherein every Man is regiſtred according to his Place of Precedence) that an Alderman Knighted took his Place according to his Seniority among the Aldermen, and not as he was a Knight. Ergo a fortiori, a Commoner Knight is not to take Place of an Alderman within the City. For the Record ſtands thus.

Commune Concilium tent. undecimo die Julij, Anno Regni Regis Edwardi Sexti, Dei gratia, Angliæ, &c. tertio, coram Henrico Amcotes, Mil' Majore, Rob. Brook, Recordatore, Armigero, Rad. Lamberd, Wil. Gerrard, Stephan. Kirton, ac Wil. Lock, Milite, Aldermannis, Vicecom. ac majore parte Communariorum de Communi Concilio Civitat. predict. exiſtent.

And for their Place without the City, the Record of primo Hen. VIII. Jennyngs Maior, concerning the Funeral of Henry VII. is extant, in this manner:

‘ And upon the next Day then following, the Maior and Aldermen, with all ſuch Perſons as have been afore appointed to ride in Black, ſhall go by Water in Barges to Weſtminſter, there to be preſent at Maſs and Offering.—— The Maior, with his Mace in his Hand, offered next after the Lord Chamberlain. The Aldermen Barons, and repreſenting Barons Eſtate, which have been Maiors, offered next to the Knights of the Garter, and before all the 'Knights of the Body. Next after thoſe Knights, all the Aldermen that have not been Maiors.

This Precedency not always.

This was the Aldermens Plea. But thoſe on the other Side, in the behalf of Sir Baptiſt urged, that this Difference about Precedency had been ſtarted by the Pride of the Citizens, and their Wives. For before, whatſoever was pretended, a Knight took Place by Antienty of Dubbing. And ſo the Heralds directed. And Sir Baptiſt Hickes, in a Letter to his Brother Sir Michael Hickes of the Court, written upon this Occaſion, tells him, That after he was Knighted, he preſently went to the chiefeſt of the Heralds, to be informed by him, what his Place of Precedency was, in caſe he ſhould meet with ſome Aldermen, later Knighted than himſelf in London; and then he had it under that Herald's Hand, that he was to take Place of them according to the Antienty of Knighthood. He writes likewiſe in the ſame Letter, That before that Time never any Alderman made Queſtion to take Place of a Knight: And that he well remembred, that [in Queen Elizabeth's Reign] Sir Rowland Hayward, who was (as he ſaid) a ſtout Alderman, would never take Place of a Bachelor Knight, Knighted before him. And that Sir Thomas Pulliſon, Sir Richard Martin; and before them, Sir Tho Greſham, Bachelor Knights, took, and take Place according to the Antienty of their Knighthood. And that there were many Knights that took Place of Aldermen Knights, and who had and did give them Place in London, by reaſon of the Antienty of Knighthood. And that therefore the contrary was an infringing of the Dignity of Knighthood.

The Earl of Dunbar ſeemed alſo to be of the ſame Judgment, and promiſed Sir Baptiſt, that he would ſpeak himſelf to the Earl of Northampton, one of the chiefeſt Commiſſioners for Earl Marſhal, that his Right ſhould receive no Blemiſh nor Diſgrace. For this Knight, with Sir ...... Herrick, another Commoner, maintained this chargeable Suit againſt the whole Court of Aldermen; till at laſt, after divers Years, they let the Buſineſs fall: and the Lords Commiſſioners of the Earl Marſhal's Court, the Court of Aldermen ſtill perſiſting in the Suit, made this Decree, That the Knights Aldermen, ſhould have Precedence in the City. And theſe are the very Words of the Order, as it was tranſcribed out of the Herald's Books, and humanely communicated to me by Sir Henry St. George, Kt. Garter.

At a Marſhals Court holden at White-hall, on Wedneſday Morning the 19th of February, 1611.

Judgment for Precedency betwixt the Aldermen of London and Knights Commoners.

'WHereas upon the humble Petition of the Maior, Knights and Aldermen of the City of London, exhibited to the King's moſt Excellent Majeſty, complaining, That divers Citizens and Commoners of the ſaid City, being Knighted, did challenge Precedency of Place before the Aldermen, at public Meetings within the City; it pleaſed his Majeſty, for the upholding of the ancient and ſeemly Orders of the ſaid City, to refer the Conſideration of that Difference unto the ſaid Lords Commiſſioners; to the end, ſuch Order might be ſet down, as might ſtand with the Preſervation of the Credit and Reputation of ſuch as, under his Highneſs, had Authority in the Government of the ſaid City: And whereas the ſaid Lords Commiſſioners, having prefixed and appointed two ſeveral Days to both Parties, for the hearing and ending of the ſaid Difference, at both which Days the ſaid Knights Commoners made default; their Lordſhips did thereupon appoint the 19th day of November then following, and now laſt paſt, to both the ſaid Parties peremptorily, to attend with their Council at Whitehall, to receive ſuch abſolute and final Determination in the Cauſe, as to Juſtice ſhould appertain: And that either of the ſaid Parties failing, or making default, ſhould be adjudged to have thereby concluded themſelves, for queſtioning the ſaid Difference any more thereafter: Foraſmuch as the ſaid Knights Commoners did then alſo make default, and alledging, that they would no longer ſtand in Oppoſition to the Premiſſes; their Lordſhips have thereupon ordered, that the ſaid Aldermen ſhall have and take Place and Superiority, in Precedency within the City, before the ſaid Knights Commoners, which now are Freemen or Citizens of the ſaid City, and ſuch other Citizens or Commoners, as hereafter ſhall be made Bachelor Knights; until We, the ſaid Lords Commiſſioners, upon full Hearing of the Cauſe, and the Proofs and Allegations on both Parts, ſhall ſee good Cauſe to order and adjudge the contrary.

An Order for Precedency of the Knights of the City. J. S.

The Knights Bachelors of the City may alſo take Notice of this Rule for their Precedencies: That their Seniority of Knighthood doth not always give them a Right to Precedency. For ſometimes a junior Knight, upon ſome ſignal Honour done him, ſhall take Place of a Senior. For which an Order at a Court Marſhal, March 19, 1609, may be taken Notice of; viz.

At a Court Marſhal, Ex Offic. Armor.

'Some Queſtion aroſe between Sir Thomas Smith, lately employed by his Majeſty, Ambaſſador to the Emperor of Ruſſia, and certain Knights Bachelors of the City of London, more ancient than he, according to the Grounds of Honour, as well as the Precedents of former Times; by vertue of that Power and Authority which we have from his Majeſty, by Strength of his Commiſſion, to decide Doubts and Queſtions of like nature; We do reſolve and judge, that the Precedency is due to him, in reſpect of the Honour which he hath had to ſtand covered in the Preſence of a King: And do further decree, that the ſame Right be yielded hereafter unto others, that upon like Reaſon ſhall pretend the like Privilege.

Aldermen have a negative Voice.

The Aldermen have a negative Voice in the Common Council; as was found by ſeveral Aldermen, and others, of the Common Council, appointed in the Year 1683, Pritchard Maior, to inſpect Acts and other Proceedings, entred in the Journal of that Court: Who reported, among other things, 'That they had ſeen ſeveral Entries in the Journal of this Court, that the Lord Maior and Aldermen, upon Matters propounded, had taken Time to adviſe and conſider thereof: and to others have declared their Diſſent. And even in thoſe worſt of Times, as March 4, 1641, upon two Petitions brought into the Common Council by a Committee, to be preſented to the Parliament, they were read, but not voted, becauſe the Lord Maiors Locumtenens, and the major Part of the Aldermen thought fit to adviſe upon the ſame. And Jan. 24, 1644, it was declared by the Maior and Aldermen, that they had a negative Voice in Common Council, by the ancient Cuſtom and Charters of the ‘City. And that they had alſo ſeen the Opinion of divers learned Counſels, heretofore given to the Court of Aldermen, under their Hands, that they have a negative Voice in making Laws and Orders, and admitting of Officers in Common Council: as the Lord Chief Juſtice Pemberton, Sir William Dolben, Serjeant Maynard, Sir William Jones, Sir George Jeffreys, and Sir Francis Winnington. And the ſaid Committee humbly propounded, to take away all Diſputes in this Matter for time to come: and that the ſame might have the Approbation and Concurrence of this Honourable Court. And accordingly it was by the Court, together with other things, approved and agreed to.

Laws for Conveniency and Safety.

There be belonging to the City many good Cuſtoms and Orders, for the Conveniency and Safety of it; partly, for the eaſier paſſing from Place to Place, upon Mens lawful Occaſions, either by Land or Water; partly, for ſecuring of Houſes, and Perſons paſſing along the Streets in the Night-time; partly, for ſupplying the City with Food, and all manner of Proviſions, and bringing them within the City, that they may be nearer at hand.

Fares for going by Water.

When the Weather is unſeaſonable, or Men are indiſpoſed in their Health, or the Way they are to go is longer than they can conveniently walk, or when Haſte is required, or Things of ſome Weight and Burden are to be carried, or the like, the City hath in theſe Caſes the Convenience of Boats for the Water, and Coaches by Land, to be hired at reaſonable Rates. The fixing of which for going by Water, by an ancient Act of Parliament, is in the Power of the Maior and Court of Aldermen. And they were ſtated and ordered, as by the Table following appeareth, whether the Paſſenger uſeth Oars or Sculler: And there is a Penalty annexed; viz. the Payment of forty Shillings, and half a Years Impriſonment, which any Waterman is liable to, who ſhall take or demand more than theſe Rates.

The Watch of London.

And becauſe in the Night time many looſe People wander abroad in the Streets, to rob and do Miſchief to ſuch as have Occaſion to come home late; and Accidents of Fire, or other Violences, happening upon Houſes, eſpecially at the unſeaſonable Hours of the Night, when People are aſleep in their Beds; therefore ſpecial Proviſion is made in this City againſt theſe Dangers, by the Appointment of fit Perſons, with ſuitable Strength, to walk about and watch every Night.

Who to watch.

For by ancient Cuſtom, all Perſons, Inhabitants of the City, being Houſekeepers, whether Freemen or not, were bound to keep Watch within their own Ward by Night, or to get a fit Perſon to do it for them: for the Preſervation of the King's Peace, and for arreſting and apprehending Night-walkers, or ſuſpected Perſons.

Conſtable.

Every Conſtable is the Head of the Watch: and he, with a Beadle, is bound to be preſent. And every Conſtable of any Precinct, is a Conſtable, not only in his own Precinct and Ward where he dwelleth, but in every other Precinct and Ward within the City.

Bellman.

Add to this Government of the Night by Watches, there is belonging to each Ward a Bellman, who, eſpecially in the long Nights, goeth thro' the Streets and Lanes, ringing a Bell; and when his Bell ceaſeth, he ſalutes his Maſters and Miſtreſſes with ſome Rhimes, ſuitable to the Feſtivals and Seaſons of the Year; and bids them look to their Lights. The Beginning of which Cuſtom, ſeems to be in the Reign of Queen Mary, in the Month of January, 1556; and ſet up firſt in Cordwainer-ſtreet Ward, by Alderman Draper, Alderman of that Ward. Then and there, (as I find in an old Journal) one began to go all Night with a Bell; and at every Lanes End, and at the Wards End, gave Warning of Fire and Candle, and to help the Poor, and pray for the Dead.

Watchmen in each Ward.

By ancient Order, and by an Act of Common Council, the preciſe Number of Men to watch every Night in each Ward, was aſſigned, according to the Bigneſs of it: and was as followeth:

Ward or Precinct.	Men.	Ward or Precinct.	Men.

But theſe Numbers of Watchmen allotted to each Ward, were leſſened afterwards, in the Year 1705, as ſhall be related hereafter.

Orders for the Watches.

In the Year 1663, 15 Car' II. Sir John Robinſon Maior, divers good Orders were made by the Common Council, for the better Service of theſe Watches. As, that the Watch with a Conſtable and Beadle, ſhould watch every Night in every Ward, from nine of the Clock in the Night to ſeven in the Morning, from Michaelmas till April the 1ſt. And from April 1, till Michaelmas, from ten of the Clock in the Evening till five in the Morning.

The Alderman in each Ward to appoint one Conſtable, and the full number of the Inhabitants, according to the Proportion before mentioned, to watch in his reſpective Ward. And from thence to proceed, and go forward, in an orderly way: and to appoint the next Night one other Conſtable of the Ward, and the like number of Inhabitants, adjoining unto thoſe who watched the Night before.

Forfeits.

Every Conſtable making default in executing his Duty, to forfeit 5 l. Every Perſon not watching, being warned, to forfeit 1 l.

Supervisors.

Two or more Superviſors, to be appointed by the Alderman, Deputy, and Common Council Men of every Ward; to take care and overſee that the Watches be duly kept, and to preſent the Names of any, whether Conſtable or others, that make default, to the Lord Maior, or Alderman of the Ward.

Time of Watching.

By the Act of Common Council for ſettling the Watch, Robinſon Maior, they were allowed to go off at five in the Morning: at the Quarter Seſſions in the Year 1702, Sir William Gore Maior, the Watch was enjoined to ſtay till ſix; as appears by this Order.

Act of the Quarter Seſſions for the Watch.

WHEREAS many Felonies, Robberies and Burglaries are frequently committed within this City of London, and the Liberties thereof, in the Winter Seaſon, after the breaking up of the Watches kept within the ſame, (being commonly at Five of the Clock in the Morning, or before,) to the Loſs and Damage of many of the Inhabitants within the ſaid City, and the Liberties thereof: For Prevention of which ſaid Evils and Miſchiefs, it is Ordered by her Majeſties Juſtices of the Peace in this General Quarter Seſſions aſſembled, That the ſeveral and reſpective Conſtables within this City, and the Liberties thereof, do from henceforth, between the Firſt Day of November, and the Firſt Day of February yearly, keep good Watch in their ſeveral Wards and Precincts within this City, and the Liberties thereof, in a due manner, from Ten of the Clock at Night, until Six of the Clock in the Morning of every Day within the Time limited as aforeſaid: And that none of the Conſtables within this City, and the Liberties, do preſume to break up their Watch before Six of the Clock in every Morning, as they will anſwer the contrary at their Perils. And it is further Ordered, That this Order be printed and publiſhed, and delivered to the ſeveral Aldermen, their Deputies, and the ſeveral Common Council Men and Conſtables of the ſeveral Wards, for the better Obſervation thereof.

ASHHURST.

The Watches Neglects.

The Watch is a very good means for the Security of the City by Night, if it were performed, as it is appointed by Law; but there be great Neglects in the Attendances of the Watchmen. Some of them frequently leave their Stands, and go to Alehouſes, or light People home. So that many times there are not above five or ſix Watchmen in ſome Places, (as in the Watch at Biſhopſgate,) inſtead of ſixteen. So that if any Fire, or other Accident ſhould happen in the Night, little or no Help can be expected from them.

Preſent Settlement of the Watch.

There is a late Settlement made of the Watch, (yet not founded upon any Law) wherein the Watchmen have little or no Dependance upon the Conſtables; but the Beadle provides them. And he makes a Roll of a yearly Rate upon the Inhabitants, in effect at his own Diſcretion. By which Settlement, there attends thirty at Biſhopſgate; and their Pay ſaid to be Sixpence a Night: whereas by the foreſaid Act, there were appointed eighty. Ri. Bromley. Which being put in ſtrict Execution in the Maioralty of Sir Patience Ward, and every Houſekeeper being then obliged to watch in their reſpective Turns, or to ſend an able and fit Perſon to do it, the ſaid Duty came round the ſaid Ward but once in one and twenty Nights, at eighty Men per Night. But the number of Watchmen is ſince reduced from eighty to thirty. So that were the Inhabitants now obliged to watch in their Turns, or ſend fit Perſons ſo to do, the whole Charge would be but Sixpence once in about Fifty ſix Nights, for any one Houſekeeper in the ſaid Ward, according to the preſent number of Watchmen, and the Pay they receive. Which is not one half of what is now paid. And thoſe who found themſelves aggrieved at this ſmall Charge, would then be at their Liberty to watch in their own Perſons, or to ſend their Servants: As a Common Council Man in that Ward complained a few Years ago, to the Government of the City.

But it is further to be known, that the forementioned Act for the Night Watches, Robinſon Maior, was lately repealed, under the Maioralty of Sir Owen Buckingham, when this following Act of Common Council was made and printed.

Officers of the Market.

Formerly, before the great Fire, the Markets were kept in Leaden Hall Street, Cheapſide, and Newgate Street. And then there were theſe Officers, viz. a Serjeant, and Yeoman of the Channel, and Yeoman of Newgate Market, and Foreign Taker, whoſe Office was to ſweep and make clean the ſaid Streets, where the Market People reſorted, and to carry away the Soil thereof, and to furniſh the Market People with Boards and ſuch like Accommodations; who had Allowances from the ſaid Market People. But ſince Markets are removed out of the Streets to more convenient Places, and let to Farm, theſe Officers retain only the Names, not intermeddling with the Markets.

We have already exhibited a Table of the Rates, Tolls, and Duties, as ſettled and appointed to be taken by an Act of Common Council paſſed Sept. 17. 1674. which the Farmers in the Covenants of their Leaſes were obliged not to exceed, under the Penalty of 10 l. As alſo the ſeveral Laws and Orders made from time to time for the Regulation of the Markets, which were publiſhed by Order of Common Council, Anno 1697. Likewiſe the Copy of an Award of two eminent Civilians, referring to the publick Markets of the City of London. For all which we muſt refer our Readers to p. 308, 309, 310, 311, and 312. However, we ſhall inſert here

JOSEPH LANE, Comptroller.

Note, This Table of Rates was to regulate and explain the Rates ſettled by an Act of Common Council made in the Year 1674, and was the Rule of Mr. Toby Humfry (in his Demands and Receptions of the Market People) who took a Leaſe of the City Markets in the Year 1677, unto which the preſent Farmers, Mr. Kilner and others, are expreſly referred in their Leaſe from the City, as to the Rates and Duties to be taken by them.

Complaint of the Market Folks againſt the Farmers of the Market.

But the Farmers of the Market, notwithſtanding theſe Rates, had found out ways to exact upon the poor Market People, and to make them pay more than thoſe Duties appointed by the ſaid Act; whereof they complained to the Common Council. The Court upon this appointed a Committee of four Aldermen and eight Commoners, or any one of the ſaid Aldermen, and two of the ſaid Commoners, to conſider the Abuſes complained of, and of the Methods to reduce the ſame. And they did on the 29th of July, Anno Dom. 1696, make their Report: viz. ‘That they found the Rates received by the Farmers of the ſeveral Markets, namely, thoſe of Newgate, Honey Lane, Stocks and Leaden Hall, as they then ſtood let by them, amounted to 6379 l. 19 s. 10 s. And for Proviſions, Fruits, and other Wares brought to and ſold in the ſaid Markets, and in the Streets, 4516 l. 10 s. In all 10896 l. 1 s. 6 d. Which ſaid Sums, they were of opinion, the ſaid Farmers did yearly receive. Beſides which they found, that they had received of the preſent Tenants 2194 l. 1 s. 6 d. by way of Fines for Admittances.

The Sum of the Rents of the Markets.

‘The ſaid Committee were of opinion, that the preſent Farmers had forfeited their Leaſe by Nonpayment of their Rents, and by converting the Markets to other Uſes than they ought to be, by the Covenants contained therein.’ This was ſigned by Sir William Gore, Kt. Samuel Weſtal, Daniel Dorvil, John Sherbrook, Robert Rowland, Roger Thompſon, Peter Parker, and Thomas Aungor.

The

Table of Rates publiſhed.

The ſaid Committee did the 5th of Auguſt, the ſame Year 1696, publiſh in Print the Table of Rates abovementioned, for the Information of the Market People. But notwithſtanding the Endeavours of this Committee, the greateſt part of theſe Abuſes ſtill continued.

Three other Markets.

Beſides theſe Markets beforementioned, there be alſo three other notable Markets held in the City, the one for Fiſh, another for Cloth, and the third for live Cattel: viz. Billinſgate Market, Blackwel-Hall, and Smithfield; all ſettled by Statute.

Smithfield.

Firſt for Smithfield Market, by a Statute 22 & 23 Car. II. No Cattel bought there to be brought again into the ſaid Market to be ſold alive; but if brought, to be ſeiſed by the Bailiff, Tollkeeper, or other Officer having overſight of the Market, to the Uſe of the Maior and Aldermen: two Inches of the further Horn of all Cattel ſold, to be cut off, for Diſcovery hereof. In this Market Foreigners as well as Freemen may buy and ſell any Cattel, by a Statute of 11 and 12 W. III. The Act made 22 & 23 Car. II. for preventing Frauds in buying and ſelling of Cattel in Smithfield, and elſewhere, was revived by 1 Jac. II. and continued ſtill.

Billingſgate.

Billingſgate Market by Statute 10 & 11 W. III. to be every Day (except Sunday) a free Market for all ſorts of Fiſh, and that any Perſons may buy and ſell there. All buying any Fiſh there, may ſell again in any other Market or Place in London or elſewhere, by Retail. And no Perſon ſhall employ or be employed in buying at Billingſgate any Quantity of Fiſh, to be divided by Lots or in Shares amongſt any Fiſhmongers or others, to be afterwards ſold by Retail or otherwiſe. Nor any Fiſhmonger to engroſs or buy any Quantity of Fiſh, but what ſhall be for his own Sale or Uſe, under Penalty of 20 l. for each Offence. The one Moiety to the Poor of the Pariſh, the other to the Proſecutors.

Blackwel-Hall.

The Market at Blackwel-Hall for ſelling Woolen Cloth, by Statute 8 & 9 Will. III. to be holden every Thurſday, Friday, and Saturday from Eight till Twelve in the Forenoon, and from Two till Five in the Afternoon, except Days of Humiliation or Thankſgiving. And the Keepers to admit no buying or ſelling any other Days, upon the Penalty of 100 l. And no Factor, nor any Perſon whatſoever, other than the Owner of the Cloth, ſhall ſell or expoſe to ſale out of the ſaid Market, any Cloth directed to be brought to the ſaid Market, or any Factor there, upon Penalty of 5 l. for every Cloth ſo ſold; with ſeveral other Penalties upon the Hall-keepers, Clarks, and Maſter Porters neglecting their Duties, and upon Factors not giving true Accounts to the Clothiers. And thus much for the Markets.

The Poſts for Conveyance of Letters.

There is ſtill another convenient Cuſtom belonging to the Citizens, reſpecting them as Men of Buſineſs and Commerce; who therefore muſt neceſſarily have frequent Correſpondence with one another: Which being often between Perſons at a diſtance, either nearer to or farther off from London, the poſting of Letters to and fro is very ſubſervient thereunto. This Poſt is double: One for the ſending Letters to all the Parts of England, Scotland and Ireland, and Foreign Parts; the other for conveying them to all Streets and Places in and about London, or within ten Miles: which is done every Day, and within or near the City divers times in the Day, and that for the ſmall Charge of a Penny; which is therefore called commonly The Penny Poſt.

Charge of Letters.

Preſent State of England.

The General Poſt-Office is held in Lombard-ſtreet, near St. Mary Woolnoth Church. The Charge of Conveyance of Letters, and the Speed thereof, is thus told us by a late Author. ‘A Letter containing a Sheet of Paper is conveyed 80 Miles for 2 d. and two Sheets 4 d. Letters weighing an Ounce, for 8 d. Above 80 Miles the Charge encreaſeth a Penny. So that the Poſt of a ſingle Letter is then 3 d. a double one 6 d. And Letters of the Weight of an Ounce, 1 s. They paſs in ſo ſhort a time by Night as well as by Day, that every 24 Hours the Poſt goes 120 Miles. And in five Days an Anſwer of a Letter may be had from a Place 300 Miles diſtant. But if any Letter be encloſed, or ſmall piece of Paper, as a Bill of Exchange, or the like, in that caſe double Rates are paid.

‘But the Charge of a ſingle Letter from London to Scotland is 5 d. to Ireland 6 d.

Foreign Poſt.

Packet Boats.

And for Conveyance of Letters from London beyond the Seas, to France, Spain, Holland, Flanders, as well as to the Kingdom of Ireland, and alſo from thence hither, there be ſwift ſailing Veſſels, which are called Packet Boats, for that purpoſe. Which arriving back again with their Packets in convenient Ports, thence thoſe Packets are brought by Riding Poſts to the General Poſt-Office in London, and ſo delivered out. And of late Queen Anne appointed another Packet Boat for the Iſlands of the Weſt-Indies, Barbadoes, Antegoa, Nevis, Montſerrat, St. Chriſtopher's, Jamaica, &c. to be diſpatched from the General Poſt-Office, and ſo to return again with Anſwers. And to pay for every Letter of a Sheet of Paper, 9 d. Of two Sheets of Paper, 1 s. 6 d. For a Packet weighing an Ounce, 2 s. 8 d. So the Payments were fixed. But in March 170$\frac{4}{5}$ the Payments for the Conveyance of theſe Letters were encreaſed, in regard of the great Expence the Queen was at in maintaining this Correſpondence between England and thoſe her Plantation Iſlands in America: Now therefore empowering the Poſt-Maſter General of England to take the ſeveral Rates following: viz.

Rates for theſe Letters to and from the Plantations.

For the Poſt of every ſingle Letter from England to the ſaid Iſlands, not exceeding one Sheet of Paper, 1 s. 3 d. For the Poſt of every Letter not exceeding two Sheets of Paper, 2 s. 6 d. And ſo in proportion to the ſame Rates for every Packet of Letters. For the Poſt of every other Packet of any kind of greater Bulk, for every Ounce weight, 6 s. For the Poſt of every Letter from the ſaid Iſlands to England, not exceeding one Sheet, 1 s. 6 d. For every Letter not exceeding two Sheets, 3 s. And ſo in proportion to the ſame Rates for every Packet of Letters. For the Poſt of every other Packet of any kind of greater Bulk, for every Ounce weight 6 s.

How often the Weſt-India Packet-Boats go, and how long ſtay.

The Place whence theſe Weſt-India Packet-Boats ſet out, is Plymouth; and the Time when they ſet forth, and how long they ſtay at each Plantation, was ſignified in ſome Gazettes in April 1705. viz. They go at the beginning of every Month throughout the Year, and ſtay at each of the Engliſh Iſland Plantations, in the following manner:

At		Days and Nights.	Hours.
Barbadoes	3		—
Antegoa	2		—
Montſerat	—		36
Nevis	—		36
St. Chriſtopher's	—		36
Jamaica	10		—

And thence return to England, and not to be ſtayed or delayed on any Pretence whatſoever.

The Foreigners Merchants formerly had their own Poſtmaſter.

In former times, the Poſtmaſter for the Strangers, or Foreign Poſt, was appointed by themſelves. And the Italians being the chief trading Foreigners in thoſe times in London, uſed to elect their ſaid Poſtmaſter, by the Sufferance and Favour of the Poſtmaſter General of England. Afterward by long Cuſtom they pretended a Right to appoint a Maſter of the Strangers Poſt; and that they were in Poſſeſſion thereof from the Year 1514. And in that Right in the Year 1568, they with ſome Flemings appointed one Godfrey Marſhal their Poſtmaſter, who was born about Valentia in Spain, and was a Broker to the Foreign Merchants. In this Election, the Spaniſh Ambaſſador had a great Influence. Who ſent for the chief Merchants of the Low Countries, and likewiſe for the Italians, and made them promiſe, that they would do nothing concerning the ſaid Choice, but by his Will and Conſent. Which they did, leſt they who traded into his Maſter's Country, or were his Subjects, might incur his Diſpleaſere in that troubleſome time, and ſo be ruined. Notwithſtanding another Foreigner laboured for that Place, and was choſen by the Flemiſh Merchants, whoſe Name was Raphael Vanden Putte; and it ſeems had got himſelf confirmed by the Engliſh Poſtmaſter General.

Articles why the Engliſh Poſtmaſter ſhould appoint the Foreign Poſt.

Hereupon a Conteſt aroſe, who in truth had a Right to nominate and appoint the Foreign Poſt for London. And it was thought very inconvenient that Strangers ſhould appoint a Foreigner for the bringing in and carrying out of Letters, to and from the foreign Parts. And in Equity, and in point of Safety, the Poſtmaſter General ought to appoint him. For Enquiry into which, a Paper was preſented, as it ſeems, to the Privy Council, intituled, Articles touching the Office of the Poſt of London: importing, ‘That it was one chief point of the Prerogative belonging to all Princes, to place within their own Dominions ſuch Officers as were moſt truſty of their own Subjects. That the Poſtmaſter's Place was an Office of great Truſt and Credit in every Realm; and therefore was committed to the Charge of the natural Subjects, and not Strangers; eſpecially in ſuch Places as had daily Paſſages into foreign Realms, and where was concourſe of Strangers. For Proof hereof it was urged, how the weighty Affairs of a Realm, and the Secrets of the Prince, paſſed by the Conveyance of the Poſtmaſter; who being faithful to his Prince, and natural to his Country, would faithfully ſee the diligent and ſafe Conveyance thereof. But being a Stranger, would otherwiſe deal therein according to the Inſtinct of Nature, as well by ſecret Conveyance of Perſons, (were they Enemies) and of their Letters and other Goods outwards; as alſo by receiving them inwards, and lodging them in his Houſe and by other ſecret Aid, whenſoever he ſhould have advice thereof, or be procured thereunto. And for Example hereof, take all foreign Realms about us, which all had their natural Subjects in this Office.

‘That London was a Place of the greateſt Concourſe of Strangers, and of moſt common Paſſage of the Affairs of this Realm with foreign Countries; and therefore had moſt need of a faithful Poſt, a natural Subject.

‘That the Strangers that had been Poſtmaſters of London had always been occaſion of many Injuries, and much Damage unto the Merchants of England; as well by means of ſtaying and keeping their Letters a Day, twain, or more, and in the mean time delivering the Letters of Strangers; and alſo by ſtaying ſometimes the ordinary Poſt a Day, three, or four, That in the mean time one extraordinary might be diſpatched by the Strangers, to prevent the Market and Purpoſe. And alſo by lodging of Merchants Strangers in his Houſe, and bringing them by his daily Advices from divers Places, into the Trade of the Engliſh Merchants; and not without Secrets to defraud the Prince of his Duties and Cuſtoms. And therefore the Engliſh Merchants all deſired that an Engliſhman might be placed in that Office.

‘And that the Merchants Strangers ſhould have no Cauſe to be grieved, that an Engliſh Man was placed; the Times and Orders accuſtomed, for the Conveyance of their Letters, ſhould be obſerved, as well with them, as with the Engliſh Merchants; and no new Exaction impoſed on them. And ſuch Men might be placed therein, as could talk with them in their own Language, (tho' the Strangers themſelves, for the moſt part, and their Servants, could ſpeak Engliſh) and that ſhould make as good Promiſe, and as faithfully perform the ſame, in all Equity and upright dealing, as any Stranger had done.

‘That the Foreign Princes had no Cauſe to be grieved hereat: For they commonly ſent Ambaſſadors, or other Meſſengers, on purpoſe to carry their Letters. And that the Poſtmaſter of Antwerp had no more juſt Cauſe to be grieved thereat, than had the Poſtmaſter of Roan or Paris in France, or of Seville in Spain. That nevertheleſs, for Quietneſs ſake, Covenants might paſs between him, and the Poſtmaſter of London, that a like number of Dutchmen and Engliſhmen might be the ordinary Runners, as their Turn came, (tho' hitherto they would never ſuffer one Engliſhman to get his Living amongſt them,) with other Matters appertinent unto this Office, well enough known, and eaſy enough to be agreed upon, between themſelves, without any third Perſon.]

And ſo much for the Foreign Poſt. Now for the Inland Poſt: For the conveying of Letters throughout England, the Market Towns are ſo well annexed to the reſpective Stages, that there is ſcarce any Market Town of Note or Account, but what hath the Conveniency of having Letters ſent thither from the Stages, and to the adjacent Towns, altho' not lying in the High Roads.

The PENNY POST.

R. B.

FOR a further Conveniency to the Inhabitants of this City, and Parts adjacent, for about ten Miles Compaſs, another Poſt, and that a Foot Poſt, commonly called the Penny Poſt, was erected. And tho' at firſt ſet up by a private Hand, yet being of ſuch conſiderable Account, is taken ſince into the Poſt-Office, and made a Branch of it.

The Penny Poſt of great Uſe.

And by this all Letters and Parcels, not exceeding a Pound Weight, and alſo any Sum of Money not above 10*l.* or Parcel of 10*l.* Value, is ſafely conveyed, and at the Charge of a Penny, to all Parts of the City and Suburbs, and but a Penny more (at the Delivery) to moſt Towns within ten Miles of London, and to ſome Towns at a farther diſtance.

And for the better Management of this Office, there are in London and Weſtminſter, ſix General Poſt-Offices, kept at convenient diſtance from each other. At all which, there conſtantly attend every Day from Morning to Night (Sundays excepted) Officers, to receive Letters and Parcels from the ſeveral Places appointed to take them in: there being a Place, or receiving Houſe, for the Receipt thereof, in moſt Streets, with a Table hung at the Door or Shop Window, on which is printed in Great Letters, Penny Poſt Letters and Parcels are taken in here. And at thoſe Houſes they have Letter-Carriers to call every Hour, and to carry ſuch Letters and Parcels as are there, to the General Office within their Circuit. And after the ſaid Letters and Parcels are duly entred in their Books, they are forthwith ſent by others to be delivered as directed. So that all the Day long they are employed, ſome in going their Walks to bring in, and others to carry out.

There is another great Conveniency by this Office; and that is, that what Letters come from beyond Sea, or from any Part of England, Scotland, or Ireland, by the General Poſt, and are directed to Perſons in any of the Towns to which the Penny Poſt goes, they are delivered by the Meſſenger without farther Trouble, paying the Poſtage.

Note, That for every Letter, or Parcel, or Sum of Money under 10 l. from theſe Towns and Places to London, there is to be paid at the Receiving Houſes One Penny; and from London to the aforeſaid Places, the Meſſenger may demand one Penny more; being for his Pains and Care, at the Delivery, and no more.

This Penny Poſt is managed by three Officers, a Comptroller, an Accomptant, and a Receiver. Officers.

The Convenience of this Penny Poſt is great, with reſpect to all ſuch as dwell in ſo many Towns and various Places, as are within ten Miles of the City; who may have Letters to them, and from them, ſent every Day in the Week. Inſomuch, that it is a little Wonder, that a Foot Poſt can perform it. As on this Eſſex ſide, the Foot Poſt, who goes as far as Chigwel, ten Miles from London, takes his Compaſs firſt from London to Low Leyton; then to Walthamſtow; thence to Woodford; and ſo to Chigwel; and to all the ſeveral Houſes diſperſed, where Letters and Parcels are to be left: And then back (homewards) to Wanſted; thence to Leyton Stone; and ſo to Stratford, and then to Bow, and London. Which Circuit makes about thirty Miles Walk each Day. So that he travels 180 Miles weekly, Winter and Summer, fair Weather and foul. Yet in the Winter Seaſon, ſometimes making uſe of an Horſe, neceſſarily. J. S.

There is yet another Practice of great Benefit and Convenience, uſed in London; and that is, for Inſuring Houſes againſt Fire. Which any Man may do, for a little Money, for the Term of ſeven Years; and ſo renew again, if he pleaſes. For which there is a certain Office kept in the City, called the Fire Office, in Cornhill, and in Fleetſtreet. All Houſes thus Inſured, are known by a Plate fixed upon them, being the Reſemblance of a Phenix in a Flame. This Office maintains in Pay a competent number of ſtrong expert Men, with their Accoutrements, who are always ready at hand, when any of theſe Inſured Houſes chance to be on Fire, to quench the ſame. The Rates for Inſurance, and the Fund for Security, and the Names of the Inſurers, appear by this Table following. The Office of Inſurance againſt Fire.

IT would be endleſs to ſet down all the Laws, Cuſtoms and Privileges of the City. Theſe that have already been mentioned are not a few, and of chiefeſt and moſt public Note. For the reſt, and for larger Diſcourſe of theſe already ſpecified, recourſe is to be had to the Law-Books of London; as, Reports of ſpecial Caſes touching the Cuſtoms and Liberties of the City, by Sir Henry Calthorp, Recorder of London: Lex Londinenſis; or, The City's Law; the Book of the Charters of London; Privilegia Londini, and the like, that ſo Citizens may be better acquainted with their own Laws and Cuſtoms. It were therefore to be wiſhed, they were compacted and digeſted by ſome judicious Hand, and publiſhed. And ſo it ought to be, as I find by an ancient Order to this Purpoſe: which was, that the Cuſtoms and Uſages of the City ſhould be writ into ſome Book, and read twice or thrice a Year openly: and an Inſpection of them to be denied to none.

Acts of Common Council.

For this End, I had thought ſometime to have given ſome ſhort Account of the Acts of Common Council in force, at leaſt the Titles of them; and have been moved thereunto by ſome judicious Citizens. But conſulting others, who knew the infinite Labour of it, and how it would ſwell the Volume, I have deſiſted that Enterprize; and have contented myſelf to lay before the Reader, ſome Acts of the chiefeſt Import, that have been of later Times printed and publiſhed, and ſuch as have come to my Hand; as likewiſe upon what Statutes and Charters ſome of them were eſtabliſhed.

Againſt thoſe that walk up and down Streets hawking with Wares: and ſuch as have Stalls at Peoples Doors, or Tables and Stools in the open Streets with Wares thereon.

WHEREAS by the Privileges and Franchiſes of the City of London, confirmed by Parliament, every Ware-houſe, Shop, and other place within the City of London, and Liberties of the ſame, having open Shew into any of the Streets or Lanes of this City, hath time out of mind been reputed, and known to be, and ſo ought, and hath been accuſtomed to be, and in very deed is an open and publick Market-place for Shew and Sale of Wares and Merchandizes, within the ſaid City and the Liberties of the ſame: And whereas in ancient time the open Streets and Lanes of the ſaid City, have been only uſed and accuſtomed, and ſo ought to be uſed and accuſtomed for open paſſage, as the common High-way only, and not for Huckſters, Pedlers and Haglers to ſtand and ſit to ſell their Wares in, and to paſs from Street to Street, and place to place, hawking and offering their Wares to ſell, other than certain places of the ſaid City, which have been of ancient time accuſtomed to be ſpecially uſed for Country People to ſtand and ſit to ſell Victuals in, and that only on certain Days in the Week, and certain Hours of the Day: And whereas now of late there be two ſorts of people, which are greatly encreaſed, and do greatly hinder the ordinary and honeſt Tradeſmen, being Shopkeepers, in their ſeveral Trades within this City, and the Liberties of the ſame, and impoveriſh others, and utterly undo many of them: The one of which two ſorts be Foreigners, and others, which walk up and down the Streets hawking with Wares, and offering the ſame to be ſold openly to all ſorts of people, as they ſtand, ſit or paſs; and likewiſe come to Men or Womens Doors, and into their Houſes or Rooms, and offer their ſaid Wares to ſell: And the other of the two ſorts be for the moſt part Women, and ſome others alſo ſitting or ſtanding at Mens Doors or Stalls, with their Wares lying or hanging for Shew and Sale there, and ſome of them ſtanding or ſitting with their Wares upon Tables or Stools in the open Streets, Lanes or High-ways of the ſaid City, ordained and appointed for paſſage, and not for Sale of Wares: By reaſon whereof, very many Houſholders, who have been in great Trade, and raiſed great profit by retailing in their Shops, are very much hindred, and ſome forced to ſet Haglers and Hawkers awork to carry abroad their Wares up and down the Streets, to the end to take ſome Money to help to relieve themſelves and their Families. Which Inconveniences (if due Remedy be not in Time provided) are like to grow in very ſhort Time to do very much Hurt, not only in abating her Majeſty's Profit in her Subſidies, and other Services; but alſo in weakning the Citizens in ſuch ſort, as they ſhall not be able to yield their Aid in bearing Scot and Lot, and other Charges ordinary and extraordinary, for Maintenance of the good Eſtate of the ſaid City, and very many of them, only by means of the ſaid Inconveniences, made utterly unable to maintain their Houſholds and Families. For Remedy therefore of the ſaid Inconveniences, Be it Enacted, Ordained and Eſtabliſhed by the Right Honourable the Lord Maior of the City of London, and his Right Worſhipful Brethren the Aldermen of the ſame City, and the Commons in this preſent Common Council aſſembled, and by the Authority of the ſame, That foraſmuch as all Stalls and Purpreſtures whatſoever, which any Perſon whatſoever holdeth without the principal Wall, Plat or Foundation of his Houſe, do by the Charters of the Queens Majeſty's Progenitors, by her Highneſs confirmed, in Right belong to the Maior and Commonalty and Citizens of the City of London; It ſhall be lawful to the Aldermen and Commoners of the ſaid City, Committees appointed, or from time to time to be appointed by the Common Council, for Letting of the Lands and Tenements appertaining to the ſaid Maior, Commonalty and Citizens, or for any two or more of the ſaid Aldermen, and three or more of the ſaid Commoners, by writing under the Common Seal of the ſaid City, to authorize any perſon or perſons whatſoever, whom they ſhall think meet, in the Name of the Maior, Commonalty, and Citizens of the ſaid City, to enter into all, and every ſuch Stalls and Purpreſtures, to the Uſe of the ſaid Maior, Commonalty and Citizens, or the ſame to deface, break down, take away, or diſpoſe, as the ſaid Aldermen and Commoners ſhall think meet and appoint, and eſpecially the Stalls and Purpreſtures of ſuch perſon or perſons as ſhall offend in any thing contrary to the true Intent of this Act, or any Branch or Article herein mentioned.

And be it further Enacted by the Authority aforeſaid, That no perſon or perſons whatſoever, Inhabiting, or which hereafter ſhall Inhabit, within the City of London, or the Liberties of the ſame, ſhall at any time hereafter, by any Colour, Ways or Means whatſoever, Lett, or willingly ſuffer to be uſed, any Stall, Incroachment, or Purpreſture, ſituate or being near before his, her or their Houſe, Shop, or other place whatſoever, in any open Street or Lane of this City whatſoever, for or by any perſon or perſons whatſoever, which ſhall there ſell, utter or put to Sale any Linnen Cloth, or any Ware made of Linnen Cloth, or any Starch, or other Wares or Merchandizes whatſoever; nor ſhall willingly ſuffer any perſon or perſons whatſoever, to ſell, ſhew, offer or put to Sale any Linnen Cloth, Starch, Wares or Merchandizes whatſoever, upon any Stool, Seat, or other thing, before his, her or their Houſe or Stall, upon pain to forfeit the Sum of Twenty Shillings, of lawful Money of England, for every time wherein he, ſhe or they ſhall offend, contrary to the true Meaning hereof.

And be it further Enacted by the Authority aforeſaid, That no perſon or perſons whatſoever, ſhall at any time hereafter, by any Colour, Ways or Means whatſoever, directly or indirectly, ſell, utter, or put to Sale, by way of Hawking, or as a Hawker, any Linnen Cloth, or any other Ware made of Linnen Cloth, Starch, or any other Wares or Merchandizes whatſoever, in any open Street or Lane within the ſaid City or the Liberties thereof; (Victuals in the Market-place and Market-time only excepted) otherwiſe than upon the Stall of his, her or their own Shop or Dwelling-houſe, or in his, her or their Shop, Warehouſe or Dwelling-houſe, upon pain to forfeit for every time wherein he, ſhe or they ſhall ſo offend, all the Linnen Cloth, or other Ware whatſoever, to be ſold, uttered or put to Sale contrary to the true Meaning hereof; and to forfeit alſo the Sum of Twenty Shillings of lawful Money of England.

And be it further Enacted, Ordained and Eſtabliſhed, by the Authority aforeſaid, That the one Moiety, or Half part of all the Penalties and Forfeitures to be forfeited by vertue of this Act, ſhall be to the Chamberlain of the City of London, for the time being, to the Uſe of the Maior, and Commonalty, and Citizens of the ſame City; and the other Moiety thereof to him or them that will ſue for the ſame, by Action of Debt, Bill, or Information, to be affirmed, exhibited, or commenced and proſecuted in the Queens Majeſty's Court, to be holden before the Lord Maior and Aldermen of the ſaid City, in the Chamber of the Guild-hall of the ſame City; wherein no Wager of Law ſhall be admitted for the Defendant. And it ſhall and may be lawful to all, and every Perſon and Perſons whatſoever, thereunto authorized by the Lord Maior and Court of Aldermen of the City aforeſaid, for the time being, who ſhall ſee or know any Linnen Cloth, or Wares made of Linnen Cloth, Starch, or other Wares or Merchandizes whatſoever, which ſhall be bought, ſold, uttered, or offered to be put to Sale, contrary to the true Meaning of this preſent Act, (and thereby ſhall be forfeited by vertue of this Act) to ſeize the ſame, and to carry and convey the ſame to the Guild-hall of the ſaid City, or to ſome Place near unto the ſame, there to remain in ſafe Cuſtody, until the ſame ſhall be diſpoſed of according to the true Meaning of this preſent Act.

An ACT of Common Council made in the 22d Year of King Charles the Firſt, 1646.

Againſt buying and ſelling and colouring foreign Goods.

WHereas by Experience it is found, That foreign buying and ſelling, and colouring of Foreigners Goods, meeting with, and buying Commodities and Merchandizes coming towards the City of London, and the common Markets there, are of late Years more uſed and practiſed than in former Times; all which tendeth much unto the prejudice of this City, and is contrary to the ancient Liberties and Franchiſes thereof: In which Caſes, by the ancient Cuſtoms of the ſaid City of London, confirmed by Parliament, the Commodities ſo foreign bought and ſold, coloured, met and foreſtalled, as aforeſaid, are reſpectively forfeited to the City of London; but in default of a competent Reward, or Allowance to be made unto the Proſecutors of Offenders in ſuch Caſes, the ſaid Offenders are grown too frequent, whereby the Freemen of the City of London are much damnified: For Remedy whereof, and Encouragement of ſuch perſons who ſhall take pains in the Premiſes, Be it Enacted, Concluded and Agreed, by the Right Honourable the Lord Maior, Aldermen and Commons in Common Council aſſembled, and by Authority of the ſame, That from henceforth, whatſoever perſon or perſons that ſeizeth and preſenteth to the Chamberlain of the City of London for the time being, any Goods, Merchandizes or Commodities duly proved foreign, bought and ſold, or coloured, or which hath or ſhall be bought of any Merchant, or other, that bring the ſame to the City of London, either by Land or by Water, to be ſold before the ſame come to the ſaid City, and have been there ſhewed to Sale, ſhall have for his or their Pains and Labour, the Moiety, or one half of the reſpective Forfeitures, the Charges of Suits being firſt deducted.

An Abſtract of an Act of Parliament made 1 & 2 Phil. & Mariæ, cap. 7.

None dwelling out of Cities and Towns Corporate, to ſell by Retail Woolen or Linnen Cloth, Haberdaſhery, &c.

THAT whereas the Cities, Boroughs, Towns Corporate and Market Towns, did heretofore flouriſh, where Youth were well educated, and civilly brought up, and were highly ſerviceable to the Government, but were brought to great decay, and were like to come to utter Ruin and Deſtruction, by reaſon that Perſons dwelling out of the ſaid Cities and Towns, came and took away the Relief and Subſiſtence of the ſaid Cities and Towns, by ſelling their Wares there: For Remedy whereof, be it Enacted, That no Perſon or Perſons dwelling any where out of any of the ſaid Cities or Towns, (the Liberties of the two Univerſities only excepted) ſhall hereafter ſell, or cauſe to be ſold by Retail, any Woollen or Linnen Cloth, (except of their own making) or any Haberdaſhery, Grocery or Mercery Ware, at or within any of the ſaid Cities, Boroughs, Towns Corporate, or Market Towns within this Realm, (except in open Fairs) on pain to forfeit and loſe, for every time ſo offending, Six Shillings and Eight Pence, and the whole Wares ſo ſold, offered or proffered to be ſold: The one Moiety of all which Forfeitures, to be to the Uſe of the King and Queen; and the other Half to him or them that ſhall ſeize or ſue for the ſame, in any of their Majeſties Courts of Record, by Bill, Plaint, Action of Debt, Information, or otherwiſe; wherein no Eſſoign, Protection, or Wager of Law ſhall be allowed.

An Abſtract of an Act of Common Council made the 15*th of* April, Anno quarto Jac. I. Sir Leonard Halliday Lord Maior.

No Foreigner to keep open Shop in the City, or ſell by Retail.

WHereas by the ancient Charters, Cuſtoms, Franchiſes and Liberties of the City of London, confirmed by ſundry Acts of Parliament, no Perſon not being Free of the City of London, may or ought to ſell, or put to Sale any Wares or Merchandizes within the City, or the Liberties of the ſame, by Retail, or keep any open or inward Shop, or other inward Place or Room, for Shew, Sale, or putting to Sale of any Wares or Merchandizes, or for Uſe of any Art, Occupation, Myſtery or Handicraft within the ſame: And whereas alſo, Edward, ſometime King of England, of famous Memory, the Third of that Name, by his Charter made and granted to the ſaid City, in the Fifteenth Year of his Reign, confirmed alſo by Parliament, amongſt other things granted, That if any Cuſtoms in the ſaid City, before that Time obtained and uſed, were in any part hard or defective, or any things in the ſame City newly ariſing, where Remedy before that Time was not obtained, ſhould need Amendment, the Maior and Aldermen of the ſaid City, and their Succeſſors, with the Aſſent of the Commonalty of the ſame City, might put and ordain thereunto fit Remedies, as often as it ſhould ſeem expedient to them, &c. So that ſuch Ordinance ſhould be profitable to the King, for the Profit of the Citizens, and other People repairing to the ſaid City, and agreeable to Reaſon: Now foraſmuch as divers and ſundry Strangers and Foreigners from the Liberties of the ſaid City (nothing regarding the ſaid ancient Charters, Franchiſes, Cuſtoms or Liberties of the ſaid City, but wholly intending their private Profit) have of late Years deviſed and practiſed, by all ſiniſter and ſubtle Means, how to defraud the ſaid Charters, Liberties, Cuſtoms, good Orders and Ordinances; and to that end, do inwardly, in privy and ſecret Places, uſually and ordinarily ſhew, ſell, and put to Sale their Wares and Merchandizes, and uſe

Arts, Trades, Occupations, Myſteries and Handicrafts within the ſaid City, and Liberties of the ſame, to the great Detriment and Hurt of the Citizens, who pay Lot and Scot, bear Offices, and undergo other Charges, which Strangers, and others not Free, are not chargeable withal, nor will perform: For Reformation of which Diſorders, and for avoiding of ſuch Prejudice and Damage as thereby groweth to the Freemen of the ſaid City, and is now more of late, than was in any Time heretofore ſuffered; and to provide for the common Profit and Good of the Freemen and Citizens of this City.

It is therefore, by the Lord Maior and Aldermen, and Commons in this Common Council aſſembled, Ordained and Eſtabliſhed, That no Perſon whatſoever (not being Free of the City of London) ſhall at any time after the Feaſt of St. Michael now next enſuing, by any Colour, Way or Means whatſoever, either directly or indirectly, by himſelf or any other, ſhew, ſell, or put to Sale, any Wares or Merchandizes whatſoever by Retail, within the City of London, or the Liberties or Suburbs of the ſame, upon pain to forfeit to the Chamberlain of London for the time being, to the Uſe of the Maior and Commonalty, and Citizens of the ſaid City, the Sum of Five Pounds, of lawful Money of England, for every time wherein ſuch Perſon ſhall ſhew, ſell, or put to Sale any Wares or Merchandizes by Retail, within the ſaid City, Liberties or Suburbs thereof, contrary to the true Intent and Meaning hereof.

And it is further Ordained and Eſtabliſhed, That no Perſon whatſoever, (not being Free of the City of London) ſhall at any time after the Feaſt of St. Michael now next enſuing, by any Colour, Way or Means whatſoever, directly or indirectly, by himſelf or any other, keep any Shop or other Place whatſoever, inward or outward, for Shew or putting to Sale of any Wares or Merchandizes whatſoever, by way of Retail, or uſe any Art, Trade, Occupation, Myſtery or Handicraft whatſoever, within the ſaid City, or the Liberties or Suburbs of the ſame, upon pain to forfeit the Sum of Five Pounds of lawful Money of England, for every time wherein ſuch Perſon ſhall keep any Shop, or other Place whatſoever, inward or outward, for Shew, Sale, or putting to Sale, any Wares or Merchandizes whatſoever, by way of Retail; or uſe any Art, Trade, Occupation, Myſtery or Handicraft whatſoever, within the ſaid City, Liberties or Suburbs of the ſame, contrary to the true Intent and Meaning hereof: All which Pains, Penalties, Forfeitures, and Sums of Money to be forfeited by vertue of this Act and Ordinance, ſhall be recovered by Action of Debt, Bill, Plaint, to be commenced and proſecuted in the Name of the Chamberlain of the City of London for the time being, in the King's Majeſty's Court, to be holden in the Chamber of the Guild-Hall of the City of London, before the Lord Maior and Aldermen of the ſame City; wherein no Eſſoin or Wager of Law ſhall be admitted or allowed for the Defendant: And that the Chamberlain of the ſaid City for the time being, ſhall in all Suits to be proſecuted by vertue of this Act or Ordinance, againſt any Offender, recover the ordinary Coſts of Suit to be expended in and about the Proſecution thereof. And further, That one full and equal third part of all Forfeitures to be recovered by vertue hereof, (the Coſts of Suit for the Recovery of the ſame, being deducted and allowed) ſhall be, after the Recovery and Receipt thereof, paid and delivered to the Treaſury of Chriſt's Hoſpital, to be employed towards the Relief of the poor Children to be brought up and maintained in the ſaid Hoſpital. And another equal third part to him or them which ſhall give firſt Information of the Offences, for which ſuch Forfeitures ſhall grow, and proſecute Suit in the Name of the Chamberlain of the ſaid City, for Recovery of the ſame; (any thing in this Act to the contrary notwithſtanding.)

Provided always, That this Act or Ordinance, or any thing therein contained, ſhall not extend to any Perſon or Perſons, for bringing or cauſing to be brought any Victuals to be ſold within this City, or the Liberties thereof, but that they, and every of them, may ſell Victuals within the ſaid City, and the Liberties thereof, as they might lawfully have done before the making hereof; any thing herein contained to the contrary thereof in any wiſe notwithſtanding.

Note, This Act hath been allowed in the King's Courts at Weſtminſter, for a good and reaſonable By-Law; and is recited at large, in the 8th Part of Coke*'s* Reports, upon a Caſe ſolemnly argued thereon in Hillary Term, 7 Jac. I. called, The City of London*'s Caſe.*

An Abſtract of an Act of Common Council made the 20th of July, in the Seventh Year of the Reign of King Charles the Firſt, Ducie Maior, Intituled, An Act of Common Council for the Reformation of ſundry Abuſes practiſed by divers Perſons upon the common Markets and Streets of the City of London.

None to take up Places in the Streets and common Markets, to ſell Proviſions, to the Hindrance of the Country Market Folks.

WHereas the Streets and Lanes of this City are the King's High-ways for the Uſe of Paſſengers; and of late it is come to paſs, that divers unruly People, as Butchers, Bakers, Poulterers, Chandlers, Fruiterers, Sempſters, Sellers of Grocery Wares, Oyſter-Wives, Herb-Wives, Tripe-Wives, and the like, who not contented to enjoy the Benefit and common Right of Citizens, by holding their Market and continual Trades in their ſeveral Shops and Houſes where they dwell, do, contrary to all Reaſon, and to the great Scandal of the Government, by themſelves, Wives, Children and Servants, enter into, and take up their Standings in the ſaid Streets and Places appointed for the common Markets, unto which the Country People only have in former Times uſed to reſort, and vend and utter their Victuals; in which Market the ſaid Freemen do abide for the moſt part of the Day, and that not only upon Market-days, but all the Week long, with a multitude of Baskets, Tubbs, Chairs, Boards and Stools; and by their Example it is likewiſe come to paſs, that a very great multitude of Foreigners, idle and evil-diſpoſed Perſons, inhabiting in or near the City, (who framing to themſelves a way whereby to live a more eaſy Life than by Labour, and daily increaſing in number) do practiſe the like Feats: Whereby it is come to paſs, that the common Market-places by thoſe diſordered People be ſo taken up, that Country People, when they come with their Victuals and Proviſion, have no room left them to ſet down their Dorſers and Baskets, the Streets ſo peſtered, that Paſſengers are greatly hindred and diſturbed, the Inhabitants driven to forſake their Houſes and Shops, to their undoing, the Price of Victuals inhanced, to the Damage of the City in general: For Reformation of which Enormities, Be it Enacted, by the Lord Maior, the Aldermen his Brethren, and Commons of this Common Council aſſembled, and by the Authority of the ſame, That no Perſon or Perſons inhabiting in the City of London, Liberties or Suburbs thereof, after the Feaſt of St. Michael the Arch-Angel next coming, after the Publication hereof, ſhall preſume to ſit or ſtand in any common Market, Street or Lane of this City, or the Suburbs thereof, or under any Stall, in the Doors, or in the outſide of the Shop-Windows, to ſell any manner of Proviſions, Victuals or Wares whatſoever, upon pain for every time ſo doing, to undergo ſuch Penalties as hereafter enſue; viz. For the firſt Offence 20 s. Sterling. For the ſecond Offence 40 s. Sterling. For the third Offence Four Pounds. For the fourth Offence Eight Pounds. And ſo the Penalty to be doubled for every Offence from time to time, ſo often as he or ſhe ſhall offend againſt the true Meaning of this Act. Nor any Perſon dwelling or inhabiting in or near Cheapſide, Newgate Market, Gracechurch-ſtreet, or Leadenhall-ſtreet, take, require or exact any Sums of Money, or other thing of any Perſon or Perſons, for or in reſpect of their ſtanding or ſitting in their ſeveral Places, or any of them, upon the like Forfeitures, as aforeſaid; but that all and every Perſon and Perſons reſorting to the ſaid Markets, or any of them, with their Victuals, ſhall and may ſit, ſtand and put to Sale their Victuals in the common and open Markets, there freely, without paying any thing therefore, other than the ancient known Duties. Provided always, That ſuch as keep Stues, or Places of Store for Pike and Carp, ſhall and may lawfully ſit and abide in the Streets and Markets of this City and Suburbs, during the Hours appointed for Market, to utter their Fiſh; any thing in this Act to the contrary notwithſtanding.

Alſo, Be it further Enacted by the Authority aforeſaid, That no Perſon or Perſons reſorting to this City, or the Suburbs thereof, with any Victuals, ſhall open his, her or their Dorſers, or make ſhew of the ſaid Victuals, to ſell the ſame, until he, ſhe or they bring the ſame to the common Market-place, and until Morning Market-Bell begin to ring; nor ſhall ſtay longer in the ſaid Market than One in the Afternoon, upon pain for each Offence to forfeit, viz. for the firſt Offence 20 s. for the ſecond Offence 40 s. and ſo from time to time, ſo often as he or ſhe ſhall offend againſt the true Intent of this Act; the Penalty to be doubled as the Offence ſhall be multiplied. Provided always, That it ſhall and may be lawful for ſuch as by themſelves, their Wives, Children or Servants, ſhall bring Peaſe, Beans, Strawberries, Raſberries, or Milk, to the Markets or Streets of this City, to ſell, being of their own Growth or Milking, to ſtay and tarry there ſo long as he or they ſhall ſee cauſe; any Thing or Clauſe in this Act to the contrary notwithſtanding.

A Market Bell to be ſet up in every Market, to be rung twice a Day.

And be it further Enacted, That every ſeveral common Market of this City, and Liberties thereof, where want is, ſhall have a Market-Bell ſet up in a convenient Place therein, at the Charge of the Chamber; and that the Market-Bell in every ſeveral Market within this City and the Liberties thereof, ſhall be rung twice in every Market-Day, viz. the firſt ringing thereof from Lady-day to Michaelmas, to be at Seven a Clock in the Morning, and not before; and from Michaelmas to Lady-day to be at Eight a Clock in the Morning, and not before. Before which Times and Hours, by the true meaning of this Act, it ſhall not be lawful for any Perſon or Perſons to open their Dorſers, or ſet their Victuals or Proviſions to Sale. And after the ſaid Bell begins to ring, it ſhall not be lawful for any to hide, ſhadow or conceal their Victuals brought to Market, but ſhall openly ſhew the ſame. The ſecond ringing of the ſaid Bell ſhall begin at every ſeveral Market within this City and Liberties, half an hour after Eleven in the Forenoon, and ſo ſhall continue ringing for half an hour, until Twelve of the Clock. At which Hour, by the true meaning of this Act, the Retailers and Traders of this City and Liberties, may lawfully enter to make their Proviſions, and buy up the remainder of the Markets, and carry the ſame to their Houſes or Shops, and not before, upon ſuch Pains and Penalties as in this preſent Act is ſet forth and expreſſed.

And laſtly, It is Ordered, That all his Majeſty's Officers, Miniſters, and loving Subjects within this City and Liberties thereof, ſhall be aiding and aſſiſting to any Perſon or Perſons who ſhall labour and endeavour in the due Execution of the Premiſes. All which Pains, Penalties, Forfeitures, and Sums of Money to be forfeited by vertue of this Act or Ordinance, ſhall be recovered by Action of Debt, Bill or Plaint, to be commenced and proſecuted in the Name of the Chamberlain of the City of London for the time being, in the King's Majeſty's Court to be holden in the Chamber of the Guild-Hall of the City of London, before the Maior and Aldermen of the ſame City, wherein no Eſſoin or Wager of Law ſhall be admitted or allowed for the Defendant. And that the Chamberlain of the ſame City, ſhall, for the time being, in all Suits to be proſecuted (by vertue of this Act or Ordinance againſt any Offender) recover the ordinary Coſts of Suit to be expended in and about the Proſecution thereof. And if the Suit paſs for the Defendant, to recover his Coſts. And further, That one Moiety of all Forfeitures to be recovered by vertue hereof, (the Coſts of the Suit for the Recovery thereof being deducted and allowed) ſhall be, after the Recovery and Receipt thereof, paid and delivered to the Treaſurer of Chriſt's Hoſpital, to be employed towards the Relief of the poor Children, to be brought up and maintained in the ſaid Hoſpital. And the other Moiety to him or them which ſhall firſt give Information of the Offences for which ſuch Forfeitures ſhall grow, and proſecute Suit in the Name of the Chamberlain of the ſaid City, for Recovery of the ſame; any thing in this Act to the contrary notwithſtanding.

HOOKER Maior.

Ri. Bromley.

WHereas contrary to the Laws of this Kingdom, and By-Laws of the City of London, great numbers of Porters within the ſaid City and Liberties, have entered into Combinations, Covenants and Confederacies, and have taken upon them to ſet up, keep and exerciſe common Beams, Scales, Weights and Tackle, for the weighing of Goods and Merchandizes between Buyers and Sellers: By which means Merchants and others, are impoſed upon in the Prices of Labour and otherwiſe: And great numbers of Ticket Porters, who cannot raiſe forty or fifty Pounds each, to pay for their Admiſſion into ſome Confederate Gang, are kept out of Work, and reduced to extream Poverty: And the ſaid City is defeated thereby of its ancient Rights and Franchiſes in the Office of TRONAGE; One of theſe Gangs, of about twenty Men, having ſet up, and exerciſing above Thirty Beams, as appears by their own ſhewing: Now for the better Information of all whom it may concern, to know what the Laws are in this Caſe, the following Abſtract of ſome few of them is here printed; with the Copy of a Petition ſubſcribed by great numbers of Ticket Porters, who are not in Combination as aforeſaid: which Petition was delivered unto a Committee of Common Council held at Guild-Hall, London, March 28, 1700.

A Copy of a Petition delivered the 28th of March 1700, ſubſcribed by great numbers of the Ticket Porters of the City of London.

To the Worſhipful the Committee of Common Council, appointed for the better executing the Act for regulating the City Beams.

The Humble Petition of the Ticket Porters, whoſe Names are hereunto ſubſcribed, on behalf of themſelves and many others.

Sheweth,

The Ticket Porters Petition.

'THAT your Petitioners being Freemen 'of London, were (upon giving Security 'for their honeſt Behaviour) admitted Ticket 'Porters, and as ſuch, by the Laws and Cuſtoms 'of this City, they have a Right, in common 'with all other Ticket Porters, to be employed in 'any Work or Labour by any Merchants or 'others.

'But for want of a due Obſervance and Exe'cution of the ſaid Laws, ſome of your Peti'tioners Brethren, minding their own private 'Gain, have of late Years entered into Combi'nations, Covenants and Confederacies, and di'vided themſelves into divers Gangs or Fellowſhips 'at the Water-ſide, and in other Parts of the Ci'ty; by which means they raiſe great Sums of 'Money upon every one they admit into any 'Gang or Fellowſhip, as 20 l. 30 l. 40 l. and of 'ſome 50 l. under pretence of buying and main'taining Beams, Scales, Weights, and other 'Tackle for weighing of Goods and Merchan'dizes between Buyers and Sellers, and other 'Uſes.

'And ſuch of your Petitioners as are not able 'to raiſe Money to be admitted into Fellowſhip 'as aforeſaid, are not ſuffered to labour (ſo far 'as they can hinder them) except it be under 'ſome of the ſaid Gangs, at very low and under 'Rates; and ſometimes when your Petitioners 'Work is done, they find Ways and Means to de‘fraud them of Part of the Money they have laboured for; and they do very often employ great numbers of Unfreemen under them, whilſt your Petitioners, with other Ticket Porters, ſtand idle, and are not permitted to work.

‘Which Practices are not only injurious to the Publick, by advancing the Prices of Labour, but a great Oppreſſion upon your Petitioners and their poor Families, who are ready to ſtarve by reaſon thereof.

‘All which your Petitioners humbly lay before this Worſhipful Committee, deſiring that they may be admitted to manifeſt the Truth of their Complaints, and may have ſuch Relief in the Premiſes as to your Worſhips ſhall ſeem reaſonable.

And your Petitioners ſhall ever pray, &c.

And for the further Knowledge concerning the Tackle-Houſe, and Ticket Porters, and publick Beams, theſe Acts of Common Council, one made Anno 1607, another Anno 1646, and the third Anno 1712, were ſet forth the ſaid Year, viz.

Concerning Tacklehouſe Porters, and Street Porters, and Porter-Packers. Regulation of them.

WHere divers Complaints have at ſundry times heretofore been made to the Court of Lord Maior and Aldermen of this City, by Freemen Porters of the Tackle-houſes of the ſaid City, againſt other Street Porters working in the ſaid City, for interdealing with Work and Buſineſs, touching ſhipping and unſhipping of Goods and Merchandizes, as well of Merchants free of this City, as of others not free, with which Buſineſs the ſaid Street-Porters have not preſumed to deal, until of late time.

And where the ſaid Street Porters have likewiſe complained of the ſaid Tackle-houſe Porters, for that by ancient Laws and Orders procured, as they alledge, by the ſaid Tackle-houſe Porters, the Street Porters are reſtrained to interdeal in the Labour of lading and unlading, ſhipping and unſhipping of ſundry ſorts and kinds of Goods and Merchandizes, which they pretend heretofore to have done.

And where the Freemen Tackle-houſe Porters, and the Street Porters vehemently complained againſt the Porters under the Packer of the ſaid City, for that they of late time have, contrary to Uſage, intruded into the Labour and Buſineſs of packing, ſhipping and unſhipping, lading and taking up, as well of the Goods of Engliſh Merchants as of Strangers, where they have been accuſtomed to deal only in the Labour of packing, ſhipping, unſhipping, lading and taking up the Goods and Merchandizes of Merchant Strangers only.

And where there hath alſo Complaint been made to the ſaid Court, that the Packers of the Goods of Engliſh Merchants are moſt of them no Freemen of the ſaid City.

And where the Street Porters and others, as well Freemen as Foreigners, have many times uſed, and yet daily uſe in the ſaid City and Liberties thereof, a Triangle with Beam, Scales and Weights, as well at the Water-ſide as at Inns, Warehouſes, and at other Places of the ſaid City, for weighing of Woad, and other Goods and Merchandizes of ſundry Merchants and others, to the very great Hindrance of the Benefit growing to the Hoſpitals in the ſaid City, by weighing at the Great Beam at the Weigh-houſe, commonly called the King's Beam.

And where by Toleration of Foreigners without Reſtraint or Order, as well to work under the Packer for the ſaid City in the Buſineſs of Merchant Strangers, as to be Street Porters, as alſo to be Porters-packers of the Goods of Engliſh Merchants in the ſaid City, many People of bad and lewd Condition daily reſort from the moſt part of this Realm to the ſaid City, Suburbs and Places adjoining, procuring themſelves ſmall Habitations, namely, one Chamber-Room for a poor Foreigner and his Family, in a ſmall Cottage with ſome other as poor as himſelf, in the City, Suburbs, or Places adjacent, to the great increaſe and peſtering of this City with poor People; many of them proving Shifters, living by cozening, ſtealing and imbezzeling of Mens Goods, as Opportunity may ſerve them, removing from place to place accordingly; many times running away, forſaking their Wives and Children, leaving them to the Charge of the ſaid City, and the Hoſpitals of the ſame.

For Redreſs of all which Complaints and Enormities, It is Enacted, Ordained and Eſtabliſhed by the Right Honourable the Lord Maior, the Aldermen his Brethren, and the Commons in this Common Council aſſembled, and by the Authority of the ſame, That no perſon or perſons whatſoever ſhall at any time hereafter be admitted or allowed in any of the Tackle-houſes in the ſaid City, as a Maſter or Fellow Porter, unleſs he be a Freeman of the ſaid City, and ſhall be thereunto admitted and allowed by the Maſter, Wardens, and Court of Aſſiſtants of ſuch Worſhipful Company of this City as ſhall have a Tackle-houſe, or hath had uſual Porters appertaining to a Tackle-houſe in the ſaid City.

And that no perſon or perſons be henceforth admitted or allowed to be a Porter-packer of the Goods of Engliſh Merchants, or Street Porters to work and labour within this City and Liberties thereof, unleſs he be, or ſhall be free of the ſaid City, and allowed and thought fit to be ſuch a Porter-packer of the Goods of Engliſh Merchants, or ſuch a Street Porter, by the Alderman and four of the Common Council at the leaſt, of the Ward where ſuch Porter-packer of the Goods of Engliſh Merchants, or ſuch a Street Porter, ſhall reſide and dwell.

And if ſuch perſon or perſons ſo to be admitted to uſe the Feat either of a Porter-packer or Street Porter, ſhall not be dwelling in any Ward of this City, then he or they to receive his or their Allowance to uſe the Feat of a Porter-packer of the Goods of Engliſh Merchants, or to be a Street Porter within the ſaid City and Liberties thereof, from time to time, by the Alderman, or his Deputy, and four of the Common Council at the leaſt, of the Ward wherein ſuch Porter-packer or Street Porter ſhall happen to be found moſt employed in Work, four of the Maſter Porters of the ſaid Tackle-houſes being always called to the preſenting, allowance and admittance of every ſuch Porter-packer of the Goods of Engliſh Merchants or Street Porter.

Provided always, that every perſon ſo to be admitted to be a Porter-packer of the Goods of Engliſh Merchants or Street Porter, ſhall from time to time bring good Certificate in writing to the ſaid Alderman or his Deputy, and four Commoners, under the Hands of his honeſt Neighbours, of his good Behaviour, and of his certain place of Abode; to the end that every perſon, ſo as aforeſaid to be admitted a Porter, his Name and place of abiding may be Regiſtred in a Book from time to time, to remain with one whom the Lord Maior of the ſaid City for the time being ſhall appoint, of the moſt ancient Porters of the ſaid Tackle-houſes to keep ſuch Regiſter-Book.

Provided that the ſaid Tackle-houſe Porters take not above Three pence for ſuch Entry or Regiſtring of the Admittance of ſuch perſon or perſons whatſoever, upon pain of Disfranchiſement and loſs of his Office.

And be it further Enacted and Decreed by Authority aforeſaid, That every Porter-packer of the Goods of Engliſh Merchants, and Street Porter, upon his remove from any his Dwelling-place or Houſe, ſhall upon his remove give notice thereof within ſeven Days after his remove, to the ancient Maſter Porter, of his new place of Reſidence, to the end the ſame may be known and regiſtred accordingly, upon pain of Disfranchiſement.

And be it alſo Enacted by the Authority aforeſaid, That it ſhall and may be lawful for the Street Porters, and every of them, ſo as aforeſaid, by a former Act accordingly in the Maioralty of Sir Richard Pyke, Kt. to be admitted and allowed at all times hereafter to take up, unſhip, lade, carry and houſe, ſo often and when as Occaſion ſhall require, all Goods and Merchandizes of Quality hereafter ſpecified, viz. Pitch, Tar, Soap-aſhes, Clapboards, Wainſcot, Fir-poles, Maſts, Deals, Oars, Cheſts, Tables, Flax and Hemp coming from Danske or Melvyn, or out of any part of the Eaſt Countries; and all manner of Iron, Ropes, Cables, all kind of Cordage, and Green Woad, and not to deal with weighing of Woad, either at Landing, or from any Houſe, Place or Warehouſe of any Engliſh Merchant, or of any other perſon or perſons Engliſh born, Free or not Free, nor in any wiſe to intermeddle in the Labour of ſhipping, unſhipping, lading, unlading, taking up, carriage, or houſing of any other Goods or Merchandizes whatſoever belonging to any Engliſh Merchant or Merchants, Free of the ſaid City or not Free, to be ſhipped or unſhipped by Cocket or Certificate, unleſs the Overplus of Work, or Neceſſity of preſerving of the Goods of Merchants, do require further and more preſent Service than the Tackle-houſe Porters and their Company can conveniently perform.

And it is likewiſe Ordained, Enacted and Eſtabliſhed by Authority aforeſaid, That the Porters, commonly called the Porters to the Packer of the Goods of Merchant Strangers in the ſaid City, or any of them, ſhall not at any time or times hereafter in any wiſe intermeddle or deal with the ſhipping, unſhipping, lading, unlading, packing, taking up, carriage, or houſing of any manner of Goods, Wares or Merchandizes of any Merchant or Merchants, or of any other perſon or perſons whatſoever Engliſh born, that is or ſhall be Free of the ſaid City or not Free; but ſhall content themſelves with the Labour of packing, ſhipping, unſhipping, lading, unlading, taking up, portage, and houſing of the Goods, Wares and Merchandizes of Merchant Strangers only.

And that the Packer for the ſaid City, that is or that hereafter ſhall be, ſhall henceforth allow or admit no Porter to work under him for or in the packing and ſhipping of Strangers Goods, but ſuch as be or ſhall be Free of the ſaid City.

And that the Packer for the ſaid City for the time being, ſhall not directly or indirectly take any Sum or Sums of Money, or other Reward or Conſideration, for the Allowance or Admittance of any Porter to ſerve under him in the Buſineſs and Labour aforeſaid.

And it is likewiſe Enacted, Ordained and Eſtabliſhed by the Authority aforeſaid, That no perſon or perſons uſing the Feat of a Porter, or being a Foreigner, Innholder, Wharfinger or Key-keeper, where any Merchants Goods are to be landed or laid, or ſuch like, ſhall at any time after the making and publiſhing of this Act, have, keep or uſe within the ſaid City or Liberties thereof, any manner Triangle with Beams, Scales and Weights, or any other Ballance in any ſort, to weigh any the Goods, Wares or Merchandizes of any Merchant or Merchants, perſon or perſons whatſoever within the ſaid City or Liberties thereof, whereby the profits coming and growing to the Hoſpitals of the ſaid City, by weighing at the Iron Beam, or at the great Beam at the Weigh-houſe, or the profits of the Maſter-weigher and Porters of the ſame Weigh-houſe may in any wiſe be impeached, hindred or diminiſhed.

And it is further Enacted, Ordained, Eſtabliſhed and Decreed by the Authority aforeſaid, That no perſon or perſons whatſoever, ſhall at any time or times henceforth intermeddle or deal in any wiſe within the ſaid City or Liberties thereof, as a Tackle-houſe Porter, Porter-packer of the Goods of Engliſh Merchants, Street Porter, or Porter to the Packer for the ſaid City for Strangers Goods, unleſs ſuch Porter or Porters be or ſhall be Free of the ſaid City, and be or ſhall be admitted and allowed to uſe the Feat of a Porter in manner and form above ſpecified, upon pain that every one that ſhall offend, or do in any reſpect contrary to any Article, Clauſe or Sentence therein contained, ſhall forfeit Five Pounds of lawful Engliſh Money for every Offence, the ſame to be ſued for in the Name of the Chamberlain of the ſaid City for the time being, by Action of Debt, Bill, Plaint, or Information, in his Majeſty's Court holden before the Lord Maior and Aldermen in the Chamber in the Guild-hall in London; the one half of which Forfeiture ſhall be to the Chamberlain of the ſaid City, to the Uſe of the Maior and Commonalty and Citizens of the ſame; and the other half ſhall be to the Uſe of him or them that ſhall or will proſecute Suit for the ſame, in which Suit no Eſſoin, Protection or Wager of Law ſhall be admitted for the Defendant.

Provided always, that every Foreign Porter not free of this City, uſing the Feat of a Porter-packer of the Goods of Engliſh Merchants, or the Feat of a Street Porter at the Time of the making of this Act, and which at this preſent is commorant in the ſame City or Suburbs thereof, charged with Family, or being a ſingle Man, bringing a good Certificate in Writing, under the Hands of the Churchwardens of the pariſh where he is reſident, or other ſubſtantial Neighbours, to the number of Four, of his good Converſation and Demeanour, certifying alſo his Name and Dwelling-place; and thereupon by the good Diſcretion of the Alderman, or the Deputy of the Ward where he ſhall be found moſt working, if he dwell not within the Freedom and Liberties of the ſaid City, four of the Common Council of the ſaid Ward, and four of the Maſter Porters of the ſaid Tackle-houſes being called thereunto, as aforeſaid, ſhall be allowed or admitted to be a Porter, ſuch foreign Porter ſhall uſe and exerciſe the Feat of a Porter in this City and Liberties thereof, in the ſame ſort he ſhall be found to do and uſe at the time of the making of this Law, ſo long as he ſhall well and honeſtly uſe and demean himſelf in ſuch Labour and Buſineſs as he ſhall take in hand in this City and Liberties thereof, this Act, or any thing therein contained to the contrary in any wiſe notwithſtanding.

Provided alſo, that the ſaid Porters, nor any of them, ſhall take for their Work or Labour doing, of any of the Buſineſs aforeſaid, above the old and ancient uſual Rates heretofore accuſtomably taken, or that ſhall be limited or rated unto them to be taken by any Order of the Lord Maior and Court of Aldermen, or by any Act of Common Council; thoſe Rates to be ſet up in a Table in the Guild-hall, or other convenient places of the ſaid City, upon pain aforeſaid, to be ſued for and recovered in manner and form as before in this Act is ſpecified and declared.

Provided likewiſe, that the Weigh-maſter at the great Beam ſhall weigh all Foreigns and Strangers Goods coming to this City by Land or by Water, before they be ſold, if he ſhall be thereunto required, taking for his pains the uſual Duties for weighing, and no more; and the Weigher to keep a true Book of his doing, touching the ſame Buſineſs, to the end the Poor of the Hoſpitals in this City may have their Rights and Duties accordingly.

Provided alſo, That any Street Porter, or other Porter whatſoever, admitted in form aforeſaid to uſe the Feat of a Porter within this City or Liberties thereof, may lawfully and freely, at the commandment of any Merchant whatſoever, free of this City, take, carry and bear away any notable Burthen of any manner of Wares or Merchandizes whatſoever, to or from any place within this City and Liberties thereof; this Act, or any Article, Clauſe, or Sentence therein contained to the contrary notwithſtanding.

And it is further enacted, granted, and agreed by like Authority, That one Act of Common Council agreed upon by this Court on the ſeven and twentieth day of June laſt paſt, touching the Porters, ſhall be from henceforth repealed, and made void to all intents and purpoſes, any thing in the ſaid Act to the contrary notwithſtanding.

For ſettling Controverſies between the London Porters.

Whereas divers Controverſies and Differences have heretofore been between the Tackle-houſe Porters of this City and the Ticket Porters, otherwiſe called the Street Porters of this City, in and about ſeveral things concerning the Government of their Company and their ſeveral Works, inſomuch that their Government heretofore eſtabliſhed hath of late been diſcontinued, to the great diſadvantage of the ſaid Porters;

And whereas much Difference hath of late ariſen between the ſaid Porters, concerning the Clauſe of a late Act of Common Council made the ſix and twentieth day of March, 1607, in the Mayoralty of Sir John Watts, Knt. which Clauſe is touching the Overplus of certain Work, and is herein after expreſſed;

For the avoiding therefore of all Differences that may hereafter ariſe between the ſaid parties, in their ſeveral and reſpective Works, and for the better eſtabliſhment of their ſaid Government and Labours in their ſeveral Employments, and for the better ſettling of the ſaid Controverſies concerning the ſaid Overplus of Work, and for the ſettling of ſeveral other Ordinances fit and requiſite to be obſerved and kept in and by the ſaid Company:

Be it therefore Enacted, Ordained and Eſtabliſhed by the Right Honourable the Lord Mayor, the Aldermen his Brethren, and the Commons in this Common Council aſſembled, and by Authority thereof, That the Government by Acts of this Honourable Court enacted and ordained to be eſtabliſhed, concerning the ſaid Porters and their Works in all things (which are not hereby altered) ſhall be in all points for the time to come ſettled and continued by the ſaid parties.

Be it alſo further Enacted, Ordained and Eſtabliſhed for the better regulating the ſaid Company in manner following, viz. That whereas heretofore there have been yearly Twelve Rulers of the ſaid Porters, Six of the Tackle-houſe Porters, and Six of the Ticket Porters; out of which Six Rulers on the behalf of the Tackle-houſe Porters, one of them was yearly choſen to be Regiſter, for the keeping of the Accounts belonging to the whole Company: For the time to come it is hereby ordained and eſtabliſhed, That there be likewiſe choſen yearly out of the Six Rulers, on the behalf of the Ticket Porters, One of them to be yearly Regiſter with the other, on behalf of the Tackle-houſe Porters; and ſuch Regiſter ſo choſen of the ſaid Ticket Porters, to have like Authority with the other of the Tackle-houſe Porters in every reſpect, and that all Receipts, Payments and Disburſements belonging to the ſaid Company, be from time to time, and at all times hereafter, made and done in the Preſence and with the Approbation of both the ſaid Regiſters.

And further, That the ſaid Two Regiſters, once in every Year while they ſhall remain in their ſaid Office, or at the determination of the ſame, or oftner, if their Governor or Governors for the time being ſhall think fit, ſhall make and yield up unto their ſaid Governor or Governors for the time being, a juſt and true Account of all their Receipts, Payments and Disburſements whatſoever belonging to their ſaid Company, and by them the ſaid Regiſters during their ſaid Office received and paid, the ſaid Account being firſt ſurveyed and allowed under the hands of the ſaid Rulers, or the major part of them for the time being; but if it ſhall happen that either of the ſaid Regiſters be ſick, and unable to be preſent, as aforeſaid, that then what belongs to ſuch Regiſter (ſo ſick and not preſent) to be diſcharged, ſhall and may be done by one of the ſaid Rulers, by him the ſaid Regiſter to be ſubſtituted, the ſaid Ruler being of his own Feat and Faculty.

Be it alſo further Enacted, Eſtabliſhed and Ordained by the Authority aforeſaid, That all and every perſon and perſons whatſoever, that is and ſhall be allowed to be a Porter, as well of the Tackle-houſe Porters as of the Ticket, ſhall from henceforth, according to the uſual Cuſtom, duly pay his and their Quarteridge, and other Duties belonging and heretofore uſed to be paid in the ſaid Company, except ſuch as are and ſhall be for the time being choſen Rulers of the ſaid Company, and ſuch their Exemption to be only during the time that they or either of them ſhall ſtand and be Ruler in the ſaid Company, and no longer.

And further, Whereas by the aforeſaid Act of Common Council made the ſix and twentieth day of March, 1607, in the Maioralty of Sir John Watts, Knt. as aforeſaid, it is Enacted and Eſtabliſhed, That at ſuch time as the ſaid Tackle-houſe Porters ſhall have an Overplus of Work, or that the neceſſity of preſerving the Merchant's Goods require, then ſhall the ſaid Ticket Porters diſcharge the ſame, as in and by the ſaid Act appeareth.

And whereas in and about the ſaid Clauſe, much Difference hath been between the ſaid Tackle-houſe Porters and Ticket Porters, for that the ſaid Ticket Porters ſometimes do enjoy the ſaid Overplus of Work, yet are paid for ſuch their Work, either by the Day, half Day, or Hour as they work, and after the Rate of 18 d. a Day in Summer, and 16 d. in Winter, by which their Work, they being paid after the Rate aforeſaid, the Tackle-houſe Porter probably earns much more.

For the Reconciliation of which Difference, for that it is conceived that the ſaid Proviſo or Clauſe of the ſaid Act was made in favour of the Merchants, and for ſafety and preſerving their Goods, and not in favour of the Ticket Porters, in regard that by the ſaid Act it is in other places ſet forth at large, the particular Commodities whereof the ſaid Ticket Porters ſhall have and enjoy the ſole managing and working, and what Commodities the ſaid Tackle-houſe Porters ſhall by themſelves diſcharge, and how and in what manner it ſhall be ſo done, and wherein they the ſaid Ticket Porters ſhall not intertermeddle, unleſs there be ſuch Overplus, or the neceſſity of preſerving the Goods require; and alſo in regard the ſaid Tackle-houſe Porters give Security to their ſeveral Companies under whom they are, to make reſtitution, if in caſe any parcel of the Merchant's Goods, by reaſon of themſelves or Servants, ſhall be ſpoiled or wanting; and for that alſo the ſaid Tackle-houſe Porters are at the ſole Charge of providing Engines and Tackle for the diſcharge of the ſaid Work.

Be it therefore, by the Authority aforeſaid, Enacted and Eſtabliſhed, That the ſaid Tackle-houſe Porters ſhall enjoy their ſaid Work as heretofore they have done, and ſhall by themſelves (if they are able) diſcharge the Work belonging to the ſeveral Commodities in the aforeſaid Act of Common Council mentioned; and if any Overplus of Work happen to be, and that the ſaid Ticket Porters be employed for diſcharge thereof, that then whereas heretofore they had for ſuch their Work 18 d. the Day in Summer, and 16 d. in Winter, now for the time to come it is hereby Enacted, Granted and Agreed, That they ſhall have 2 s. the Day in Summer, and 20 d. the Day in Winter; the ſaid Winter Work to be taken and accompted from the beginning of November to the end of February; and the ſaid Summer Work from the end of February to the end of October. But if any of the ſaid Ticket Porters ſhall work by the Hour, then to be paid 4 d. for every Hour, provided the Hours exceed not two Hours in any one Day; and if more, and not exceeding five, then to be paid for half a Day's Work, according to the Rates aforeſaid, and the Seaſon of the Year.

Furthermore, whereas by the ſaid Act before mentioned it is provided, That for the diſcharging of ſuch Overplus of Work, when it happeneth that the ſaid Tackle-houſe Porters ſhall not employ or ſet on work any Foreigner or Foreigners whatſoever, but ſuch as are Freemen of this City, and Ticket Porters, yet the ſaid Tackle-houſe Porters have and do (as is alledged) for the moſt part at ſuch times employ Foreigners, and not Freemen, contrary to the ſaid Act;

For remedy whereof, and for the better preventing of Foreigners who come to this City, and here depend upon ſuch Labour for the Livelihood of themſelves, their Wives and Children, to the prejudice of the Freemen, and cumber of the Streets of this City, Be it therefore Enacted, Ordained, and Eſtabliſhed by the Authority aforeſaid, That if in caſe any of the ſaid Tackle-houſe Porters ſhall henceforth ſet on work any Foreigner or Foreigners whatſoever, that is not admitted a Ticket Porter (ſaving their and either of their reſpective Servants allowed him or either of them; which ſaid Servant ſo allowed to either of them ſhall be taken out of the ſaid Servants which the ſaid Tackle-houſe Porters now employ, and their Names ſhall be Regiſtred as is hereafter expreſſed) when there are Freemen and Porters ſufficient to be had to diſcharge ſuch Overplus of Work, that then and in ſuch caſe the ſaid Tackle-houſe Porters ſo offending, for every ſuch Offence ſhall pay the Sum of Five Shillings.

And whereas alſo, That at ſuch time when ſuch an Overplus of Work happens, the Ticket Porters who are Freemen, or elſe if not Free, have nevertheleſs been heretofore authorized and admitted thereunto, and who are many times requeſted to help in the diſcharge of ſuch Overplus of Work, do nevertheleſs refuſe to do the ſame, by means whereof, (there being an urgent neceſſity for diſpatch of their ſaid Work) the ſaid Tackle-houſe Porters are thereby compelled to make uſe of Foreigners, not at all lawfully admitted;

Be it therefore alſo Enacted, Ordained, nnd Eſtabliſhed by the Authority aforeſaid, for the avoiding ſuch Abuſes, That every ſuch Ticket Porter as ſhall at any time by the Tackle-houſe Porters be required to help in diſpatch of ſuch Overplus of Work, and ſhall refuſe to do the ſame, ſhall likewiſe forfeit the Sum of 5 s. which ſaid Offences, if committed, ſhall ſpeedily be complained of to the Governor or Governors for the time being, and afterwards be proved by the Oaths of two Witneſſes, to be taken before the Right Honourable the Lord Mayor for the time being; and being ſo proved, or confeſſed by the Offender or Offenders, then the ſaid ſeveral Forfeitures to be paid by the Offender or Offenders (within ſeven Days after ſuch proof or Confeſſion made) unto one or both of the Regiſters of the ſaid Porters, for the uſe of the ſaid Society; and if the ſaid Forfeiture be not paid accordingly within the ſaid time, then every ſuch Offender, by the direction of the ſaid Governor or Governors for the time being, to be ſuſpended of his place of being a Porter, either as a Tackle-houſe Porter or a Ticket Porter. And if he be a Ticket Porter, then his Ticket to be taken from him; and ſo both the one and the other, as the caſe ſhall be, to ſtand ſuſpended during the pleaſure of the ſaid Governor or Governors for the time being; and every ſuch perſon ſo ſuſpended, not to exerciſe the Feat of a Porter whilſt his ſaid Suſpenſion continueth, under the pain and penalty of forfeiting the like Sum of 5 s. for every time he ſhall ſo exerciſe the ſame; and if any perſon in contempt hereof, and contrary thereunto, ſhall ſo offend during his ſaid Suſpenſion, then the ſaid Offence to be proved in manner aforeſaid, and the like Penalty to be paid in manner aforeſaid, and for non-payment thereof accordingly, the ſaid Suſpenſion to be continued according to the Diſcretion of the ſaid Governor or Governors for the time being: But if the ſaid perſon ſhall notwithſtanding again offend in the like nature, during the time of his ſaid Suſpenſion, and the ſame Offence being proved as aforeſaid, then the Governor or Governors for the time being, ſhall and may deprive the ſaid perſon and perſons ſo offending, of his and their ſaid Place and Office; and every ſuch perſon ſo deprived, ſhall afterwards be held and accounted as a perſon unfit to be employed in the ſaid Feat of a Porter, and ſhall be left to the judgment and diſcretion of the ſaid Governor or Governors for the time being, whether ſuch perſon ſhall at all be admitted afterwards thereunto; and if by the ſaid Governor or Governors for the time being, it ſhall be thought fit to admit ſuch perſon again, yet ſuch his admiſſion ſhall be upon good teſtimony of his Honeſty and good Behaviour, and beſides the uſual Security, ſhall give other Security for his future Carriage and better Obedience in and to the Orders of the ſaid Company.

And further, if ſuch perſon ſo deprived ſhall nevertheleſs exerciſe the Feat of a Porter during ſuch his Deprivation, that then every ſuch perſon ſo offending and doing contrary to the true meaning of this Act, ſhall forfeit the Sum of 5 l. of lawful Money of England, for every Offence ſo by him committed during ſuch his Deprivation, the ſaid Sum of 5 l. to be ſued for in the name of the Chamberlain of the ſaid City for the time being, by Action of Debt, Bill, Plaint, or Information in his Majeſty's Court holden before the Right Honourable the Lord Mayor and Aldermen, in the Chamber of the Guild-hall in London; one third part of which Forfeiture of 5 l. ſhall be and come to the Chamberlain of the ſaid City, to the uſe of the Mayor and Commonalty and Citizens of the ſaid City, and one third part to come to the common Box of the ſaid Company of Porters, to be for the uſe of the ſaid Company, and the other third part to the uſe of him or them that ſhall or will proſecute Suit for the ſame; in which Suit no Eſſoign, Protection, or Wager of Law ſhall be admitted for the Defendant.

And further be it Enacted, that all and every of the ſaid ſeveral Sum and Sums of 5 s. ſo as aforeſaid ſaid forfeited and paid, ſhall come to the Common Box of the ſaid Company, for the Relief of the Poor of the ſaid Company.

But if the ſaid Ticket Porters ſhall at the time of ſuch Requeſt made, as aforeſaid, by the ſaid Tackle-houſe Porters, be otherwiſe employed, or lawfully hindred, that then, and in ſuch caſe, the refuſal of the ſaid Ticket Porter to be juſt and allowable, without incurring the aforeſaid Penalty in that behalf appointed.

And whereas there are divers Foreigners in and about this City, who have heretofore, contrary to former Acts and Ordinances, intruded to work as Porters within this City and Liberties thereof, both with the Tackle-houſe Porters, as alſo as Ticket Porters, to the great prejudice of the poor Freemen of this City and others, who are admitted to uſe the Feat of a Tackle-houſe and Ticket Porter, many of the ſame Foreign Porters having fallen upon the ſame Employments, by reaſon that the Government of the ſaid Porters hath for a time been neglected, the which Abuſe requires a ſpeedy Redreſs, by reſtraining the ſaid Foreign Porters, for the Relief of the ſaid poor Freemen: Yet notwithſtanding, inaſmuch as many of the ſaid Foreign Porters have been of long continuance, and by reaſon thereof have now made it their Livelihood for the Maintenance of themſelves, their Wives and Family, and have no other Courſe to live by;

It is therefore thought fit, and by the Authority aforeſaid hereby Enacted, That ſuch of the ſaid Foreign Porters as are not admitted, and have uſed the Feat of a Porter within this City of London and Liberties thereof, by the ſpace of one Year now laſt paſt, and ſhall within three Months now next enſuing, bring ſuch Certificate to the ſaid Governor or Governors for the time being, (as they the ſaid Governor or Governors ſhall allow) of the ſame their continuance in the ſaid Feat of a Porter by the ſaid ſpace of one Year now laſt paſt, that then every ſuch perſon and perſons ſhall and may be admitted into the ſaid Feat, and be continued Porters during their Lives; ſo as they and every of them do demean him and themſelves as others (that are already admitted) are enjoined to do.

And further it is Ordained, Enacted and Eſtabliſhed by the Authority aforeſaid, That the Name and Names of every of the ſaid Servants, ſo as aforeſaid to be allowed to every of the ſaid Tackle-houſe Porters, ſhall be regiſtred and kept in the Books belonging to the ſaid Company, to the end it may appear who they are, and that the ſaid Tackle-houſe Porters employ none other as their Servants, but ſuch their ſaid Servants as are ſo regiſtred; and ſuch other perſon and perſons as the ſaid Tackle-houſe Porters ſhall have occaſion to employ or make uſe of, ſhall from time to time hereafter be taken of and among the ſaid Ticket Porters, as is herein expreſſed.

Be it alſo further Enacted, Ordained and Eſtabliſhed by the Authority aforeſaid, That no perſon or perſons whatſoever, being a Foreigner from the Liberty of the City of London, (other than ſuch as have been a Porter by the ſpace of one Year now laſt paſt, as aforeſaid, and ſhall bring a Certificate to be allowed, as aforeſaid, and is thereupon admitted; and except alſo the ſaid ſeveral Servants to be allowed to the ſaid Tackle-houſe Porters, which is to every Tackle-houſe Porter one Servant, as aforeſaid) ſhall, after the Feaſt of the Annunciation of the Virgin Mary, now next enſuing, uſe the Feat of a Tackle-houſe Porter, Ticket or Street Porter, within this City of London, or Liberty thereof, nor as a Servant to any of the ſaid Tackle-houſe Porters, (ſaving the ſaid Servants ſo allowed the ſaid Tackle-houſe Porters, as aforeſaid) upon the pain and penalty of the Forfeitures of the Sum of five Pounds of lawful Money of England; the ſaid Sum of five Pounds to be ſued for and recovered as aforeſaid, and to come to the ſeveral Uſes aforeappointed.

And further, be it Enacted by the Authority aforeſaid, That for the time to come, for the prevention of the Entertainment or Imploying of any Foreigner or Foreigners whatſoever, to be exerciſed or to be ſet on Work in the aforeſaid Feat of a Porter, That when and as often as it ſhall happen that any or either of the ſaid Tackle-houſe Porters (after the ſaid Servants or either of them now allow'd them and regiſtred, ſhall be either dead or gone from their Service, ſhall want his or either of their ſaid Servant to be allow'd, as aforeſaid, which is to every of the ſaid Tackle-houſe Porters, one Servant and no more, as aforeſaid) that then the ſaid Tackle-houſe Porters, and every of them ſo wanting his Servant, ſhall, by Authority of this Act, be compelled to take the ſame his Servant, then afterwards to ſerve him in his or their Tackle-houſes, from among the ſaid Ticket Porters, being a Freeman, or admitted as a Ticket Porter, and not otherwiſe. But if in caſe any of the ſaid Tackle-houſe Porters ſhall at any time hereafter, after the death or departure of the ſaid Servant ſo allowed him, as aforeſaid, take any perſon into his Service, to be his Servant in his Tackle-houſe, who is a Foreigner, and not firſt admitted to be a Ticket Porter, that then every Tackle-houſe Porter ſo offending therein, ſhall for every Servant ſo by him to be entertained, being a Foreigner from the Freedom of the City of London, and not admitted as a Ticket Porter, forfeit the Sum of five Pounds of lawful Money of England, to be ſued for, and recovered and diſpoſed of, as aforeſaid.

Be it alſo further Enacted, Ordained and Eſtabliſhed by the Authority aforeſaid, in reſpect of the great Company of Ticket Porters (who are Three thouſand perſons and upwards, as is related, and who continually attend for that purpoſe) that for the time to come, no perſon or perſons whatſoever, he or they be, ſhall be permitted to exerciſe the Feat of a Porter within this City and Liberties of the ſame, unleſs that ſuch perſon or perſons ſo to be admitted, be Free of this City and Liberties of the ſame, and be approved of by their Governor or Governors for the time being, and afterwards allow'd by the Rulers of the ſaid Company for the time being, as hath been heretofore uſed.

An ACT concerning the Tackle-houſe and the Ticket Porters, and touching the Publick Beams belonging to the City of London.

WHEREAS ſeveral Controverſies and Quarrels have lately ariſen between the Tackle-houſe Porters and the Ticket Porters belonging to this City, touching the Labour or Work to them reſpectively belonging, notwithſtanding the ſeveral Acts of this Court heretofore made, for ſetling and aſcertaining the ſame, to the Obſtruction and Delay of the Buſineſs of Merchants and other perſons trading to, and from this City; For preventing venting the like for the future, Be it Enacted, Ordained and Eſtabliſhed by the Right Honourable the Lord Mayor, the Aldermen his Brethren, and the Commons of this City in Common-Council aſſembled, That the ſeveral Laws and Ordinances heretofore made, for the Government of the ſaid Porters, and for the aſcertaining and ſettling the Work and Labour belonging to them reſpectively, and not by this preſent Act altered or repealed, ſhall be and remain in full Force, and ſhall be duly obſerved and put in Execution, under the ſeveral pains and penalties in the ſaid Laws and Ordinances mentioned and contained.

For aſcertaining the Work and Labour of Porters; and for appointing a Governour of the Fellowſhip of Porters.

And be it further Enacted and Ordained by the Authority aforeſaid, That the Ticket Porters belonging to this City, and no other perſon or perſons whatſoever, have and enjoy the Work or Labour of Unſhipping, Landing, Carrying and Houſing of Pitch, Tar, Soap-aſhes, Clapboards, Wainſcot, Fir-Poles, Maſts, Deals, Oars, Cheſts, Tables, Flax and Hemp, brought hither from Dantzick, Melvin, or any other Port or place of the Countries, commonly called the Eaſt-Countries, as alſo of all Iron, Ropes, Cables, and of all other kind of Cordage, and of all Wood, commonly called Green-wood and alſo of all manner of Goods of the Growth, Product or Manufacture of the Kingdom of Ireland, and coming directly from any port or place within that Kingdom, to the Port of London, and alſo of all manner of Goods and Merchandizes coming to the ſaid Port, being of the Growth, Product, or Manufacture of any of the Plantations belonging to Great Britain; and alſo of all manner of Coaſt Goods (except Lead) that is to ſay, of all ſuch Goods originally exported from, or imported into, and after exported again from any Port or place within the Kingdom of Great Britain to the Port of London aforeſaid.

And be it further Enacted, Ordained and Eſtabliſhed by the Authority aforeſaid, that the Porters called the Tackle-houſe Porters, and no other perſon or perſons whatſoever, (except ſuch perſons as ſhall be employed by them in manner herein after mentioned) ſhall have and enjoy the Work or Labour of Unſhipping, Landing, Carrying and Houſeing of all Goods imported by, and belonging to the South-Sea Company, or the Company of Merchants Trading to the Eaſt-Indies, and of all other Goods and Merchandizes, coming from any other Ports or places, and imported into the Port of London, and not herein before particularly mentioned and deſcribed, and alſo of all Lead coming from any Port or place into the ſaid Port.

Provided always, And it is further Enacted and Ordained, That it ſhall and may be lawful, to and for either, or any of the ſaid Tackle-houſe Porters or Ticket Porters, being required or imployed by any Merchant, Factor, or Proprietor, or their Agents ſo to do, to Work and Labour in the Carrying, Shipping off, and Relading of any Goods imported from any of the Plantations belonging to Great Britain, upon the Exportation of the ſame, to any Ports or places whatſoever, and alſo in like manner to Work or Labour in the Unſhipping, Landing, Carrying and Houſing, or in the Carrying, Lading or Shipping of any Tin, that ſhall be Imported or Exported at the ſaid Port of London, and alſo of all Goods coming from Guernſey or Jerſey, or Exported thither, any thing in this preſent Act contained, or any former Law or Uſage to the contrary notwithſtanding.

And be it further Enacted by the Authority aforeſaid, That when there ſhall be at any time a great Glut of Work, or that it ſhall be neceſſary for the preſervation of the Goods of any Merchant or other perſon, the Tackle-houſe or Ticket Porters ſhall happen to employ in their reſpective Labours under them, any perſon not having his Ticket to produce, to teſtifie his being a Freeman Porter, and any Freeman Porter having and producing his Ticket teſtifying ſuch Freedom, ſhall demand and require of ſuch perſon or perſons ſo employing ſuch perſon or perſons, not having and producing his or their Tickets, teſtifying ſuch their Freedom, to employ him or them being Freemen, and producing their Tickets reſpectively, in ſuch Labour and Work, if ſuch perſon ſo employing ſuch perſon or perſons not producing their Tickets as aforeſaid, ſhall refuſe or neglect to employ and ſet on work ſuch Freemen-Porters producing his or their Tickets as aforeſaid, reſpectively in the ſaid Work or Labour, ſuch perſon or perſons ſo refuſing or neglecting to employ ſuch Freemen-Porters, producing his or their Tickets as aforeſaid, ſhall forfeit and pay to every ſuch Freeman-Porter, for every Hour that he ſhall attend in order to be employed in the ſaid Work, the Sum of One Shilling.

Provided nevertheleſs, that nothing herein contained ſhall extend or be deemed, conſtrued or taken to extend to take away, alter or abridge the Work or Labour of the Porters, commonly called the Packers Porters of this City, but that they ſhall or may enjoy and exerciſe the Work and Labour of Right belonging to them, before the making of this Act, any thing herein contained to the contrary in any wiſe notwithſtanding.

And whereas by ancient Uſage and Cuſtom, the Court of Lord Mayor and Aldermen of this City, have nominated and appointed Two of the Aldermen of this City, to be Governours of the Fellowſhip or Society of Porters of this City, to hear and determine all Differences between any of the Members of the ſame Society or between the Members of the ſame Society, and any other perſon employing or ſetting ſuch Members on work in the Feat of a Porter;

And whereas ſeveral Inconveniences have happened, by reaſon of Difference of Opinion between ſuch Governours, or by the Abſence of one of them, whereby the Determination of ſuch Differences have been greatly delayed:

Be it Enacted and Ordained, That from henceforth there ſhall be only One Governour of the ſaid Society or Fellowſhip; and that from and after the Death or Reſignation of Sir William Withers, Knight and Alderman, the preſent ſole Governour of the ſame, the Court of Lord Mayor and Aldermen ſhall nominate and appoint One Alderman to be ſole Governour of the ſaid Society or Fellowſhip; which Governour ſo appointed, ſhall have full power and authority, to hear and finally determine all Differences and Controverſies between any of the Members of the ſaid Fellowſhip, touching their Labour or Work, or between the Regiſters and Rulers of the ſaid Society, and any Members of the ſame, touching their Quarterage, or concerning the Breach of any Acts, Ordinances or Rules, made or to be made, for the better Government of the ſaid Society or the Members of the ſame, or between any Member of the ſaid Society, and any other perſon who ſhall ſet on work or employ ſuch Member in the Work or Labour of a Porter; and if any Member of the ſaid Society ſhall refuſe or neglect to ſubmit to, and perform the Order and Determination of the Governour of the ſame, every ſuch Member ſhall forfeit and pay to the Regiſters and Rulers of the ſaid Society for every ſuch Offence, the Sum of Thirteen Shillings and Four pence; and in caſe of Non-payment of the ſame on Demand, the ſame ſhall and may be recovered by Action of Debt to be commenced and proſecuted in the Name of the Governour of the ſaid Society for the Time being, in any of Her Majeſties Courts of Record within the City of London and (the Coſts of Recovering the ſame being firſt deducted) ſhall be paid to the ſaid Regiſters and Rulers for the Benefit of the Poor of the ſaid Society or Fellowſhip.

And whereas ſeveral perſons do, contrary to the ancient Laws and Cuſtoms of this City, take upon them to keep Triangles, Beams, Scales and Weights, and do thereby weigh Hops, brought to this City or Liberties of the ſame, or the Borough of Southwark, and there ſold, and alſo Iron and other Goods and Merchandizes of, or belonging to Aliens, imported or brought into this City or Liberties of the ſame, and there ſold, which by the ſaid Laws and Cuſtoms ought to be weighed at one of the publick Beams, kept by, and belonging to the ſaid City, to the great prejudice of the Rights of this City and of the Maſter-weigher or Keeper of the ſaid Beams, and of the Sick and Maimed perſons harboured in the Hoſpital of St. Bartholomew;

Be it Enacted, Ordained and Eſtabliſhed, That no perſon whatſoever ſhall from henceforth keep any Triangle, Beams, Scales and Weights, for the weighing, or ſhall weigh at the ſame, any Hops brought to this City or Liberties of the ſame, or the Borough of Southwark, and there ſold; or any Iron, or other Goods and Merchandizes, of, or belonging to Aliens, imported or brought into this City or Liberties of the ſame, and there ſold, and which ought to be weighed at one of the publick Beams belonging to this City; every perſon offending herein ſhall forfeit and pay for every Offence the Sum of Twenty Shillings: And if any Porter or Porters belonging to this City, ſhall be aiding and aſſiſting in the weighing of any ſuch Goods as aforeſaid, that ought to be weighed at one of the publick Beams belonging to this City (not being Authorized by the Maſter-weigher or Superviſor of the ſaid Beams ſo to do) at any other Beam than one of the ſaid publick Beams, every ſuch Porter offending herein, ſhall forfeit and pay for every ſuch Offence the Sum of Twenty Shillings; Which laſt mentioned Penalties ſhall be recovered by Action of Debt, to be brought in one of Her Majeſties Courts of Record in this City, in the Name of the Chamberlain of this City; and after Recovery, ſhall be applied (the Coſts and Charges in recovering the ſame being deducted) in manner following, viz. one Moiety thereof to be paid to the Treaſurer of St. Bartholomew's Hoſpital, for the Uſe of the Poor therein harboured, and the other Moiety to him or them that will firſt proſecute Suit for the ſame.

And be it further Enacted and Ordained, That if any Action ſhall be brought for any Penalty inflicted by this Act, and Judgment be given for the Plaintiff in ſuch Action, the Plaintiff ſhall recover his Coſts of Suit; and if Judgment ſhall be given for the Defendant in ſuch Action, or the Plaintiff ſhall become Nonſuit, or diſcontinue his Action, in any of the ſaid Caſes the Defendant ſhall have Judgment to recover his Coſts of Suit.

And further for weighing of Goods at the City Beams, there was divers Years before.

An Act of Common Council, made the ſecond Day of February, 1658. Ireton Maior. To enforce The Obſervation of the ancient Cuſtom of the City of London, touching weighing Goods and Merchandizes at the City Beams, commonly called The King's Beams.

Rich. Bromley. WHEREAS for the more indifferent and juſt weighing of Goods and Merchandizes, which uſe to be bought and ſold by Weight, within the City of London, and Liberties thereof, there are, and from the Time whereof the Memory of Men is not to the contrary, have been certain common Beams within the ſame City and Liberties, commonly called The King's Beams; at which there are, and have been, during all the Time aforeſaid, certain ſworn Officers attending; and who, by the Duty of their Places, have uſed and ought to attend, for the weighing of ſuch Goods and Merchandizes; And whereas all ſuch Goods and Merchandizes of all Foreigners, not being Free of the City aforeſaid, which have been ſold or bartered within the ſaid City or Liberties, to any Perſon or Perſons whatſoever, as well Freemen as others, ought, and during all the Time aforeſaid, have been accuſtomed to be weighed at one of the ſaid Beams, at, or before Sale or Delivery thereof: And whereas divers Foreigners of late times, not minding or regarding the good and wholeſome Cuſtoms of the ſame City, but out of a covetous Deſire, by ſiniſter Ways and Means to promote their own Intereſt, have oftentimes ſold and delivered ſuch their Goods and Merchandizes within the ſaid City, as well to Freemen of the ſaid City, as others, by other falſe and unjuſt Weights and Beams, without weighing the ſame at any of the ſaid common Beams; And the better to palliate their Offences, and avoid Suſpicion, do ſometime by Confederacy and Practice, with ſome Freemen of the ſaid City, cauſe fraudulent Scales to be made of ſuch their Goods and Merchandizes, to Freemen of the ſaid City, before the ſame Goods or Merchandizes do come to the ſaid City, or Liberties, contrary to the Oaths of ſuch Freemen, and ſometimes do mix their Goods with the Goods of other Perſons that are Free of the ſaid City, that ſo the diſtinct Property of the Foreigners may not be known from that of the Freemen; And at other times to procure Freemen to be Partners with them in ſuch Goods and Merchandizes, who many times have but a ſmall and inconſiderable Share therein with ſuch Foreigners: And upon ſuch, and other like groundleſs Pretences, hold themſelves diſcharged from the Duty of weighing any ſuch Goods at any of the ſaid Beams; whereas in truth they are not, nor ought by any ſuch Pretences to be at all diſcharged from the ſaid Duty; For Remedy hereof, it is hereby Enacted, Ordained, and Declared, by the Lord Mayor, Aldermen, and Commons of the ſaid City of London in Common Council Aſſembled, and by the Authority of the ſame, as followeth.

1. That all Goods, Wares and Merchandizes, of any Perſon or Perſons, being a Foreigner or Foreigners, and not Free of this City, of what kind ſoever, which uſe to be bought and ſold by Weight, which at any time after the tenth Day of February, now next enſuing, being within the ſaid City, or Liberties thereof, ſhall be ſold or bartered to any Freeman, or Freemen of the ſaid City, or to any other Perſon or Perſons whatſoever, within the ſaid City or Liberties thereof, ſhall at, or before the Delivery thereof, to ſuch Freeman or Freemen, or other Perſon or Perſons, be weighed at the ſaid common Beams, called the King's Beams, or one of them, upon pain of Forfeiture of 13 s. 4 d. for every 500 weight of ſuch Wares and Merchandizes, by the Seller or Barterer thereof, and ſo after that rate for a greater or leſſer Quantity.

2. Item, That if any covetous or fraudulent Sale ſhall be made, by any ſuch Foreigner or Foreigners, or any Freeman or Freemen of this City, of any ſuch Goods or Merchandizes, before the ſame Goods or Merchandizes come into this City, or the Liberties thereof, to the intent, to avoid the Duty of weighing ſuch Goods or Merchandizes at one of the ſaid Beams; and ſuch Goods or Merchandizes ſhall afterwards come to this City or the Liberties thereof; and ſhall after the ſaid tenth Day of February be ſold or bartered, and delivered by ſuch Foreigner or Foreigners, Freeman or Freemen, to any other Perſon or Perſons whatſoever, within the ſaid City or Liberties thereof; then ſuch Goods or Merchandizes ſhall at, or before the Delivery thereof to ſuch Perſon or Perſons, be weighed at the ſaid common Beams, called the King's Beams, or one of them, upon pain of the Forfeiture of 13 s. 4 d. for every 500 weight of ſuch Wares and Merchandizes by the Seller or Barterer thereof; and ſo after that rate for a greater or leſſer Quantity, as aforeſaid, notwithſtanding any ſuch covenous or fraudulent Sale, as aforeſaid.

3. Item, That if any Freeman or Freemen of this City, to whom ſuch fraudulent Sale of ſuch Goods or Merchandizes ſhall be made, as aforeſaid, knowing the ſame, ſhall wittingly and willingly, after the ſaid tenth Day of February, put in ure, juſtifie, or maintain ſuch fraudulent Sale, as true, and made bonâ fide, to the intent to avoid the ſaid Duty of weighing ſuch Goods and Merchandizes; then all, and every ſuch Freeman and Freemen, ſhall forfeit for every ſuch Offence, the Sum of five Pounds a piece.

4. Item, If any ſuch Goods or Merchandizes of any Freeman or Freemen of this City, ſhall be mixed with the Goods and Merchandizes of any Foreigner or Foreigners, from the Liberties of the ſame City, being of the ſame kind, ſo that the diſtinct Property and Proportion of ſuch Freeman or Freemen, in ſuch Goods or Merchandizes, from the Property and Proportion of ſuch Foreigner or Foreigners, in ſuch Goods and Merchandizes, cannot be known, and ſuch Goods and Merchandizes being within the ſaid City or Liberties, ſhall at any time, after the ſaid tenth Day of February, be ſold or bartered by ſuch Freeman or Freemen, and ſuch Foreigner or Foreigners, to any other Perſon or Perſons, before any Partition, Diviſion, or Separation be made of ſuch Goods or Merchandizes, of ſuch Freeman or Freemen, from ſuch Goods or Merchandizes of ſuch Foreigner or Foreigners; then all ſuch Goods and Merchandizes, as well of ſuch Freeman or Freemen, as of ſuch Foreigner or Foreigners, ſhall at, or before the Delivery thereof, to any Perſon or Perſons, be weighed at the ſaid common Beams, called the King's Beams, or one of them, upon pain of forfeiture of 13 s. 4 d. for every 500 weight of ſuch Wares and Merchandizes, by the Seller or Barterer thereof, and ſo after that Rate for a greater or leſſer Quantity, as aforeſaid.

5. Item, If any ſuch Goods or Merchandizes of ſuch Freeman or Freemen, ſhall be mixed, as aforeſaid, with ſuch Goods or Merchandizes, of ſuch Foreigner or Foreigners; and ſuch Goods or Merchandizes of ſuch Foreigner or Foreigners, ſhall at any time, after the ſaid tenth Day of February, be ſold or bartered within the ſaid City or Liberties, to any Perſon or Perſons before any Partition, Diviſion, or Separation thereof ſhall be made, as aforeſaid; then ſuch Goods and Merchandizes of ſuch Foreigner or Foreigners, ſo ſold as aforeſaid, ſhall, after Partition, Diviſion, or Separation thereof to be made, as aforeſaid, from ſuch Goods of ſuch Freeman or Freemen, (in caſe ſuch Separation or Diviſion ſhall be thereof made, before any Sale or Barter ſhall be made by ſuch Freeman or Freemen of ſuch Goods or Merchandizes, of ſuch Freeman or Freemen) be weighed at the ſaid common Beams, or one of them, upon pain of Forfeiture of 13 s. 4 d. for every 500 weight of ſuch Wares and Merchandizes, by the Seller or Barterer thereof, and ſo after that Rate for a greater or leſſer Quantity, as aforeſaid. But in caſe ſuch Wares or Merchandizes of ſuch Freeman or Freemen, ſo mixed as aforeſaid, ſhall be likewiſe ſold within the ſaid City or Liberties thereof, to any Perſon or Perſons, before any Separation or Diviſion thereof ſhall be made, as aforeſaid; Then all ſuch Goods and Merchandizes, ſo mixed and ſold, as aforeſaid, as well of ſuch Freeman or Freemen, as of ſuch Foreigner or Foreigners, ſhall at, or before the Delivery thereof to any Perſon or Perſons, be weighed at the ſaid common Beams, or one of them, upon pain of Forfeiture of 13 s. 4 d. for every 500 weight of ſuch Wares and Merchandizes, by the laſt Seller or Barterer thereof, and ſo after that Rate for a greater or leſſer Quantity, as aforeſaid.

6. Item, That all ſuch Goods and Merchandizes uſually ſold by Weight, whereof any Freeman or Freemen, or any Foreigner or Foreigners, ſhall be poſſeſſed in Copartnerſhip, or in common by equal Moieties, or by any other Share or Shares, which at any time after the ſaid tenth Day of February, ſhall be ſold or bartered to any Perſon or Perſons whatſoever, within the ſaid City or Liberties thereof, ſhall at, or before the Delivery thereof, be weighed at the ſaid common Beams, or one of them, upon pain of Forfeiture of 13 s. 4 d. for every 500 weight of ſuch Wares and Merchandizes, by the Seller or Barterer thereof, and ſo after that Rate for a greater or leſſer Quantity, as aforeſaid.

7. Item, It is hereby further Enacted, that the Buyer or Buyers, whether he or they be Foreigners or Freemen, of the Wares or Merchandizes aforeſaid, which ſhall be ſold, and not weighed according to the reſpective Proviſions aforeſaid, ſhall forfeit and incur like Penalties and Forfeitures, as by the Seller or Sellers thereof are before ordained to be forfeited.

8. Item, It is hereby further Enacted, That all and ſingular the Penalties and Forfeitures aforeſaid, ſhall, and may be recovered by Action of Debt, to be commenced in the Name of the Chamberlain of the City of London, for the time being.

9. Item, It is hereby further Enacted, That ſuch Action of Debt ſhall, and may be, commenced in any of the Courts of Record, within the City of London: And that no Eſſoyne, or Wager of Law ſhall be admitted or allowed. And that the Plaintiff, if he recover in ſuch Action, ſhall recover his ordinary Coſts of Suit.

10. Item, It is hereby further Enacted, That the ſeveral Forfeitures to be recovered, (Charges of Suit being deducted) ſhall be paid to the Treaſurer of St. Bartholomew's Hoſpital, near Weſt-Smithfield, London, for the time being, for the uſe of the Poor, Sick, Sore, and diſeaſed People there harboured.

11. Item, To the Intent, the Officer or Officers, who ſhall weigh ſuch Goods or Merchandizes at the ſaid common Beams, may be paid or ſatisfied the Duties due and accuſtomed for weighing thereof, without being put to the Charges of Suit for the ſame; It is hereby Enacted and Declared,

That it ſhall and may be Lawful, to and for ſuch Officer or Officers, his, or their Deputy or Deputies, Servant or Servants, to detain ſuch Goods and Merchandizes, ſo to be weighed by them, or any of them, in his or their Hands or Cuſtody, until the reſpective Duties for weighing thereof, of right due and accuſtomed, ſhall be paid or ſatisfied.

12. Provided, That nothing contained in this Act ſhall extend, to charge any Perſon or Perſons whatſoever, unleſs the Action thereupon to be brought, ſhall be commenced within the ſpace of one Year next after the Offence aboveſaid committed.

Henry III. appoints weighing of Wares.

The Office and Duties of Tronage is one of the moſt ancient Franchiſe of the City of London. Henry III. grants to the ſaid City, That no Merchant Stranger, or other, buy or ſell any Wares which ought to be weighed or troned, but by our Beam, under Forfeiture of the ſaid Wares; and it is accorded, the King ſhall have his Beam in one, two, three or four certain Places, if occaſion be, within the ſaid City; and that all Merchandizes which ſhall be ſold by Weight, which are above 25 lb. ſhall be weighed with the King's Weight, paying the Cuſtoms, &c. And if any be found to weigh Merchandizes of Weight beyond 25 lb. otherwiſe than at the King's Beam, and ſhall be therefore attainted, his Merchandizes ſhall be forfeited to the King, in whoſoever's Hands it ſhall be found, and the other Party ſhall be in grievous Mercy to the King; and that the Weigher ſhall be ſworn to the King, lawfully to weigh between Buyer and Seller; and if the Weigher be attainted of Injuſtice, he ſhall be Impriſoned a Year and a Day, and loſe his Office.

A Weigher of the King's Beam in Edward the I. his time.

In the 22d Edward I. a Weigher of the King's Beam was admitted by the Court of Aldermen.

The Grants of the Beam by Acts of Parliament.

By an Act of Parliament in Richard the Second's Time, all theſe and many more Grants and Charters touching the Beam, were confirmed to the ſaid City, as alſo by ſeveral ſubſequent Acts of Parliament: And in an Act made in the 22d Henry VIII. Cap. 8. it is Enacted and Ordained, That all Aliens made Denizens, ſhall pay to the ſaid City all ſuch Subſidies, Cuſtoms, Tolls, Duties and other Sums of Money, as they ſhould or ought to have paid, before they were Denizens, any Grant or Grants to them made, or hereafter to be made, or any Act or Acts, Statute or Ordinance to the contrary made or had notwithſtanding. And the Officers or Miniſters of the ſaid City, are to ſet up in an open Place or Places, a Table or Tables of ſuch Tolls and Duties as they claim.

Which Table of Rates for Tronage was then, and long before that time, as above.

An Act of Common-Council for reducing the Rates of the Beam.

And whereas Trade has been greatly increaſed ſince that time, the Government of the ſaid City have thought it reaſonable to reduce the ancient Rates for the accommodation and eaſe of Merchants, which is the only thing that is new in the Act of Common Council, lately made in the Mayoralty of Sir Francis Child.

Act for the King's Beam Sir Fr. Child Maior.

This ſaid Act of Common Council made in the Maioralty of Sir Francis Child, bore date November the 10th, in 10 W. III. Ann. 1698. Intituled, An Act for the better Regulation of the weighing of Goods and Merchandizes at the King's Beam. Which confirmed this Right of the City weighing Foreigners Goods to be ſold, and the Penalties thereof in the Act aforeſaid: And alſo appointed certain Rates and Duties to be paid to the Maſter-Weigher, or Supervisor of the ſaid Common Beams, to the Uſe of the Maior, Commonalty and Citizens, or their Aſſigns; that is, Maſter-Weigher.

The Maſter-Weigher or Superviſor to be Authorized and Licenſed by this Court, or a Committee thereof. Or that if any other keep or uſe any Beam or Beams for weighing of Goods, that Perſon for every ſuch Offence to forfeit 4 l. 19 s. Yet this not to be conſtrued or expounded to debar any Freeman from uſing his own Beam, in weighing of his own proper Goods, being not in Copartnerſhip with a Foreigner.

Office of the Weigher.

That every Maſter-Weigher, or other Officer appointed by the Maſter-Weigher, ſhall once in three Months, carefully examine all Weights and Beams with the Standard kept for that Purpoſe; and ſhall conſtantly keep them true and agreeing with the ſame.

No Weigher or Superviſor, or other Officer hereafter to be appointed to attend the ſaid Beam, to uſe the Art and Myſtery of a Factor or Agent, for Buying or Selling any Goods, or employ himſelf as a Broker, to make any Bargain, Contract or Agreement between Merchant and Merchant, or Buyer and Seller.

One or more exact Regiſters to be kept by the Maſter-Weigher of all Goods and Merchandizes weighed, and of the true Weight thereof.

That every Maſter-Weigher ſhall ſet on Work and employ ſuch Porters as are of the Fellowſhip of Ticket Porters. And they to ſubmit to ſuch Rates as this Court ſhall think fit and reaſonable.

That they who have the Government of theſe Porters, provide competent Numbers of them, as may by turns attend at the Weigh-houſe every Morning upon the ſaid Maſter-Weigher.

The Maſter-Weigher upon Requeſt, for weighing any Draught of Goods (the Perſons ſo requiring, undertaking to pay the Charge of carrying and re-carrying the Beams, Triangles, Weights and Scales) to apply himſelf to the weighing thereof.

The Weigh-Houſe.

The Weigh-houſe ſituate in Little Eaſtcheap in Billingſgate Ward, to be deemed the Common Office for Tronage and Weighing of all Goods and Merchandizes that ſhall be ſold within the City and Liberties thereof: And to be the only Market for buying and ſelling of Hops.

All Penalties and Forfeitures in this Act mentioned, ſhall be ſued for and recovered in the Name of the Chamberlain of the City. And one Moiety of all ſuch Forfeitures to be paid to the Treaſurer of the Corporation for the POOR within this City, for their Uſe. And the other Moiety to the Perſons who ſhall ſue for the ſame. The Suit or Action to be commenced within Six Months.

Two Maſter-Weighers.

There were two Maſter-Weighers and Superviſors of all the Common Beams in the City and Borough, ſworn Anno 1699. And becauſe many Porters, Labourers, and Others, had ſet up and kept Common Beams and Weights, contrary to the ancient Cuſtoms and Laws of the City; an Advertiſement was ſet forth the ſame Year by thoſe Maſter-Weighers, for the better regulating that Abuſe, and Information of all Perſons concerned; which was as follows.

ADVERTISEMENT.

WHEREAS the Office of Tronage hath been veſted in the Mayor and Commonalty, and Citizens of the City of London, Time out of mind, and is Confirmed unto them by ſundry Acts of Parliament.

And whereas John Dunmoll and Charles Booth were, the 19th Day of December 1699, Conſtituted and Appointed, under the Common Seal of the ſaid City, Maſter-Weighers and Superviſors of all the Common Beams within this City and the Liberties thereof, and Borough of Southwark: And were then Sworn for the due Executing of the ſaid Office of Tronage, in the Juſt Weighing of Goods and Merchandizes between Buyers and Sellers;

And whereas great Numbers of Porters, Labourers, and Others, Free of this City, have, contrary to the Laws and Statutes of this Kingdom, and to the Ancient Cuſtoms and By-Laws of this City, taken upon them to Set up, Keep, and Exerciſe Common Beams and Weights, for the Weighing of Goods and Merchandizes between Buyers and Sellers; which ſaid Practice is not only Inconſiſtent with, but Deſtructive of the ſaid Office of Tronage, and is a manifeſt Violation of the Faith and Oath they gave when Admitted into the Freedom of the ſaid City;

Now the ſaid John Dunmoll and Charles Booth do hereby give Notice, to all whom it may Concern, That if any Perſon or Perſons, ſhall Set up, Keep, or Exerciſe any Common Beam or Beams, for the Weighing of Goods or Merchandizes within this City, or the Liberties thereof, or in the Borough of Southwark, (except Freemen, for the Weighing of their own proper Goods in their own Houſes or Ware-houſes,) they will be Proſecuted according to the Laws in that Caſe made and provided.

And to the End that no Merchant or Others may be Impoſed upon, they, the ſaid John Dunmoll and Charles Booth, do hereby give farther Notice, That Conſtant Attendance is, and will be, Daily given at their Office at the Weigh-Houſe in Little Eaſtcheap: Where all Merchants and Others ſhall be furniſhed with Triangles, Beams, Scales, Weights, and Ticket-Porters, for the ſpeedy Diſpatch of their Buſineſs. And that no Merchant or Others, Free of this City, ſhall Pay more or Greater Rates, for the Weighing of any Goods or Merchandizes, than they have heretofore done to ſuch Porters or Others whom they Imployed about the ſame, or ſuffer any Delay, or other Inconveniency, by reaſon of their Application unto them the ſaid John Dunmoll and Charles Booth, who are Appointed and Sworn for the Keeping and Governing of all Common Beams, as aforeſaid: And are Oblig'd to Imploy Ticket-Porters, being Freemen of this City, in the Uſe and Exerciſe of the ſaid Beams. So that the Ticket-Porters will have no leſs Imployment than before the ſaid John Dunmoll and Charles Booth were Admitted to the ſaid Office of Tronage.

Note, Every Freeman of this City of London, upon his Admiſſion, amongſt other Things, Swears to Maintain and Keep Harmleſs the Franchiſes and Cuſtoms thereof, as much as in him is: And to Colour no Foreign Goods under or in his Name, whereby the King or this City may loſe their Cuſtoms or Advantages, &c.

Note, That beſides the Obligation of the Oath of a Freeman, as aforeſaid, every Common-Council-Man is Sworn to give Good and True Counſel in all Things, touching the Commonweal of this City, after his Wit and Cunning. And that for Favour of any Perſon, he will Maintain no Singular Profit againſt the Common Profit of this City, &c.

Another very uſeful Act was made for the Markets within the City, intituled, An Act for the Settlement and well ordering of ſeveral publick Markets within the City: The Sum of this may be read before in Chap. XXIII. which Act, with one for the better ordering of the Watches within the City of London, Robinſon Mayor, are printed at large in a late Book, called Privilegia Londini. P. 82, & 67.

At a Court of Aldermen, held 10 Novemb. 1691.
STAMPE, Mayor.

A Committee of Common Council ſitting to receive Information about Foreign buying and ſelling.

THIS Court having received frequent Complaints of the many Miſchiefs ariſing to the Freemen of this City in their Trade and Commerce, occaſioned by Foreign Buying and Foreign Selling; as alſo by divers Freemen Colouring Foreigners Goods, which is contrary to the Laws and Uſage of this City, and a Deſtruction to the Trade and Privilege which the Freemen ought to enjoy; and being reſolved (as much as in them lies) to prevent the ſame for the future, have therefore appointed a Committe to ſit in the Council-Chamber in Guild-hall every Wedneſday, at Nine of the Clock in the Forenoon, to receive Informations of any Foreign Buying and Foreign Selling. And here ends theſe Orders.

The Recorder's Advice for the diſcovery of Felons.

J. S.

The Recorder (tho' not this Year, but divers Years after) gave this Advice for the finding out Felons in London. 'I take this Courſe, as I think, to be the beſt and ſureſt way to find out Felons, Thieves, and ſuch like: Viz. That my Lords direct their ſpecial Letters of Commandment to my Lord Maior, that he give Order to every Alderman, and to their ſeveral Deputies, to cauſe ſeveral Conſtables and Beadles of each Ward, each Man within his Precinct, to take every Night an account of every Gueſt that lodgeth in their Houſe, and to enter the ſame into a Book, and to preſent the ſame unto their Alderman; and ſo the Aldermen over to my Lord Maior. The which thing is even as eaſy to be done as it was at Calais, being Engliſh. For the Charge and Precinct of every Conſtable in Calais, was as big as the Precinct of any Conſtable in London. And this being duly executed, it would be an Example to the whole Realm to do the like. And by this means (which is but the due Execution of the ancient Laws of this Realm) ſhould be avoided great Whoredoms, Murthers, Thefts, unlawful Aſſemblies, Conſpiracies, Confederacies and ſuch like; and in the end, ſave numbers from Tyborn.

Two City Marſhals appointed.

But notwithſtanding the former Order, and the Charges committed to the Beadles of the Hoſpitals to clear the City of Vagabonds and Beggars, it had not its full Effect. For in the Year 1570, or thereabouts, the City ſwarmed again with Beggars; many whereof were valiant and ſturdy Rogues, and Maſterleſs Men and Vagrants, and maimed Soldiers. For the preventing the Miſchief occaſioned by ſome of theſe, and the great Annoyance they gave the City, the City took a more regular Courſe; and appointed a Committee to treat with ſome fit Perſons to be Marſhals of the City; who ſhould take ſome good Courſe with theſe wandering People, for the clearing of the Streets of them, and appointing them to their ſeveral Places and Puniſhments, if they deſerved it. And theſe were to be armed and well aſſiſted with Servants for the ſafer Execution of their Office. Theſe Committees choſe two able Perſons, Viz. William Sympſon and John Read, to take upon them this Office, to be the City Marſhals, for the Conſideration of ſix Shillings and eight Pence a day, for ther of them and their Horſes, and ſix Perſons apiece to attend on each every Day, at 12 d. apiece; which is twelve Shillings the Day for either of them. The Appointment of thoſe Men to be left unto the Marſhals themſelves, to make the better Choice of fit Men for their Purpoſe. They required moreover, that one Month's Pay, amounting to 35 l. 9 s. 4 d. at 28 Days to the Month, for them and their Attendance, might be paid them aforehand, the better to furniſh them in their Preparation and Wants. And to help forward this Work, tending to ſo notable a Purpoſe, with all ſpeed to be expedited, the Committees thought convenient that this Month's Pay might, by way of Loan, be ſupplied among the Aldermen. And in that mean Seaſon, and upon the well proceeding therein, the Commons might be moved to the Eſtabliſhment of a ſettled Supply for the Continnance thereof in ſome convenient manner. And that then after there might be a Weekly Payment of their Salary by Mr. Chamberlain, and the Aldermens Disburſements ſatisfied, when that Contribution ſhould be eſtabliſhed. It was alſo thought convenient that twelve fair Partizans ſuitably and conveniently armed, ſhould be preſently provided by the Chamberlain for this Service, at the Charge of the City; and Coats or Mandilions for the Attendants upon the Marſhals.

It was alſo thought by the Committees, that the Name of MARSHAL, for the diſordered Perſons in the City of London, would be moſt proper, and might be beſt uſed without Offence. And this ſeems to have been the beginning of the Office of the City Marſhal.

Orders about the Plague.

About the Year 1570, or within ſome few Years of it, the Plague was in the City. Then great care was taken for preventing the ſpreading of the Infection; and for hindring of idle Perſons going about, that might carry it along with them. There were Orders ſet down by the Lord Maior and Aldermen, for taking away ſuch Enormities, as were means not only to continue, but encreaſe the Plague and Diſorders in the City; being taken out of Proclamations ſet forth by the City, and out of Articles made and decreed for providing for the Poor, and ſetting them to Work.

THE Queen in the Year 1572, being ready to go her Progreſs, took care of the City, and gave the Lord Maior ſpecial Charge to look after his Government; and joyned with him, to deviſe by all good means, for the quiet Order to be continued, both in the City and Places adjoyning, the Archbiſhop of Canterbury, the Biſhop of London and others: and wrote to him this Letter following in the Month of July.

To the LORD MAIOR of London.

RIght Truſty and Well-beloved, We grete you well. Altho' we doubt not, but that by the Authority you have as Lord Maior of our City of London, with the Aſſiſtance and Advices of your Brethren of the ſame, you may and will ſee our ſaid City well governed, and our good and faithful Subjects ordered and continued in Quietneſs, as other your Predeceſſors, and your Self have commonly done: Yet, for the ſpecial Care We have for our ſaid City, and Weale of our good Subjects, thinking it convenient for your own Eaſe, to have you aſſiſted by other Perſons of great Truſt, Wiſdom and Experience, during this Time of our Progreſs and Abſence in remote Parts from thence; and eſpecially that no Diſorder ſhould ariſe in the Suburbs, or other Places adjoyning to the City, out of your Juriſdiction: We have for that purpoſe made choice of the moſt Reverend Father in God the Archbiſhop of Canterbury, the Biſhop of London, L. Wentworth, Sr. Anthony Cook, Sir. Tho. Wroth, Sir. Owyn Hopton, Sir Tho. Greſham, Dr. Wylſon, and Tho. Wilbraham: And have appointed that they, or ſome convenient Nomber of them, ſhall join with you, to deviſe, by all good means, from time to time, as Occaſions may give Cauſe, for quiet Order to be continued in our ſaid City, and among our Subjects, and to prevent and ſtay Diſorders, both there and in other Parts near to the ſame, being out of your Juriſdiction. For which Purpoſe, and for the better Underſtanding of our Deſire and Intention, We have cauſed our Privy Council to confer with ſome of the aforenamed Perſons, as you ſhall underſtand by them. Willing and requiring you (when you ſhall meet together, or ſome of them with you) for the better doing thereof, to agree upon ſome certain Place and Time, once every Week or oftener, as the Caſes may require. And their to meet for the due Execution of our good Meaning and Pleaſure.

Writs of Habeas Corpus abuſed.

About this time a great Abuſe prevailed in London; which was, That the worſt ſort of People, and other Evil-Doers in this City, became emboldened in their Wickedneſs by this means; that when any of them was committed to Priſon by the Maior, Sheriffs or Aldermen, for any Diſobedience, Contempt, leud Living or other Miſdemeanors, they forthwith obtained Writs of Habeas Corpus, whereby they diſcharged themſelves out of Priſon. So as theſe Magiſtrates could not do execution of Juſtice upon them, to the great encouragement of Malefactors, and contempt of Authority. Therefore in the Year 1572, and in the Month of November, Sir Lionel Ducket Maior, by a Letter, moved the Lord Treaſurer, to be a Means to the Queen's Juſtices, that the ſame Writs might not be ſo common, unleſs it were in Caſes depending in Suit betwixt Party and Party in the Courts of this City: Whereby Juſtce ſhould be better and more ſpeedily executed, to the terror of the Leud, and the comfort of the Queen's good and honeſt Subject, and to the Quietneſs and good Order of the City.

Veniſon forbid by Act of Common Council.

Great Houſekeeping and Feaſting, as it was anciently uſed in London, ſo the Cuſtom continued down all along Q. Elizabeth's Reign, eſpecially among the Companies, and at the Chief Magiſtrates Tables. There was exceſſive ſpending of Veniſon, as well as other Victuals in the Halls. Nay, and a great conſumption of Veniſon there was frequently at Taverns and Cook's Shops; inſomuch that the Court was much offended with it. Whereupon Anno 1573, that the City might not continue to give the Queen and Nobility Offence, the Lord Maior, Sir Lionel Ducket, and Aldermen had, by Act of Common Council, forbidden ſuch Feaſts hereafter to be made, and reſtrained the ſame only to neceſſary Meetings: in which alſo no Veniſon was permitted. And becauſe they found great Expence of Veniſon to have been in Taverns and Cook's Houſes, and withal very many and great Enormities, by reaſon of Drunkenneſs, ſeditious Rumours, unthrifty Aſſemblies, Incontinence, and other Evil to grow of inordinate reſorting to Taverns and Tippling Houſes, eſpecially for the meaner ſort, they reſtrained drinking and eating in ſuch Houſes. And the Maior ſending this Act to the Lord Treaſurer, prayed him that he would likewiſe take the ſame Order in St. Martins and Weſtminſter, and other exempt and adjoyning Places; without which, their Proceedings would lack a great part of the Fruit that was hoped to enſue thereby.

Places in Reverſion.

Granting Places in Reverſion was contrary to ſome of the ancient Laws of the City: for the preventing whereof, divers Laws had been made by the Maior and Aldermen. And in the Year 1574, finding yet the Inconvenience thereof, the Maior and Aldermen renewed that Order; and took ſpecial care for putting it in due Execution, that the Offices of the City ſhould not be any more granted in Reverſion. Which was a ſpecial Ordinance among them, and which had been made for great Cauſes touching the State of the City: and chiefly to ſatisfy the Commons of the City, who ſhewed great Diſlike of this Practice.

London free from Rogues and Maſterleſs Perſons.

By the Care of Fleetwood the Recorder, and the other Magiſtrates, in the Year 1575, there were few or no Rogues and Thieves in the Goal. For the Lord Keeper Bacon, in the Month of Auguſt, ſitting in the Star-Chamber, and according to the Order, calling for the Book of Miſbehaviours of Maſterleſs Rogues, Fencers, and ſuch like, there was none to preſent for London. Tho' for Surrey there were five or ſix Strumpets, that had lately been puniſhed at the Aſſizes at Croyden. And Weſtminſter, the Dutchy, [that is, the Places about St. Clements and the Savoy] St. Giles, High Holbourn, St. John's Street and Iſlington (great Harbours of ſuch miſdemeaned Perſons) were never ſo well and quiet. For Rogue nor maſterleſs Man dared now once to appear in thoſe Parts. Into ſuch good Order had the Care of the Magiſtrate at this time brought the City and Suburbs.

The number of Alehouſes reduced.

In this Year 1575, in the Month of Auguſt, at the Star-Chamber before mentioned, the Lord Bacon ſet down in Writing certain Orders for reforming of ſundry Matters: One was for ſuppreſſing of over great number of Alehouſes. Soon after, the Lord Maior, Sir Rowland Hayward, and the Recorder for the Liberties of Southwark, Juſtice Southcote, and the Recorder for Lambeth Town, Lambeth Merſh, the Clink, the Bank, Paris Garden, the Overground, Newington, Bermondſeyſtreet, and Kentſtreet; ſetting altogether, they put down above two hundred Alehouſes, and yet left a ſufficient Number; yea, and more they feared than the Lord Keeper would well like of at his next coming. Then after Dinner, the Dean of Weſtminſter, and the Recorder, went to Weſtminſter: and there in the Court, they had before them all the Officers of the Dutchy and of Weſtminſter; and put down near an hundred Alehouſes there. And the like Reformation was done at St. Giles, High Holborn, St. Johnſtreet, and Iſlington. Mr. Lieutenant and Mr. Fiſher dealt for the Eaſt Parts of the City.

No Reprieve or Pardon, the Court being abſent.

It is remarkable, all this good Order for Reformation was taken, when the Court was abſent; as it was now being fled at a Diſtance, by reaſon of the Plague this Year (1575,) in London. Then did Fleetwood the Recorder uſe theſe Words in a Letter to the Lord Treaſurer, then with the Court at Buxton: 'The only Cauſe that this Reformation taketh ſo good effect here about London, is, That when by Order we have either juſtly executed the Law, or performed the Councils Commandment, We are wont to have either a great Man's Letter, a Lady's Ring, or ſome other Token from ſuch other inferior Perſons as will deviſe one Untruth or other, to accuſe us of, if we perform not their unlawful Requeſts. The Court is far off. Here we are not troubled with Letters, neither for the Reprieve of this Priſoner, nor for ſparing that Fray-maker. Theſe Secretaries, Chamber-Keepers and Soliciters in the Court, procure many Letters from their Lords and Ladies upon untrue Suggeſtions. The which Letters do great Hurt. Thus the honeſt Recorder.

Juſtice executed impartially.

Two Years after, viz. Auguſt 1577, there was a great Seſſions, eighteen executed at Tyborn, and one Barlow, Prieſt: all notable Cut-purſes and Horſe-Stealers, and the chiefeſt Thieves in the Land. The Recorder informing the Lord Treaſurer, according to Cuſtom, of the Tranſactions of the Seſſion, adds, That there was Plain Dealing, and neither Favour nor Partiality. And that it was the quieteſt Seſſions that he ever was at: and no more Juſtices but the Lord Maior, Sir Will. Damſel and himſelf; and, the Court being removed from London to Windſor, for fear of the Plague, there was not any reprieved; hinting by the by, that to be the reaſon of the Peaceableneſs of the Seſſion, and the good Juſtice done ſo impartially.

Letters from the Lords for good Orders.

In the Year 1578, and in the Month of July, (the Queen as it ſeems, now going her Progreſs) the Lords of the Council ſent their Letters, for the good Ordering of the City, to the Biſhop of London, the Lord Wentworth, the Lord Maior, Mr. Lieutenant of the Tower, Recorder Fleetwood. There uſed to be joyned to theſe in former Letters from the Court to the ſame Inſtant, Sir Thomas Greſham, Sir William Damſel, the Dean of Weſtmin-

Weſtminſter, Mr. Juſtice Southcote, and others, but by Omiſſion left out in theſe Letters. Being met, the Recorder ſhewed unto the Aſſiſtants certain Points that the Lord Treaſurer in time paſt gave them for keeping good Order; Viz. Playes, unlawful Games, Fence-Schools, Vagabonds and ſuch like, to be ſuppreſt; to have a vigilant Eye to the Plague, and to the Watches, and to lay Privy Searches. The Benefit of which appeared, that at the laſt Privy-Search Mr. Fiſher and the Recorder took above Sixty Rogues, being all of the Country. They ſent them alway at their peril; and ſome were well whipped.

The Encreaſing of the City by Buildings and Inmates, was look'd upon as very dangerous to the City, and of very ill Conſequence. Wherefore the Queen at the Cities deſire, ſet forth this following Proclamation.

By the QUEENE.

Proclamation against new Buildings and Inmates.

THE Queenes Maieſtie, perceiuing the ſtate of the Citie of London, (being auncientlye termed her Chambre) and the ſuburbes and confines thereof, to increaſe dayly by acceſſe of people to inhabite in the ſame, in ſuch ample ſort, as thereby many inconueniences are ſeene already, but many greater of neceſſitie like to followe, being ſuch as her Maieſtie cannot neglect to remedie, hauing the principall care vnder Almightie God to foreſee aforehand, to haue her people in ſuch a Citie and confines, not onely well gouerned by ordinarie Juſtice, to ſerve God, and obey her Maieſtie, which by reaſon of ſuch multitudes lately increaſed, can hardly be done without deuiſe of mo newe iuriſdictions and officers for that purpoſe, but to be alſo prouided of ſuſtentation of victuall, foode, and other like neceſſaries for mans life vpon reaſonable prices, without which no Citie can long continue: And finally to the preſeruation of her people in health, which may ſeeme impoſſible to continue, though preſently by Gods goodnes the ſame is perceiued to be in better eſtate vniuerſally, then hath bene in mans memorie: yet where there are ſuch great multitudes of people brought to inhabite in ſmall roomes, whereof a great part are ſeene very poore, yea, ſuch as muſt liue of begging or by worſe means, and they heaped vp together, and in a ſort ſmothered with many families of children and ſeruantes in one houſe or ſmall tenement, it muſt neede follow (if any plague or popular ſicknes ſhoulde by Gods permiſſion, enter amongſt thoſe multitudes) that the ſame would not onely ſpread it ſelfe and inuade the whole Citie and confines, as great mortalitie ſhoulde enſue to the ſame, where her Maieſties perſonall preſence is many times required, beſides the great confluence of people from all partes of the Realme by reaſon of the ordinarie Termes for Juſtice there holden, but woulde be alſo diſperſed through all other partes of the Realme, to the manifeſt danger of the whole body thereof, out of the which neither her Maieſties owne perſon can be (but by Gods ſpeciall ordinance) exempted, nor any other whatſoeuer they be. For remedie whereof, as time may nowe ſerue, vntill by ſome further good order to be had in Parliament or otherwiſe, the ſame may be remedied: Her Maieſtie by good and deliberate aduiſe of her counſell, and being alſo thereto mooued by the conſiderate opinions of the Lord Maior, Aldermen, and other the graue wiſe men in and about the Citie, doth charge, and ſtraightly command all maner of perſons of what qualitie ſoeuer they be, to deſiſt and forbeare from any newe buildings of any houſe or tenement, within three miles from any of the gates of the ſayde Citie of London, to ſerue for habitation or lodging for any perſon, where no former houſe hath bene knowen to haue bene, in the memorie of ſuch as are now liuing, And alſo to forbeare from letting or ſetting, or ſuffring any more families then one onely to be placed or to inhabite from henceforth in any houſe that heretofore hath bene inhabited.

To forbear new Buildings within three Miles of London.

And to the intent this her Maieſties Royal commandment and neceſſary prouiſion may take place and be duely obſerued, for ſo vniuerſall a benefite to the whole body of the Realme, for whoſe reſpects all particular perſons are bound by Gods lawe and mans, to forbeare from their particular and extraordinarie lucre: Her Maieſtie ſtraightly chargeth the Lorde Maior of the Citie of London, and all other Officers hauing authoritie in the ſame, and alſo all Juſtices of peace, Lordes, and Bailifes of liberties, not being within the iuriſdiction of the ſaid Lorde Maior of London, to foreſee that no perſon do begin to prepare any foundation for any new houſe, tenement, or building, to ſerue, to receiue, or hold any inhabitants to dwell or lodge, or to uſe any victualling therein, where no former habitation hath bene in the memorie of ſuch as now doe liue: but that they be prohibited and reſtrained ſo to do. And both the perſons that ſhall ſo attempt to the contrary, and all manner of workmen that ſhall (after warning giuen) continue in any ſuch worke tending to ſuch newe buildings, to be committed to cloſe priſon, and there to remaine without baile, vntill they find good ſureties with bondes for reaſonable ſummes of money (to be forfaitable and recouered at her maieſties ſuite, for the uſe of the Hoſpitals in and about the ſaid citie,) that they ſhall not at any time attempt the like. And further the ſaid officers ſhall ſeaze all manner of ſtuffe ſo (after warning giuen) brought to the place where ſuch newe buildings ſhalbe intended, and the ſame cauſe to be conuerted and employed in any publicke vſe for the Citie or pariſhe where the ſame ſhalbe attempted. And for the auoyding of the multitudes of families heaped up in one dwelling houſe, or for the conuerting of any one houſe into multitude of ſuch tenements for dwelling or victualling places, the ſaide Lorde Maior and all other officers, in their ſeueral liberties within the limites of three miles, as aboue mentioned, ſhall commit any perſon giuing cauſe of offence from the day of the publication of this preſent proclamation, to cloſe priſon, as is afore limited. And alſo for the offences in this part of increaſe of many indwellers, or as they be commonly termed, Inmates, or vnderſitters, which haue beene ſuffered within theſe ſeuen yeeres, contrary to the good auncient lawes or cuſtomes of the Citie, or of the Boroughes and Pariſhes within the foreſaid limite of three miles afore mentioned, the ſaid Lord Maior and other the officers aboue mentioned, ſhall ſpeedily cauſe to be redreſſed in their ordinarie courtes and lawe dayes, betwixt this and the feaſt of all Saintes next comming. Within which times ſuch underſitters, or Inmates, may prouide themſelues other places abroade in the Realme, where many houſes reſt vnhabited, to the decay of diuers auncient good Boroughes and Townes. And becauſe her Maieſtie intendeth to haue this ordinance duely executed: her pleaſure is, that the ſaid Lord Maior of London, and other the officers hauing iuriſdiction within the ſaid ſpace of three miles aboue mentioned, ſhall after the proclamation hereof, as ſpeedily as they may, meete in ſome conuenient places neere to the ſaid Citie, and there (after conference had) accord among themſelues, how to proceede to the execution hereof. And if cauſe ſhall ſo require, to impart to her Maieſties priuie counſell any let or impediment that may ariſe, to the intent that remedy be giuen to any ſuch impediment, according to her Maieſties pleaſure heretofore expreſſed.

Increaſe of Inmates to be redreſs'd.

Giuen at Noneſuch the ſeuenth day of July, 1580. in the two and twentieth yeere of her Maieſties reigne.

God ſaue the QUEENE.

to the Queenes moſt excellent Maieſtie.

rd Trearer's Dire-tions to the new L.
Maior.

In the ſame Year 1580, Sir John Branch entring Lord Maior, when he came to the Court of Exchequer to take his Oath, the Lord Treaſurer declared himſelf, for the neerneſs of his Place about the Queen's moſt excellent Majeſty, to underſtand her Pleaſure ; and delivered unto him ſeveral Advertiſements of certain Matters, to be had in remembrance, and diligently lookt into.

Firſt, For Execution of the Queen's late Proclamation, namely, againſt the Encreaſe of new Buildings, and Multiplication of Families within the City of London, and three Miles Compaſs of the ſame. Which Proclamation his Lordſhip ſaid to have proceeded from Information given from the Maior himſelf: Who had Advertiſed the Council, that the Multitude in and about the City did ſo overgrow, that there was ſome Fear and Peril of ruling them. And further he alledged Three Conſiderations as Grounds of that Proclamation, viz. The overpeopling for Governance ; eſpecially of the worſt and baſeſt Sort: The Exceſs of Prizes of Victuals and Fewel : And the Danger of Plague and Infection. From which her Majeſties Perſon could not be inſured to be free.

Secondly, For Proviſions of Hoſpitals, and other good Means to be thought of, in time of Health againſt time of Sickneſs.

Thirdly, The Conſervation of the River of Thames. Wherein his Lordſhip firſt made mention of the Cities Juriſdiction from London Bridge to Staues. And therein did remember that Hatches, Stops and Wayres, wherewith Her Majeſty was grieved, and found fault in the Paſſage of Her own Barge ; beſide the Multitude of Fry of Fiſh deſtroyed thereby, and made Meat for Swine. He alſo made mention of the Commodity of the River for bringing of Fewel, Victual and Carriages that way to the City : And concluded, That Order had been given for Redreſs thereof ; but he heard not of the executing. It was anſwered, that it was done. And then he further ſaid, that her Majeſty did find fault with a great Enormity about the Bridge, by certain Things which ſhe called Trinkers. Which her Pleaſure was, that the Lord Maior ſhould cauſe to be redreſſed.

Fourthly, His Lordſhip did remember certain leud Peſons, Fugitives come from beyond the Seas, and ſpecially from Rome ; miſlikers of the Religion, State and Government ; and Practiſers of Sedition ; Perſons dangerous to the Realm, and of whom the City of London being the greateſt and wealthieſt place of the Realm, had chief cauſe to beware ; and where the greateſt number of them lurked. And therefore he willed, that ſuch ſhould be diligently ſought.

Orders of the Maior,
Ann. 1580.

Theſe Admonitions of ſo grave and wiſe a Counſellor, and delivered as the expreſs Pleaſure of the Queen, had this Succeſs ; that at the very firſt Court of this Maior, which was held November 3, 1580, it was ordered, that the Lord Maior and Aldermen ſhould both in their own Perſons, and with their earneſt Travail, and by their inferior Officers ſee and cauſe the ſaid Admonitions to be moſt carefully and vigilently lookt unto, and the ſaid Diſorders reformed, to the uttermoſt of their Power. And that therefore the Orders following ſhould be forthwith put in Execution.

For new Buildings.

Firſt, For the matter of new Building and Multiplication of Families, Precepts ſhall be directed to the ſeveral Aldermen of the Wards of this City, to call their ſeveral Inqueſts of Wardmote, upon their Oaths to enquire and preſent all Offences againſt the ſaid Proclamation ; both in erecting of new Buildings, and in letting out, or converting of former Houſes to greater number of Habitations than heretofore have been : And alſo of the peſtring of the City and Places adjoyning with Inmates, and with Encreaſe of Allies, and with Strangers ; ſuch as either come not hither for their Conſcience in true Religion ; or be of ſuch Places as they may ſafely return : And alſo to enquire ſo neer as they can by credible Information, all Offences againſt the ſaid Proclamation in places pretended exempt, and within three Miles without the Walls of the ſaid City.

To the Intent, that for ſuch Things as are in the Juriſdiction of this City, ſpeedy Remedy be given : And for the reſt, Petition be made to the moſt Honourable Council. And that Precepts be ſent to the Wardens of the ſeveral Companies of the Carpenters and Bricklayers, that none of their Companies do work in any ſuch New Buildings, or ſeverance of former Houſes, on pain of Impriſonment, during the Councils Pleaſure, or Disfranchiſement for ever.

For the Plague.

Secondly, For the matter of Plague and Infection, the Miniſters of this Court ſhall be commanded to ſeek out the Orders heretofore ſent by the Lords of the moſt Honourable Council, and alſo thoſe that have been conſidered by the Common Council of this City, and allowed by the ſaid Lords in this behalf. And certain grave Perſons, both Aldermen and Commoners, ſhall be appointed in Commiſſion eftſones to conſider thereof, and of all Places convenient ; and for further Orders, both in clean keeping of Streets, Lanes and Houſes, and otherwiſe requiſite in that behalf. And thereof inform this Court: That Order may be taken accordingly with the good liking of the moſt Honourable Lords.

For conſerv-
ing the Thames.

Thirdly, For the matter of Conſervation of the River of Thamiſe. And firſt for Weyers and Stops about the Bridge, it is ordered that the Water-Bailiff ſhall be called, and commanded to deliver in Writing a true, diſtinct and particular Report of the State of the River, and how Her Majeſties late Commandment hath been executed according to the Laws of this Realm, and Right of the City. And for the matter of Trinkers, he ſhall likewiſe enquire by all lawful means; and certify this Court of the Quality of thoſe Trinkers, their Number, their Places and manner of Fiſhing ; what harm they do, and how and in what ſort they may and ought to be reformed. And for all other Matters pertaining to this City to redreſs touching the River, and the Navigableneſs and Fiſhing thereof, he ſhall truly inform. That for ſuch Things as lie within the Power of this City to amend, Remedy be given ſpeedily. And for the reſt, Suit be made to Her Majeſty and Her Council ; and Reformation ſought by order of Her Majeſties Laws.

For the Trinkers.

And this Service, for the more ſpeedy doing thereof, it is ordered that Anthony Hall be required to be aſſiſtant to the ſaid Water Bailiff with his Travail and Diligence : And that at ſuch times yearly as the Water-Bailiff goeth up with Citizens for view of the Thamiſe the ſaid Anothony Hall ſhall always be one of the ſaid Citizens.

And for Rumour-Spreaders.

Fourthly, And laſtly, for the matter of Popiſh and Seditious Rumour-ſpreaders, it is ordered, that ſpecial Precepts be directed to all the Aldermen by all means to make diligent Enquiry and Search for ſuch Perſons ; and ſpecially for ſuch as come to this City by Water : And that there be ſpecial Perſons, known well affected in Religion, appointed to examine ſuch Suſpects as ſhall be for thoſe Cauſes brought unto them, and thereupon Her Majeſties Council be ſpeedily Advertiſed.

Orders for the Poor.

Near about this time, divers good Orders were appointed to be executed in the City of London for ſetting Rogues and idle Perſons to work, and for relief of the Poor. Arts, Occupations, Works and Labours to be ſet up in Bridewell. Stock and Tools to be provided. All Vagrants to be brought to Bridewell, that ſhall be found remaining in this City, after a Proclamation for their Departure to other Places, where by Law they ought to be provided for. The Diſeaſed to be ſent to Hoſpitals to be cured; and being cured, to be ſent to Bridewell again; and there to be examined; and ſo to be diſcharged or ſet on work, in ſuch work as they ſhall be found fitteſt for, and kept with thin Diet only. Such Vagrants as ſhall be found ſkilful in any Occupation, the Governours of Bridewell ſhall uſe their Endeavours, that ſome Citizen or other take them into their Service. Such as belong by Law to the Charge of the City, having young Children upon their hands, and none found by Law to find them, thoſe Children to be ſent to Chriſt's Hoſpital, ſo far as the Houſe ſhall be able to maintain them, the reſt to be maintained at the Charge of the Pariſh: Carriers or others that bring any Children or other into the City, and leave them unplaced or not ſufficiently provided for, to be puniſhed by Impriſonment, or otherwiſe as ſharply as Law will permit; and be bound to convey them back again. Inn-keepers or others that wittingly receive or keep ſuch, either to provide for them, or diſcharge the City of them. Warning of this to be given by Proclamation. Several Charges to Conſtables and other Officers concerning taking up Vagrants, with other effectual Proviſions againſt Idleneſs and Poverty, were now made; and digeſted into a Book printed by John Day; the better to be known by all and obſerved.

A Privy Search ſet up by the Recorder. 100 Rogues taken.

Recorder Fleetwood had ſet up Privy ſearches in London for the better finding out of looſe and dangerous Perſons, who about theſe times exceedingly peſtered the City. In theſe Privy Searches he employed truſty Officers to go about ſecretly into the obſcurer Parts, to ſeek for Rogues and Thieves. By which courſe he at laſt almoſt cleared the Town of them. In the Year 1581, ſoon after Chriſtmas, were brought into Juſtice-Hall above an hundred Perſons taken in one Nights Privy-Search, as we ſhall hear by and by.

Their Puniſhments.

And as they had theſe Ways to find out and bring to light theſe idle maſterleſs Beggars and Vagabonds; ſo they had divers ſorts of Puniſhments for them, namely, Impriſonment at Bridewell, and whipping there; and ſuch as were ſtrong, were ſent ſometimes to the Milnes, and ſometimes to the Lighters to work.

Rogues come about the Queen's Coach at Iſlington,

Upon occaſion of a great Parcel of Rogues encompaſſing the Queen's Coach near Iſlington one Evening in the Year aforeſaid, when ſhe was riding abroad to take the Air; (which ſeemed to put her into ſome Diſturbance) Notice was preſently given to the Maior and Recorder. On that Night and the next Day were taken Seventy Four Rogues, and ſent to Bridewell.

Rogues and Maſterleſs Men taken and puniſhed in Epiphany Week.

Upon Twelfth-Day the Lords of the Council gave Charge to the Maſter of the Rolls and the Recorder of London, touching Rogues and Maſterleſs Men; and to have a Privy Search. That very Day the Recorder met the Governor of Bridewell; and they examined together all the above-ſaid Seventy Four Rogues, and gave them ſubſtantial Payment. And the ſtrongeſt they beſtowed in the Milne and the Lighters; the reſt were diſmiſt, with a promiſe of double Payment, if they were met with again.

More taken.

Upon Sunday, the Day after this Twelfth-Day, out of the Dutchy, Weſtminſter, Southwark, Lambeth and Newington, were gathered up a Shoal of Forty Rogues, Men and Women. All ſent to Bridewell. The ſame Day Afternoon at Pauls, were taken up Twenty cloaked Rogues; that uſed to keep their Standings there.

The next Day, being Monday, in the Morning, the Maſter of the Rolls, and other Juſtices for the Places about London, took order with the Conſtables, for a Privy ſearch againſt Thurſday at Night. And the Maior and Recorder did the like in London and Southwark.

The next Day, Six Fellows were brought out of the Savoy Hoſpital, entertained there as Poor. Who were nothing elſe but Draymen to Brewers. They were ſoundly paid, and ſent home to their Maſters.

All Tueſday, Wedneſday, and Thurſday, came in Numbers of Rogues, that were rewarded according to their Deſerts. The Strong put to Labour, and the Weaker diſmiſt into their Countries.

Friday, at the Juſtice-Hall were brought in above an Hundred. The Maſter of Bridewell well received them; and immediately gave them Puniſhment.

Saturday after Dinner, the Recorder went to Pauls and other Places, as well within the Liberties as elſewhere; and found not one Rogue ſtirring.

The Recorder's Obſervations.

The Obſervations the Recorder made to the Lord Treaſurer concerning the Tranſactions of this Week, were, That of all theſe Companies there were not, of London, Weſtminſter, Southwark, Middleſex nor Surrey, above Twelve; the reſidue for the moſt part were of Wales, Salop, Cheſter, Somerſet, Berks, Oxford, Eſſex: And that few or none of them had been about London above three or four Months. And that they met not again with any in all their Searches that had received Puniſhment. So cautious did good Labour and good whipping make them. And further, he obſerved, that the chief Allurers of theſe evil People were the Savoy, and the Brick-kilns near Iſlington.

A famous Cut-Purſe executed.

April 1582, was executed Margaret Harding, a famous Cut-Purſe in theſe times. The Week afore Chriſtmas ſhe pleaded a Pardon for the like fault. Which Pardon was procured by Monſieur de Alphene. And there was now a Gentleman at the Court that ſhe reported had an hundred Marks of her. The Woman had before the Benefit of ſundry other Pardons, as well general as ſpecial: Such Prevalency had her Bribes at Court, or ſo dextrous were her Cheats, that they procured her many Friends to intercede for her.

Inconvenience of too much Building.

Concerning the Over-building in the City mentioned before, I have this to add, That it was about the middle of Queen Elizabeth's Reign, that great Care was taken, that the City grew not too populous; to prevent the Encreaſe of poor and needy People, and the Danger that might come to the City in Plagues by too great Multitudes: Alſo care was taken for the preventing of Drinking-Houſes, now uſed to be much in Cellars. And when old Houſes were repaired, that were of good Amplitude, they would make two or three Tenements of them, to encreaſe the Rent. And theſe were turned, ſome into Alehouſes, or let to ſuch as were of the poorer ſort. Great Houſes alſo were ſometimes turned into Allies, conſiſting of divers Houſes. Many Sheds alſo were ſet up, to ſerve for ſmall Shops. Which did but harbour poor People. There were alſo made Holes under the Shops for the poorer ſort of Artiſans. Which were injurious both to the Beauty and Wholeſomneſs of the City. Stalls alſo were ſet out from the Houſes into the Streets upon London-Bridge, and in other Places of the City, to the ſtreightning of the Streets for Paſſage. Moreover, to the further Inconvenience of the City, many were made free by Redemption, the Lords making Requeſts for certain People of the City for that Purpoſe. And hereby it became much filled by ſuch, their Wives, and Children. It was lookt upon alſo as no ways conducing to the wealthy State of the City, for young Men to ſet up their Trades as ſoon as they were out of their Time, without being Journeymen for ſome time. Nor was it liked by the graver Citizens, that the young Citizens ſhould keep Fairs: Which to do was required double number of Servants, to the over Peopling of London. And whereas before, there were many large Gardens belonging to the Houſes in the City, eſpecially ſuch Houſes as were of the greater ſize of Building: Now in theſe Gardens were Houſes builded, and many of them uſed for leud and evil Purpoſes; and many privy Contracts were here made for the Sale of Children. Moorfields, which formerly the Citizens uſed for their Health and Pleaſure to walk in, and to take the Air, began now to be encloſed, to the hindrance of theſe healthful and uſeful Walkings.

The Redreſs thereof moved to the Lords.

For the remedying of all theſe things, a Device (by the Recorder Fleetwood) was prepared Anno 1583, to be offered to the Lords of the Council; 1. Againſt ſetting up new Buildings in or near London: 2. Againſt converting great Houſes to Alleys, or multitude of Habitations; and, 3. Againſt Inmates; in theſe ſeveral Articles following:

To provide for time to come that her Majeſty's Proclamation be better obſerved.

Some Correction or Blame where Negligence hath been in Execution, and a more ſevere Charge hereafter.

How lawfully to reache in ſome exemplary manner, for the Houſes already bylded againſt the Proclamation, that the ſame may be ſome way redreſſed, becauſe Lawe wanteth to pull them downe.

That the Offenders, ſome at leaſt of each ſort, be holden in Impriſonment during her Majeſty's Pleaſure, and under aſſeſſement of great Fines, till they come to Submiſſion to abide the Order of the Lords; upon which Submiſſion and Bonde for obſerving thereof, the Lords may take Order touching reforming the Houſes already bylded.

That it be ordered and the Parties bound, that where new Houſes have been bylded in Place of old, they be put two or moe into one, till they be reduced at the moſt not to excede the number that they were before.

That they be alſo bounde, that in thoſe Houſes they ſhall place none but ſuch as ſhall not burden the Citie with their Povertie, and that ſhalbe of good behaviour.

That the Maior and Juſtices of London, &c. be commanded not to allowe any in ſuch Houſe to kepe Alehouſe, or other Victualling.

That no Inne of Court or Chancerie receive more than the Houſe can conveniently lodge; and for execution thereof, that all ſuch as lodge out of the Houſe be judged Inmates.

That her Majeſty's Order may be executed as well to Sheds as to Dwelling-Houſes, becauſe Men uſe to lye in thoſe Sheds under the Stall; where if one dye infected, it is more dangerous than in any Houſe; and ſuch People do commonly ſojourne at the Alehouſe.

That the Maior of London be commanded to execute the Cities Law againſt tippling in Cellars, and to put the Bondes in ſute that he hath againſt ſuch as turne Houſes to Alleys, and to place Poore in their Tenementes burdenous to the Citie.

That making Holes under Stalles for Artiſans be taken awaye, which is to be done very well by an undirect meane to the beautie and wholſomeneſs of the Citie. Viz. That the Lord Maior be commended for the good Reformation made upon London-Bridge, to take away the foreſtalling or ſetting out of Stalls into the Streete beyond the Poſtes of their Houſes, and that he be commanded to do the like throughout London.

That ſuch as your Lordſhips doe not chooſe out to be Empriſoned and made Examples, may neverthelesse not be diſcharged, but remain in terror of ſuffering the like, that they may alſo ſubmit and be bound.

That your Lordſhips forbeare to make Requeſtes for Men to be made Free by Redemption. By whome and their Iſſue and Servants the Citie is much filled.

That your Lordſhips will command the Maior, &c. to conſult of reaſonable Meanes by reſtrayning exceſs of Apprentiſes, by abridging the eaſie ſetting up of young Men, without ſerving as Jorneymen, and the diſſolution of good Townes by our running to Faires, in which caſe they muſt have double nomber of Servants, that the over-peopling of London may be remedied.

May it pleaſe to pardon this new Deviſe, to extend to the new Buildinge allready made.

That her Majeſtie will ordeine an Officer in the Citie by her Prerogative, called a Harbinger, for the Plague.

This Harbinger to have Power to take up Lodging in any of theſe new bylded Houſes, to receive the infected of the Plague, there to be received, lodged and cheriſhed till they be whole.

A Remedie for new Buildinges in Gardens, wherein now are Habitations, and many times incontinent Actes, and the ſale of Men's Children by privie Contracts, &c. as Bridewell knoweth.

The Citie of London hath ever had, and now moſt meete it ſhold have, their free and open Walks in the Fields about the Citie, and namely in Moorefield, and ſome other Fields, where Groundes have ben encloſed for Gardens and new Dwellings there bylded.

Order may be given (as in like caſe hath been at ſute of Archers for ſhooting) now for wholeſomneſs of the Citie, by Commiſſion out of the Chancerie, that all thoſe Incloſures made within Memorie, be laid open, as they were before the Encloſure.

The Ceremony of a Maior drinking to a Sheriff.

In the Year 1583, one Day in the Month of July, there were two great Feaſts at London, the one at Grocers-Hall, the other at Haberdaſhers-Hall, (as perhaps there was in all the reſt upon ſome publick Occaſion) Sir Edward Osborn, Maior, and divers of his Brethren the Aldermen, with the Recorder, were at Haberdaſhers-Hall; where the ſaid Maior, after the ſecond Courſe was come in, took the great ſtanding Cup, the Gift of Sir William Garret, being full of Hypocraſe, and Silence being commanded through all the Tables, all Men being bare-headed, my Lord openly, with a convenient loud Voice, uſed theſe Words; ‘Mr. Recorder of London, and you my good Brethren the Aldermen, bear Witneſs, That I do drink unto Mr. Alderman Maſſam, as Sheriff of London and Middleſex, from Michaelmas next coming, for one whole Year. And I do beſeech God to give him as quiet and peaceable a Year, with as good and gracious Favour of her Majeſty, as I my ſelf and my Brethren, the Sheriffs now being, have hitherto had, and as I truſt ſhall have. This ſpoken, all Men deſired the ſame’. The Sword-Bearer in haſt went to the Grocers Feaſt, where Mr. Alderman Maſſam was at Dinner; and did openly declare the Words that my Lord Maior had uſed. Whereunto Silence made, and all being huſh, the Alderman anſwered very modeſtly in this ſort; ‘Firſt, I thank God, who through his great Goodneſs hath called me from a very poor and mean Degree, unto this worſhipful State. Secondly, ‘Secondly, I thank her Majeſty for her gracious Goodneſs in allowing to us theſe great and ample Franchiſes: And Thirdly, I thank my Lord Maior for having ſo honourable an Opinion of this my Company of Grocers, as to make choiſe of me, being a poor Member of the ſame. And this ſaid, both he and all the Company pledged my Lord and gave him Thanks.

Seſſions in London, 1584.

At a Seſſions of Goal Delivery, Anno 1584, there were two hundred at the leaſt: and moſt of them Pilferers, and no Matters of Importance were then brought. Thus did Idleneſs prevail in thoſe times.

A Diſcovery of ill Men and ill Houſes at a Seſſions, 1585.

At a Seſſions in July 1585, this may be worthy to be related, as it was written from Fleetwood the Recorder to the Lord Treaſurer, That he, and ſome others that were then upon the Bench, ſpent a Day about ſearching out ſundry, that were Receivers of Felons; and a great many were found in London, Weſtminſter, Southwark and Places about the ſame. And they got the Names of 45 Maſterleſs Men and Cutpurſes, whoſe practice was to rob Gentlemens Chambers, and Artificers Shops in and about London. And ſeven Houſes of Entertainment for ſuch in London; ſix more in Weſtminſter; three more in the Suburbs, and two in Southwark. Among the reſt they found out one Wotton, a Gentleman born, and ſometime a Merchant of good Credit, but falling by time into decay. This Man kept an Alehouſe at Smarts Key near Billingſgate: and after, for ſome Miſdemeanor, put down, he reared up a new Trade of Life. And in the ſame Houſe he procured all the Cut-purſes about the City to repair to his Houſe. There was a School-houſe ſet up, to learn young Boyes to cut Purſes. Two Devices were hung up, the one was a Pocket, the other was a Purſe. The Pocket had in it certain Counters, and was hung about with Hawks Bells, and over the Top did hang a little Sacring Bell. The Purſe had Silver in it. And he that could take out a Counter without any Noiſe, was allowed to be a publick Foyſter. And he that could take out a piece of Silver out of the Purſe without Noiſe of any of the Bells, was adjudged a judicial Nypper; according to their Terms of Art. A Foyſter was a Pickpocket; a Nypper was a Pickpurſe, or Cutpurſe.

A School for Cutpurſes.

In this Wotton's Houſe were written in a Table divers Poeſies, and among the reſt this was one,

Si ſpie, Sporte, ſi non ſpie, tunc Steal.

Another this,

Si ſpie, ſi non ſpie, Foyſte, Nyppe, Lyſte, ſhave and ſpare not.

Their Terms of Art.

Note, That Foyſt is to cut a Pocket; Nyppe is to cut a Purſe; Lyſte is to rob a Shop, or a Gentleman's Chamber; Shave, is to filch a Cloak, a Sword, a Silver-Spoon, or ſuch like, that is negligently looked unto. To which add one Phraſe more in thoſe Times uſed among this ſort, Mylken Ken, which is, to commit a Robbery or Burghlary in the Night in a Dwelling-Houſe.

Reprieves from the Court too common in theſe Times.

It gave great Encouragement to Evil-doers about theſe Times, and good Men complained of it, that Theives and Malefactors condemned were ſo frequently and commonly ſpared. And this Evil came from the Court. Inſomuch that the Recorder aforeſaid, a wiſe and honeſt Man, obſerved to the Lord Treaſurer, that it was grown a Trade in the Court, to make means for Reprieves: Twenty Pounds was nothing. And then ſome Courtier would ſend his Letter to the Recorder, or the Sheriff, to ſtay the Execution of ſuch an one. And they many times abuſed by wrong Information, and that Information carried to the Queen; and then her Heart was moved to Compaſſion, and a Reprieve forthwith ſent away. He reflected likewiſe upon the City and the Juſtices themſelves, as well as Court: And that there was not any in their Commiſſion of London and Middleſex, but were deſirous to ſave, or to ſtay any poor Wretch, if by colour of any Law or Reaſon they could do it. And then he ſubjoyned a ſaying of William of Wickham: My Lord William of Wincheſter, ſaid he, was wont to ſay, When the Court is furtheſt from London, then is there the beſt Juſtice done in all England.

Tranſactions in the City about Michaelmas time, Anno 1584.

The Tranſactions with the Maior and Sheriffs at Michaelmas the Year 1584, which was upwards of 130 Years ago, may appear by this Diary, ſent by Fleetwood the Recorder to the Court.

‘Upon Mighelmas Even, the Lord Maior, Aldermen and Commons, admitted the new Sheriffs unto their Offices, and ſwore them. At which tyme they appoynted Mr. Bland, his Son, the Queens Skinner, to be their Under-Sheriff of Middleſex, who was then ſworn alſo.

‘Upon Myghelmas Day, the foreſaid Aſſemblie met agayne, and did chowſe a new Lord Maior; who was Mr. Thomas Puliſon, Alderman. At which tyme he ſtood up, and gave the Commons great Thanks, diſabling himſelf for it, as the Order is. And after hym the old Lord Maior ſtood up, and gave them his Thanks in lyke maner, &c. At after Diner the new Sheriffs received the Charge of the four Priſon-Howſes from the old, by Indenture.

‘In craſtino Michlis’ my Lord, the Aldermen, and many of the Liveries went to the Exchequer, with the new Sheriffs, viz. Slayne and Billingſley. Where I [the Recorder] did preſent theym in the Name of the whole Citie: who there were admitted by Maiſter Baron Sotherton, (the Court being ful of Officers.) There we did ſuch Services as apperteyned, Viz. in bringing a number of great Horſe-Shoes, and Nayles, chopping Knives and litel Roddes. After this is the Maior of Oxford ſworn, and is yearly invited to Dinner with the elder Sheriff. And at the ſame time we invite all the Officers to Dinner.

‘Thurſday, the next Day after, we kept the General Seſſions at Weſtminſter-Hall for Middleſex. Surely it was very great. We ſat the whole Day: and the next after alſo at Fynſbury. Upon Saturday at Bridewel, &c. Upon Monday at the Seſſions of Gaole Delivery. We had two hundred there at the leaſt, moſt of themwere Pilferers, &c.

Little to do at Seſſions, by the Care of the Recorder.

In the Year 1586, at one of the Seſſions, was but little to do; and very few Criminal Cauſes. And in the Seſſions in May this Year, none were executed And the Matters in the ſaid Seſſions ſlender, and of no great Importance. The reaſon whereof was owing to the great Care of the Recorder Fleetwood. By whoſe Means they had in Priſon in Newgate the moſt principal Thieves of the Realm: and they lacked none but one Mannering, who daily gathered into his Society lewd Perſons, that committed in all Parts of the Realm moſt dangerous Robberies. The Thieves being cag'd up, the leſs Harm was done abroad.

Strong Watches appointed to be ſet in every Town about London.

For the better taking up of all maſterleſs and ſuſpicious Perſons this Year, 1586, it was now reſolved, That ſtrong Watches ſhould be ſet in every Town and Place about London, in the City and Liberties of Weſtminſter, and in the Hundred of Oſulton. Order therefore was ſent from the Rolls in April, to every High Conſtable, requiring and ſtraitly charging them in the Queen's Name, to certify them in Writing, what number of able Men they ſhould be able to make within every Townſhip, Pariſh, Village and Hamlet, for ſtrong Watches to be made and prepared within their ſeveral Watches. And theſe Men to be well armed, and furniſhed with ſufficient Armour and Weapon, fit and neceſſary for that Purpoſe. And to cauſe thoſe numbers of Men preſently to be put in readineſs. That both they [the High Conſtables] and the ſaid Numbers might be ready upon any ſudden Occaſion to be employed. And to this Order was adjoyned another Paper, containing Articles to be executed by the High Conſtables within their ſeveral Watches.

Order for the length of Weapons, and manner of carrying them.

The Queen had put forth a Proclamation touching the Aſſize and carrying of Weapons, which began now to be worn extraordinary long. That is, That they ſhould be of ſuch a length; and ſhould not be carried, as they had been before, upwards, in a hectoring manner. And for the better Obſervation of the Queen's Proclamation in London, the Lord Maior in the Month of November, ſet Watches at every Gate, who were to meaſure every Man's Sword, and to take notice of his way of carrying it. At Ludgate, eſpecially (through which thoſe of the Court uſually came) the Lord Maior ſet Will. Bernard, John Hall and George Monger, Drapers, and others. While they were upon the Watch, there paſſed a Gentleman through Ludgate into the City, whoſe Name was Palmer; who ſaid, That he ſerved the Lady Marchioneſs of Northampton. Trial being made of the length of the Weapon, it was found reformed. Whereof Bernard told the Gentleman he was glad; and warned him not to carry the Point of his Weapon upward, for that it was contrary to her Majeſty's Will, and Order of the Council. And Hall bad him, and the reſt of the Perſons with him, to depart in peace, and carry their Swords according to the Queen's Order. But if you will carry them up in deſpight, at your Peril be it. At parting, the ſaid Gentleman turned his Back, and lifted up his Sword as high as he could carry it. Hereupon he was apprehended, and carried before the Maior. And when one Shelden, a young Man in a green Cloak overtook them, and followed them through Pater Noſter Row, reproving the Gentleman for going ſo peaceably, and willing him to reſiſt, and not to go; they ſeized him, and brought him alſo to the Maior. Who committed them, till the Councils Pleaſure were known.

A Dearth of Corn and Fewel.

In the ſame Year (viz. 1586.) a Dearth was in London, both of Corn, and Wood for Fewel. The Dearth of Corn occaſioned, as was thought, partly by the Spoil which certain Dunkirkers made, having taken four or five Ships of Corn coming for London from beyond the Seas; and partly by the great recourſe of People to the City at that time: And the Corn accuſtomed to come up from the Countries about, was ſtopt by the Juſtices of Peace, and not ſuffered to come. For the Redreſs of this Dearth, which was in danger ſtill to encreaſe, and the Price of Corn likely to be much enhanced, in October the City went to the Lords of the Council, where the Recorder ſet forth to them the Reaſons of this Evil, and the Means to redreſs it. Which was, That in the Counties of Kent, Suffolk, Suſſex, Hampſhire, Norfolk, and other Counties about London (which were wont to ſerve the City with Corn) Proviſion of Corn might be made for the ſaid City, and quietly ſuffered by the Juſtices of the Shires without Interruption, to come to London. And for that Purpoſe the Treaſurer was moved for obtaining the Privy Councils Letters preſently, (for that the Bakers much complained) that Order might be taken that no Corn ſhould be carried out of the Land: That the Merchants that brought Corn from Danske and other Places from beyond the Sea, might have Liberty, the Markets here being furniſhed, to carry and convey the reſt out of the Realm, for the better Management of the Merchants trading in Corn, as their Lordſhips had been heretofore moved. And that the Lord Treaſurer would take Order, that at Weſtminſter and St. Katharines, and other Places about London, Billets might be ſold, and Faggots, at the Price taken and ſet down by the Lord Maior within the City of London: that is, Weſtern and Kentiſh Billets, 13 s. 4 d the Thouſand; Weſtern Faggots, 5 s. 4 d. the Hundred. Kentiſh Faggots, 6 s. the Hundred.

Order for the Habit of Citizens, Ann. 1588.

The Cuſtom of the Citizens and Officers thereof was to go well Habited, wearing ſome of their Wealth upon their Backs. About the middle of the Reign of Q. Elizabeth, the City was grown very Rich; and now endeavoured to get themſelves eaſed of two Statutes made againſt the Exceſs and inordinate uſe of Apparel; the one of 24 H. VIII. the other of 1. & 2. of Philip and Mary: whereby the ancient Habit of the Magiſtrates would be reſtrained. The Queen perceiving the Rigour of theſe Acts, and how they contained over much ſtrictneſs, by Proclamation dated at Weſtminſter Feb. 16. in the 19th Year of her Reign, and by other Orders more lately publiſhed, did in ſome part mitigate the ſame. Yet the Mitigation was not ſuch as the ſame Acts could, with that Mitigation, be obſerved, within her Majeſties City and Chamber of London, without Violation of that decent Order and Conveniency that was by Citizens, Officers and others thought meet to be uſed and continued. Who though they were not of Subſtance and Value anſwerable by the Rates limited by the Book of Subſidy, yet did hold Place of ſuch Worſhipful Calling otherwiſe, as required ſome larger Limitation, than was generally preſcribed by the Statutes and Proclamation. Wherefore Sir George Bond, Maior, in the Month of April, 1588, wrote a Letter to the Lords of the Council; 'That foraſmuch as they were deſirous that ſome convenient and comely Order, 'ſuch as might ſtand with the Honour of the 'Queen, might be in London uſed and continued, 'which could not be without ſome further Toleration, they thought ſtood to preſent to the 'Lords of the Council a Book; which they cauſed to be drawn; containing a certain Limitation and Order for Apparel of Citizens and Officers of the City in their ſeveral Degrees and 'Callings; and of their Wives. Which they 'prayed them by their Honourable good Means 'to her Majeſty, by publick Proclamation, or 'otherwiſe, to be allowed unto them: and that 'obſerving the ſame, they might not be impeached for Breach of either of the ſaid Acts, by reaſon of wearing any Apparel or Stuff, by the 'ſame Book deſired to be allowed them'.

Bond Maior, his Letter to the Council about it.

Book of Habits.

This Requeſt was the more neceſſary, becauſe there were a great ſort of Informers now-a-days running up and down, to ſee who they were that brake thoſe Acts for Apparel: And many of the Citizens were, or were like to be, informed againſt for their Appearance; and like to be grievouſly moleſted by ſuch Informations, in divers of the Queen's Courts, for Offences againſt the ſaid Statutes and Proclamations. Therefore the Maior, and in his Name the City, beſought the Privy Council to be a Means unto the Queen to extend her Favour ſo far, as to give Order that they might not be moleſted for any ſuch Offences paſt: and that ſome Remedy, as afore is ſaid, might be had in their behalf for the future.

Informers.

Cuſtom of Meaſurage.

Meaſurage of Sea-Coal, and other things meaſurable upon the River Thames, was an ancient Privilege of the City. But in the Year 1591, it received ſome Interruption, the Lord Admiral pretending ſome Right to it. But at length he was brought to allow to the City their Meaſurage.

And the City, to have this the more firmly confirmed to them for the future, obtained of the Queen the Ratification thereof, by the Aſſiſtance of the Lord Treaſurer; who conferred with the Queen's Attorney and Solicitor, about the drawing up of the Book that was to paſs from the Queen to the City. They both had viewed the Book preſented to them, and reformed it in what Points they thought good, and ſo returned it back to the Treaſurer; who was to give his own Warrant to the Attorney and Solicitor for their Approbation of the ſame under their Hands. Which Sir William Webb, Maior, requeſted of the ſaid Treaſurer, in a Letter dated the Year aboveſaid.

Orders againſt the Plague, Ann. 1592.

I paſs to the Year 1592, which was a Plague Year. Then were Articles preſented to the Lords of the Council to be conſidered of, for Proviſion and Order, as well againſt the encreaſe of the Plague, as alſo for relief of the poor People, whether Lame or Whole, and vagrant People who daily begged in the Streets. Whereof one great Advice was, to remove the Sound from the Sick; ſo that whenſoever any Houſe was infected, then to leave the Sick to the Houſe, and to remove the Sound into Houſes to be appointed on purpoſe.

A Tumult of Apprentices.

In the Month of June 1595, on a Sunday, a multitude of rebellious Apprentices got together in divers Parts of the City, and near the Tower, to be ſheltered there from the Maior. Theſe were ſo formidable, and had ſo often uſed theſe Diſorders before, that Sir John Spencer, Maior, wrote to the Lord Treaſurer thereof; and was of Opinion that they would not be ſuppreſt, until ſome of them were puniſhed, according to Martial Law, and their Maſters alſo fined and puniſhed; whom he had by ſeveral Precepts commanded to keep their Servants within.

Number of poor Houſeholders in London, Ann. 1595.

Great Care was continually taken in the City for the Poor. In the Maioralty of Sir Stephen Slany, Decemb. 1. 1595. there was taken the total Number of all poor Houſholders, inhabiting within the ſeveral Wards of the City and Liberties thereof, who wanted Relief at preſent. Which was given up by the ſaid Maior to the Queen. The whole Number of theſe poor Houſholders in the ſeveral Wards, was 4132. That is to ſay, in the Ward of

Libels againſt the Government

About theſe Times many Ballads were diſperſed in the City, abuſing the Government. The Author of one of them was diſcovered in the Year 1596. when Corn having been dear, a Book of Orders was iſſued out from the Privy Council for remedying the Dearth. But to ridicule theſe Orders, and to diſaffect People to the Government, a Ballad was printed and diſperſed, and ſoon brought to Sir Stephen Slany, Maior. It contained a Complaint of the great Want and Scarcity of Corn within the Realm: and it brought in the Queen ſpeaking to her People Dialoguewiſe, in very fond and undecent ſort; and preſcribing Orders for the remedying the Dearth, extracted, as it ſeems, out of the aforeſaid Book. The Author wat one Delonie, a idle Fellow, and the ſame who before had printed a Book for the Silk-Weavers; wherein was alſo fooliſh and diſordered Matter. The Maior called the Printer before him, and the Party by whom it was put to Print; who pretended a Licence: But finding it untrue, he committed him to the Counter, and took Surety of the Printer for his Appearance; and ſent the Ballad to the Lord Treaſurer. This was in July; and in September following two Libels more fell into the Maior's Hands, diſperſed by ſome ſeditious Perſons in the City; which he ſent alſo to the Treaſurer, together with a Bagg, with certain things encloſed in it, left at one Mr. Kempton's Houſe, Deputy of the Ward, a Citizen of good Reputation. So much were Men now ſet upon affronting the Government, by this way of Libeling. And before any of the former, viz. in April, there was taken up in the Warders Room before the Tower-Gate, by the Under-Porter there, another abuſive Writing, directed to certain Perſons; but mentioning therein a late Execution of Juſtice againſt ſome diſorderly Apprentices and others; with an Invective againſt the Counſil of the Land. Whereby he meant probably the learned Counſil and Judges. The Libel ſeemed to have been deviſed, by the ſtile and manner of Writing, by ſome Apprentice of St. Katharine's, or thereabouts. This the Maior ſent alſo to the Lord Treaſurer; and deſired to know, whether he ſhould proceed by Examination to find out the Author, with the Advice and Help of the Lieutenant, or rather ſuppreſs it till they heard more, conſidering the Times, and the End and Purpoſe of ſuch as ſcattered ſuch infamous Libels, and ſeditious Writings: Who deſired nothing more than to have them blazed and ſcattered abroad.

A Proclamation againſt Vagabonds, and pretended Soldiers disbanded.

About the Year 1593, and before, the City, as well as other Parts of the Kingdom, was grievouſly peſtered with Beggars; and they, many of them poor disbanded Soldiers, become poor and maimed by the Wars in the Low Countries and with Spain; and many more that pretended themſelves to be ſo: Who committed many Robberies and Outrages. This cauſed the Queen to ſet forth a Proclamation in the Month of February, for the Suppreſſing of the Multitudes of idle Vagabonds, and avoiding miſchievous, dangerous Perſons from her Majeſty's Court.

It ſets forth, ‘How idle Perſons and Vagabonds were manifeſtly ſeen wandering in the common High Ways, to the Annoyance of the common People, both in their Goods and Lives: a Multitude of able Men, neither Impotent nor Lame, exacting Money continually upon pretence of Service in the Wars, without Relief. Whereas many of them never did ſo ſerve. And yet ſuch as had ſerved, if they were Maimed or Lamed by Service, were provided for in the Countries, by Order of a good Statute made the laſt Parliament.

‘For Reformation whereof, She commanded her Juſtices and Officers to have a better Regard thereto: And to appoint upon certain Days of the Week, Monthly (for ſome Seaſon) Watches and privy Searches in Places needful. And thereby to Attach and Impriſon ſuch idle Vagabonds: and to ſend the Lame and Maimed ed into their Countries according to the Statute, &c. And the Juſtices of Aſſize now in Lent Aſſizes, to confer with the Juſtices in every County, in the Places where the Aſſizes ſhall be kept. And there to charge them, and to direct them in ſome good Order, how every of them ſeverally in their ſeveral Quarters, might ſee Watches kept, and privy Searches to be made.

Wandering Perſons in and about the City and Court. Iriſh Soldiers amongthem.

‘It was found in and about the City of London, and in the Parts near about her Majeſties Court, that there did haunt and repair a great multitude of wandring Perſons. Whereof ſome were Men of Ireland, that had theſe late Years unnaturally ſerved as Rebels againſt her Majeſties Forces beyond the Seas. Who could not have any good Meaning towards her Majeſty, as of late had been manifeſtly proved in ſome already taken, that had ſecretly come into the Realm with full purpoſe, by procurement of the Devil and his Miniſters, Enemies and Rebels on the other ſide the Sea, to endanger her Majeſties Noble Perſon. Which kind of Perſons, having ſo ſerved againſt her Majeſty, were directly to be taken, whereſoever they might be found, and proceeded withal, as Traitors.

King of Spain, Prince of Parma hires Perſons to kill the Queen.

‘And as for the Procurers and Authors hereof, being known to be of ſundry Conditions; ſome, Rebellious Subjects, Fugitives; ſome, by Order of their Prieſthood, yielding Diſpenſation and Abſolution by Shrift to the intended Miſchieves; and ſome other more able, by Reward to hire the Offenders, being Perſons of high Degree in the World. The Revenge whereof belonged to Almighty God. In whoſe Hand her Majeſty hath of long time repoſed herſelf: and ſo intended conſtantly with Comfort to continue.

The Iriſh to depart home to Ireland.

‘But conſidering, the Diſcovery of theſe Iriſh Traitors could hardly be made, where there were alſo many others like vagrant Perſons of that Nation, that haunted about the Court, by pretence of Suits, where they had no juſt Cauſe to make any; Therefore her Majeſty Willed and Commanded, that no manner of Perſon born in the Realm of Ireland, except he were an Houſeholder, known in ſome Town, where he lived in Obedience to her Majeſties Laws; or were a menial Servant with ſome Nobleman, Gentleman, or other honeſt Houſeholder; or did reſide and were in Commons in any Houſe of Court or Chancery, or a Student in the Laws, or a Student in any of the Univerſities; or elſe be ſent out of Ireland by her Majeſties Deputy, or ſome Governour of the Provinces there with Commendation, or about any Service or Suit recommended; ſhould remain in this Realm; but ſhould without Delay repair into the Realm of Ireland, to the Places of their natural Habitation, &c. upon Pain of Impriſonment and Puniſhment, as Vagabonds.

Vagrants about the Court.

Perſons forbid to come to theCourt, or near it.

‘There was a Number of like vagrant Perſons, both Engliſh and others (beſide Iriſh) that haunted about the Court, uſing a Colour of Suits to her Majeſty, or to her Council, and other Attendants on her Majeſty: where in Truth many of them had no juſt Cauſe of Suits. Others, that having Suits, and had received their Anſwers, did not depart, but lived idly about the Court. For Remedy of this, her Majeſty forbade all Perſons that were not Servitors to her Majeſty in her Court; or that were not Attendant Servitors upon the Counſellors, or upon other Lords and Ladies, or Gentlemen, attending on her Majeſty; to forbear to come to the Court, or near to the Court. But if any Perſon had Cauſe to prefer any Complaint or Requeſt to her Majeſty, or her Council, being in the Court, it was lawful for any ſuch Perſon to come to one of the Maſters of Requeſts, to whom a Room was appointed near the Court; to receive daily ſuch Requeſts, and to prefer them as Cauſe ſhould require, without coming into the Court: But to depart within 24 Hours towards their Dwelling Places.

The Knight Marſhal's Charge to ſee theſe Orders executed.

‘And for the executing of this Order, for the excluding of theſe Vagrants, either Iriſh or Engliſh, or of any other Nation, her Majeſty charged the Knight Marſhal, her Porters, her Maſters of Requeſt and her Knight Harbinger, and every other ordinary Officer in her Majeſties Court, to take every one in theſe Caſes, which might belong unto them. And to commit the Offenders to Priſon: there without Delay to be tryed, and proceeded withal, according as Rogues and Vagabonds ought to be.

Given at the Honour of Hampton Court, the 21ſt of February 1593, in the 36th Year of her Majeſties Reign.

This was backed ſoon after with an Order to be publiſhed and executed by the Lord Maior of the City of London, and other Officers in all Places within three Miles of the ſaid City, for avoiding of all kind of Beggars, that did wander about, contrary to the Laws and Statutes of the Realm. And it was ſigned by ſeveral of the Privy Council: The Order was as followeth.

An Order of Privy Council againſt Beggars within three Miles of the City.

‘WHereas it hath been ordered by Act of Parliament, that all poor, aged and impotent Perſons ſhould repair to the Places where they were born, or where they were moſt converſant by the ſpace of three Years: and there to be maintained. And likewiſe that all Perſons wandring about as Beggars, and being whole and ſtrong in Body, and able to Work, having no Lands or other Means to get their Living, ſhould be taken as Rogues and Vagabonds. And if any impotent Perſon, being provided for, were in the Pariſh where he was born, or had been converſant by the ſpace aforeſaid, and ſhould without Licence wander abroad out of the ſame, he ſhould be whipt, and returned again to his Pariſh. And if he ſhould eftſones offend, then to be puniſhed as a Rogue.

A Collection in the time of Parliament for the Maimed in the Queen's Service.

‘And for that alſo in this Time of Parliament Order hath been taken by a Collection of certain Sums of Money, that all ſuch as were found in and about the City of London, having been Maimed and Sorehurt in her Majeſties Service, ſhould have a convenient Relief in Money paid to the County where they were born, with Paſports for that Purpoſe, (which hath been accordingly performed) And there to be maintained with weekly Portions of Money for the ſpace of twenty Weeks. Before the end whereof it was provided by an Act of Parliament made in this late Seſſion, that ſuch maimed Soldiers were to have a continual weekly Payment in Places of the Countries, where they were born:

Inquiſition within London and Weſtminſter for wandering Perſons.

‘For this Purpoſe, all Officers, to whom the Execution of theſe Statutes do belong, within the Cities of London and Weſtminſter, and in all other Places within three Miles of the City, ſhall forthwith cauſe Inquiſition to be made of all kind of Perſons wandring up and down, as Beggars; and being Aged and Impotent, to compel them to depart, and repair to the Places where they were born, or were more converſant by the ſpace of three Years paſt, with convenient Paſports; there to be maintained according to the Laws, and to forbear from their further begging in any other Place. And ſuch ‘other as wander abroad, as Beggars, being able to Work, and having no lawful Means whereby to live, to be taken and puniſhed as Rogues, according to the Laws in that behalf provided.

‘And further, to ſuffer no Soldier that pretendeth to have been hurt and maimed in her Majeſty's Service, to whom Relief hath been given as aforeſaid; or any other pretending himſelf to have been a Soldier, and not thought worthy to be partaker of the Relief lately given, to continue near, or about the Cities of London or Weſtminſter, the Borough of Southwark, or in any other Place within three Miles of the ſaid Cities or Borough; but to be compelled likewiſe to depart to the Counties where they were born, there to receive convenient Maintenance.

‘And theſe Ordinances conformable to the Laws of the Realm, the Lord Maior of the City of London, and all other Officers to whom it ſhall belong, within the Limits aforeſaid, are to ſee duly and ſpeedily executed, and the Offenders puniſhed, as they will anſwer to the contrary at their Peril. Mobbs.

Great Crowds and Routs of the baſer ſort of People, whereof the City Apprentices made a great part, would ſometimes get together, and make dangerous Diſturbances, and uſe much Violence, ſuch Aſſemblies as we in theſe Days call Mobbs. Theſe were to be checked. Which cauſed the Queen in the Year 1595, to iſſue out a Proclamation, For ſtaying of all unlawful Aſſemblies in and about the City of London, and for Orders to puniſh the ſame. The Purport whereof was,

Diſorders by unlawful Aſſemblies of Apprentices and others, forbidden.

‘That the Queen was informed of ſundry great Diſorders committed in and about her City of London, by unlawful great Aſſemblies of Multitudes of a popular ſort of baſe Condition, whereof ſome were Apprentices and Servants to Artificers; and to ſuch like as are not able, or not diſpoſed to rule their Servants, as they ought to do. And ſome attempting to reſcue out of the Hands of publick Officers, ſuch as have been lawfully Arreſted; whereby her Majeſty's Peace hath been of late notably broken, to the Diſhonour of her Majeſty's Government: And chiefly for lack of due Correction in time of ſuch manifeſt Offenders, by the Officers of her City, and others in places round about it.

‘For Reformation whereof, ſhe had Conference with her Council, of the moſt ready means for their Puniſhment, and for the ſtay of the like. And for that purpoſe ſtraightly charged all her Officers, both in the City and Places near it, in the Counties of Middleſex, Kent, Surry and Eſſex, that had Authority to preſerve the Peace, and to puniſh Offenders, that they ſhould more diligently to the beſt of their Powers, ſee to the Suppreſſion of all ſuch Offenders, and eſpecially of all ſuch unlawful Aſſemblies.

‘And becauſe ſuch Aſſemblies and Routs were compounded of ſundry ſorts of baſe People, ſome known Apprentices, ſuch as were of baſe manual Occupations; ſome others, wandring idle Perſons of Condition, Rogues and Vagabonds: And ſome colouring their wandring by the Name of Soldiers returning from the Wars, &c. Therefore ſhe had notifyed her Pleaſure to her Council, to preſcribe certain Orders to be publiſhed in and about the ſaid City, which ſhe would have ſtraightly obſerved: And for that purpoſe, that ſhe meant to have a Provoſt Marſhal, with ſufficient Authority to apprehend all ſuch as ſhould not be readily reformed and corrected by the ordinary Officers of Juſtice, and them without delay to execute upon the Gallows by order of Martial Law: At our Manor of Greenwich the 4th of July, 1595. in the 37th Year of our Reign. Here follows

A Provoſt Marſhal to be appointed, to curb theſe Routs.

The Orders preſcribed by her Majeſty's Command by the Advice of her Council. Publiſhed in London, and other Places near the ſame, for the obſervation of her Majeſty's Proclamation.

Orders ſet forth againſt Tumults.

‘THAT no Perſon but ſuch as were Officers for Preſervation of the Peace, or ſuch as ſhall aſſiſt them, or ſuch as were of known honeſt Converſation, do walk up and down in the Streets or Fields after Sunſet, or Nine of the Clock at Night, upon pain to be apprehended and committed to Priſon.

‘That no Perſons, except publick Officers, aſſemble themſelves in any Company at any time, in any place other than in Churches for Prayers or Sermons, or for appearance afore Officers of Juſtice, or by their Commandment, or in the common Halls of Companies upon pain, &c.

‘That no Houſholder, or any Perſon that keepeth Inns, or Lodging for any Stranger, do ſuffer their Servants or their Gueſts, being not Gentlemen, or others of good Value or Converſation, to go out of their Houſes in the Evening after Nine of the Clock, upon pain to be Impriſoned; or if they cannot reſtrain them, to inform preſently the Conſtable, &c.

‘That no Perſon do write, or be privy to any ſeditious Bills, to be diſperſed or ſet up, upon pain to be executed by Martial Law. And if any come to the knowledge of any ſuch Perſon that hath written, or ſet up, or diſperſed any ſuch ſeditious Bill, and will reveal the ſame, and the Party taken, the Revealer ſhall have 20 l. or a better Reward.

‘All Perſons that are not known to be Servants to the Queens Majeſty's Houſe, or not ordinarily pertaining to any Lord or Gentleman, and do wander abroad, either in the Name of Soldiers, or that ſeek Service, or do come as Suitors to her Majeſty, or to any of her Officers for Suits of Law, ſhall preſent themſelves to certain Perſons of Judgment hereafter named, that were appointed by the Council to examine their Condition. According whereto they ſhall be directed how to leave their wandring. Or, if they be ſuch, to be received, or retained in Service, or come as Suitors to any common, or to any publick Officer, they ſhall be ſo provided for, as their Caſes ſhall require, and not be ſuffered to wander abroad, to the Offence or Terror of other good quiet People, that have cauſe to travel by the Highways for their lawful Buſineſs.

‘That all Perſons that ſhall be Arreſted by any Officer lawfully Authorized, ſhall obey the ſame Officer; and if any ſhall make Reſiſtance, every other Perſon being preſent, and required by the Officer to aſſiſt him, ſhall ſo do to the beſt of his Power, upon pain to be committed to the ſame Place where the Party that did diſobey ought to be. And if any Perſon ſhall attempt to aid the Party that ſhould be Arreſted, to be Reſcued, ſuch Perſon, and all that ſhall accompany him, ſhall be apprehended, and ‘ ſhall be executed by the Provoſt-Marſhal by Martial Law.

‘ That all Officers of the City, and all other Places near the City, having Authority to apprehend Rogues, and to puniſh them, ſhall in that Circuit of their Juriſdiction meet together twice every Week, or oftner; and ſhall cauſe ſearch to be made in the common Streets, and in the High-ways, by ſome company of able Men; to apprehend ſuch Rogues and Vagabonds, and ſhall take order for the diſpoſing of the Poor and Lame, to repair to the Places where they ought to be provided for, by the Names of their Pariſhes, and not to be ſuffered to wander abroad without Proviſion or Relief.

Then follow the Names of thoſe that were to ſit at Seſſions-Hall, to examine the Condition of the Perſons that ſhould be taken wandring. They were of two ſorts, ſome for ſuch as pretended to be Soldiers, others for ſuch as pretended to ſeek Service, or follow Suits. Theſe laſt were, Sir Owen Hopton, Robert Wroth, Rich. Warren, Will. Fleetwood, Recorder of London, Arthur Atie, Rich. Skerrington, George Aſhby of Weſtminſter, Tho. Fowler, the Town Clerk of London, and the Clerk of the Peace of Middleſex.

King James's Proclamation againſt Rogues, An. 1603.

Upon the Acceſs of King James to the Engliſh Throne, it appeared by his Proclamation ſet forth in September, An. Dom. 1603. that Rogues and Vagabonds increaſed, notwithſtanding all the Proviſion the Queen by Laws and Proclamations had made from time to time againſt them. The Import of this King's Proclamation, was for Baniſhing the moſt dangerous ſort of them out of the Kingdom into foreign Countries; mentioning the Statute of the 30 Eliz. ‘ For the Repreſſing of Rogues, Vagabonds, idle and diſſolute Perſons, wherewith this Realm was then much infeſted, &c. But that now they ſwarmed again, and abounded every where more frequently than in times paſt. Therefore that no Impediment might be to the due and full execution of that Law, his Highneſs Privy Council, according to the Power in that behalf given by the ſaid Law, had by their Order aſſigned Places and Parts beyond the Seas, unto which ſuch incorrigible and dangerous Rogues ſhould be baniſhed and conveyed. [Which Order is here under ſet down.] ‘ His Majeſty purpoſing to have the ſame Law duly and fully executed, required all Juſtices of Peace, Maiors, Bailiffs, &c. to ſee the ſaid Law, in all the Parts and Branches of the ſame, duly and exactly executed. Given at his Manor of Woodſtock, Sept. 17.

The Order.

The Order.

Order for baniſhing them.

‘ Foraſmuch as it hath appeared unto Us, as well by our own views in our Travels in this preſent Progreſs of his Majeſty, as alſo by good and credible Information from divers and ſundry Parts of the Realm, that Rogues grow again, and increaſe to be incorrigible and dangerous, not only to his Majeſty's loving Subjects abroad, but alſo to his Majeſty and his Honourable Council in and about the Court: Which growing partly through the Remiſſneſs of ſome of the Juſtices of Peace, and other Officers in the Country; and partly, for that there hath been no ſuit made for aſſigning ſome Place beyond the Seas, to which ſuch incorrigible and dangerous Rogues might be baniſhed, according to the Statute in that behalf made: We therefore of his Majeſty's Privy Council, whoſe Names are hereunto ſubſcribed, finding it of neceſſity to reform theſe great Abuſes, and to have the due Execution of ſo good and neceſſary a Law, do according to the Power limited to us by the ſame Statute, here aſſign, and think it fit and expedient, that the Places and Parts beyond the Seas, to which any ſuch incorrigible and dangerous Rogues ſhall be baniſhed and conveyed according to the ſaid Statute, ſhall be theſe Countries and Places following, viz. The Newfound Land, the Eaſt and Weſt Indies, France, Germany, Spain, and the Low Countries, or any of them. The preſent State of the City.

Now a little concerning the preſent State and Condition of London, as to its Wealth and Incomes, it muſt be confeſſed, that by reaſon of the great Fire, and divers Loſſes and great Expences, the City is not before-hand; but for the Satiſfaction of the Orphans Debts, the Parliament hath ſecured the payment of Four per Cent. per Annum Intereſt of their Money for ever, and appointed a Tax of 2000 l. per Annum, to be levied upon the City towards the payment of the ſaid Intereſt.

Caſh reſting to Ballance, in Sir Leonard Robinſon's Hands, Sept. 29th. 1694. Ten Thouſand Fifty Five Pound, Two Shillings.

Conſultation for bettering the State of the Chamber.

Some good Citizens have lately ſhewn their zealous Affection, for promoting the better Eſtate of the Ghamber, both in their Common Council, and other their private Conſultations and Devices. And they have taken Notice, how ſome Expences of the City might be retrenched, and what great Advantage might be made by farming out Places and Offices, which now are wont to be ſold for Life. For they have noted in ſome publick Prints, how many of the Liveries, Fees and Offices are now become uſeleſs, by Alterations in the City Affairs, and ſome of them moreover pernicious, vexatious and burthenſome, having little other pretence for their Continuance, but that the Officers purchaſed their Places with great Sums of Money. To inſtance (among many others) in the three Clarks of the Markets, who, (reckoning but twenty Years paſt) have been paid 468 l. per Ann. by 9 l. per Week out of the Chamber: whoſe Offices for ſo long a time were uſeleſs, the Markets being farmed; and the Farmers obliged to do the Duty of theſe Officers. Hence may appear the City's great Damage by theſe Sales: For it hath paid for twenty Years laſt paſt ſo many times 468 Pounds, amounting in the whole to 9360 l. And the City may have this Payment continued on it for ever, the Officers pretending to Free-hold by virtue of their Purchaſe, and to have a good Right to ſell their Offices, Toties quoties.

Obſervations upon buying and ſelling Places.

And concerning the buying of Places they further obſerved, That the Maior hath 2000 l. per Ann. incident to his Mayoralty, beſides his ſhare of the Sale of Offices, which was about four Fifths; and the Sheriffs had about 1500 l. per An. and about one Fifth ſhare in the Sale of Offices. And that there was a poſſibility that a Maior might get 20000 l. in the Year of his Maioralty. They obſerved moreover, that tho' ſome Places had been ſold for above 2500 l. yet in the Memory of many Citizens living, no Place or Office in the City was worth above 100 l. So that the Purchaſe of theſe Offices were many of them twenty times more than formerly. They ſet forth likewiſe the Evil and Inconvenience of this Practice; as, that the Sellers regarded not ſo much the Ability or Honeſty of the Perſon for the reſpective Office, but he that could give moſt was made the Officer. That many of theſe Places were concerned in the Adminiſtration and Execution of Juſtice; and the ſelling of Places having in all times, by the beſt Governments, been accounted a Corruption, and of dangerous Conſequence to the well being of a good Commonwealth, it was moſt reaſonable, that in Courts where Juſtice is to be adminiſtred, there the greateſt Care ſhould be taken, that no Corruption be. That the Offices of Clark and Beadle belonging to the Court of Requeſts, or Court of Conſcience, ſettled by Act of Parliament in 4 Jac. 1. for the Relief of poor Debtors, &c. were ſold for 1000 l. each, at the leaſt, to the great Oppreſſion of the Poor, and obſtruction of the execution of Juſtice there.

There might come in 7000 l. per Ann. by the Coal and Corn-Meeters.

It was likewiſe obſerved, That the fifteen Coal-Meeters, who payed about 1700 l. each for their Places, and 80 l. per Annum Rent; and the ten Corn-Meeters, who pay about 1400 l. for their Places, and no Rent; if theſe Officers were admitted to their Places without Money, the firſt would pay (inſtead of 80 l) 350 l. per Ann. each, and the latter about 250 l. per Ann. each, which would bring 7000 per Ann. into the Chamber: And the like might be obſerved in many other Offices and Places.

A Device to farm out Places and Offices.

All which things conſidered, it was thought a Device very advantageous to the Wealth of the City, that for the future, as Places fell, they might be farmed out for the Benefit of the City: As may appear by this Propoſal made by one of the Citizens.

A PROPOSAL Humbly Offered to the Conſideration of the Lord Maior, Aldermen, and Common Council.

Rich. Bromley.

THE Places ſold in London, having Coſt the preſent Poſſeſſors above one Hundred and fifty thouſand Pound, as appears by a late Liſt thereof, and ſuppoſing they have been allowed 12 and half per Cent. for their Purchaſe Money, which is leſs than was allowed by Parliament to the Purchaſers of Annuities for Life, they do amount to near Twenty Thouſand Pound per Annum.

Now if for the Future, as theſe Places fall by the Death of the Poſſeſſors, they were Farmed out, and the Money paid into the Chamber for the uſe of the Maior and Commonalty, there would in a very ſhort Time be a plentiful Supply for the Support of the Cities Government on all Occaſions. [As the place of the late Bailiff of Southwark was, whom Sir Thomas Lane would not ſuffer to transfer his Place, though he offered Sir Thomas 300 l. The Bailiff dying about a Year after, the City allowed Sir Thomas 300 l. and have ſince Leaſed the Place at 300 l. per Annum, and may have more when the Leaſe expires; and if the late Clerk of the Chambers Place, now vacant, were ſo Lett, it would yield another 300 l. per Annum, and what the preſent Lord Maior falls ſhort of 4000 l. by Perquiſites in his Maioralty, may be made up out of this Rent.]

This way of Admiſſion would be much eaſier to the Officers, and will prevent thoſe Corruptions and Exactions, ſo much of late complained of. But in caſe the Farming out ſome of theſe Places ſhall be thought Unlawful or Imprudent, viz. Such as are more immediately concerned in the Adminiſtration and Execution of Juſtice, Artificers, Workmen, and ſuch as furniſh the City with Commodities and Materials; the other Places will be ſufficient to raiſe Twelve or Fifteen Thouſand Pounds per Annum, and Juſtice in the City will be better adminiſtered, when all concerned therein are admitted freely.

The City will alſo ſave by good Husbandry, more than 30 per Cent. in Things wherein its Artificers, Workmen, and Furniſhers of Commodities, &c. are concerned. By theſe Methods, this Honourable City may ſoon recover its ancient Wealth, Honour and Grandeur.

The Principal Objection againſt this Propoſal is, how to Support the Government for the preſent, till it can be reduced to Practice. To anſwer which, according to the beſt Account can at preſent be got; the Profits incident to the Maioralty of London are now above 2000 l. per Annum, beſides the Share in the Places ſold; which Sum, with good Husbandry, in retrenching unneceſſary Expences, may eaſily be made up 4000 l. per Annum.

To this I ſubjoyn an Act of Common Council made Ann. 1703. Sir John Parſons Kt. Maior, for a Method to get the City out of Debt, and to prevent its further declining State: Which was, That one third Part of Places ſold ſhould be paid into the Chamber, in the Chamberlain's Court.

WHEREAS the Yearly neceſſary Charge of the Government of the City of London and the Yearly Payment of eight thouſand Pounds out of the Revenue of the ſaid City to the Orphans and other Creditors of the ſame City, do amount unto much more than the preſent Yearly Income of the ſaid City, by reaſon whereof the Mayor and Commonalty and Citizens of the City of London are become greatly indebted: Now, in order to make ſome Proviſion for Payment of the preſent Debt of the ſaid City, and to prevent the further declining State thereof, Be it Enacted and Ordained by the Lord Mayor and Aldermen and Commons in Common-Council aſſembled, and by the Authority of the ſame, That when, and as often as the reſpective Intereſts of all, any, or either of the ſeveral Officers or Perſons belonging to the ſaid City, or Bridge-Houſe, who at preſent ſtand admitted, or who hereafter ſhall be admitted into any Office or Offices, Implopment or Imployments, of or belonging to the ſaid City or Bridge-Houſe. or either of them, ſhall expire or determine, by Death, Alienation, Surrender, or removal for juſt cauſe, one full third part of all the Benefit or Profit which ſhall hereafter ariſe to the Lord Mayor and Sheriffs of the ſaid City for the time being, or any or either of them, by the Sale, Alienation, Surrender, or other Diſpoſition of all or any of the ſaid Offices or Imployments, ſhall for the future redound, be and accrue unto, and to the ſole Benefit of the Mayor and Commonalty and Citizens of the ſaid City, for the Increaſe of the Publick Revenue of the ſame. And in caſe the Lord Mayor and Sheriffs of the ſaid City for the time being, or any or either of them, ſhall give away, permit or allow to be given away by any other perſon or perſons whatſoever, any or either of the ſaid Office or Offices, Imployment or Imployments, to any perſon or perſons whatſoever, the ſaid Lord Mayor and Sheriffs, or any or either of them who ſhall ſo give, permit or allow to be given away as aforeſaid, any or either of the ſaid Offices or Imployments, ſhall pay and make good to the Mayor and Commonalty and Citizens of London, for the increaſe of the publick Revenue of the ſaid City, one full third part of what ſuch Office or Offices, Imployment or Imployments, would or might have produced to the Lord Mayor and Sheriff or Sheriffs of the ſaid City for the time being, or any or either of them, by the Sale, Alienation, Surrender or removal for juſt Cauſe or Diſpoſition of the ſaid Offices or Imployments, or any, or either of them; And that hereafter there ſhall be no new Admiſſion or Admiſſions of any perſon or perſons to any or either of the ſaid Offices or Imployments by the Lord Mayor, or by the Court of Lord Mayor and Aldermen for the time being, or either of them, unleſs and untill one full third part of the Benefit and Profit which ſhall be made as aforeſaid by the Sale, Alienation, Surrender or other diſpoſal of any of the ſaid Office or Offices, Imployment or Imployments, be paid to the Chamberlain of the City of London, for the time being, to and for the ſole Uſe and Benefit of the Mayor and Commonalty and Citizens of the City of London, for the increaſe of the publick Revenue of the ſame City, and ſuch Payment teſtified by a Receipt under the Hand of the Chamberlaine of the ſaid City for the time being; And all Admiſſion or Admiſſions of any Perſon or Perſons who ſhall hereafter be admitted to any of the ſaid Offices or Imployments before ſuch Payment made to the Chamberlain of London for the time being, to the uſe aforeſaid, and teſtified as aforeſaid, ſhall be, and is hereby Enacted and Declared null, void and of none effect, to all intents and purpoſes whatſoever.

AND whereas ſeveral Artificers and others of and belonging to the ſaid City and Bridge-Houſe, do receive Ten Shillings, more or leſs, by the Week, work or not work, Be it Enacted by the Authority aforeſaid, That from and after the Death, Alienation or Surrender, Yielding up, or Removal for juſt Cauſe, of all, any or either of the ſaid Artificers or others, the Payment of Ten Shilling by the Week, more or leſs, work or not work, ſhall not hereafter be paid to any Perſon or Perſons who ſhall be admitted to the Place or Places, Imployment or Imployments, of all, any or either of the ſaid Artificers or others, but that the ſaid Payment or Payments of ſuch Sum or Sums of Money to any ſuch Perſon or Perſons ſo admitted, ſhall utterly ceaſe and determine, any Act of Common-Council, Cuſtom or Uſage to the contrary in any wiſe notwithſtanding.

PROVIDED, That nothing contained in this Act ſhall extend, or be conſtrued to extend to any of the Officers or Offices of the Coal-Meeters or Corn-Meeters of this City, or any or either of them, but that the ſame Officers or Offices, and every of them, ſhall remain in the ſame State as they are ſettled by Act of Common-Council, made and paſſed on or about the Twenty Seventh Day of September, One thouſand ſeven hundred and three, any thing herein to the contrary in any wiſe notwithſtanding.

ASHHURST.

Citizens for the Parliament.

The City by ancient Cuſtom and Privilege ſends four Citizens to be their Repreſentatives in Parliament. The Electors are the Livery-Men of the Companies. At theſe Elections the Citizens have of late commonly ſet up eight Perſons, ſome Aldermen and ſome Commoners, of the Wealthier and more Popular ſort, four againſt four, according as they are thought to ſtand affected to the Church as by Law eſtabliſhed, or leſs inclined to it. And ſome time before the Election comes on, they print their Names in different Papers, and diſperſe them, recommending the ſaid Perſons to the Citizens, as fit Men to be their Repreſentatives. Theſe Elections are uſually by Poll, which laſts four or five Days ſometimes before it be over. For inſtance, Parliament Men choſen in May, 1705. and the Numbers that polled for each, ſtood thus:

Sir Robert Clayton	2919
Sir William Aſhhurſt	2961
Sir Gilbert Heathcote	3346
Samuel Shepheard Eſq;	3013

And this Paper following was delivered them upon the Huſtings by ſeveral eminent Citizens, immediately upon the Sheriffs declaring them duly elected, in behalf of themſelves and the reſt of the Common Hall.

The Tenor of a Paper delivered to the Parliament Men elected.

Gentlemen,

‘WHEN we conſider your Affection to the QUEEN, the eſtabliſhed Church, the Proteſtant Intereſt, and the Government of this Kingdom: We cannot doubt of your ſincere Endeavours to anſwer the Ends for which you are now choſen our Repreſentatives in Parliament

'liament, by taking effectual Care of her Majeſty's Royal Perſon, and the Proteſtant Succeſſion, as by Law eſtabliſhed, and by aſſiſting her Majeſty with ſeaſonable Supplies for proſecuting the War againſt France, for ſecuring the Liberties of Europe, and the Honour and Trade of England.

'And We are perſwaded, that you will uſe your beſt endeavours to maintain the ſeveral Parts of the Legiſlature within their due Bounds, to preſerve the Rights and Liberties of your Fellow-Subjects from any illegal Encroachments, and to procure the neceſſary Protection to our Trade at Sea; ſo that all Contrivances to diſturb her Majeſty's Government, and the Commerce of this Kingdom, may be happily prevented.

Weekly Bills of Mortality.

To know how the City ſtands in regard of the Health or Sickneſs of the Inhabitants, the Weekly Bills of Mortality were appointed long ago, carefully and wiſely; That ſo if any infectious Diſeaſe were found to Reign, means might be uſed for the ſtopping it, and preventing the Deaths of innumerable Citizens. Hereby alſo are many other Advantages gained, as to know the Populouſneſs of the City, nay, of the whole Kingdom, as ſome ingenious Men that have made Obſervations on theſe Bills, have diſcovered.

When, and on what occaſion they began. Reflections on Weekly Bills of Mortality, Printed 1665.

The keeping of them began (ſaith a Learned Author) Anno 1592, being a great year of Sickneſs; and, after ſome diſuſe, was eſtabliſhed by Order Anno 1603, the next Year of Sickneſs; the Firſt of the continued Weekly Bills of Mortality, commencing October the 29th the ſaid Year, being the firſt Year of the Reign of King James the Firſt. Diſeaſes began firſt to be diſtinctly taken notice of, Ann. 1629.

How theſe Bills were made.

Theſe Bills are made and compoſed after this manner: When any one dieth in a Pariſh, either the tolling or ringing of the Bell, or the beſpeaking of a Grave, intimateth it to the Searchers, who alſo keep a Correſpondence with the Sexton; and thereupon the ancient Matrons ſworn to that Office, repair to the Place where the dead Corps lieth; and upon their own View and other Examination, make a Judgment by what Diſeaſe or Caſualty the Perſon died: Which Judgment they report to the Pariſh-Clerk; as he doth every Tueſday Night, the Account of every Chriſtning or Burial that Week, to the Clerk of the Hall. Whence on Wedneſday the general Account is made up and printed, and on Thurſdays publiſhed, and brought to the reſpective Families in every Pariſh that pay four Shillings a Year for them, which is the Pariſh-Clerks Benefit.

Great Plagues in London.

In leſs than fourſcore Years, it appears by theſe Bills of Mortality, there have been five great Mortalities; that is, from the Year 1592, to the Year 1665. I. In the Year 1592, between March and December died 25886. whereof of the Plague 11503. The next Year died of the Plague, 10662. II. Anno 1603, there died from March to December, 37294, whereof of the Plague, 30561. Note, the Plague in 1603, laſted eight Years, viz. to the Year 1611. Obſervations upon the Bills of Mortality.

Here is ſet down likewiſe, how many died in each Pariſh. This Bill of Mortality might be the firſt of this kind; at leaſt much older than that mentioned by Captain Grant, viz. 1592, 1593, which he ſeems to hold to be the oldeſt.

Obſervations of the Diſeaſes and Caſualties of the City.

From theſe Bills of Mortality, Obſervations were taken by an ingenious Citizen in the Year 1662, concerning the encreaſe of ſome Diſeaſes, and the decreaſe of others. Thus Agues and Feavers encreaſe, ſuppoſed to be by Surfeits and Exceſſes; and ſo do Abortives, by reaſon of the ſtreightning of Bodies, mixtures of Copulations, and the unwholſom Diet. The Scurvy encreaſeth, and ſo the Conſumption with the French-Pox, which goeth under that Name. The Stone and Strangury decreaſeth, which the Obſerver makes to proceed from the drinking Ale ſo plentifully. The Gout ſtandeth at a ſtay; there dieth but one of a thouſand of the Gout, tho' more die gouty; the reaſon is, becauſe thoſe that have the Gout, are ſaid to be long-livers; and when they die, are returned as Aged. The Rickets encreaſed from the Year 1634, and the Livergrown, which is next a-kin to it, thereupon decreaſt. The Riſing of the Stomach ſince it was firſt mentioned, Anno 1636, is improved, it being ſuppoſed the Green Sickneſs goeth under that Name. Convulſions were 52 in the Year 1629, and in the Year 1636, were 700 and odd, and hath increaſt ſince.

Apoplexies and ſudden Obſtructions increaſe. Bloody Flux, Scouring and Flux encreaſe; and ſo do Cancer, Gangreen, Fiſtula, Wolf. Cholicks and Winds decreaſe. Dropſies by exceſſive Drinking encreaſe; and ſo do King's Evil and Impoſtume and Lethargy, but moderately, ſometimes encreaſing, and ſometimes decreaſing. Worms and Teeth increaſe conſiderably, ſo Purples and Spotted Feaver.

Diſeaſes, forerunners of the Plague.

The Obſerver further took notice, that many times other peſtilential Diſeaſes, Purples, Feavers, Small Pox, the Dyſſentery, called by ſome, the Plague in the Guts, forerun Plague-Years: As about 8000 of all Diſeaſes and Caſualties in the Year 1622, improved to 11000 in the Year 1623, and to 12000 in the Year 1624; the next Year 1625, [the Year of a great Plague] being 54000 and upwards only of the Plague. There died about 2000 of the Small-pox from the latter end of 1634, to the beginning of 1636, when there died of the Plague 10400.

The City was ſoon repeopled after a Plague.

It was further obſerved hence, that the City is repeopled after a great Plague in two Years, as is generally aſſerted. For Chriſtenings in the City are (if the Inhabitants are not Anabaptiſts) the moſt certain Standards of the Increaſe and Decreaſe of the Inhabitants. Chriſtenings in the Year 1624, that is, the Year preceding the great Plague, were 8299. And the next Year after the Plague, viz. 1626, they were 6701. But within two Years after, they amounted to 8408. Such is the Confluence of all ſorts of People to this great City.

The Encreaſe of the City.

It is obſerved further, concerning the Encreaſe of the City by computation of the Chriſtenings, that the City encreaſed half in half in thirty Years ſpace; that is to ſay, from 1603, to 1633. For the Number of 5458 Chriſtened in the Year 1604, encreaſed to the Number of 9997 Chriſtened in 1632.

How many Families in London.

Alſo, to know what Number of Families may be in the City, allow fifty four Families to be in each hundred Yards Square, whereof there are 880 within and without the Walls, [viz. 220 Yards Square within the Walls, the reſt without] and there will be 47520 Families in and about London. Whence it was conjectured, that there might be People to the Number of 494000, [another computed the People to be two Millions,] in the time when theſe Obſervations were made, which was between 40 and 50 Years ago.

Fighting Men in London.

It is further obſerved, how many fighting Men may be within the City, namely, 81233, that is, ſuch as are between 20 and 40 Years old, near 72000 in London; and a fifth part out of Weſtminſter, Stepney and Lambeth, that is, 13539.

Proportion of People in London to all England.

Further, it was reckoned, there be fourteen times as many People in all England, as there are in London, that is, about four Millions, two hundred and thirteen Thouſand; and that a ninth Part of theſe come yearly to London, reckoning one Year with another. And then it is concluded, that London hath every Year 6000 new Comers, whereof 3400 are able to bear Arms.

London not ſo ſubject to the Plague as formerly.

It was obſerved alſo, whether London be ſo obnoxious to the Plague of late, as it hath been in former time. London hath been multiplied two parts in three, in eighty Years, and the more Populous, the more Infectious. Whence it might ſeem to follow, that the City were more ſubject to peſtilential Malignities now, than in times paſt; yet Experience aſſureth us of the contrary, and Reaſon ſeconds Experience. For Firſt, tho' the Fumes, Steams and Stenches are now groſſer than formerly, by reaſon of the encreaſe of Houſes, (which makes it in ſome Reſpects more unhealthful, eſpecially ſince the burning of Seacoals;) yet keeping the Air from being ſo liable to foreign Impreſſions as formerly, theſe Fumes and Steams, eſpecially of Seacoals, ſo thicken the Air, that it ſtandeth out againſt moſt foreign Influences. Secondly, Tho' the City be encreaſed, (and that by turning Noblemens Houſes to Tenements, as the Earl of Wincheſters, Alderman Freemans, the Earl of Arundels, the Biſhop of Londons Palace, the Dean of Paul's Houſe, the Lord Rivers's, the Duke's Place, &c.) yet the encreaſe is removed to more open and free Air, and the Trade removed from the dirty and narrow Places in Canningſtreet and Watlingſtreet, to St. Paul's, Ludgate and Fleetſtreet, from Billingſgateſtreet and Fenchurchſtreet to the Strand, avoiding thoſe Places that were crambed with old and dark Houſes and Buildings, and inhabiting more new and lightſome ones nearer and nearer to White Hall, ſituate in a more convenient and healthful Air. And, Laſtly, it was obſerved, that the Contagion of the Peſtilence depended more on the Diſpoſition of the Air, than upon the Effluvia of Mens Bodies; a Truth made manifeſt by the ſudden encreaſe of it in the Year 1636, from 118 one Week, to 927 in the next; and from the ſudden decreaſe from 990 in one Week, to 258 the next; and then again to 852. Alterations certainly be attributed rather to the Change of Air, than to the Conſtitutions of Mens Bodies.

Theſe Obſervations were made above 40 Years ago, before the great Fire; when thoſe Places (which are now fair open Streets) were ſo cloſe and noiſome.

The Number of Souls in each Ward. Nat. & Polit. Obſervat. p. 173.

Once more, what was the Number about 80 or 90 Years ago, of Men, Women and Children in the ſeveral Wards of London, and the Liberties, may be ſeen by this exact Table following, taken in Auguſt, Ann. 1631, by ſpecial Command from the Lords of his Majeſty's Privy Council: By which the Learned may compute what Number of Souls in the City is at preſent, after ſo many Years.

The Plague in London, 1582.

To theſe Obſervations let me ſubjoin a few Collections concerning the Plague, in the 25th Year of Queen Elizabeth, Ann. 1582. In the latter End of which Year, the Plague was in London and Weſtminſter; and great care was taken, as well for preventing the encreaſe of it in both Cities, as againſt the ſpreading of it, by infecting ſuch as came out of the Countries to the Term, or on other Occaſions; when People uſually flocked into the City, and took up Lodgings in publick Houſes, which might have been infected, and ſo carrying it back into the Country. Therefore the Lord Treaſurer in the Month of January, ſent Order to the Maior, Sir Tho. Blank, to make diligent enquiry into all Victualling Houſes, and Houſes for Reception of Strangers; and that whereſoever the Plague was, or had been within two Months before, publick notice ſhould be given, by fixing up in proper Places of the City, a Liſt of thoſe Houſes, and in what Streets and Parts of the City they were ſituate, that they might be avoided by ſuch as ſhould have need of Harbour and Habitation, when they came from other Parts.

The Lord Maiors care againſt the ſpreading of it.

The Maior did as was commanded him, and gave notice of the ſame to the ſaid Lord in a Letter dated January the 14th, to this Purport: 'That he had, according to his Lordſhips Direction by his Letters, reformed the Catalogue of Victualling Houſes infected within the Liberties of the City, from the 13th of November laſt, being within the two Months appointed, and that as his Lordſhip willed, with the advice of Mr. Norton; and that he had informed him, that he had ſpecial regard to two Things. The one, to give ſuch plain Deſcription and Notes of the Streets and Places, as might ſerve for eaſie notice to ſuch as repaired to the City. The other, that it ſhould be in ſuch ſhortneſs, as might be brought into leſs than one Face of a Sheet of Paper, to be fixed in Places convenient. The Maior alſo in a Note encloſed, ſignified the Places, with reſpect to Weſtminſter (for the better ſecurity of the Court) and the way thither, and the entrance alſo into the City, and deſired his Lordſhip to conſider thereof.

'And further, That he thought good to move his Lordſhip to the ſame intent, that in Term time uſually in manner, all Houſes, [not only publick Houſes] in Fleetſtreet, and the Streets and Lanes adjoining, as alſo without Temple Bar, uſed Lodging, Victualling, or letting out of Chambers; whether it were his Pleaſure, that all ſuch Houſes in thoſe Parts, as did ſo lodge and let out Chambers, tho' they were not otherwiſe uſually Victuallers, ſhould be likewiſe noted, if they had been infected within that ſpace of two Months.

And then, like a careful Magiſtrate, and good Subject, added theſe Words: 'I do likewiſe humbly thank your Lordſhip for your honourable and loving Care of this City, in the ſaid Matter of Infection, and the Repair of the Queen's Subjects hither. And for my own part, I will not fail in Diligence by your Directions according to my Duty.

Thus alſo I find Orders taken at Weſtminſter the 21ſt of December, the ſame Year by Mr. Dean of Weſtminſter, Mr. Recorder of London, Mr. Humfrey Smith, and Mr. Owen, by the direction of the Lord Treaſurer, to be obſerved in Weſtminſter, and the Liberties, and alſo in the Dutchy of Lancaſter without Temple Bar. Which were theſe, viz.

Orders about the Plague, in the Liberties of Weſtminſter.

Firſt, Diligent care to be had by ſearch of every Perſon; and where any ſuch Perſon ſhall be found to die of the Plague, that then that Houſe to be ſhut up by the ſpace of twenty one Days next following: And that no Perſon be ſuffered to go forth out of the ſame Houſe during the time aforeſaid, unleſs the ſame Perſon do carry in his or her Hand a white Stick, in Length two Foot, upon pain of open Impriſonment in the Stocks.

Item, If any Houſe being ſo viſited, and the Parties therein not able to live of themſelves, that then Conſideration to be had by Contribution of the Pariſhioners for their Relief and Suſtentation.

Item, Upon every ſuch Houſe that ſhall happen to be infected, as aforeſaid, there ſhall be ſet up and fixed upon the Street Door in Paper or Parchment, theſe Words, Lord, have Mercy upon us; and there to remain by the ſpace of twenty one Days together. Item, That no Houſholder whatſoever, ſhall take or receive into his or her Houſe, any ſick or infected Perſon, out or from any other Houſe or Place, upon pain of Whipping, and open Impriſonment as aforeſaid.

Item, That the Streets, Allies, Lanes, Canelles, and all other neceſſary Places ſhall be ſcoured; and ſo from time to time kept clean, before every Man's ſeveral Houſe in the Streets; and alſo that no Hogs ſhall be ſuffered to go or wander in the ſaid Streets, nor any vagrant Perſon, upon pain of Impriſonment.

Item, That no Perſon ſhall take or receive into his or her Houſe or Cellar, any Inmates, upon pain of Impriſonment.

Item, That no Upholſter, Broker, or other Perſon whatſoever, ſhall buy any old Apparel or Bedding whatſoever, unleſs they make the Bailiff, Headborough, or Conſtable of the ſaid Ward, privy, and conſenting thereto, upon pain of Impriſonment.

Item, That every Headborough and Conſtable within his Ward, ſhall ſee theſe Articles to be performed. And for ſuch Offenders as will not be reformed accordingly, to be puniſhed openly in the Stocks, as aforeſaid.

Item, That if any Officers, elected and choſen to ſee theſe Articles and Orders executed, do not execute their Office and Charge herein, he ſhall be puniſhed at the Diſcretion of ſome one of the ſaid Juſtices.

Item, If the Infection happen to be in the Houſe of any Baker or Victualler whatſoever, within any of the Liberties aforeſaid, that then the ſaid Baker or Victualler not to ſell or utter any Bread or other Victuals within twenty one Days after knowledge had of any ſuch Infection, upon pain of open Impriſonment, as aforeſaid.

Item, If any Ambiguities or Doubts do ariſe concerning the Orders aforeſaid, that then the Officers to repair to Mr. Dean of Weſtminſter for his direction therein.

A General Muſter in London 1532. R. B.

The Citizens muſter before King Henry in great State.

In the Year of our Lord 1532, (not to look further backward) being the 23d of K Henry VIII. there was a General Muſter in London; wherein were taken the Names of all Men within the City and Liberties, from the Age of 16, unto 60, the Harneſſes, and all ſorts of Weapons for War being alſo taken Account of. They then drew out only ſuch able Men as had white Harneſſes; and cauſed them all to appear in white Coats and Breeches, and white Caps and Feathers. And becauſe Notice was given that the King would ſee them Muſtered, they all prepared to appear as ſplendid as they could. And to that end, the Lord Maior, Aldermen, Recorder, Sheriffs, and all that had been Sheriffs, had white Harneſs; and over that, Coats of black Velvet, with the Arms of the City embroidered thereon: each one a great Gold Chain, and well mounted on Horſes with rich Trappings: on their Heads Velvet Caps, and in their Hands Battle-Axes gilt. Each Alderman and the Recorder had four Halbertiers in white Silk, or Buff-Coats, waiting on them, with their Halberts gilt. And the Lord Maior had ſixteen tall Men apparelled in white Sattin Doublets, Caps and Feathers, Chains of Gold, and other gorgeous Attire, with long gilt Halberts, following his Lordſhip at a diſtance. But next to him he had four Footmen attired in white Sattin. Then two Pages cloathed in crimſon Velvet, and Cloth of Gold, riding on fine Horſes richly furniſhed; one of them carrying the Lord Maior's Helmet, and the other his Pole-Axe, both richly gilt. Moſt of the Citizens of any Quality or Office, were clad in white Sattin, or white Silk Coats, with Chains of Gold; and ſome had rich Jewels.

Muſtered in Mile-end.

What was the Number of Men then in Arms is not recorded; but that may be gueſſed at by what follows. They muſtered in Mile-end Fields. And before Nine of the Clock in the Morning they began to March, entring at Algate in great Order; and ſome marched up to Weſtminſter; where the King and moſt of the Courtiers were placed to view them, as they paſſed by. Thence they marched about St. James's Park; ſo through Holborn, and thence to Leaden-Hall, where they disbanded and went Home. And this was not done till Five of the Clock in the Afternoon; which was eight Hours March]

A great Muſter in London. J. S.

In the Year 1585, were great Muſters in London, that ſo the City might be in a readineſs upon any Invaſion of the Spaniard, who now threatned terribly, by the Preparations they were making; and upon any Inſurrections at Home, by reaſon of the Queen of Scots: And large Contributions were raiſed upon the Citizens for this Charge. But they in Blackfriers, St. Martin's, Whitefriers, and other exempt Places, refuſed to be taxed, and would not yield to pay any thing, unleſs they received Direction from the Lord Treaſurer, and other the Lords of the Privy Council for the doing thereof. So that Sir Tho Pullyſon, Lord Maior, deſired the ſaid Lord Treaſurer to give his Orders to thoſe Places.

They Muſter before the Queen at Greenwich.

And in April and May this Year, the Queen being at Greenwich, the City Militia, compleatly armed, muſtered before her ſix or eight Days, laying intrenched about Blackheath, to the number of 4000 or 5000 Men. Then all the Companies and Myſteries of London ſent out their Numbers. And here follows a Scheme of what Numbers of Men each Company ſet forth, and the Charge of Arms, Wages and Victuals.

The Citizens think of defending the City.

Upon the dangerous Threatning from the Conſpiracies by Papiſts carrying on, in September 1586, the City thought of putting themſelves into a Poſture of Defence. And there was for that End drawn up, (to be conſidered by the Lords) a Book intituled, The Manner of ordering the Citizens of London, to the ſafe Keeping and Defence of that her Majeſty's City, againſt the Traiterous and ſudden Attempts of all Conſpirators and Traitors whatſoever. Which, being ſo remarkable a Matter, and ſhewing the Vigilancy and Courage of the City at this Time, may deſerve to be here exemplified:

A Book drawn up for that purpoſe

1. THat everie Alderman of his Warde, aſſiſted with the graveſt Inhabitants there, doe gather and regiſter the Names of all ſuche Howſehowlders, their Children and Servants, as dwell in the ſame Warde, who openlye profeſſe and ſhewe themſelves to love the Goſpel, and hate Poperie, being of ſufficient Wealthe to mayneteyne their owne State, and able to beare Armes.

2. Item, That of the moſt apte of thoſe Cittizens, there be choſen out for ſpecial Leaders (everye of them to lead xxv of his Neighbours dwelling next him.) And that there be ſo manye of thoſe Leaders, as after that rate ſhalbe ſufficient to leade iiij. or v. thouſand Men, or more or leſſe, as ſhalbe thought meete: And that the ſayd Nomber of Men be choſen out of thoſe, to be regiſtred as aforeſayd.

3. Item, That of the moſt valiante, grave and wiſe amonge the ſaid regiſtred Cittizens, there be choſen Captaynes of Bandes, everie of them under ſeverall Enſignes; to receave tenne of the ſayd ſpeciall Leaders, with everie of them his xxv Men. So ſhall there be two hundred and fifty Men under an Enſigne: And that they have their ſeveral Enſignes accordinglye.

4. Item, That of the ſaid Cittizens there be choſen to ſerve under everie ſuche of their Captaynes, their ſeveral Lyvetenantes, Enſigne-Bearers and Sergeantes, with a fit Drumſter: And that there be aſſigned a Place certen to everye Captayen, whereunto he ſhall reſorte upon any ſudden Alarme. And that he know all his Officers, and thoſe petty Leaders ſpeciallie appointed, to bring his Men thither to him. And likewiſe that thoſe Officers and Leaders know the ſame Place, and their Captayne.

5. Item, That after ſuche Election and Appointment as aforeſaid, everie one applye himſelf to learne and knowe, howe to Exerciſe their ſeveral Offices and Romes, as apperteyneth. And that everie Houſeholder have readie in his Howſe all Weapons and Furniture neceſſarie for himſelf and thoſe of his Howſe, to be appointed in this Service.

6. Item, That the Watches for the Nighte be kepte according to the former Order. But the ſame to be of more ſufficient Perſons; and that ſpeciallie, there be at everie Gate a Watche from ix of the Clocke at Nighte, till vj in the Morning for the Wynter, and from x. to v. in the Sommer; and that the Portculliſes at everie Gate be ſurveyed and made readie to uſe at any ſuddeyn, yf any nede be.

7. Item, That inaſmuche as that ſyde of the Cytie, next the Ryver, lyeth open, That therefore from the Tower to Brydewell, they do appointe all alongeſt a ſufficient Nomber of Watche Howſes. And therein Nightlie to be good Watches to come and contynue as at the Gate. And that all pryvate Kayes, Alleys and Wharfes during, the Howers aforeſayd, be cloſe ſhut upp in.

8. Item, That at thendes of Streetes be prepared Chaynes, as ſhalbe thought needfull, for interrupting thentrie and Paſſage of anye Adverſarie.

9. Item, For quenching of ſudden Fiers, yt wilbe neceſſarie to have a thowſand truſtie Perſons to carrie Leather Bucketts and Ladders. And that to them of the graver Cyttyzens, there be appointed Leaders, to lead them as nede may be, by hundreds and fiftyes, for to be readie to releve anye fiered Place. And that likewiſe, under like leading, there be appointed v hundred Pyoners with Mattockes and Shovells, ready to make Trenches and Rampyers at all Occaſions.

10. Item, That the whole ordring and diſpoſing of the Premiſſes, be at the Direction of the Lord Maior, Sheriffes and Aldermen, and ſuche grave Perſons, as they ſhall take and chuſe of the ſayde Cyttye to aſſiſte them; and ſoe from tyme to tyme, and not otherwiſe.

11. Item, Upon anye Alarme to be geven, everye Captayne forthwith to repayre to his appointed Place, and all his Officers, and the ſeveral Leaders, with their xxv Men a peece, forthwith to reſorte to that Place to their ſpecial appointed Captaine. And two of thoſe Captaines being placed next to the Lord Maiors Howſe for the time being, with bothe their Bandes, to repayre ymmediatly to his Lordſhip. And to either of the Sheriffes in like ſorte, to repayre one ſeverall Captayne, with his ſeverall Bande. And all other Captaines and their Companies to remayne at their appointed Places, till they receave Order from the Maior. And that in ſuch caſe one general Watch Word be geven to everye Soldyer: And that they have ſome ſpecial Token, whereby everye of them may be knowen one to another.

12. Item, That upon any ſhewe, or ſuſpicion of any dangerous Attempte diſcryed or perceyved by any of the Watches, that then forthwith they ſhall geve knowledge thereof to the Lord Maior, and Sheriffe, and to everye Alderman or his Deputie, in the ſeveral Wardes; that they may call ſo manye to Armes, as in caſe by them ſhalbe thought convenient and ſufficient.

13. Item, That upon anye Alarme or Warning geven, everie Inhabitant prepare and have readie in his Howſe a Lanthorne with Lighte readye to hange out, when by Authoritie it ſhalbe ſo commanded.

14. Item, That ſtraighte Order be taken, that yf any Alarme be proclaymed, that no Maſters of Howſes goe noe further than the Streete Dores of their Howſes; and that noe Servante or other (upon grevous payne) do then iſſue into the Streete, except the Lord Maior, Aldermen, Sheriffs, Captaynes, Leaders, Officers and Soldiers aforeſayd, and their Buketiers and Pyoners and their Leaders; and ſuch others as ſhalbe eſpeciallie called or commanded by the Lord Maior or Sheriffes.

15. Item, That one of the Watche Howſes at the Waterſyde be nere the Engine there that ſerveth the Cittie with Water. For that above all other is moſt preſent, and aboundant to that Purpoſe, and moſt readye for quenching Fyer: and therefore is ſpeciallie to be garded.

16. Item, That ſuch Recuſants as have greate Houſes and Lodginges within the Liberties of the Cittie; and likewiſe all dangerous and ſuſpicious Perſons to the State, may by her Majeſties Authoritie be removed from Lodging within the Walles of the Citie, (or Suburbs, yf that may be) for thoſe Howſes are moſt like to harbour and cover dangerous Perſons to be nearer and readyer to make ſudden invaſion upon the Cittie.

17. Item, That ſome ſpecial conſideration may be had of all Strangers, having Howſes in the Cittie, and which are not of the Frenche or Dutche Churche. And that ſome Order may be ſett downe, eſpeciallie concerning them, as in this Time and State ſhall be founde requiſite.

Preparation for Defence, An. 1588.

Again, in the beginning of the Year 1588, the Queen hearing and ſeeing ſuch vaſt Preparations making by Spain; and concluding theſe Clouds to be intended to be diſcharged upon her; reſolved in the beſt manner ſhe could to put her City into a Condition of Defence. So the Lords of the Council ordered Edmund York, a brave Commander in the Low Countries, to give his Directions how the City ſhould be ordered for this purpoſe. But ſtill the Lord Maior was to be the Chief Governour of all this Military Preparation in the City, in making Colonels and Captains and other Officers. Which was ſuch a Truſt by the Queen impoſed upon the Lord Maior, as York ſaid, ſuch an Honour, and ſuch a gracious Favour never happened unto any People; neither was the like ever heretofore done unto them. York's Diſcourſe follows, intituled

An Order to be obſerved for the Marſhalling of the City of London into a true Form of Diſcipline, to be uſed in time of Occaſion.

A Book for Marſhalling the City in 1588.

CONſidering the auncient Government of the Citie hath alwayes depended on the Lord Maior and his Brethren; which courſe hath alwayes been found ſo pleaſinge to our Prynces, and liking to the People, as to alter were inconvenient; If therefore your Lordſhips ſhall pleaſe rather to give them ſome authoritie (by your Directions) Marſhall, then to derogate anye thinge from them, it will animate them in their accounts and expences. Which authoritie ſhall contynew till her Majeſtie and your Lordſhips ſhall pleaſe to the contrarie. Yet conſideringe theire profeſſions and Nurritures not to performe theſe actions, therefore to ioyne unto the Maiors authoritie ſome man of Judgment, Experience, and Fidelitie, it were convenient, as Marſhall. By whoſe adviſe with the Maiors conſent, all cauſes Marſhall ſhall be directed, then a Sargeant, Major and a Provoſt, the one to Marſhall the Men, and the other to do juſtice: wherein the French truly ſaith, that three things mayneteyne the Warres, which is: Bon chief; Bonne burſe; & Boun burreau: Meaning Juſtice: All which I take able to be performed in the Citie: for the Chief or Marſhall being appointed by your Lordſhips; there is no doubt of his ſufficiencie: upon whom the greateſt Weight of this burthen muſt lye: The Purſe conſidering the Charges ſo ſmall, it will ſoon be performed: The Juſtice by your Lordſhips Directions, and the Provoſts Diligence ſhall be duely adminiſtred: So as all things ſhall proceede to the glorie of God, to the Honour of her Majeſtie, and to the benefitt of the People. Object they canne not, for that the charges is defrayed by the entertainment onely of three Perſons. So as no doubt of the Allowance in reſpect of Charges. For infringing the Liberties and Priviledges, your Lordſhips do give them more then ever they had. For reputation and truſt, her Majeſtie and your Lordſhip do putt Armes, and the managing of Armes into their Hands; So as no doubt, but of a moſt gracious acceptance and acknowledgement of ſo an eſpeciall gracious Favour and Truſt: And may iuſtlye ſaye them ſelves to be the happieſt People of the World, in having ſo gracious a Prynce, who contrarie to the Policie of all other Prynces (who diſarme theire Subjects) doth put Armes, and managing of Armes into their Handes: O bleſſed Prynce, and happie People. By how much therefore are we more bound to her Majeſtie, then any other Subjects of the World to their Prynce, by as muche, as our Lives, our Wives, our Children, our Goods, our Freedome, and Poſteritie is worth.

The Marſhall, Sargeant, Major, and Provoſt being by your Lordſhips appointed, the firſt thinge they are to doe, (after the receivinge of theire Commiſſions from your Lordſhips) is to make a Review general of all the Armes and Munition within the Citie and Suburbes, and thereof to enforme your Lordſhip.

The next is, to make a Review of all the Garners of Corne as well in private Houſes, as in common Magaſyns, not onelye of Corn but of all manner of Victuals, and thereof enforme your Lordſhips.

Theiſe Reviewes made by the Major, his Brethren, and Marſhall, (to whome all Proviſion of Munition, Armes, and Victuall belongeth) then ſhall they warne everie common Marchant of Corne, to have ſuch a quantitie, and to everie common Baker and Brewer; to have allwayes in a readynes ſuch a quantitie of Corne as he uttereth in fortie Dayes, over and above his ordynarie uttering. And ſo ſhall geve like order of Proviſion to eurye ſeverall Perſon that lives and gaynes by ſelling of Victualls: for as the Marchaunt of Armes and Munitions, the Baker, the Brewer, the Butcher, and all other Trades have a contynuall getting, ſo lett them be bound to have an overplus always in theire handes, to ſerve her Majeſtie, and to ſuſteyne themſelves uppon any occaſion of Warres, Dearth, or the Suſtenaunce of diſtreſſed Frendes.

This done, the Citie ſhall be devided into ſo many Quarters, as there is Fifteene Hundreth Men: In everie Quarter ſhalbe choſen one Collonell, a Man there Dwellinge, and a Citizen of Honeſtie, Reputation and Wealth, elected by the Maior and Marſhall (after your Lordſhips Allowance) lowance) who ſhall haue under hym Tenne Captaynes, all Dwellers in that Quarter; and everie Captayne ſhall have a Hundreth and Fiftie Men, all Inhabitants in that Quarter, which ſhalbe either the Houſholder, his Sonne, or his contynewed Servant. Provided that the Collonells be none of the Aldermen; becauſe they are already choſen to the Civill Governement.

The Regiment being all Dwellers togeather in one Quarter, doth make the Collonells Governement eaſye, and makes the Aſſemblye of the Souldiers ſpeedie.

The Collonells choſen, and the Quarters devided, then ſhall everie Collonell chooſe Six Captaynes, which ſhalbe allowed by the Maior and Marſhall, (after they have enformed your Lordſhips) being all Dwellers in the Collonells Quarter.

After the Captaynes choſen, the Lord Maior, his Brethren, and the Marſhall, ſhall deliver ſo many Houſholders, theire Sons or Contynewed Servaunts, as will furniſh eurye Captayne 150 Men with Weapons thus devided, that is, eight Halberdiers, 60 armed Pikes, 30 Musketiers, and 50 Harquebuſiers, and the two odd Men ſhalbe for the Sargeants. For to put into theſe trayned Companyes any Archers, or a ſuperfluous number of ſhort Weapons, it were inconvenient, for that the multitude uppon any alarum, will come furniſhed with thoſe Weapons: And therefore to teach that by Art which Nature geves, were tyme loſt: and to charge a People with that which is not wanting, were frevolous.

The Companies furniſhed, as is aforeſaide, then the Sargeant Major, or his Corporalls ſhall viſitt every Mans particular furniture in their private Howſes; aſwell to ſee the Goodnes of their Armes, as to ſee it in order, leaſt they ſhould diſhonour their Commanders; for not performing that which apperteynes to Men of Judgment and Souldiers to doe.

After your Armes provided and reviewed, a Muſter General of all the Armye ſhalbe held in ſome convenient Place: at which Muſters ſhall onely be the ſhew of the Men with theire Armes without any Exerciſe: Which ſhalbe held in the Preſence of ſuch Honorable Perſons as your Lordſhip ſhall appoynt, ioyned with the Maior, his Brethren, the Marſhall, and Sargeant Major: At which tyme the Marſhall, Sargeant Major and Provoſt, ſhalbe preſented unto all the Collonells, Captaynes and Souldiers, theire Commiſſions publiſhed:

When your Collonells, Captaynes, and Souldiers know this, then everie Night at 6 of the Clock ſhall five Companyes of ſeverall Regiments putt themſelves in Armes. And ſo with theire Enſignes ſhall marche unto the Exchange, and there ſhall ſtand in Battell a quarter of an Houre: To whom the Marſhall ſhall come with the Word, which he ſhall take from the Major, who ſhall haue it from her Majeſtie (if ſhe be neare London) which the Marſhall ſhall deliver to the Sargeant Maior with great Duetie and Reſpect: who ſhall geve it unto the Capteyne of the Watche, and to everie Officer that is in Garde that Night: After the Word delivered; A Prayer for her Majeſties Eſtate and Kingdome, the Lord's Prayer ſhalbe ſayed. Then the Sergeant Maior ſhall putt five Billetts in a Hatt, which the Captaynes that are in Garde drawe for their Places of Gardinge; So as he that draweth the Billett of the Exchange, ſhall that Night be Capteyne of the Watche: He that drawes the Billett of the Bridge, ſhall Gard it, and St. Catherynes Gate by the Tower: He that draws Aldgate ſhall Garde it, and Buſſhopſgate: He that drawes Creplegate ſhall Garde it, and Alderſgate: He that drawes Newgate ſhall Gard it, and Ludgate: As for Mooregate, it is no Avenew, but a Paſſage, as the Poſterne and the Graye-Fryers are. Why I devide the Companyes into two Gardes, is, for not overtoylinge the Souldiers, being Men of Trade: For by this meanes they Garde but once in 20 Dayes, which elſe would come everie tenne Days.

When the Companyes are thus entred into Garde, the chief Cordegard for the Captayne of the Watche, ſhalbe kept at the Exchange, by his whole Companye, and the other Cordegards at the Gates by halfe Companyes. Upon everie Cordegard, ſhall contynuallye ſtand in Armes, five, or ſixe Souldiers: who ſhall be relieved everie halfe Hour. And conſidering the contynuall ſtyrringe and travayle that is in London, it ſhall not be inconvenient to ſhut the Gates tyll Tenne of the Clocke or after: and then at Eleven to put forth the Centenells, which ought to be placed uppon the Walles, or as neare as maye be. And ſo ſhall ſtand Centeneld tyll 3 in the Morninge; and ſhalbe changed eurye Houre: And eurye half Houre they ſhall make the Round, which is the ſureſt Garde in the World: But conſidering how impoſſible it is to place the Centenells, by reaſon of the diſorderlye and dangerous Buildinge of Howſes which are upon the Walles: By which means I haue knowne many Townes ſurprized and greate Intelligence paſſed to their utter Ruine; for where your Centenells canne not come to the Walles, nor your Round haue free Paſſage, it is impoſſible of any certen Safetie, which manner of Buildinge ought carefully to be looked unto, eſpecially in any Place of Importance, as the Towre, or ſuche like Forts are: Therefore muſt the Centenells be placed in the Streetes, who, after they are once pozed, ſhall not ſuffer anye to paſſe without the Worde, which manner of ſevere Gardinge ſhalbe but uſed tyll the Companyes have once all gone over: Whiche is onelye to teache them to knowe how to ſtande upon theire Gardes, duringe which tyme onelye the Gates ſhalbe ſhutt, and the Keyes delivered to the Maior, and no Man to come in, but by commandement from your Lordſhips: in as good and orderly Forme, as in anye Towne of Warre.

And the Orders and Ordynances for this Diſciplyne ſhalbe publiſhed by the Provoſt, that in offending no Man pleade ignorance hereafter. At this Muſter a perfect Rolle ſhalbe made by ſome ſufficient Perſon, of all Perſons and Weapons in theire Army, which ſhalbe delivered to your Lordſhips, and Regiſtred in the Guildehall. And at this Muſters everie Collonell ſhall bringe his Stampe and and Marke particular, with the which everie Corſlett, Pike, Harquebuze, Muskett, Murrion, and Furniture of his Regiment ſhalbe marked, to avoyde this unmeete lendinge of Armes; whereby they neglect theire Duties to her Majeſtie, Diſhonour theire Commanders, and utterly deceave themſelves. I remember when I was firſt brought up in Piemount, in the Countie of Briſſacks Regiment of the old Bandes, we had our particular Calibre of Harquebuze to our Regiment; both for that one Bullett ſhould ſerve all the Harquebuzes of our Regiment, as for that our Collonell would not be deceaved of his Armes: Of which worde of Calibre, came firſt this unapt Terme wee uſe to call a Harquebuze a Calliver, which is the height of the Bullett and not the Piece. Before the Battle of Moungunter, the Prynces of the Religion cauſed 7000 Harquebuzes to be made all of one Calibre, which were called Harquebuſe du Calibre de Monſeur le Prince. So as I think ſome Man not underſtandinge Frenche, brought hither the Name of the height of the Bullett for the Peece: which word of Calibre, is yet contynued with our good Cannoniers.

After the Muſters paſſed, the Major, the Marſhall, and the Sargeant Major ſhall ride round about the Citie, to ſee all the Wayes or Avenues that comes unto the Towne, to looke what Places are moſt fitt to place Gardes upon, what Streetes are moſt convenient to make places of Armes, or Randeuous general, for Aſſembly uppon any Alarum in: Which I think wilbe moſt neceſſarie in two Places: That is, One place of Aſſemblye ſhalbe at Leadenhall, which anſweres Algate, Buſſhopſgate, the Bridge and directly into London: The other ſhalbe without Newgate, which anſwers Holbourne, Smithfield, Ludgate, and directly into London: to everie one of theſe Randeuouſes ſhall, uppon any Alarum, aſſemble five Companies of five particuler Regyments: The other five Companyes of everie one of thoſe five Regyments ſhalbe thus employed, that is, one Companye ſhall goe to Algate, another Companye to Buſſhopſgate, and the other three Companyes of the Regyment ſhall ſtand in Armes in theire Quarter, tyll the Marſhall or Sargeant Major, ſhall command them: So as upon any ſodeyne Alarum, your Souldiers knowe whither and how to aſſemble without confuſion, which is a matter of greate Weight. By this meanes your Lordſhips have two whole Companyes at eurye Gate: 20 Companyes at either of the places of Aſſembly, and one Companye in everye Streete of ymportance in London.

When your Collonells and Captaynes knowe whither to aſſemble uppon any Alarum (without confuſion) which he ſhalbe ſhewed by the Marſhall or Sargeant Major: Then ſhall the Sergeant Major, and his Corporalls haue five Companyes everie Day abroade in ſome private place to teache them to weare theire Furnitures, and to uſe theire Armes, ſo as in 20 Dayes the whole 15000 will knowe how to weare their Furniture, and to carrye theire Armes (which number I eſteeme eaſye to be leavyed of the beſt and honeſteſt ſort) which is aſmuche as for this tyme is requiſite.

As you have here the Forme, how theſe Companyes ſhall enter into Garde, how to divide themſelves to their Gardes, how to place there Centenells, and how to make the Ground. (Which Form ſhall every Night be obſerved; and when the Drums ſounde, to put the Companyes that enter into Garde in Armes.) Then ſhall the Companyes that are in Garde, put themſelves in Armes, and ſo ſtand upon theire Cordegard, tyll the Companye that enters into Garde, be poſſeſſed of the Cordegard. Then ſhall they depart, and marche orderlye to Garde home theire Colours: All which is onelye done to teache your Captaynes, Officers, and Souldiers, to know how to enter into Garde, how to place their Gardes, and how to ſtand upon theire Gardes: which is the moſt aſſuredſt thinge that ever was devized for the ſafetie of anye Citie, Towne, Place, Camp, or Armye, which in the open Field without anye Covert in the World, of Wall, Trenche, or Carriage, will be as orderlye and ſafely performed, as in any Towne, if the Maiſter of the Campe have Judgement in placinge of the Armye, and the Sargeant Major Diſcretion in placing of the Gardes.

By this meanes, there is everie Night at 6 of the Clock, 10 Enſignes marching in London, which is drawne out of ſeveral Regiments, and ſeverall Quarters, to make the greater Stirring, and greater Showe: And becauſe Townes Men love Eaſe and Profit, therefore, there ſhall onely remayne all Night, 25 at every Gate, and 50 at the Exchange. So as they enter into Garde but once everie 20 Dayes, and ſtand upon theire Garde but once in 60 Dayes, which is nothinge.

When the Gates, and chief Bodie of the Watche by the Exchange is poſſeſſed (for that you muſt never carrye out your Souldiers, but that you are firſt poſſeſſed of your Gardes for the aſſurance of your Retreate) Then ſhall the Sargeant Major have five Companyes every Daye abroade, and the Sargeant Major of every Regiment ſhall have one Company abroad; to teach them to uſe theire Armes, to March, Aſſayle, Defend. So by this meanes there is everie Day in Armes, 9 particuler Companies, with theire Sargeant Maior, and five Companyes with the Sargeant Maior General, and ten Companyes entring into Garde, and in Garde. So as there is 24 Companyes everie Daye in Armes.

Once everie 20 Dayes the Marſhall and the Sargeant Major ſhall have one whole Regyment abroad, to teache them to Marche, and range them in Battell, and to uſe theire Armes, and once every two Monthes, the Major, the Marſhall, the Sargeant Major, and the Provoſt, ſhall have all the Armye abroade for two Dayes, (ſaving the Companyes in Garde, and thoſe that muſt enter the next Dayes into Garde: For you muſt never leave the Gardes ungarded, or unprovided of thoſe that ſhall ſuſteyne the Gardes,) whereby they ſhall know how to Marche, how to Garde in Camp, how to Range in Battell, and how to Lodge in the Feeld; for on their Marches it were good they ſhould learne how to marche in Covert and Champion, how to attack, a Skyrmiſe; how to range ſoddenly in Battel, and how to aſſayle and defend. So as if her Majeſtie upon any ſodden Occaſion ſhall pleaſe to uſe this Army, they are at all tymes readie to Marche; and know how to Marche, how to Lodge, how to Garde, and how to uſe theire Armes, and (which is more,) knowe how to Command, and how to Obey. Which is onlye brought unto them by her Majeſties great Care, and eſpeciall Favour and Truſt, with your Lordſhips Directions, and not anye wayes to theire Charges; for they onlye are charged with the Enterteynment of three Perſons. Synce therefore it pleaſeth her Majeſtie and your Lordſhip, to laye upon them this eſpecial Honour and Truſt, as to make the Maior Lieftenant in makinge Collonells, Capteyns, Officers and Souldiers, being all Citizens, is ſuche an Honour, ſuch a Truſt, and ſuch a gracious Favour, as never happened unto anye People, neither was the like ever heretofore done unto them, or anye other by anye Prynce.

As your Lordſhips have provided for the Marſhalling of the Citie, ſo to prevent any Inconvenience that by anye forren Enemy may happen, which no wayes canne annoye London, (in reſpect of the Multitude of People therein) but by ſome ſoodeyne Attempt, which may breede verye greate Amazement and Fright, with moſt aſſured Daunger. If therefore to prevent anye ſooddeyn Furye, either of Horſe or Foot, your Lordſhips ſhall pleaſe to give Directions, that everie end of everie Suburbe, there be 30 or 40 emptye Pipes, which ſhall be kept in ſome Place tyll occaſion ſerve, and then to place them in ſuch manner (as I will hereafter ſhew unto your Lordſhip, when it ſhall pleaſe you to Command;) ſo as 100 ſhall withſtand anye 2000, til further ayde ſhalbe in a readynes.

My Meaning is not, that theſe Forces continually uſe this trayning and gardinge, but onlye duringe ſuche tyme as your Lordſhips ſhall beſt like; and that they be once well and orderly Marſhalled, and reduced into good Form, being divided into Regyments and Companyes; that everie Capteyne maye know his Collonell, every Souldier knowe his Capteyne and Officer, whither to aſſemble upon anye Alarum, and how to aſſemble, ſemble, to avoyde that dangerous Miſchief of aſſembling in Confuſion, and to put them in true Order and Forme of the uſe of theire Armes, and in their Gardes. So as if at any inſtant hereafter, her Majeſty and your Lordſhips ſhall pleaſe to uſe their Service, they are at all tymes readie without further Direction or Trouble, to performe theire Duties, and to obey her Majeſty and your Lordſhips Commandements, havinge onlye a Sargeant and two Corporalls to everye Regiment; which three ſhall bring the whole Regyment in order, being Souldiers of Worth: without the which it is impoſſible to reduce them into anye Order; ſo as by this meanes her Maieſty ſhall continually have xxx Souldyers of worth in a readynes.

Thus to obey your Honours Commandments, I ſhew my Wants, which I will rather do, then diſobey you, knowing your honourable Vertues ſuch, and your Care of me ſo favourable, as that which is Superfluous, you will forget; and that which is wanting, you will with your honourable favour help: Being therefore neither Scholler, nor Learned, I hope your Honour will beare with my Imperfections; but fearing you ſhould trye the Opinion of a great Man of Warre, who ſayed, a Souldier ought never to be without his Sword or his Penne in his Hand, (meaning in tyme of Warre to followe thoſe Accounts, and in tyme of Peace, or idle tyme which I have, (whereof I am aſhamed) to obſerve that which by Experience he hath learned. Wherein I finde my ſelf farre unable to accompliſhe your Lordſhips Expectation, yet rather then to neglect my Dutie, I bewraye my Ignorance. Thus beſeeching God to geve you long Life, and greate Honour, I commit your Lordſhip to his Tuition, and my ſelf to your Direction, this Day of March, 1588.

Your Honours moſt humbly to doe you Service,
EDMUND YORKE.

TheStrength of the City. Howel's Londinopol. Fitz Stephen. J. S.

Now as to the Strength of the City, in regard of its Force which it is able to furniſh out, one writes thus; That ſo long ago as 1293, the City ſet forth a Fleet of ninety-five Ships. And another Record ſhewed, That in K. Stephen's Reign the City raiſed 60000 Foot, and 20000 Horſe for Land Service. And that in his time (which was Anno 1657.) London had 12000 Trained Bands, Citizens perpetually in a Readineſs, and excellently armed. He eſteemed the Circumference of the City to be about twelve Miles, and the number of Inhabitants therein to be ten hundred thouſand; and allowing but the tenth Part able to bear Arms, the City and Suburbs might raiſe an hundred and fifty thouſand fighting Men. Of which the third Part were enough for a brave Army, viz. 50000 Men, according to the modern Diſcipline of War.

A general Muſter of the Citizens. E. Howe's Abridgement.

In the Year 1614. there was a great Muſter of the City; the King having appointed after Harveſt a general Muſter all England over: which every Shire performed with much cheerfulneſs. Then did the Citizens alſo ſhew themſelves very forward, as well in making new Proviſions of Ammunition, as in practiſing all Points of War and Military Diſcipline. And for the well managing of this Muſter, the Lord Maior and Commonalty appointed twenty Captains to be ſelected of the moſt active and able Citizens; and unto every of them he allotted 300 Shot and Pikes, viz. 6000 in all for that time, being for the moſt part Houſholders, bravely furniſhed. Theſe twenty Captains performed all things with ſuch Expedition, Bounty and Bravery, as, except in the Year 88, the like was never before. And ſuch of them as were not formerly of the Martial Society, and Practice of the Artillery Garden were then admitted.

But to come to Muſters of a later date, and to ſhew how the Military Government is now eſtabliſhed.

Trained Bands. R. B.

About the middle of April, in the Year 1660, the time of the Reſtauration of King Charles II. there were in London, and the Liberties thereof, that were muſtered in Hide Park, 6 Regiments of Trained Bands.

6 Regiments of Auxiliaries.
1 Regiment of Horſe.

The Trained Bands conſiſted of 18000 Foot, and the Horſe 600.

The 12 Regiments of Foot conſiſted of 80 Companies, and in each Company not leſs than 250 Men. By which Account the whole Number did amount unto 18000 Men.

The Regiment of Horſe conſiſted of 6 Troops, and each Troop of 100 Men.

K. Charles II granted a Commiſſion of Lieutenancy for the Trained Bands.

This Force of the City's being judged to be highly uſeful for the Defence, not only of the City, but ſafety of the King's Perſon, his Majeſty was pleaſed ſome few Months after to ſend to the City a Commiſſion of Lieutenancy, appointing ſeveral Perſons to act as his Lieutenants in London; giving them the ſame Power that the Lord Lieutenants of the Counties in England have. And in purſuance of that Commiſſion the Regiments were new ſettled.

The MODELL thus.

Six Regiments of Trained Bands.

There were 6 Regiments of Trained Bands commanded by 6 eminent Citizens, who were all Knights; and their Lieutenant Colonels were alſo Knights.

Six of Auxiliaries.

There were alſo 6 Regiments of Auxiliaries. And in theſe 12 Regiments there were 20000 Men.

Two Regiments of Horſe.

There were alſo at that time liſted 2 Regiments of Horſe, each conſiſting of 5 Troops, and in each Troop 80 Men; which makes the 2 Regiments to contain 800 Men.

When this Model was ſettled, they were all drawn into Hide Park, where his Majeſty did view them, with divers Perſons of Quality, and innumerable other Spectators, to the general Satisfaction. And beſides theſe, in caſe of Neceſſity, it is certain, that in London, and within the Liberties, there may in a few Days be raiſed at the leaſt 40000 Men.

The Six Colonels in K. William's Reign. J. S.

The Colonels of the ſix Regiments of the City in the Reign of the late King William of happy Memory, were Sir Robert Clayton, Sir Tho. Stamp, Sir Will. Aſhurſt, Sir Tho. Lane, Sir Tho. Abney, and Sir Owen Buckingham. But upon the late Queen's Commiſſion of Lieutenancy, opened at Guild-Hall, July 9. 1702. (where was a very great Appearance of the Commiſſioners) they choſe Sir William Pritchard, Sir John Fleet, Sir Francis Child, Sir Samuel Daſhwood, Sir Tho. Cook, and Sir Charles Duncomb.

The ſix Colonels after them.

May 23. 1707. The Queen appointed a new Lieutenancy for the City. The Commiſſion of which Lieutenancy was opened June the 27th following; and then were choſen Colonels, Sir Will. Aſhurſt, Sir Owen Buckingham, Sir Jeffrey Jeffreys, Sir Gilbert Heathcote, Sir Charles Thorold, and Sir Samuel Stanier. Nicolas Baker, Clerk, Captain Joſeph Hyde, Muſtermaſter.]

R. B.

Moreover, One Regiment of Trained Bands in Southwark, conſiſting of 1500 Men.

Two Regiments within the Tower Hamlets, conſiſting of 3000 Men.

The Holborn Regiment, conſiſting of 2000 Men. And Weſtminſter Regiment alſo of 2000 Men.

Of the ARTILLERY COMPANY.

Artillery Company.

BESIDES the forementioned Trained Bands and Auxiliary Men, there is the Artillery Company, which is as a Nurſery for Soldiers, and have been ſo about 80 Years. Their Place, or Field of Exerciſe, formerly was in the old Artillery Ground, now in Finſbury Fields, adjoyning to the upper Quarters of Moor Fields on the Eaſt, and Bun-Hill on the Weſt: It is a large piece of Ground, containing about 10 Acres, incloſed with a high Brick Wall.

King Charles II. liſted himſelf into this Company when he was Prince of Wales, about the Year 1636, and ſo did his Royal Brother James, Duke of York, at the ſame time: Who, (after the Reſtauration) took upon him the Command thereof, and owned it as his Company.

Under the Principal Commander, there is a Leader, who Exerciſes this Company every Tueſday Fortnight; and the other Tueſdays the Exerciſe is performed by the ſeveral Members of the Company, who are to Command.

Many of the Nobility of the Land are of this Company, as alſo the Lord Maior, and moſt of the Aldermen. And all the Commanders and Commiſſion Officers of the Trained Bands, and Auxiliaries before mentioned, do exerciſe Arms in this Ground, the whole Company conſiſting of 600 Men, or thereabouts.

The Government of this Company, and the Principal Members.

1. A Leader.
2. Two Lieutenants.
3. Two Enſigns.
4. Two Serjeants.
5. A Provoſt Marſhal.
6. Three Gentlemen of Arms.

They have a Court Marſhal, which conſiſts of a Preſident and Vice-Preſident, a Treaſurer, and twenty four Members of the Company.

Upon the ſecond Tueſday in February, at a General Rendezvouz every Year, the Officers are Elected.

Chief Officers of the Artillery Company, 1708. J. S.

April 27. 1708. a General Court of the Artillery Company met in the Artillery Garden, to chooſe a Preſident, Vice-Preſident, Treaſurer, and twenty four Aſſiſtants, for the Year following; where the Election for the three former fell by a great Majority on Sir William Aſhurſt for Preſident, Sir Owen Buckingham, Vice-Preſident, and Sir Gilbert Heathcote Treaſurer, in the room of Sir John Fleet, Sir Jeffrey Jeffreys, and Lieutenant Colonel Robert Child. And for Aſſiſtants, chiefly thoſe in preſent Commiſſion in the City.

The Original of the Artillery Company. E. Howes.

Of the Original of this Artilery Company, we have this Relation: That Anno 1585. the City having been greatly troubled and charged with continual Muſters and Training of Soldiers, certain gallant, active and forward Citizens, having had Experience both at Home and Abroad, voluntarily exerciſed themſelves, and trained up others, for the ready Uſe of War. So as within two Years there were almoſt three hundred Merchants, and others of like Quality, very ſufficient and ſkilful to train and teach common Soldiers the Management of their Pieces, Pikes and Halbards, to March, Counter-march and Ring. Which ſaid Merchants, for their own Perfecting in Military Affairs and Diſcipline, met every Thurſday in the Year, practiſing all uſual Points of War, and every Man by turns bare orderly Office, from the Corporal to the Captain. Some of them in the dangerous Year 1588, had Charge of Men in the great Camp at Tilbury, and were generally called Captains of the Artillery Garden, the Place where they exerciſed. Theſe took Precedent from the Merchants of Antwerp.

The Artillery Exerciſe diſcontinued; and revived.

But this uſeful Artillery Exerciſe became afterwards diſcontinued for a great while; till the Year 1610. when by means of Philip Hudſon, Lieutenant of the ſaid Company, Tho. Laverock, Rob. Hughs, Sam. Arthois, Rob. Greenhurſt, and divers other Gentlemen and Citizens of London, this brave Exerciſe was renewed and ſet on foot again. Theſe Gentlemen aſſociated in the ſaid Garden, having ſufficient Warrant and Toleration granted them by the Lords of King James's Privy Council, to whom they became humble Suitors in the beginning, for prevention of all future Miſconſtructions of their honeſt Intent and Actions there. And having duly conſidered the Neceſſity of the Knowledge of Arms in ſo populous a Place, and the Inconveniences that happened to Antwerp, and other their late populous and flouriſhing Neighbour-Cities; principally by reaſon of their Neglect of that moſt noble Exerciſe of Arms, and Martial Diſcipline, in times of Wealth and Peace. Theſe therefore now undertook, at their own private and particular Charge, a Weekly Exerciſe of Arms after the modern and beſt Faſhion and Inſtruction then in Uſe. And moreover, for their better Eaſe and Conveniency, they erected a ſtrong and well-furniſhed Armory in the ſaid Ground, in which were Arms of ſeveral ſorts, and of ſuch extraordinary Beauty, Faſhion and Goodneſs for Service, as were hardly to be matched elſewhere.

An Armory here.

Their firſt Officers.

Captain Edward Panton was their firſt Captain, and Nicolas Spering, a Merchant of the City, their firſt elected Auntient, or Enſign-Bearer. And as thoſe formerly of the Old Artillery Garden did good Service many ways in their own Perſons, and in teaching others; ſo theſe laſt were likely to do more particular Service, being Men of more Skill, and their Practice greater.

Great Reſort to their Exerciſes.

The Company was now grown great, and in good Eſtimation. And unto the Artillery Garden, at the uſual times of their Military Exerciſe, many Country Gentlemen of all Shires reſorted, and diligently obſerved their Exerciſes, which they ſaw were excellent. And being returned home to their own Countries, they practiſed and uſed the ſame with their Trained Bands. Prince Charles came hither ſometimes to ſee them.

The Scholars Exerciſe Arms.

At this time young Scholars, and other Youth, from the Age of 9 or 10, unto 17, of their own Warlike Diſpoſitions, voluntarily choſe themſelves Captains and Lieutenants out of their own Companies; and with ſound of Drum, and other Enſigns ſpread, marched into the Field, upon Play-days and Holydays; and practiſed all Points of War which they had ſeen their Elders teach: having got themſelves Pikes and Pieces fit for their handling.]

London a Lieutenancy of itſelf. R. B.

Note, Every County of England hath a Lord Lieutenant, but the City of London is a Lieutenancy of itſelf, not ſubject to any Lord Lieutenant, but the Office executed by the Lord Maior, Aldermen, and other principal Members of the City, authorized by a peculiar Commiſſion from the King.]

London, as it was in the Days of Henry VIII. J S.

ALL this hitherto writ, reſpecteth for the moſt part the more modern Eſtate of LONDON; let me now, for a Concluſion of this Fifth Book, give one more remarkable Proſpect of this City as it was in K. Henry VIII's Reign, and before; and that for the ſake of ſuch as love to look back upon former Things and Times. And that which makes what I am going to relate more worthy of Obſervation is, That I have it from no leſs a Perſon than the famous Sir Tho. More, ſome time Lord Chancellor of England; yet concealing this his native City, under the Name of Amaurote, the chief City in his imaginary Iſle of Utopia, in that ingenious Book of his own Writing. His Deſcription of which Amaurote doth in every particular thing mentioned, ſo exactly ſquare and correſpond with our City of LONDON, that I make little doubt that Writer did thereby mean the ſame Place. And by repeating whereof from him, we gain thus much, that we learn ſeveral things which have not yet been noted in this voluminous Work; namely, what old LONDON was two or three hundred Years ago.

The Agreement of this Amaurote with LONDON, appeareth partly in this, that he ſaith, It ſtood upon the ſide of a low Hill, in faſhion almoſt of a Square: That the River that waſheth one ſide of it, ſixty Miles beyond that City, falleth into the Ocean. That it is compaſſed about with high and thick Walls, and goeth about three Sides or Quarters of the City, and to the fourth Side the River itſelf (which he calleth Anyder) ſerveth for a Ditch: That there was a Bridge over this River, made not of Piles or of Timber, but Stone-Work, with gorgeous and ſubſtantial Arches, at that Part of the City that is fartheſt from the Sea; to the end that Ships may go along, fore by all the Sides of the City without Let.

So then concluding this Amaurote from this and the like Deſcription of it to be meant the ſame with LONDON, we may venture to apply the reſt of the Account of it following, unto the other Parts of our City: As firſt, Concerning the River and the Watering of the City. Secondly, The Situation and Walls thereof. Thirdly, The Streets and Houſes. And firſt for

I.

The River and Watering of the City.

The River Thames deſcribed.

The River Anyder riſeth four and twenty Miles above Amaurote, out of a little Spring; but being encreaſed by other ſmall Floods and Brooks that run into it; and among others, two ſomewhat bigger ones. Before the City it is half a Mile broad; [hardly ſo much now as it was in former Days, being pent in and ſtraitned to a narrower Space, by the later Buildings on each ſide] and further, broader. By all that ſpace that lyeth between the Sea and the City, and a good ſort of [Land] alſo above; the Water ebbs and flows 6 Hours together, with a ſwift Tide: When the Sea flows in to the length of 30 Miles, it fills all the Anyder with ſalt Water, and drives back the freſh Water of the River. And ſomewhat further it changeth the ſweetneſs of freſh Water with ſaltneſs. But a little beyond that, the River waxeth ſweet, and runneth foreby the City freſh and pleaſant. And when the Sea ebbs and goes back again, this freſh Water follows it almoſt to the very Fall into the Sea, &c.

Another River deſcribed.

They have alſo another River, which indeed is not very great, but it runneth gently and pleaſantly; for it riſeth even out of the ſame Hill that the City ſtandeth upon, and runneth down aſlope through the midſt of the City into Anyder. [This muſt be the River of the Wells that ran down by Walbrook.] And becauſe it ariſeth a little without the City, the Amaurotians have encloſed the head Spring of it with ſtrong Fences and Bulwarks; and ſo have joyned it to the City. This done, to the intent that the Waters ſhould not be ſtopped, nor turned away, nor poiſoned, if their Enemies ſhould chance to come upon them. From thence the Water is derived and brought down in Chanals or Brooks divers ways into the lower Parts of the City. Where that cannot be done, by reaſon that the Place will not ſuffer it, there they gather the Rain Water in great Ciſterns, which doth them as good Service. [This it ſeems was all the ſupply of Water the City had in that Age, which is now much more plentifully ſerved.] Then next for,

The Situation and Walls.

II.

That it ſtood by the ſide of a low Hill, in faſhion almoſt ſquare. The breadth of it began a little beneath the top of the Hill, and ſtill continued by the ſpace of two Miles, until it came to the River Anyder. The length of it, which lyeth by the River ſide, was ſomewhat more.

The City is compaſſed about with an high and thick Wall, full of Turrets and Bulwarks. A dry Ditch, but deep and broad, and overgrown with Buſhes, Briers and Thorns, goeth about three Sides or Quarters of the City. To the fourth Side, the River itſelf ſerveth for a Ditch.

The Streets and Houses.

III.

The Streets be appointed and ſet forth very commodious and handſome, both for Carriage, and alſo againſt the Winds. The Streets be full twenty Foot broad. The Houſes be of fair and gorgeous Buildings; and in the Street-ſide, they ſtand joined together in a long Row through the whole Street, without any Partition or Separation. On the Backſide of the Houſes, through the whole length of the Street, lye large Gardens, which be cloſed in round about with the Back-parts of the Street. Every Houſe hath two Doors, one to the Street, and a Poſtern Door on the Back-ſide into the Garden. Theſe Doors be made with two Leaves, never locked nor bolted; ſo eaſie to be opened, that they will follow the leaſt drawing of a Finger, and ſhut again of themſelves.

Gardens.

They ſet great Store by their Gardens. In theſe they have Vineyards, and all manner of Fruits, Herbs and Flowers, ſo pleaſant, ſo well furniſhed, and ſo finely kept, that I never ſaw any thing more fruitful, nor better trimmed in any Place. And their Study and Diligence herein cometh not only of Pleaſure, but alſo of a certain Strife and Contention that is betwixt Street and Street, concerning the trimming, husbanding and flouriſhing of their Gardens, every Man for his own Part. And verily, you ſhall not lightly find in all the City, any thing that is more commodious, other for the Profit of the Citizens, or for Pleaſure.

And therefore it may ſeem, that the firſt Founder of the City minded nothing ſo much as he did theſe Gardens. They ſay, That King Utopus himſelf, even at his firſt beginning, appointed and drew forth the Platform of the City into this Faſhion and Figure that it hath now, by his gallant garniſhing, and the beautiful ſetting forth of it. Whereunto he ſaw what one Man's Age would not ſuffice, that he left to his Poſterity.

The Houſes.

Their Chronicles, which they keep written with all diligent Circumſpection, containing the Hiſtory of 1760 Years, even from the firſt Conqueſt of the Iſland, record and witneſs, that the Houſes in the Beginning were very low, and like homely Cottages, or poor Shepherd's Houſes, made at all Adventures of every rude piece of Wood that came firſt to Hand; with Mud-Walls, and ridged Roofs thatched over with Straw. But now the Houſes be curiouſly builded after a gorgeous and gallant ſort, with three Stories, one over another.

The Walls.

The Outſide of the Walls be made of either hard Flint, or of Plaiſter, or elſe of Brick; and the Innerſides be well ſtrengthned with Timber-Work.

The Roofs.

The Roofs be plain and flat, covered with a certain kind of Plaiſter, that is of no Coſt; and yet ſo tempered, that no Fire can hurt or periſh it; and withſtandeth the Violence of the Weather, better than any Lead.

Glaſs Windows.

They keep the Wind out of their Windows with Glaſs for it is there much uſed. And ſome were alſo with fine Linnen dipped in Oyl, or Amber; and that for two Commodities: For by this means more Light cometh in, and the Wind is better kept out.

Deſcription of London by Sir Tho. Chaloner.

To which I will ſubjoyn the Character of the ſame City, deſcribed in elegant Latin Verſe, by another Perſon of Quality and Learning; and by Birth alſo a Citizen, living not long after the former; namely, Sir Tho. Chaloner, written upon occaſion of the burning St. Paul's Church, Ann. 1561.

Weſtminſter, why ſo call'd. J. S.

W*ESTMINSTER* had its Name from the Minſter, that is, the Monaſtery, ſituate Weſtward; as there was another Minſter, not far from the Tower of London, Eaſtward of the City, called Eaſtminſter. It was anciently but a Town; and ſo it was called about the Beginning of K. Henry VIII; for I have ſeen an old Book in that Time printed in the Town of Weſtminſter. There was an Act of Parliament in 37 H. 8, to authorize that King, by Letters Patents or Proclamations, to make Weſtminſter an Honour, with ſome other Places of the Kings, viz. Kyngſton upon Hull, St. Oſyth's in Eſſex, and Donnington in Berks.

Coke's Inſtit.

Weſtminſter an Honour.

The Sheriff of London commanded to repair the Way to Weſtminſter.

In former Times there was not a continued Street of Buildings between London and Weſtminſter, as now there is; but much vacant Space of Fields and open Grounds between. Then the Way was often bad to paſs; and the Sheriffs of London have ſometimes taken Care for the Reparation thereof. Thus did King John ſend to them to that Purpoſe. Preceptum fuit Vicecomitibus London, ad reparandam viam à London ad Weſtmonaſterium.

Cart. & Liberat. 5 Joh. Reg. Pet. le Neve, Norr.

The Way as far as the Savoy paved.

The High-way of the Strand from Temple-bar to the Savoy, ſeems to have been paved about An. 1385, in the Reign of K. Richard II. in whoſe eighth Year Tole was granted to be taken for that Purpoſe. And again the like was granted in 24 H. 6. An. 1446. But the Paving went no farther than to the Savoy, till towards the latter Part of the Reign of Q. Elizabeth, Sir Robert Cecil, Kt. building a fair Houſe ſomewhat beyond the Savoy, at Ivie Bridge, levelled and paved the High-way near adjoining.]

Clement's-Inn of Chancery. Clement's-Well. New-Inn of Chancery.

NOW touching this City of Weſtminſter, I will begin at Temple-bar, on the right Hand or North Side, and ſo paſs up Weſt, thro' a back Lane or Street, wherein do ſtand three Inns of Chancery. The firſt called Clement's-Inn, becauſe it ſtandeth near to St. Clement's Church; but nearer to the fair Fountain, called Clement's-Well. The ſecond is New Inn, ſo called, as latelier made (of a common Hoſtery, and the Sign of our Lady) an Inn of Chancery for Students than the other, namely, about the Beginning of the Reign of Henry VII, and not ſo late as ſome have ſuppoſed, to wit, at the pulling down of Strand Inn, in the Reign of King Edward VI. For I read, that Sir Thomas More, ſometime Lord Chancellor, was a Student in this New Inn, and went from thence to Lincoln's-Inn, &c.

Sir Tho. More ſtudied there.

Lyon's-Inn of Chancery.

The third is Lyons Inn, and an Inn of Chancery alſo.

Drury-Lane.

This Street ſtretcheth up unto Drury-lane, ſo called, for that there is a Houſe belonging to the Family of the Druries. This Lane turneth North toward St. Giles in the Field. From the South End of this Lane in the High-ſtreet, are divers fair Buildings, Hoſteries, and Houſes for Gentlemen, and Men of Honour; amongſt the which Cecil-Houſe is one, which ſometime belonged to the Parſon of St. Martin's in the Field, and by Compoſition came to Sir Thomas Palmer, Kt. in the Reign of Edward VI, who began to build the ſame of Brick and Timber, very large and ſpacious. But of later Time it hath been far more beautifully increaſed by the late Sir William Cecil, Baron of Burghley, Lord Treaſurer, and great Counſellor of the Eſtate of England.

Cecil-Houſe.

Bedford-Houſe. Firſt Edit.

From thence is now a continual new Building of divers fair Houſes, even up to the Earl of Bedford's Houſe, which is a goodly Houſe, lately built nigh to Ivy-Bridge. Over-againſt the old Bedford-Houſe, namely, called Ruſſel-Houſe, and Dacres-Houſe, now the Houſe of Sir Thomas Cecil, Lord Burghley. And ſo on the North Side to a Lane that turneth to the Pariſh-Church of St. Martin in the Fields, and ſtretcheth to St. Giles in the Fields. Then had ye the Chapel of our Lady, called, The Pew, with an Houſe, wherein ſometime were diſtraught and lunatick People: [Of what Antiquity founded, or by whom, I have not read, neither of the Suppreſſion; but it was ſaid, that ſometime a King of England, not liking ſuch a kind of People to remain ſo near his Palace, cauſed them to be removed farther off, to Bethlem without Biſhopſgate of London, and to that Hoſpital the ſaid Houſe by Charing-Croſs doth yet remain.

Firſt Edit. Chapel of our Lady the Pew.

An Houſe belonging to Bethlem.

Chapel of our Lady, the Pew, burnt. Firſt Edit.

John Pigot.

Amongſt other Things of this Chapel, I have read, that on the 17th of February, in the Year of Chriſt 1452, by Negligence of a Scholar appointed by his School-maſter to put forth the Lights of this Chapel, the Image of our Lady, richly decked with Jewels, precious Stones, Pearls, and Rings, (more than any Jeweller could judge the Price, for ſo ſaith mine Author) was, with all this Apparel, Ornaments, and Chapel itſelf, burnt. [But Stow, in his Second Edition, chooſeth to place this Chapel elſewhere, viz. near St. Stephen's.]

The Mewſe by Charing-Croſs.

The Mewſe for the King's Horſes burned.

Then is the Mewſe, ſo call'd of the King's Faulcons there kept by the King's Faulconer, which of old Time was an Officer of great Account, as appeareth by a Record of Richard the Second, in the firſt Year of his Reign. For, Sir Simon Burley, Kt. was made Conſtable for the Caſtles of Windſor, Wigmore, and Guilford, and of the Manor of Kennington, and alſo Maſter of the King's Faulcons at his Mewſe, near unto Charing-Croſs by Weſtminſter. Of later Time K. Henry the Eighth having fair Stabling there for Horſes, in the Year 1534, the 28th of his Reign, it was burned, with many great Horſes and much Hay therein. But it was again reedifyed in the Reigns of K. Edward the Sixth, and Q. Mary. And this is the fartheſt Building Weſt on the North Side of that high Street. J. S.

Thus I reſtore it according to Stow's 1ſt Edition: But altered in the 2d in theſe Words: "In the Year of Chriſt 1534, 28. H. 8. the King having fair "Stabling at Lomsbury, (a Manour in the fartheſt Weſt Part of Oldboorne) "the ſame was fired and burnt, with many great Horſes, and great Store "of Hay. After which Time, the fore-named Houſe, call'd the Mewſe, "was new builded, and prepared for Stabling of the King's Horſes, in the "Reign of Edward the Sixth and Mary; and ſo remaineth to that Uſe.

The Biſhop of Durham's Houſe.

On the South Side of the which Street, in the Liberties of Weſtminſter, (beginning at Ivie Bridge) firſt is Durham-Houſe, builded by Thomas de Hatfield, Biſhop of Durham, who was made Biſhop of that See in the Year 1345, and ſate Biſhop there 36 Years.

Caſe of Durham-Houſe.

Reliquiæ Spelmannian.

Thus writeth Sir Henry Spelman of this Durham-Houſe, that Biſhop Tonſtal, about the 26 H. 8. conveyed the ſame to the King in Fee. And that King, in Recompence thereof, granted to the See of Durham, Coldharborough, and other Houſes in London. And after, K. Edward the Sixth, about the ſecond Year of his Reign, granted Durham-Houſe to the Lady Elizabeth, his Siſter, for Life, or until ſhe were otherwiſe advanced. Afterwards, the Biſhoprick of Durham, by a private Act 7. Edw. 6. was diſſolved, and all the Poſſeſſions thereof given to K. Edward the Sixth, who ſhortly after conveyed in Fee the ſaid Biſhop's late Houſe at Coldharborough, and other Houſes in London, to Francis Earl of Shrewſbury, and his Heirs. Soon after, 2 Mar. ca. 3. the Statute of 7. Edw. 6. for diſſolving that Biſhoprick was repealed; but, by a Proviſo, the Manſion-Houſe of Coldharborough, &c. ſo granted to the ſaid Earl, was confirmed to him. And the Biſhop, by that Act, prayed a Recompence from the Queen, at his Charge. Whereupon, Queen Mary, about the fifth or ſixth Year of her Reign, granted to the ſaid Biſhop of Durham her Reverſion of Durham-Place, in Succeſſion. Which coming into Poſſeſſion by the Death of Queen Elizabeth, the Biſhop of Durham that then was, (afterward Archbiſhop of York, viz. Toby Matthew) entered into and enjoyed the ſame in the Right of his See, by Opinion of the L. Chief Juſtices of the Land, referred by the King, being oppoſed by Sir Walter Rawleigh. And ſo did the Biſhop of Durham that ſucceeded him.]

Bp Durham's Caſe.

Juſting Feaſt at Durham-Houſe.

Amongſt Matters memorable concerning this Houſe, this is one: In the Year of Chriſt 1540, the 32 of Henry the Eighth, on May Day, a great and triumphant Juſting was holden at Weſtminſter, which had been formerly proclaimed in France, Flanders, Scotland, and Spain, for all Comers, that would undertake the Challengers of England, which were, Sir John Dudley, Sir Thomas Seymor, Sir Thomas Ponings, and Sir George Carew, Knights, and Anthony Kingſton, and Richard Crumwel, Eſquires. All which came into the Liſts that Day richly apparelled, and their Horſes trapped all in White Velvet; there came againſt them the ſaid Day 46 Defendants, or Undertakers, viz. The Earl of Surrey foremoſt, Lord William Howard, Lord Clinton, and Lord Cromwell, Son and Heir to Thomas Cromwell, Earl of Eſſex, and Chamberlain of England, with other; and that Day, after the Juſts were performed, the Challengers rode unto this Durham-Houſe, where they kept open Houſehold, and feaſted the King and Queen, with her Ladies, and all the Court.

The ſecond Day Anthony Kingſton and Richard Cromwel were made Knights there.

The third Day of May, the ſaid Challengers did tourney on Horſeback with Swords, and againſt them came 49 Defendants: Sir John Dudley and the Earl of Surrey running firſt, which at the firſt Courſe loſt their Gauntlets; and that Day Sir Richard Cromwell overthrew Maſter Palmer and his Horſe in the Field, to the great Honour of the Challengers.

The fifth of May, the Challengers fought on Foot at the Barriers, and againſt them came 50 Defendants, which fought valiantly; but Sir Richard Cromwell overthrew that Day at the Barriers Maſter Culpepper in the Field; and the ſixth Day the Challengers brake up their Houſhold.

Penſioners.

In this Time of their Houſe-keeping, they had not only feaſted the King, Queen, Ladies, and all the Court, as is afore ſhewed; but alſo they cheered all the Knights and Burgeſſes of the Common-Houſe in the Parliament, and entertained the Maior of London, with the Aldermen and their Wives, at a Dinner, &c. The King gave to every of the ſaid Challengers, and their Heirs for ever, in Reward of their valiant Activity, 100 Marks, and a Houſe to dwell in of yearly Revenue, out of the Lands pertaining to the Hoſpital of St. John of Jeruſalem.

A Row of old Stables belonging to Durham-Houſe. Now built into the New-Exchange.
A. M.

Now to ſpeak ſomewhat of later Time, concerning this Durham-Houſe: It was well known and obſerved, for how many Years I know not, that the outward Part belonging thereto, and ſtanding North from the Houſes, was but a low Row of Stables, old, ruinous, ready to fall, and very unſightly, in ſo publick a Paſſage to the Court and to Weſtminſter. Upon which Conſideration, or ſome more eſpecial Reſpect in the Mind of the Right Honourable Robert Earl of Saliſbury, Lord High Treaſurer of England, it pleaſed him to take ſuch Order in the Matter, that (at his own Coſts and Charges) that deformed Row of Stabling was quite altered, by the Erection of a very goodly and beautiful Building inſtead thereof, and in the very ſame Place. Some Shape of the Modelling, tho' not in all Reſpects alike, was after the Faſhion of the Royal Exchange in London, with Cellars underneath, a Walk fairly paved above it, and Rows of Shops above, as alſo one beneath, anſwerable in Manner to the other, and intended for the like Trades and Myſteries.

The Shape of the new ordered Work, like the Royal Exchange.

This goodly Building erected in a ſmall Space of Time.

This Work was not long in taking down, nor in the Erection again; for the firſt Stone was laid on the 10th Day of June, 1608, and alſo was fully finiſhed in the next enſuing November after. Alſo on Tueſday, being the 10th Day of April following, divers of the upper Shops were adorned in rich and beautiful Manner, with Wares moſt curious to pleaſe the Eye; ſo ordered againſt his Majeſty's coming thither, to give a Name to ſo good a Building. On the Day following, it pleaſed his Highneſs, with the Queen, Prince, the Duke of York, and the Lady Elizabeth, to come thither, attended on by many great Lords and choice Ladies. Concerning their Entertainment there, tho' I was no Eye-Witneſs thereof; yet I knew the Ingenuity and Mind of the Noblemen to be ſuch, as nothing ſhould want to welcome ſo great an Expectation. And therefore, what Variety of Devices, pleaſing Speeches, rich Gifts and Preſents, as then flew bountifully abroad, I will rather refer to your Imagination, than any Way come ſhort of by an imperfect Narration. Only this I add, that it then pleaſed his moſt excellent Majeſty, becauſe the Work wanted a Name before, to entitle it Britain's Burſs, or Buſs.]

The Biſhop of Norwich his Houſe. Afterwards belonging to the Archbiſhop of York.

Next beyond this Durham-Houſe, is one other great Houſe, ſometime belonging to the Biſhop of Norwich, and was his London Lodging, which now pertaineth to the Archbiſhop of York, by this Occaſion: In the Year 1529, when Cardinal Wolſey, Archbiſhop of York, was indicted in the Premunire, whereby King Henry the Eighth was entitled to his Goods and Poſſeſſions, he alſo ſeized into his Hands the ſaid Archbiſhop's Houſe, commonly called York-Place, and changed the Name thereof into Whitehall.

York-Place, now Whitehall.

Archbiſhop of York's Inn.
Regiſt. Archiep. Ebor.
J. S.

This Houſe was called anciently, The Archbiſhop of York's Inn by Weſtminſter. Concerning which this may be noted: Anno 1399, October 19. In Capella Hoſpitii Archiep. Ebor. juxta Weſtmonaſt. In the firſt Parliament of Hen. 4. Tho. Sameſten Epuſ. Karlelen. formerly Monk of Weſtminſter, perſonally appearing, performed and did Obedience and Fealty to the Lord Archbiſhop of York, his Metropolitan, and to his Succeſſors. Preſent then and there, the Abbot of Weſtminſter, Tho. Walworth Rich. Conyngsbey, Canon of York, &c.]

The Archbiſhops of York being diſpoſſeſſed, and having no Houſe of Repair about London, Queen Mary gave unto Nicholas Heth, then Archbiſhop of York, and to his Succeſſors, Suffolk-Houſe in Southwark, lately builded by Charles Brandon, Duke of Suffolk, as I have ſhewed elſewhere.

Suffolk-Houſe.

This Houſe the ſaid Archbiſhop ſold, and bought the aforeſaid Houſe, of old Time belonging to the Biſhops of Norwich, which (of this laſt Purchace) is now called York-Houſe. The Lord Chancellors, or Lord Keepers of the Great Seal of England, have been lately lodged there.

Preſentment of the Biſhop of Norwich for a Way here.
J. S.

While this Houſe belonged to the Biſhops of Norwich, there was a Preſentment made in the King's Bench againſt one of the Biſhops, 21 Edward 4. for Annoyance of a Way inter Hoſpitium Epiſcopi Norvienſis & Dunelmenſis in Parochia Sti. Martini in campis. Whereupon there was a Caſe.

Fol. 73.

How this Place came to the King.
Reliq. Spelm.

This Place of the Biſhop of Norwich, among all or the greateſt Part of the Poſſeſſions of the See of Norwich, about 27 Hen 8. were conveyed to the King by a private Act of Parliament, in Recompence of the Union of the Monaſtery of St. Benet's de Hulmo, and the Poſſeſſions thereof, to that Biſhoprick, being of far better Value than the ancient Lands of the Biſhoprick of Norwich aſſured to the King, as is recited in the Statute of 32 Hen. 8. whereby the Biſhop of Norwich is made Collector of the Tenths of his Dioceſs, as other Biſhops were; being freed thereof by the ſaid private Statute of 27 Hen. 8.

Cap. 47.

Hath an Houſe in Chanon-Row.

The Biſhop of Norwich was limited by the ſaid private Act, to enjoy perpetually in Succeſſion, a Prebend in the Free-Chapel of St. Stephen's at Weſtminſter, and the Houſe thereto belonging in Chanon-Row, whereof then was Incumbent one Knight. The Houſe was ſaid to be leaſed by the Biſhop in Edward the Sixth's Time, for ſome ſmall Rent, to Sir John Thinn, Kt. for many Years enduring.

Sandys, Archbiſhop of York, will not part with his Houſe.

This York Houſe remained to the Archbiſhops of York in Archbiſhop Sandys Time: But then in the Year 1588, it was by ſome earneſtly endeavoured to be gotten from the See. Whereat that Archbiſhop made a Complaint in a ſecret Letter to the Lord Treaſurer Burghley; ‘That it ‘was moſt unreaſonably requeſted of him. He ‘could not, he ſaid, in Conſcience yield to that ‘Requeſt, and remained reſolute: Entreating ‘that Lord to be a Means to the Queen, that ‘he might refuſe his yielding herein, without ‘Offence to her; ſhewing, that her Speech to ‘him heretofore, about the ſame Thing, had ‘been ſuch, that he was fully perſuaded ſhe ‘would not deal againſt him in it.

An Exchange of York-Houſe by Archbiſhop Matthew.

This York-Place, or Houſe, was occupied or enjoyed in King James the Firſt his Time, by Thomas Vicount Brackly, Lord Elleſmere, Lord Chancellor, and by Francis Vicount St. Albans, ſometime Lord Chancellor after him. In 2 Jac. 1. an Exchange of it was made by Toby Matthew, Archbiſhop of York, who was ſeized in Fee ſimple, in Right of his Archbiſhoprick, of the ſaid Manſion-Houſe, and of divers other Meſſuages and Tenements ſituate within the Pariſh of St. Martin in the Fields. Theſe he granted to King James the Firſt; and the ſaid King granted to the ſaid Archbiſhop the Manour or Lordſhip of Brighton, with the Lands in Melborn, the Manour of Acomb, or Acom, and Holgate; and all the Lands, Tenements, and Hereditaments in Acomb, Holgate, Clifton, Skelton, Wiggington, Botham, &c. the Manour of Santon, and Lands in Eaſtrop, &c. and the Manour or Grange of Beckhay, with all Rights, Members, and Appurtinances thereof; which would be more profitable and commodious unto the Archbiſhop and his Succeſſors, than the ſaid Manſion-Houſe. For that the Archbiſhop, nor his Predeceſſors, had not, for many Years paſt, the Uſe of the ſaid Manſion-Houſe; and the other Premiſes yielded them very little Profit. And farther, the ſaid Manſion Houſe was like to be burdenſome, and a Charge to the ſaid Archbiſhop and his Succeſſors: Which was the Reaſon uſed in the Act of Parliament for the ſaid Exchange, viz. That it would be for the Benefit of the Archbiſhop and his Succeſſors; and therefore it was of the King's Grace and Favour to the ſaid Church and See, to make this Conveyance and Aſſurance.]

Hoſpital of St. Mary Rouncivall.

Then was there an Hoſpital of St. Mary Rouncival, by Charing-Croſs (a Cell to the Priory and Convent of Rouncivall in Navar, in Pampelione Dioceſs) where a Fraternity was founded in the Fifteenth of Edward the Fourth; but now the ſame is ſuppreſſed, and turned into Tenements.

Hermitage, with a Chapel of St. Katharine. Charing-Croſs.

Near unto this Hoſpital was an Hermitage, with a Chapel of St. Katharine, over-againſt Charing-Croſs; which Croſs, builded of Stone, was of old Time a fair Piece of Work, there made by Commandment of Edward the Firſt, in the 21ſt Year of his Reign, in Memory of Helenor his deceaſed Queen, as is before declared.

Hoſpital of St. James, for Leperous Siſters.

Weſt from this Croſs ſtood ſometime an Hoſpital of St. James, conſiſting of two Hides of Land, with the Appurtenances, in the Pariſh of St. Margaret in Weſtminſter, and founded by the Citizens of London, before the Time of any Man's Memory, for fourteen Siſters, Maidens, that were leperous, living chaſtly and honeſtly in Divine Service.

And eight Brethren.

Afterwards, divers Citizens of London gave 56 l. Rent thereunto, and then were adjoined eight Brethren to miniſter Divine Service there.

* Eighty Acres. 1ſt Edit.

After this alſo, ſundry devout Men of London gave to this Hoſpital four Hides of Land in the Field of Weſtminſter; and in Hendon, Calcote, and Hamſted, * eight Acres of Land and Wood, &c. King Edward the Firſt confirm'd thoſe Gifts, and granted a Fair, to be kept on the Eve of St. James, the Day, the Morrow, and four Days following, in the eighteenth of his Reign.

St. James's Fair for ſeven Days.

Surrendered.

This Hoſpital was ſurrender'd to Henry the Eighth, the 23d of his Reign; the Siſters being compounded with, were allowed Penſions for the Term of their Lives, and the King builded there a goodly Manour, annexing thereunto a Park, cloſed about with a Wall of Brick, now called St. James's Park, ſerving indifferently to the ſaid Manour, and to the Manour or Palace of Whitehall.

St. James's Park.

J. S.

And this Place now, ſince the Burning down of Whitehall, is become the Royal Palace of our Kings, and their chief Reſidence.

May-Fair. The Diſorders there.

Some Diſtance hence, between St. James's and Hide-Park, is kept May Fair, yearly, where young People did uſe to reſort; and by the Temptations they met with here, did commit much Sin and Diſorder. Here they ſpent their Time and Money in Drunkenneſs, Fornication, Gaming, and Lewdneſs. Whereby were occaſioned oftentimes Quarels, Tumults, and Shedding of Blood. Whereupon, in the Month of November, 1708, the Grand Jury of Weſtminſter, for the Body of the County of Middleſex, made a Preſentment to this Import, 'That being ſenſible of their Duty, to make Preſentment of ſuch Matters and Things as were publick Enormities and Inconveniencies, and being encouraged by the Example of the worthy Magiſtracy of the City of London, in their late Proceedings againſt Bartholomew-Fair; did preſent, as a publick Nuſance and Inconvenience, the yearly riotous and tumultuous Aſſembly in a Place called Brook-Field, in the Pariſh of St. Martin in the Fields, in this County, called May-Fair. In which Place many looſe, idle, and diſorderly Perſons, did Rendezvous, and draw and allure young Perſons, Servants, and others, to meet there, to game, and commit Lewdneſs, and diſorderly Practices, to the great Corruptiou and Debauchery of their Vertue and Morals; and in which many and great Riots, Tumults, Breaches of the Peace, open and notorious Lewdneſs, and Murder itſelf had been committed; and were like to be committed again, if not prevented by ſome wiſe and prudent Method: And for that the ſaid Fair being ſo near her Majeſty's Palaces, and might be very dangerous to her Majeſty's Royal Perſon and Government, by ſeditious and unreaſonable Men; taking thereby Occaſion to execute their moſt wicked and treaſonable Deſigns. Wherefore, and becauſe the ſaid Fair, as it was then uſed, both actually was, and had ſo fatal a Tendency to the Corruption of her Majeſty's Subjects, Violation of her Peace, and the Danger of her Perſon; they humbly conceived it worthy the Care of thoſe in Power and Authority to rectify the ſame.]

Preſented by the Grand Jury.

Tilt-Yard at Weſtminſter.

South from Charing-Croſs, on the right Hand, are divers fair Houſes, lately builded before the Park: Then a large Tilt-yard for Noblemen and others, to exerciſe themſelves in Juſting, Turneying, and Fighting at the Barriers.

Scotland, a Plot of Ground ſo called.

On the left Hand from Charing-Croſs be alſo divers fair Tenements lately builded, 'till ye come to a large Plot of Ground encloſed with Brick, and is called Scotland, where great Buildings have been for Receipt of the Kings of Scotland, and other Eſtates of that Country. For, Margaret Queen of Scots, and Siſter to King Henry the Eighth, had her abiding there, when ſhe came into England, after the Death of her Huſband, as the King of Scotland had in former Times, when they came to the Parliament of England.

Given by King Edgar to King Keneth.

J. S.

K. Edw. 6. Title to Scotland, printed An. 1548.

This was firſt given by King Edgar, a Saxon King, (who reigned about the Year 959.) to Keneth, or Kynald, King of Scotland; from whom he had received Homage for that Kingdom, and enjoined the ſaid King Keneth, once every Year to repair unto him in England, for the making of Laws, which in thoſe Days was done by the Noblemen and Peers. To which End the ſaid King Edgar gave that King this Piece of Ground, lying beſide the new Palace of Weſtminſter, for his Reſidence when he came up; upon which this Keneth built an Houſe: Which by him and his Poſterity was enjoyed until the Reign of K. Henry the Second, in whoſe Time, upon the Rebellion of William, then King of Scots, it was reſumed into the King of England's Hands. After that, the Houſe went to Decay; but the Ground where it ſtood, is called Scotland to this Day.

Whitehall.

J. S.

Then is the ſaid Whitehall, ſometime belonging to Hubert de Burgh, Earl of Kent, and Juſticiar of England, who gave it to the Black Fryers of Oldborne, as I have before noted. King Henry the Eighth ordained it to be called an Honour, and builded there a ſumptuous Gallery, and a beautiful Gate-houſe, thwart the high Street, to St. James's Park. [In the uppermoſt Rooms of this Gate-houſe, is the Paper-Office, or Paper-houſe, wherein Papers of State, Embaſſy, &c. are repoſited.]

In this Gallery, the Princes, with their Nobility, uſed to ſtand or ſit, and at Windows to behold all triumphant Juſtings, and other Military Exerciſings.

Beyond this Gallery, on the left Hand, is the Garden or Orchard belonging to the ſaid Whitehall.

York Place recovered by the Lord Chancellor, &c. for the King. Convention. Rhymer.

J. S.

There is an Inſtrument among the Records at Weſtminſter, 21ſt Henry the Eighth, for the Recovery of the Place (called then York Place) for the King, Omnibus, &c. wherein it is ſpecified, ‘That Thomas More, Lord Chancellor, the Duke of Norfolk, Treaſurer of England, William Fitz-Williams, Knight of the Garter, Treaſurer of the King's Houſhold, and Chancellor of the Dutchy of Lancaſter, Robert Norwick, one of the King's Serjeants at Law, and Chriſtopher Hales, Attorney-General, in Hilary Term, before the Juſtices at Weſtminſter, recovered to them and their Heirs, for the Uſe of our Lord the King Henry the Eighth, againſt the moſt Reverend Father in Chriſt Thomas Cardinal of York, one Meſſuage, two Gardens, and three Acres of Land, with the Appurtinences, ſituate in the Village * or Town of Weſtminſter, in the County of Middleſex. Which are commonly called York-Place. And they delivered, demiſed, and by that preſent Charter confirmed to the King the ſaid Meſſuage, &c. Dated the 7th of February, 21 H. 8.

The Occaſion of K. Henry's Removal to Whitehall.

28 H. 8. ca. 12.

King Henry the Eighth was the firſt King of England that removed his Dwelling from the old Palace nigh unto the Monaſtery of St. Peter's Weſtminſter unto Whitehall: And that becauſe that old Palace was then, and had been long Time before, in utter Ruin and Decay, as it is expreſſed in an Act of Parliament; and that the King had lately obtained this Whitehall, which is ſtiled in the ſame Act, ‘One great Manſion Place and Houſe, being Parcel of the Poſſeſſions of the Archbiſhoprick of York, ſituate in the Town of Weſtminſter, not much diſtant from the ſame ancient Palace: And that he had lately upon the Soil of the ſaid Manſion-Place and Houſe, and upon the Ground thereunto belonging moſt ſumptuouſly and curiouſly builded and edified many and diſtinct, beautiful, coſtly and pleaſant Lodgings, Buildings, and Manſions, for his Grace's ſingular Pleaſure, Comfort, and Commodity, to the Honour of his Highneſs and his Realm. And thereunto adjoining, had made a Park, walled and environed with Brick and Stone; and there deviſed and ordained many and ſingular commodious Things, Pleaſures, and other Neceſſaries, apt and convenient to appertain to ſo noble a Prince, for his Paſtime and Solace.

The Bounds of the Palace.

By the ſaid Act, this Place, with the ſaid Buildings and Park, are taken into the Bounds of the King's Palace, and to enjoy all the Privileges thereof. And the whole Limits of the Royal Palace are there ſet out and deſcribed, Namely, ‘That all the ſaid Soil, Ground, Manſion, and Buildings, and the Park, with all the Things, Commodities, and Pleaſures, thereupon builded and deviſed; and alſo the Soil of the ancient Palace, ſhould be from thenceforth the King's whole Palace at Weſtminſter; and ſo be taken, deemed, and reputed, and to be called and named, The King's Palace at Weſtminſter for ever. And that the ſaid Palace ſhould extend, and be as well within the Soil and Places before limited and appointed, as alſo in all the Street or Way leading from Charing-Croſs unto the Sanctuary-Gate at Weſtminſter; and to all the Houſes, Buildings, Lands, and Tenements on both Sides of the ſame Street or Way from the ſaid Croſs unto Weſtminſter-hall, ſituate, lying, and being between the Water of the Thames on the Eaſt Part, and the ſaid Park-Wall on the Weſt Part; and ſo forth, through all the Soil, Precinct, and Limits of the ſaid old Palace. And all the ſaid Palace to enjoy like Prerogatives, Liberties, Preeminences, Juriſdictions, and Privileges, as to the King's ancient Palace within this Realm have at any Time heretofore belonged, uſed, or of Right appertained.]

A Model for new Building of Whitehall.
J. S.

WHITEHALL now lies in Ruines, having been burnt down by Accident in the Reign of King William. For Want of rebuilding the ſame, Mr. Weedon, an ingenious Gentleman, ſuppoſed the City of Weſtminſter was damnified above 30 l. per Cent. in their Houſes, Trades, and Properties. The ſame Gentleman therefore of his own good Will to the reforming that moſt noble Palace, for the Honour and Benefit of the Queen, and her Kingdom, propoſed in Print, That an Act of Parliament ſhould be made for the Rebuilding of it, after the Manner of a Model or Plan of Inigo Jones, the famous Engliſh Architect in King James the Firſt's Time, who built the Banqueting Houſe at Whitehall, and left a Plan for the whole Palace to be built ſuitable to it, that being reputed one of the beſt Buildings in Europe; which Plan his late Majeſty viewed, and approved of. This Palace to be built after the ſaid Plan, would amount to ſix hundred thouſand Pounds, and might be about ſeven Years in building. He propounded moreover, That the ſaid Structure ſhould extend from the North-eaſt of the firſt Scotland-yard, and be continued to the North-ſide of the old Palace-Yard at Weſtminſter; and the common Way to Weſtminſter made to run next the Water-ſide; whereby the new Palace might front St. James's Park and the River. That there might be twelve Commiſſioners, ſix to be appointed by her Majeſty, and ſix by the Parliament, to carry on the ſaid Building, and to have a Power by a Jury, as thoſe Commiſſioners had, that were appointed for the Rebuilding of London after the dreadful Fire, whereby to adjuſt all Perſons Intereſts and Differences, and truly to account for and to apply whatſoever Value ſhould be raiſed or given towards the Charges; and that there be ſeven Perſons, whereof one to be Treaſurer, , to promote and collect voluntary Benefactions and Subſcriptions towards the carrying on ſo National a Good.

Then he offered Ways and Means for the Raiſing of the ſaid Sum of ſix hundred thouſand Pounds: And the firſt was, That the City of Weſtminſter ſhould be incorporated; to conſiſt of a Maior, Recorder, and 24 Aldermen; and certain Franchiſes and Liberties to be granted them. That all Profits ariſing to the ſaid Corporation, over and above all Manner of Expences and Charges the Corporation would be at in ſupporting it ſelf, be for the next ſeven Years appropriated to carry on the ſaid Palace. That Duties ſhould be laid upon new improved Rents within the ſaid City of Weſtminſter. That all Officers that held two or more Offices of above the Value of 300 l. per Annum, ſhould pay ſo much in the Pound. And that ſuch as had any Right or Title to any Houſe, or Office, or Lodging, within the ſaid new intended Palace, ſhould pay likewiſe ſo much in the Pound. That all Improvements of any Part of the Ground of Whitehall, and the Benefit ariſing to her Majeſty of all future and new Inventions, Diſcoveries, and Improvements, be for ſuch a Term appointed towards the ſaid Charge. And that all future Forfeitures accruing to her Majeſty for a Term of Years, to be likewiſe appropriated for the ſame Charge: But this Work was thought fit to be laid aſide for the preſent.]

anciently writ Eſtaple, and comes of the French Word Eſtape, which ſignifies a Mart or Market. There are five Staple Merchandizes of England, ſaith the Lord Coke, viz. Wool, Woolfels, Leather, Lead, and Tin. There was a Maior of the Staple, and there was a Court of the Maior of the Staple, wherein Merchants of the Staple did ſue by Law-Merchant; ſo there was a Statute, That Merchants, Strangers, might ſue before the Maior of the Staple, according to the Law-Merchant, or at the Common Law. And this Court was holden at Wool Staple in Weſtminſter. This Court, tho' it were far more ancient, was ſtrengthened and warranted by Act of Parliament, 27th Edward the Third.

Touching this Wool-Staple I read, That in the Reign of Edward the Firſt, the Staple being at Weſtminſter, the Pariſhioners of St. Margaret, and Merchants of the Staple, builded of new the ſaid Church, the great Chancel excepted, which was lately before new builded by the Abbot of Weſtminſter.

No Silver to be tranſported.

Moreover, that Edward the Third, in the 17th of his Reign, decreed, That no Silver be carried out of the Realm, on Pain of Death: And that whoſoever tranſported Wool, ſhould bring over, for every Sack, four Nobles of Silver Bullion.

Wool-Staple at Weſtminſter

In the 25th of his Reign, he appointed the Staple of Wool to be kept only at Canterbury, for the Honour of St. Thomas. Moreover, in the 27th of the ſame King Edward, the Staple of Wool, before kept at Bruges in Flanders, was ordained (by Parliament) to be kept in divers Places of England, Wales, and Ireland; as at Newcaſtle, York, Lincoln, Canterbury, Norwich, Weſtminſter, Chicheſter, Wincheſter, Exceſter, Briſtow, Caermarden, &c. to the great Benefit of the King, and Loſs unto Strangers and Merchants. For there grew unto the King by this Means (as it was ſaid) the Sum of a thouſand an hundred and two Pounds by the Year, more than any his Predeceſſors before had received: The Staple at Weſtminſter, at that Time, began on the next Morrow after the Feaſt of St. Peter ad Vincula.

Robert de Ameſbury.

The next Year was granted to the King by Parliament, towards the Recovery of his Title in France, 50 Shillings of every Sack of Wool tranſported over Seas, for the Space of ſix Years next enſuing: By Means whereof, the King might diſpend daily, during thoſe Years, more than a thouſand Marks Sterling: For by the common Opinion, there were more than an hundred Sacks of Wool yearly tranſported into foreign Lands; ſo that during ſix Years, the ſaid Grant extended to fifteen hundred thouſand Pound Sterling.

Staple at Calais let to Farm.

In the 37th of Edward the Third, it was granted unto him for two Years, to take ſix and twenty Shillings eight Pence upon every Sack of Wool tranſported: And the ſame Year, the Staple of Wool (notwithſtanding the King's Oath, and other great Eſtates) was ordained to be kept at Calais, and ſix and twenty Merchants, the beſt and the wealthieſt of all England, to be Farmers there, both of the Town and Staple, for three Years, every Merchant to have ſix Men of Arms, and four Archers, at the King's Coſt. He ordained there alſo two Maiors, one for the Town, and one for the Staple, and he took for mala capta, commonly called Maltorth, (I think Cuſtom) 20 Shillings, and of the ſaid Merchants, Guardians of the Town, forty Pence upon every Sack of Wool.

Two Maiors at Calais.

Staple removed.

In the 44th of Edward the Third, Quinborough, Kingſton upon Hull, and Boſton, were made Staples of Wool: Which Matter ſo much offended ſome, that in the fiftieth of his Reign, in a Parliament at London, it was complained, That the Staple of Wool was ſo removed from Calais to divers Towns in England, contrary to the Statute, appointing, That Citizens and Merchants ſhould keep it there, and that the King might have the Profits and Cuſtoms, with the Exchange of Gold and Silver that was there made, by all the Merchants in Chriſtendom (eſteemed to amount to eight thouſand Pound by Year the Exchange only.) And the Citizens and Merchants ſo ordered the Matter, that the King ſpent nothing upon Soldiers; neither upon Defence of the Town againſt the Enemies; whereas now he ſpent eight thouſand Pound by Year.

Record.

In the fifty firſt of Edward the Third, when the Staple was ſettled at Calais, the Maior of the Staple did furniſh the Captain of the Town, upon any Rode, with an hundred Bill-men, two hundred Archers, of Merchants and their Servants, without any Wages.

In the Year 1388, the twelfth of Richard the Second, in a Parliament at Cambridge, it was ordained, That the Staple of Wool ſhould be brought from Middleborough in Holland to Calais.

Wool-Staples at Middleborough. M. S. French.

In the fourteenth of his Reign, there was granted forty Shillings upon every Sack of Wool, and in the one and twentieth, was granted fifty Shillings upon every Sack tranſported by Engliſh-men, and three Pounds by Strangers, &c.

It ſeemeth, that the Merchants of this Staple be the moſt ancient Merchants of this Realm, and that all Commodities of the Realm are Staple Merchandizes by Law and Charter, as Wools, Leather, Wool-fells, Lead, Tin, Cloth, &c.

Staple-Merchants the moſt ancienteſt of this Realm.

King Henry the Sixth had ſix Wool-houſes within the Staple at Weſtminſter; thoſe he granted to the Dean and Canons of St. Stephen at Weſtminſter, and confirmed it the 21ſt of his Reign. Thus much for the Staple have I ſhortly noted.

And now to paſs to the famous Monaſtery of Weſtminſter: At the very Entrance of the Cloſe thereof is a Lane that leadeth toward the Weſt, called Thieving-Lane, for that Thieves were led that Way to the Gatehouſe, while the Sanctuary continued in Force, Thieving Lane.

The MONASTERY of St. PETER, WESTMINSTER.

THis Monaſtery was founded and builded by Sebert, King of the Eaſt Saxons, [that began his Reign Anno 603] upon the Perſwaſion of Ethelbert King of Kent; who having imbraced Chriſtianity, and being baptized by Melitus, Biſhop of London, immediately (to ſhew himſelf a Chriſtian indeed) built a Church to the Honour of God and St. Peter, on the Weſt Side of the City of London, in a Place (which becauſe it was overgrown with Thorns, and environed with Water) the Saxons called Thorney, and now of the Monaſtery and Weſt Situation thereof, is called Weſtminſter. In this Place (ſaith Sulcardus) long before was a Temple of Apollo; which being overthrown, King Lucius built therein a Church of Chriſtianity. What farther I read, concerning the Foundation of this Church, followeth in this Manner:

Foundation thereof by Sebert, a Chriſtian King, not only in Word, but in Deed.

Temple of Apollo here, Firſt Edit. A. M.

When the Church of God firſt began to grow in Great-Britain at ſuch Time (ſaith Sulcardus) as Antoninus Pius was Emperor of Rome, the Temple of Apollo, which was then ſeated on the Weſt-ſide of the City of London, where now Weſtminſter ſtandeth, fell down by the Violence of an Earthquake. Of the Ruins whereof, Lucius (who was King of the Britains, and reigned here by Permiſſion of the Romans) built a ſmall Church to the Honour nour of Chriſt, in the Year of our Lord 170, which afterward was utterly defaced when the Heat of Perſecution (under Diocleſian) waſted Britain.

King Sebert built a Monaſtery in the Place where the Church ſtood.

This Place afterward (for a long Time) lay altogether neglected, and not regarded, but became all overgrown with Thorns and Buſhes; in ſo much as the Engliſh Saxons named it Thornez, or Thorney, until Sebert King of the Eaſt Saxons (or of Eſſex and Middleſex) who was the firſt that ſubſcribed to the Worſhip of Chriſt, built in that Place a Monaſtery to Chriſt and St. Peter, in the Year of Chriſt 605; whereupon, partly from the Situation to the Weſt, and partly, from the Monaſtery or Minſter, it began to take the Name of Weſtminſter: But afterward, when this Monaſtery was deſtroyed in the furious Wars of the Danes, Dunſtane, Archbiſhop of Canterbury (by the Favour of King Edgar) repaired it, and granted, and gave it to a ſmall Company of Monks.

The Monaſtery rebuilded by K. Edward the Confeſſor.

Afterward King Edward, ſirnamed the Confeſſor, with the Tenths of all his Revenues, built it a-new, to be a Place for his own Sepulcher, and a Monaſtery for the Monks of St. Bennet's Order, and endowed it with Revenues lying (here and and there) in all Places of England; and it is an ancient Fabrick, and very ſtately: Since which Time this Monaſtery hath been (and yet is) very famous, for the Conſecration and Coronation of the Kings of England, and the Burial of many of them, and other great Perſonages, and for the Cuſtody of the Regalia for the Coronation.

The new Church builded by King Henry 3.

But 160 Years after, King Henry the Third pulled down that ancient Fabrick of King Edward, and (with 50 Years Work) built a Church of a moſt goodly Frame. with a Multitude of Marble Pillars, ſet in comely Order; whereof he himſelf laid the firſt Stone, and covered the Roof with Lead, Anno 1220.

Ubique auro excencellatus.

I find, by ſome Records in the Tower, (communicated to me by a Friend) ſeveral things given to this new Church for Ornament, both by the King and his Queen. She ſet up in S. Edward's Feretory, the Image of the Bleſſed Virgin Mary. And the King in the 28th of his Reign, which was about the Year 1244, cauſed Edward Fitz Odo, Keeper of his Works at Weſtminſter, to place upon her Forehead, for Ornament, an Emerald and a Ruby, taken out of two Rings, which the Biſhop of Chicheſter had left the ſaid King for a Legacy. The ſame Year the King commanded the Keepers of his Works at Weſtminſter, that they ſhould provide for the Abbot of Weſtminſter one ſtrong and good Beam to ſupport the Bells of the King's Gift, and deliver the ſaid Beam to the Sacriſtan: And in the 39th of the ſaid King, he gave 100 Shillings, by Payment each half Year, to the Brethren of the Guild at Weſtminſter, and their Succeſſors, who were aſſigned to ring the great Bells there, to be paid out of his Exchequer, till the King can provide them the Value of 100 Shillings, Land or Rent. In the 24th of his Reign, he gave the Prior three Marks, to repair the Organ. In the 28th Year of his Reign he commanded Edward Fitz Odo to make a Dragon in Manner of a Standard or Enſign of certain red Samitt, to be every where adorned with Gold; and his Tongue to be made appearing, as though it continually moved; and his Eyes of Sapphires, or other Stones agreeable to him; and this to be ſet in St. Peter's Church againſt the King's coming thither. In the 30th of his Reign, the ſame King Henry the Third gave the ſaid Church one great Crown of Silver to ſet Wax Candles upon in the ſaid Church; and he commanded the Keeper of his Exchange to do this out of the Iſſues thereof, and to buy alſo out of the ſaid Iſſues, as precious a Mitre as could be found in the City of London, for the Abbot of Weſtminſter's Uſe, of the King's Gift. And Laſtly, 41ſt Henry the Third, about An 1257, as a farther Ornament for St. Peter's, he ordered a ſumptuous Monument to be erected there for his Daughter Katharine deceaſed, giving Order to his Treaſurer and his Chamberlains of the Treaſury, to deliver to Mr. Simon de Wells five Mark and an half, for his Expences in going to London for a certain Braſs Image to be ſet upon her Tomb, and returning home again: And upon the ſame Tomb there was alſo ſet a Silver Image. For the making of which, William of Glouceſter, the King's Goldſmith, was paid ſixty Marks and ten.]

Which Church afterward, the Abbots did much enlarge to the Weſtward. And King Henry the Seventh, in the Year 1502, beſtowed 14000 Pounds on the Eaſt-ſide, where he built a Chappel [called Our Lady's Chappel] of admirable Beauty, (which Leland calls the Miracle of the World: For any Man that ſees it, may ſay, that all Elegancy of Workmanſhip and Matter is couched in it) to be a Place of Sepulture for himſelf and all his Poſterity; wherein (at this Day) is to be ſeen his own Tomb, moſt gorgeous and great, made all of ſolid Braſs [where alſo his Queen lies by him. And in the ſaid King's laſt Will, dated April 10, Anno 1508, he appointed to be buried there, in a Chappel made by himſelf, and a Sum of 5000 l. is mentioned to be delivered to the Abbot of Weſtminſter, for Maſſes and Alms; whereof Ten thouſand Maſſes to be ſaid for his Soul at 6 d. a Maſs, and 2000 l. for Alms between his Death and Burial: So much to the City of London, ſo much to Priſons, &c.

The Braſs of his Tomb ſtoln away.

In the Year 1569, this moſt magnificent Monument of Henry the Seventh, and alſo of Queen Elizabeth his Wife, received much Damage by a certain lewd Fellow that ſtole away divers Parcels of Braſs and Copper that adorned their Tombs: But he was diſcovered and puniſhed by Mr. Barnard Randolph, the common Sergeant of London.

The Vine Garden.

Among the reſt of the Lands belonging to this Abbey, was a Garden, they called the Vine Garden; becauſe perhaps Vines anciently were there nouriſhed, and Wine made. It was in King Edward the Sixth's Time encloſed with Houſes and Buildings, and other Lands and Meadows, and Paſtures belonging to the ſame; and likewiſe a certain Parcel of Land called, The Milbank: Theſe were of Value 58 s. and given by that King, in the third of his Reign, to Joanna Smith, in Conſideration of Service.]

He departed thence Anno 1550, being removed to Norwich, and left it to be governed by a Dean.

A Nurſery for the Collegiate Church of Weſtminſter, inſtituted by Q. Elizabeth.

Within ſhort Time after, Queen Mary brought in the Monks again, with an Abbot nam'd Feckenham, who not long after being expulſed by Act of Parliament, Queen Elizabeth (of bleſſed Memory) converted it into a Collegiate Church, or rather a Nurſery for the Church, in the Year 1560. For there ſhe ordained (to the Glory of God, and the Propagation of true Religion and good Literature) a Dean, twelve Prebendaries, an Upper Maſter, and an Uſher for the School, forty Scholars, termed the Queen's Scholars, who (at their due Times) are preferred to both the Univerſities; beſides Miniſters, Singers, and Organiſts, ten Queriſters, and twelve poor Soldiers, &c.

The firſt Dean according to the Foundation. A. M.

The firſt Dean then of that Foundation, was Mr William Bill; who being taken away within two Years, had for his Succeſſor, Mr. Gabriel Goodman, Doctor of Divinity. Who, when he had governed this Collegiate Church (with great Commendation) the Space of forty Years, died in the Year of our Lord God, 1601. And then Mr. Lancelot Andrewes, Doctor alſo in Divinity, ſucceeded him; next, Doctor Neale; and after him, Doctor Mountaine.]

Sebert was buried in this Church with his Wife Athelgoda; whoſe Bodies, many Years after, to wit, in the Reign of Richard the Second (ſaith Walſingham) were tranſlated from the old Church to the new, and there interred.

Walſingham.

Edgar, King of the Weſt Saxons, repaired this Monaſtery, about the Year of Chriſt 958, Edward the Confeſſor builded it of new; whereupon T. Clifford writeth thus:

T. Clifford.

This Monaſtery new built by Edward the Confeſſor.

Without the Walls of London (ſaith he) upon the River of Thames, there was in Times paſſed a little Monaſtery, builded to the Honour of God and St. Peter, with a few Benedictine Monks in it, under an Abbot, ſerving Chriſt: Very poor they were, and little was given them for their Relief. Here the King intended (for that it was near to the famous City of London, and the River of Thames, that brought in all Kind of Merchandizes from all Parts of the World) to make his Sepulchre: He commanded therefore, that of the Tenths of all his Rents, the Work ſhould be begun, in ſuch Sort, as ſhould become the Prince of the Apoſtles.

At this his Commandment, the Work was nobly begun, even from the Foundation, and happily proceeded, 'till the ſame was finiſhed: The Charges beſtowed, or to be beſtowed, are not regarded. He granted to this Church great Privileges, above all the Churches in this Land, as partly appeareth by this his Charter.

Pariſh Church of St. Margaret.

He alſo cauſed the Pariſh Church of St. Margaret to be newly builded, without the Abbey Church of Weſtminſter, for the Eaſe and Commodity of the Monks. Becauſe (before that Time) the Pariſh Church ſtood within the old Abbey Church in the South Iſle, ſomewhat to their Annoyance.

Stow's Firſt Edit.

This Church of St. Margaret (which that King Edward builded) continued 'till the Days of Edward the Firſt, at what Time the Staple of Wools was at Weſtminſter; and then the Pariſhoners and Merchants of the Staple builded it all of new, the great Chancel excepted, which was done by the Abbots of Weſtminſter, as is afore ſhewed.

Ladies Chapel.

King Henry the Third, in the Year of Chriſt 1220, and in the fifth of his Reign, began the new Work of our Lady's Chapel, whereof he laid the firſt Stone in the Foundation; and in the Year 1245, the Walls and Steeple of the old Church (builded by King Edward) were taken down, and enlarging the ſame Church, cauſed them to be made more comely. For the Furtherance whereof, in the Year 1246, the ſame King (deviſing how to extort Money from the Citizens of London towards the Charges) appointed a Mart to be kept at Weſtminſter, the ſame to laſt fifteen Days, and in the mean Space all Trade of Merchandize to ceaſe in the City. Which Thing the Citizens were fain to redeem with two thouſand Pound of Silver.

Feſtival of S. Edward obſerved by Kings.
J. S.

Rymer's Fœder. Convent. Tom. 1. p. 563. Clauſe-Roll.

This King Henry, as he rebuilt this religious Fabrick of King Edward the Confeſſor, ſo he religiouſly obſerved his Feſtival at the ſaid Place. And when he could not be preſent, he gave Command to have it honourably celebrated by others in his Name. Thus in the 39th of his Reign, Anno 1255, it is recorded in the Tower Records, that becauſe the King was not ſure that he could be preſent at the Solemnity of the Feaſt of St. EDWARD approaching, by Reaſon of various and urgent Affairs in Scotland, he commanded Philip Luvel his Treaſurer, and Edward of Weſtminſter [his Son] in the Faith and Love, whereby they were held bound to the King, that they keep the ſaid Feaſt together, with the venerable Fathers, the Biſhops of Sarum, Norwich, Bath, Chicheſter, and the neighbouring Abbot and Prior, whom the King by his Letter, hath invited to the Feaſt; and that they ſolemnly celebrate it at the King's Coſt; and for the Poll of the King, and Queen, and their Children, ſo much to be offered, ſcil. de 36 Almuciis nomine eorum offerri, in their Name; and that they cauſe to be touched the Silver Croſs upon the great Altar at Weſtminſter; and that they offer one Plate of Gold of the Weight of one Ounce in the King's Name, as is cuſtomary in the Solemnity of the Maſs of the ſaid EDWARD, as tho' the King himſelf were preſent. And to fill the King's two Halls at Weſtminſter, in the ſaid Feaſt [with People] and cauſe them to be fed, as hath been accuſtomed to be done; and cauſe ſolemnly to come to Weſtminſter on St. EDWARD's Day, the Proceſſion of the Church of St. Margaret, and all the Proceſſions of the City of London, with Wax-Lights, and their other Proceſſions, as the King hath likewiſe commanded the Maior and the honeſt Men of London. This was dated at Werk the 13th of September.

Pope Alexander's Bull for this Feaſt, to diſpenſe with the King's Oath.
Rymer's Fœdera, &c. Tom. 1.

And that nothing, no not Vows, might obſtruct this King's Solemnization of this Feaſt, the next Year, viz. 1256, he obtained a Bull from Pope Alexander, for the King and his Gueſts, to keep it, whenſoever it ſhould fall on a Saturday. It was directed, To his dear Son in Chriſt, Henry King of England. And it was granted on this Occaſion, as it ſeems by the Import of the ſaid Bull, viz. That the King was detained by a Vow he had made from eating Fleſh on Saturdays, and that he had deſired a Freedom from that Vow, that he might the better keep this Feaſt, whenſoever it ſhould fall out on that Day. Cum ſicut ex ſua parte, &c. ‘ Whereas, on their Behalf it is ſignified to us, that you are bound by Vow to abſtain from Fleſh on Saturdays, we, yielding to your Requeſts, indulge, by the Authority of theſe Preſents, your Excellency, that if the Feaſt of the Tranſlation of St. Edward happen to be kept on a Saturday, it may be lawful for you to eat Fleſh, notwithſtanding ſuch a Vow; and alſo for your Gueſts, who have not been bound by ſuch Vow. And we will, that you be bound for this to feed an hundred Poor the ſame Day.’ This Bull hath a leaden Seal with Strings of yellow and red Silk.]

The Work of this Church, with the Houſes of Office, was finiſhed to the End of the Quire, in the Year 1285, the 14th of Edward the Firſt.

Weſtminſter with the Palace burned.

All which Labour of 66 Years, was in the Year 1299 defaced by a Fire, kindled in the leſſer Hall of the King's Palace at Weſtminſter, the ſame, with many other Houſes adjoining, and with the Queen's Chamber, were all conſumed, the Flame thereof alſo (being driven with the Wind) fired the Monaſtery, which was alſo with the Palace conſumed.

And Monaſtery.

Repaired.

Then was the Monaſtery again repaired by the Abbots of that Church, King Edward the Firſt and his Succeſſors, putting to their helping Hands.

Edward the Second appropriated unto this Church the Patronages of the Churches of Kilueden and Sabritſworth in Eſſex, in the Dioceſs of London.

Simon Langham Abbot (having been a great Builder there in the Year 1362) gave four hundred Pound to the Building of the Body of the Church: But (amongſt others) Abbot Iſlip was (in his Time) a great Builder there, as may appear in the Stone-work and Glaſs-windows of the Church. Since whoſe Deceaſe, that Work hath ſtayed as he left it, unperfected, the Church and Steeple being all of one Height.

Some Deſcription of the Church.
Mon. Weſtmon. by H. K.
J. S.

The Portal of this Church, on the North-ſide, is of very curious Work (as yet may be judged by thoſe that view it) having two little Portico's on each Side, of which one only ſerveth for Paſſage at preſent. This was anciently called Solomon's Porch, and was of great Eſteem, having the Statues of the twelve Apoſtles at full Proportion, beſides a Multitude of leſſer Saints and Martyrs, and much fine Fretwork to add to the Beauty of it.

The Figure of it.
The Architecture.

For the Figure of this Church, it is built in the Form of a Croſs; the Vaults and Side Iles are ſupported by 48 Pillars of gray Marble, each diſtant from other eight Foot. And from thence another Row of leſſer Pillars, double the Number of the former, and of the ſame Marble, to the upper Roof or Vault, ſixty Foot; the Vault itſelf being ſupported by theſe Pillars, whoſe Arches turn not upon Semi-Circles, according to the Roman Manner of Architecture practiſed in our Days, but meet in acute Angles, in Imitation of the Gothic Way of Building; and dividing themſelves into ſeveral Squares, compoſe a moſt ſtately Roof, wrought with divers figured Stands, and in ſome Places curiouſly gilt with Gold. The Length, 360 Foot, reaching to the Stairs of the Chapel of King Henry the Seventh, within the Walls. The Breadth of the Nave 75 Foot, of the Croſs 195. King Henry the Seventh's Chapel contains 122 Foot in Length, and 62 in Breath; ſo that the whole Fabrick is no leſs than 482 Foot long within the Walls, as a late Author ſaith, he meaſured it by a Line.

Chapels in this Church.

In this Church (beſides the Chapels of S. Edward, and that of Henry the Seventh, formerly called The Bleſſed Virgin's Chapel, and that of S. Katharine, and S. Anne; the Situation of which two laſt is uncertain) are ten Chapels, viz. four on the South, and ſix on the North. Thoſe on the South are, S. Blaſe's, S. Benedict's, S. Edmund's, and S. Nicolas's. Thoſe on the North are, S. Andrew's, S. Michael's, S. John Evangeliſt's, S. Eraſmus's, S. John Baptiſt's, and S. Paul's.

Names of Kings and great Peers inſcribed upon theſe Walls, very antient.

On each Side the Body, or Nave, under each Window, and between each Pillar, you have the Names in ancient Engliſh, or Saxon Letters, and under them the Coates of Arms of ſeveral Kings, Princes, and Noblemen; chiefly ſuch as flouriſhed when King Henry the Third rebuilt this Church; beginning, on the South Side, with S. Edwardus Rex & Confeſſor; next, Henricus Tertius Rex Angliæ; then, Alexander III. Rex Scotorum; and ſo on to the Noblemen; in all to the Number of twenty on that Side: And then the North Side begins with, Fredericus Secundus Imperator: Next, S. Lodovicus Rex Franciæ: Then, Ricardus Clare Comes Gloceſtriæ; and ſo on, in all, to the Number of twenty on this Side alſo.

The Picture of K. Richard 2. by the Pulpit.

On the Side of the Pulpit is a moſt comely Picture of Richard the Second King of England, ſitting in the Ornaments and Chair of his Coronation; one of the ancienteſt Pieces (as it is ſaid) now extant in England, and well done, conſidering the Diſtance of Years ſince it was made. It ſhews him to be of great Beauty, and of admirable Features.

The curious Floor before the High Altar.

Within the Rails before the High Altar, is a moſt noble and curious in-laid Floor, done at the Coſt of Richard de Ware, Abbot of Weſtminſter, Anno 1260, and Lord Treaſurer of England, ſtill remaining entire; where, in moſt artificial Work and Figures, there be ſet theſe ſeveral Sorts of Stones, the Jaſper, Porphyry, Lydian, Touch, Alabaſter, and Serpentine: And compaſſing the Squares and great Circles were theſe Latin Verſes deſcribed in Letters of Braſs; which when entire, were thus to be read, ſomewhat enigmatical according to the Fancy of that Age.

But the greateſt Piece of Curioſity in this Church yet remains to be related, viz. a Chapel of that exact Compoſure, that nothing in the World of the ſame Kind is ſaid to exceed, if equal it.]

The new Chapel at Weſtminſter, i. e. Henry 7. his Chapel built.

King Henry the Seventh, about the Year of Chriſt 1502, cauſed the Chapel of our Lady, builded by Henry the Third, with a Tavern alſo called the White Roſe, near adjoining, to be taken down: In which Plot of Ground, on the 24th of January, the firſt Stone of the new Chapel was laid by the Hands of Abbot Iſlip, Sir Reginald Bray, Knight of the Garter, Doctor Barnes, Maſter of the Rolls, Dr. Wall, Chaplain to the King, Mr. Hugh Aldham, Chaplain to the Counteſs of Darby and Richmond (the King's Mother) Sir Edward Stanhope, Kt. and divers other: Upon the which Stone was engraven, the ſame Day and Year, &c.

The Charges in building this Chapel amounted to the Sum of 14000 l. The Stone for this Work (as I have been informed) was brought from Huddleſtone Quarry in Yorkſhire.

The Monument of Henry 7.

The Altar and Sepulchre of the ſame King Henry the Seventh, wherein his Body reſteth in this his new Chapel, was made and finiſhed in the Year 1519, by one Peter a Painter in Florence; for which he received 1000 l. Sterling for the whole Stuff and Workmanſhip, at the Hands of the King's Executors, Richard, Biſhop of Wincheſter, Richard, Biſhop of London, Thomas, Biſhop of Durham, John, Biſhop of Rocheſter, Thomas, Duke of Norfolk, Treaſurer of England, Charles, Earl of Worceſter, the King's Chamberlain, John Fineaux, Kt. * Of the Common Place. Firſt Edit.

An admirable Structure. J. S. Monum. Weſtmon.

This Chapel is of moſt admirable Architecture, and hath a moſt noble Roof. On either Side are the Figures of Saints and Martyrs, to the Number of an hundred and twenty; and round about, other leſſer Images, and antick Figures, excellently carved, and curiouſly engraven; in ſo much, that many, exerciſed in the Art of Painting, have copied them. The Workmanſhip of the Stalls and Wainſcot is alſo very curious. In the Windows every Light is compoſed of diapered and well painted Glaſs; each Pane containing either a red Roſe, the Badge and Cognizance of the Houſe of Lancaſter, or a text ℌ the initial Letter of the Royal Builder's Name: But eſpecially, this Chapel is adorned with the Furniture of many Sepulchral Monuments of Perſons of the moſt illuſtrious Quality, as well Kings and Queens, as others.]

Weſtminſter a Biſhop's See.

This Monaſtery being valued to diſpend by the Year 3470 l. &c. was ſurrendered to Henry the Eighth, in the Year 1539, and Benſon, then Abbot, was made the firſt Dean; and not long after, it was advanced to a Biſhops See, in the Year 1541. Thomas Thurleby, being the firſt and laſt Biſhop there, who, when he had impoveriſhed the Church, was tranſlated to Norwich in the Year 1550, the Fourth of Edward the Sixth, and from thence to Ely, in the Year 1554, the Second of Queen Mary. Richard Cox, Doctor in Divinity (late School-maſter to King Edward the Sixth) was made Dean of Weſtminſter, whom Queen Mary put out, and made Doctor Weſton Dean, until the Year 1556; and then he being removed from thence on the 21ſt of November, John Feckenham (late Dean of Paul's) was made Abbot of Weſtminſter, and took Poſſeſſion of the ſame, being inſtalled, and 14 Monks more received the Habit with him that Day, of the Order of St. Benedict: But the ſaid John Feckenham, with his Monks, enjoyed not that Place fully three Years: For in the Year 1559, in the Month of July, they were all put out; and Queen Elizabeth made the ſaid Monaſtery a Colledge, inſtituting there a Dean, twelve Prebends, a School-maſter, and Uſher, 40 Scholars, called commonly The Queen's Scholars, 12 Alms men, and ſo it was named The Collegiate Church of Weſtminſter, founded by Queen Elizabeth. Doctor Byll, one of her Majeſty's Chaplains, was made the firſt Dean [of that new Erection] after whom ſucceeded Mr. Doctor Gabriel Goodman, [who governed that Church forty Years, and after him Doctor Lancelot Andrews.]

The Government of this Collegiate Church. J. S.

The Order of the Government of this College, from the firſt Erection under Queen Elizabeth, begun by Dr. Byll, and continued by Dr. Goodman, with the Aſſent of the Chapter, was thus, as appeareth by divers Decrees recorded in the Chapter-Book.

The Service in the Church. Chapt. Book.

Daily Prayer in King Henry the Seventh's Chapel, at ſix of the Clock in the Morning, and a Lecture there read upon the Wedneſday and Friday. Daily Service ſung in the Chancel of the great Church, according to the Order of her Majeſty's Chapel, at uſual Hours; that is, upon the Sundays, from Eight to Eleven in the Forenoon; Upon Wedneſdays and Fridays, and other Holy Days, from Nine to Eleven; at other Days to begin at Nine until almoſt Eleven. And in the Afternoon, Service to begin at Four, and to continue until Five, or after Five.

The Dean to preach four Times in the Year, in his own Perſon, unleſs there be Cauſe to the contrary; that is, upon Chriſtmas-Day, Eaſter-Day, Whitſunday, and Alhallowday. Every Prebendary to preach in their own Perſons upon the Sundays in their Courſe of Reſidence, or elſe ſome other for them.

Solemn Communion miniſtred upon the great Feaſts, and every firſt Sunday of every Month: Where, by Order, there do communicate, the Dean and Prebendaries preſent, the Miniſters and four of the Clerks, and four of the Alms-Men.

Upon thoſe Days that the Dean is bound to preach, either he himſelf doth miniſter the Communion, or ſome one of the Prebendaries.

Twelve Almoſe Men of her Majeſty's Foundation are bound to be reſident, and in the Church daily at Service, according to her Majeſty's Order.

Every Sunday in the Year there is fourty Meſs of Meat to fourty poor Houſholds of the Pariſh, by the Overſight of the Chaunter of the Church; every Meſs being allowed, two in Fleſh or Fiſh, a Penny Loaf, and a Penny in Money.

Every Saturday the Dean, or one of the Prebendaries, whoſe Courſe is to be Reſident, after the ſeveral Morning Prayers be ended, do call before them the Miniſters of the Church, and the Clerks of the Quire, the twelve Alms-men, and whom other they ſee Cauſe. And then the Chaunter of the Church, in the Books of Perditions, doth ſhew the Default of ſuch as were abſent, or negligent in the Week before.

The Diet.

Dr. Byll did appoint two Square Tables and one Meſs to either of them; the one for himſelf, or whom he would call unto him. The ordinary Allowance for the ſame, for himſelf, and ten of his Men, was twenty eight Shillings. The Extraordinary, as Occaſion ſerved, he did farther allow. The other Table to ſerve the four Prebendaries, whoſe Courſe it was to be Reſident, and they to bear each one for himſelf and his Man, ſeven Shillings a Week: But ſhortly after, by Decree in Chapter, it was encreaſed; ſo that every Prebendary was to allow for himſelf and his Man, in his Courſe of Reſidence, weekly ten Shillings in toto; for four, fourty Shillings.

In Dr. Goodman's Time, for the Eaſe of Charge, he and the four Reſidentiaries joined together at one Table, having one full Meſs, and ſometimes more, as Occaſion required; he allowing thereunto his ordinary Portion, and the Reſidentiaries theirs.

The Detriments are born by the College, where there be ſome ſpecial Occaſion of ſome ſpecial Allowance.

The School-maſter, and ſuch as be Officers, are allowed at the ſame Table.

The Scholars do dine and ſup in the Hall by the Dean and Prebendaries, and be allowed according to their Rates, having a ſeveral Buttry, or Pantry, and Cellar by themſelves.

The Servants likewiſe in the Hall, having the Reverſion of the Maſters, and ſpecial Allowance for thoſe which are the College Servants, and neceſſary Officers, according to a certain Proportion.

Every Week commonly, upon the Saturday after Dinner, the Charges of the Week paſt is caſt by the Dean or Prebendaries that be preſent, and the Steward.

The weekly Charges of Maſters and Servants are kept in one Book. The Scholars Charges in a ſeveral Book by themſelves.

The Government, or Charge

The Dean hath a general Charge of all. The Sub-dean under the Dean, to overſee the good Order of the Church and Houſe. The Archdeacon hath to do with the Eccleſiaſtical Juriſdiction, and ſuch Cauſes, either by himſelf, or by the Official.

The Treaſurer, one in likewiſe of the Prebendaries receiveth of the Receiver what is convenient for all Charges.

The Steward of Houſhold, who is alſo a Prebendary, receiveth of the Treaſurer, or General Receiver, and layeth out for the neceſſary Charges of the Houſe, in Diet, or other Proviſions.

Under him is an Under Steward, and the Clerk of the Kitchin, and other Officers.

Once a Year, the General Receiver, Treaſurer, Steward, and all other Accomptants, and Under Officers, make their Accompt unto the Auditor.

The Grammar School.

There be two Teachers, the School-maſter and the Uſher of the School. The Scholars of the Grammar be in Number Fourty, elected both into the Houſe, and from the Houſe to the Univerſity, according to a ſpecial Statute from her Highneſs.

The Scholars, for their Prayers in Church, School, or Chamber, for their Teaching, for their Diet in the Hall, and lodging in one Chamber, and for all other Orders, are ſerved as they were in Dr. Byll's Time, and as was appointed by him in ſpecial Statutes, very like the Orders uſed in Eton and Wincheſter Schools.

The Song-School.

The Maſter of the Singing Boys hath his Houſe and other due Allowances for himſelf and ten Children, whom he is charged to bring up in Song, for the daily Service of the Church.

This was drawn up by the Hand of Goodman the Dean himſelf, for the Uſe of the Lord Treaſurer, Anno 1577, in Order to a Reformation of ſome Things in this College.

The Statutes for this College.

This Dean ſued to the Queen, for the better Government of this College, to confirm the Statutes, drawn and deviſed for it by Dr. Bill, the firſt Dean, and the Queen's High Almoner: Whereupon, ſhe ordered her Learned Council to peruſe thoſe Statutes, and make them ready to the Signature. And this was under the Hand of Dr. Ceſar, Maſter of Requeſt, who moved this Petition. Dr. Goodman likewiſe imparted the ſame Book of Statutes to the Archbiſhop of Canterbury, who peruſed them. He alſo ſignified his Meaning to proceed herein to the Prebendaries: But ſome of them ſeemed better to like the then preſent Government, which was partly according to thoſe Statutes, and partly ordered by Decrees and Diſcretion. But the Dean's Opinion was, That Statutes confirmed to govern, and to be governed by, was a more certain Rule of Government, and more beneficial to Poſterity. All this hath been tranſcribed by me from the ſaid Dean's own Writings.]

Kings and Queens crowned at Weſtminſter.

Of the Kings and Queens crowned in this Church, William, Sirnamed Conqueror, and Matilda his Wife, were the firſt. And ſince them, all other Kings and Queens of this Realm have been there crowned.

The Manner of the Coronation of the Kings and Queens of England. J. S.

The Coronation is always performed by ſome one of the Biſhops; moſt commonly by the Metropolitan himſelf, unleſs there be ſome Impediment. The Biſhop of Wincheſter crowned Queen Mary I, becauſe the Archbiſhop was at that Time caſt into Priſon. And the Biſhop of Carlile crowned Queen Elizabeth, the Archbiſhop of Canterbury being then dead. But the Venerable Archbiſhop Whitgift crowned King James I, and Queen Anne his Royal Conſort. Part of the Coronation was by him thus performed, (according to the ancient Cuſtom of England) after the Sermon, the King coming to the Altar, the Archbiſhop miniſtred theſe Queſtions, and the King anſwereth them.

Coronat King James I. printed 1685.

Archbiſhop. Sir, will you graunt and keep, and by your Oath perform to the People of England the Law and Cuſtoms to them granted by the Kings of England, your lawful and religious Predeceſſors; and namely, the Laws, Cuſtoms, and Franchiſes granted to the Clergy by the glorious King S. Edward your Predeceſſor, according to the Laws of God, the true Profeſſion of the Goſpel eſtabliſhed in this Kingdom, agreeable to the Prerogative of the Kings thereof, and the ancient Cuſtom of this Realm?

King. I grant and promiſe to keep them.

Archb. Sir, will you keep Peace and godly Agreement, according to your Power, both to God, the Holy Church, the Clergy, and the People?

King. I will keep it.

Archb. Sir, will you, to your Power, cauſe Law, Juſtice, and Diſcretion, in Mercy and Truth, to be executed according to your Judgment?

King. I will.

Archb. Sir, Will you grant to hold and keep the Laws and rightful Cuſtoms which the Commonalty of this your Kingdom have? And will you defend and keep them in the Honour of God, as much as in you lyeth?

King. I grant and promiſe ſo to do.

Then one of the Biſhops reads this Paſſage to the King: Our Lord and King, we beſeech you to pardon, and to grant, and to keep unto us, and to the Churches committed to our Charge, all Canonical Privileges, and do Law and Juſtice; and that you will protect and defend us, as every good King to his Kingdoms ought to be Protector and Defender of the Biſhops, and the Churches under their Government.

The King anſwereth, With a willing and devout Heart I promiſe and grant my Pardon: And I will preſerve and maintain to you, and the Churches committed to your Charge, all Canonical Privileges, and do Law and Juſtice: And that I will be your Protector and Defender to my Power, by the Aſſiſtance of God; as every good King, in his Kingdom, in right ought to protect and defend the Biſhops and Churches under their Government.

Then the King aroſe, and was led to the Communion-Table; where he taketh a ſolemn Oath, in the Sight of all the People, to preſerve all the Premiſes, and laying his Hand upon the Bible, ſaith, The Things which I have here promiſed, I ſhall perform and keep. So help me God, and the Contents of this Book. After this, the King returneth to his Chair of State again.

Kings and Queens crowned at Weſtminſter.

The Venerable Chair wherein they are wont to be crowned and inaugurated, ſtands in the Chapel of the Kings, called the Chapel of St. Edward. It appears extremely ancient, both in regard of its Faſhion and Materials. It is made of ſolid hard Wood, with Back and Sides of the ſame, ſupported by four Lions curiouſly carved, inſtead of Feet; heretofore fairly painted and gilt, but now much defaced. Under the Seat is the ſo much famed Stone, whereon the Patriarch Jacob is ſaid to have laid his Head in the Plain of Luz. It is of a blewiſh Steel Colour, mix'd with ſome Eyes of Red; the Form triangular, rather than any other, and being broken, reſembles a Pebble. Our Hiſtories ſay, that Edward the Firſt, Ann. 1297, among other Spoils taken in Scotland, brought this Chair thence, which was the ancient Throne of their Kings, with their Crown and Sceptre, and offered them here at the Shrine of King Edward the Confeſſor.

NOW, to ſet down at large the Inſcriptions engraven upon theſe numerous Monuments and flat Stones, would ſwell too much: And therefore, I refer him, that is minded to read them to a Book writ by one H. K. intitled, Monumenta Weſtmonaſterienſia, where he may have them at full Length; and likewiſe the ſeveral Coats of Arms and Shields each Perſon bore; and beſides, an exact Account of the Form, Architecture, and Sumptuouſneſs of theſe Monuments: Yet however, here ſhall follow the Inſcriptions upon many of the Kings, and Queens, and other right noble Perſons before mentioned, as well as of ſome others.]

Firſt, SEBERT, of the Eaſt Saxons and Middle Saxons, that is, Eſſex and Middleſex, King, the Son of Sledde, by Ricula, Siſter to Ethelbert, King of Kent, firſt King of the Eaſt Saxons, by the Perſuaſion of Ethelbert, received and embraced the Chriſtian Faith, and the Church of Weſtminſter (which then was termed Thorney) erected to bleſſed St. Peter; wherein, with his Wife Athelgoda, he lyeth buried. He dyed the laſt Day of July, in the Year of our Redemption 616. And 691 Years after, to wit, 1307, the Monks of Weſtminſter tranſlated his Body out of the old Church into the new King's Chapel, and placed it there in a Sepulchre of Stone at the South Part of the Lords Table, with this Epitaph:

Labilitas, Brevitas mundanæ Proſperitatis,
Cælica præmia, Gloria, Gaudia danda beatis,
SEBERTUM certum jure dedere ſatis.
Hic Rex Chriſticola verax fuit hac Regione,
Qui nunc Cælicola gaudet mercede Coronæ.
Rex humilis, docilis, ſcius & pius, inclytus ille,
Sollicitè, nitidè, tacitè, placitè (bone Chriſte)
Vult ſervire tibi, perficiendo ſibi.
Ornat mores, ſpernit flores, lucis avaræ
Gliſcens multum, Chriſti cultum lætificare;
Eccleſiam nimiam nimio ſtudio fabricavit;
Hæc illæſa manus quæ fundamenta locavit.

Hic ſeptingentis annis terrâ cumulatus,
Chriſti clementis inſtinctibus inde levatus.
Iſto ſub lapide nunc jacet ipſe, vide.
Atque domum Chriſto, quia mundo fecit in iſto,
Nunc pro mercede cœli requieſcit in æde.
Reſpice mortalis, promiſſio ſit tibi talis:
Accipies ſi des, nil capies niſi des.
Es Chriſto qualis, Chriſtus erit tibi talis.
Dapſilis eſto ſibi, largus eritque tibi.
Effectus non affectus, ſi reddere poſſis,
Debet cenſeri; ſi nihil reddere poſſis,
Tunc bonus affectus pro facto debet haberi.
Sicut de lignis per aquam depellitur ignis;
Sic mala commiſſa ſiunt donando remiſſa.
Reddet ad uſuram quod quis dat nomine Chriſti,
Nam vitam puram pro parvo dat Deus iſti.

The forenamed King Sebert dyed the laſt Day of July, Anno Domini 616: Whoſe Wife, named Æthelgoda, cloſed up her lateſt Day of Life before the ſaid Sebert, viz. the 13th Day of September, Anno Domini 615: And with her Huſband Sebert (as already we have ſaid) lyeth in this Church, which himſelf founded, in a Tomb of Lead, honourably buried.

Upon the Wall by this Tomb, are theſe Verſes painted:

Hic Rex Seberte plauſus, mihi condita per te
Hæc loca luſtravi, demum luſtrando dicavi.

He lyeth alſo buried in the ſaid Chapel appointed for Kings.

Edward, King of England, for his ſingular Piety numbred among the Confeſſors, was the Son of King Æthelred. The annual Penſion of four thouſand Pound, called Dangelt, he remitted to the Engliſh Legates (as Matth. Weſt. writeth.) He ſent to Rome to Pope Damaſus, to be abſolved of a Vow which he had promiſed by a Journey to Rome, if he obtained his Paternal Kingdom: Which Pope abſolving his ſaid Vow, wrote back unto him, That the Expences prepared for his Travel he ſhould beſtow upon the Poor; and a Monaſtery (in the Honour of St. Peter) he ſhould either newly build, or repair ſome old one. The Legates being returned, Ulfinus, ſometime a Monk, perſwading, and all the Council of the Kingdom approving, he repaired Weſtminſter again. Weſtm.* avoucheth) did not move this Edith by Marriage Rites, to know the Manners of Men. But whether in Hatred to her Father, or Love to Chaſtity he did it, it remaineth uncertain. Some do affirm, that this holy King was not willing to beget any Heirs, that ſhould ſucceed him out of a treacherous Race.

She is buried at the South Side of St. Edward's Tomb in the ſame Chapel.

Matilda, Queen of England, Daughter to Malcolme, King of Scots, and Wife to King Henry the Firſt, brought unto him Children, William, Richard, and Mary, which periſhed by Shipwreck; and Maude Empreſs, who was Wife to Henry the Fifth, Cæſar Auguſtus, and Mother to King Henry the Second. Henry the Third, King of England, &c. Son of King John, by Iſabell, Daughter to the Earl of Angoleſme, a very pious Prince, and moſt highly commended for his Vertues. In An. 1220, he began the new Work of the Chapel of our bleſſed Lady at Weſtminſter, and himſelf laid the firſt Stone. And in An. 1245 after, the Conventual Church of B. Peter the greater, he pulled down, and new builded it; and on the Day of the Apoſtles Peter and Paul, he cauſed it to be fully and decently built and enlarged. He gave alſo to the ſaid Church very Royal Gifts of Copes, Jewels, and rich Veſſels, that it might equal in Riches all the Ciſalpine Churches. He dyed, An. 1273. 11 Kalend, Decem. when he had reigned fifty ſix Years and eighteen Days: Upon his Tomb are theſe Verſes:

Reddet ei munus qui regnat trinus & unus,
Tertius Henricus eſt templi conditor hujus.
Dulce Bellum inexpertis.

The Friend of Pity and Almſdeed,

Who this Church brake, and after his Meed,
Again renewed into this fair Building;

He yield his Meed that Lord of Deity,
That, as one God, reigneth in Perſons three.

He lyeth in a Marble Tomb at his Father's Head in the ſame Chapel.

* Leon.

Mors eſt mœſta nimis, magnos quæ jungit in imis,
Maxima Mors minimis, conjungens ultima primis.
Nullus in Orbe fuit homo vivens, nec valet eſſe,
Qui non morte ruit; eſt hinc exire neceſſe.
Nobilis & fortis, tibi tu confidere noli,
Omnia ſunt mortis, ſibi ſubdit ſingula ſoli.
De mundi medio Magnum mors impia movit,
Anglia præ tedio ſatis anxia plangere novit:
Corruit Edwardus vario veneratus honore.
Rex nuper ut Nardus fragrans virtutis odore,
Corde Leopardus, invictus & abſque pavore,
Ad rixam tardus, diſcretus & eucharis ore.
Viribus Armorum quaſi Gigas ardua geſſit,
Collo ſuperborum prudens per prælia preſſit,
Inter Flandrenſes fortuna ſibi bene favit,
Ut quoque Wallenſes & Scotos ſuppeditavit,
Rex bonus abſque pari ſtrenue ſua regna regebat:
Quod natura dare potuit bonitatis habebat,
Actio juſtitiæ, pax regni, ſanctio legis,
Et fuga nequitiæ premunt præcordia Regis.
Gloria tota ruit, Regem capit hæc modo foſſa,
Rex quandoque fuit, nunc nil niſi pulvis & oſſa.
Filius ipſe Dei quem corde colebat, & ore,
Gaudia fecit ei nullo permiſto dolore.

Dum vixit Rex, & valuit ſua magna poteſtas
Fraus latuit, Pax magna fuit, regnavit Honeſtas.

Edwardus primus Scotorum malleus hic eſt.
Pactum ſerva.

Death is too doleful which doth join
The higheſt Eſtate full low;
Which coupleth greateſt Things with leaſt,
And laſt with firſt alſo.

No Man hath been in World alive,
Nor any may there be;
Which can escape the Dint of Death,
Needs hence depart must we.
O noble and victorious Man,
Trust not unto thy Strength;
For all are subject unto Death,
And all must hence at length.
Most cruel Fate from worldly Stage
Hath wrest a worthy Wight;
For whom all England mourned loud,
To see his doleful Plight.
Edward is dead, which was adorn'd
With divers Graces here:
A King, or fragrant Nardus Hight,
A gracious princely Peer.
In Heart the which was Lybard like,
Right puissant, void of Fear,
Most slow to Strife, discreet and wise,
And gracious every where.
In Arms a Gyant fierce and fell,
Attempting famous Facts:
Most prudent, did subdue the Proud
By feat of Martial Acts.
In Flanders Fortune gave to him
By Lot right good Success;
In Wales he won; the Scottish Rout
With Arms he did suppress.
This King, without his Like alive
Did firmly guide his Land:
And what good Nature could conceive,
He had it plight at Hand.
He was in Justice, and in Peace
Excelling: Laws took Place,
Desire to chase all wicked Works,
Did hold this King's good Grace.
He now doth ly entombed here,
Which furthered each good Thing:
Now, Nought he is but Dust and Bones,
Which was a worthy King.
The very SON of GOD, whom erst
This King did love right deere:
Hath given to him immortal Bless,
For his good Living here.

Otherwise.

Whil'st liv'd this King, by him all Things
Were in most goodly Plight:
Fraud lay hid, great Peace was kept,
And Honesty had Might.

Her Image lyeth on the Tomb in Brass, richly gilded in the same Chapel.

Eleanora, Queen of England, first Wife of Edward the First, the only Daughter to Ferdinand the Third, King of Castile and Lyons, by Joan his second Wife, became Heir to Guydo, Earl of Ponthieu. Cui Pater Henricus tertius Anglus erat.
Hanc ille uxorem gnato petit: Domine Princeps
Legati munus suscepit ipse bono.
Alfonso fratri placuit fœlix Hymenæus,
Germanam Edwardo nec sine dote dedit,
Dos præclara fuit, nec tali indigna marito,
Pontino Princeps munere dives erat.
Fœmina consilio prudens, pia, prole beata,
Auxit amicitiis, auxit honore virum.
Disce mori.

Queen Eleanor is here interr'd,
A worthy Noble Dame:
Sister unto the Spanish King,
Of Royal Blood and Fame.
King Edward's Wife, first of that Name,
And Prince of Wales by Right;
Whose Father Henry, just the Third,
Was sure an English Wight:
Who crav'd her Wife unto his Son:
The Prince himself did go
On that Embassage luckily,
As Chief, with many moe.
This Knot of linked Marriage,
Her Brother Alphonse lik'd,
And so 'tween Sister and this Prince,
The Marriage up was strik'd:
The Dowry rich and Royal was,
For such a Prince most meet;
For Ponthieu was the Marriage Gift,
A Dowry rich and great.
A Woman both in Counsel wise,
Religious, fruitful, meek:
Who did encrease her Husbands friends,
And larg'd his Honour eke.

The Arms and Title of France he added to his own: And when (like a triumphant Monarch) he had reigned fifty Years, he yielded to the Stroke of Death in Ann. 1377. And these Verses are annexed by the Tomb.

Hic decus Anglorum, flos Regum præteritorum,
Forma futurorum, Rex clemens, pax populorum,
Tertius Edwardus: regni complens Jubilæum,
Invictus Pardus, pollens bellis Machabeus,
Prosperè dum vixit regnum pietate revixit,
Armipotens rexit: jam Cœlo Cœlice Rex sit
Tertius Edwardus, fama super æthera notus.

Of all before passed, and a Mirror to them shall sue;
A merciful King, of Peace Conservator;
The Third Edward, the Death of whom may rue
All Englishmen; for he by Knighthood due
Was Libard invict, and by feat Martial,
To worthy Machabe, in Vertue peregal.

Henry the Fifth, King of England, Son of Henry the Fourth. Vanquiſhed the French in many Battles, and at length was created Regent of France. He took to Wife Katharine, Daughter to Charles the Sixth. He dyed Anno Dom. 1422: And theſe Verſes are fixed there in Memory of him.

Gallorum maſtix jacet hic Henricus in urna.
Domat omnia virtus.
Pulchra virumque ſuum ſociat tandem Katharina.
Otium fuge.

O merciful God, what a Prince was this,
Which his ſhort Time in Martial Acts ſpent.
In Honour of Conqueſt, that Wonder to me it is,
How he might compaſs ſuch Deeds excellent.
And yet for that his Mind nothing detent,
All ghoſtly Counſel for his Soul to provide,*
Out of this World, ere he fatally ſhould ſlide.

* Health.

So though I had Tully his Eloquence,
Or of Seneca the grave Morality,
Or of Solomon the perfect Sapience,
Or the ſweet Ditties of Dame Calliope;
Yet might I not in Proſe or other Dittie,
Accordingly advance this Prince his Fame,
Or with due Honour to enhaunce the ſame.

Conſidering his Acts, whereof Parcell appeare
In this rude Worke, with many more left out:
The Time alſo was leſſe than ten Yeare,
That he ſo ſhortly brought all Things about,
By divine Grace furthered no Doubt:*
That mighty† Lord he holpe his ghoſtly Knight;
With Grace and Honour to paſſe this World's Fight.

* Out of † mightful

And to have Reward double and condigne,
And firſt for martiall Acts by him done,
To be advanc'd amongſt the Worthies nine,
And for his Vertue us'd by him eftſoone,
With many good Deeds which he on Earth had done.
Above the Hierarchies, he is (I truſt) now ſtall'd,
That was on Earth the King of Kings call'd.

Katharine Valois, Daughter to Charles the Sixth, King of France, and Wife to Henry the Fifth. Who (he being dead) took in Marriage Owen Teudor, borne in Wales, his Race deſcending from King Cadwallader. Of her he begot Edmund Earl of Richmond, Jaſper Duke of Bedford, and another that took on him a Monaſtical Habit at Weſtminſter. She dyed Anno 1437, and was buried by King Henry the Fifth.

Her Body now lyeth in a ſmall Place by her Huſband unburied.

Hic Katharina jacet, Francorum Filia Regis,
Hæres & Regni (Carole Sexte) tui,
Henrici Quinti thalamo bis læta jugali,
Nam ſic vir duplici clarus honore fuit:
Jure ſuo Anglorum, Katharinæ jure triumphans
Francorum obtinuit jus, decus imperii.
Grata venit lætis felix Regina Britannis,
Perque Dies celebrant quattuor ore Deum.
Edidit Henricum gemibunda puerpera Regem,
Cujus in Imperio Francus & Anglus erat.
Non ſibi nec Regno felici Sidere natum,
Sed Patri & Matri Religione parem.
Poſt ex Oweno Tiddero tertia proles,
Nobilis Edmundus te, Katharina, beat:
Septimus Henricus quo non præſtantior alter,
Filius Edmundi, gemma Britannia fuit:
Felix Uxor ergo, mater, ter filia felix,*
Aſt Avia hæc felix terque quaterque fuit.
Otium fuge.

* Ergo Uxor.

Here lies Queen Katharine clos'd in Grave,
  The French King's Daughter fair,
And of thy Kingdom, (Charles the Sixth)
  The true redoubted Heir.
Twice joyful Wife in Marriage match'd
  To Henry Fifth by Name:

Becauſe through her he nobled was,
And ſhin'd in double Fame.
The King of England by Deſcent,
And by Queen Katharine's Right;
The Realm of France he did enjoy,
Triumphant King of Might.
A happy Queen to Engliſhmen,
She came right grateful here;
And four Days Space they honoured God,
With Mouth and reverend Fear.
Henry the Sixth this Queen brought forth,
In painful Labour's Plight;
In whoſe Empire a Frenchman was,
And eke an Engliſh Wight.
Under no lucky Planet borne Unto himſelf nor Throne:
But equal with his Parents both,
In pure Religion.
Of Owen Tidder after this,
Thy next Son Edmund was,
O Katharine, a renowned Prince,
That did in Glory paſs.
Henry the Seventh, a Britain Pearl,
A Gemme of England's Joy;
A peerleſs Prince was Edmund's Son,
A good and gracious Roy:
Therefore a happy Wife this was,
A happy Mother pure;
Thrice happy Child; but Grandame, ſhe
More than thrice happy ſure.

His own and his Wife's Figures are in gilt Braſs, curiouſly done upon the Tomb.

RICHARD the Second, of England and France King, Lord of Ireland, Son to Edward Prince of Wales, by Joane Daughter to the Earl of Kent. He made new the Hall at Weſtminſter; and when he had reigned 22 Years, Anno Dom. 1399, he was bereaved of his Kingdom by Henry of Lancaſter, and (not long after) murdered, and buried at Langley, among the Dominicans. Afterward, Anno 1414, (as Thomas Walſingham ſaith) his Body was brought to Weſtminſter, and laid in a Royal Tomb, builded of guilded Braſs, at the great Charges of King Henry the Fifth, with theſe Verſes added:

Prudens & mundus Richardus jure Secundus,
Per Fatum victus, jacet hic ſub marmore Pictus:
Verax ſermone fuit & plenus ratione:
Corpore procerus, animo prudens ut Homerus:
Eccleſiæ favit, elatos ſuppeditavit,
Quemvis proſtravit regalia qui violavit.
Obruit hæreticos, & eorum ſtravit amicos:
O Clemens Chriſte, tibi devotus fuit iſte,
Votis Baptiſtæ ſalves quem protulit iſte
Hic jacet immiti conſumptus morte Richardus.
Fuiſſe Felicem miſerrimum.

Perfect and prudent Richard, by Right the Second,
Vanquiſhed by Fortune, lyes here now graven in Stone:
True of his Word, and thereto well reſound,
Seemly in Perſon, and like to Homer as one,
In worldly Prudence, and ever the Church in one
Upheld and favoured, and caſting the Proud to Ground,
And all that would his Royal Eſtate confound.
It is moſt miſerable to have been happy.

She lyeth in the ſame Tomb with the King her Huſband.

Anne Queen of England, firſt Wife to Richard the Second, Daughter to Wenceſlaus King of Bohemia, and Emperor of the Germans, dyed Anno 1394, and is buried at Weſtminſter, having this Epitaph.

Sub petra lata nunc Anna jacet tumulata,
Dum vixit mundo Richardo nupta ſecundo,
Chriſto devota fuit hæc, facilis bene nota,
Pauperibus prona ſemper ſua reddere bona.

Cujus in adventu ludi, ſpectacula fiunt,
Regali pompa regia virgo venit.
Sed bona ſunt hominum tenui pendentia filo,

Hæc Regina fuit magna de ſtirpe Quiritum,
Omnibus illa fuit femina chara viris.
Larga, coloratis virtutum ſplendida gemmis:
Nunquam læta parens, nam ſine prole jacet.
Forma fragilis.

Queen Anne, Richard the Second's Wife,

Of Son in Law full glad:

And that large Empire had.
Winceſlaus ſo called by Name,
Who thus in joyful Plight,
Sent her to London, guarded well
With valiant Men of Might.
Againſt whoſe Coming Plays were made,
And Sights and Shows were ſeen;
With Princely Pomp to gratify
This noble Virgin Queen.
But all Mens Treaſures laſt not long,
They hang but on a Twine,
Or ſingle Thread; Death, Kings and Queens,
Doth all catch up in fine.
This Queen was of the Royal Race
Of Romans by deſcent;
Of all belov'd, moſt dear to moſt,
In Honour relucent.
Full liberal and bountiful,
Adorn'd with Virtues rare;
No Child ſhe had, but iſſueleſs,
She lies without ſuch Care.
Beauty is frail.

Upon the Remove of her Body from Richmond (where ſhe dyed) to Whitehall, by Water, theſe Lines were written:

The Queen was brought by Water to Whitehall,
At every Stroke the Oars Tears let fall.
More clung about the Barge, Fiſh under Water,
Wept out their Eyes of Pearl, and ſwam blind after.
I think the Barge-Men might, with eaſier Thighs,
Have row'd her thither in her Peoples Eyes :
For howſoever, thus much my Thoughts have ſcann'd,
Sh'ad come by Water, had ſhe come by Land.

Mary Queen of Scots, and Dowager of France : Her Body was tranſlated from Peterborough to Weſtminſter, and on her Tomb are theſe Inſcriptions :

King James the Firſt lyeth here interred, but hath no Monument; but in Memory of him take this following Elegy:

Can Chriſtendom's great Monarch ſink away
Thus ſilently into a Bed of Clay?
Can ſuch a Monarch die, and be not have
An Earthquake at the leaſt to ope his Grave?
Impartial Fates! methinks all Princes then,
Tho' they liv'd Gods, yet muſt they die like Men:
And the ſame Paſſing-Bell which toll'd for them,
Did ring (but now) the Beggars Requiem.
When ſuch a Soul was from the Earth bereaven,
Methinks there ſhould be Triumph made in Heaven:
The Stars ſhould run at Tilt at his Deceaſe,
To welcome him into the Place of Peace;
Who whilſt he liv'd, in Peace liv'd, and did ſtrive (Being in Peace) to keep Peace ſtill alive.

R. Here lyes (expecting the ſecond Coming of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt) the Body of Edmund Spencer, the Prince of Poets in his Time. Whoſe divine Spirit needs no other Witneſs than his Works which he left behind him. He was born in London in the Year ——, and dyed in the Year 1596.

H. K. in his Monumenta Weſtmonaſt. fills up this Vacancy of the Year of his Birth, and makes it to be 1510: But this does not well comport with the Latin Inſcription, that he dyed morte immatura, i. e. an immature Death, and yet lived to near 90 Years.

R. This Tomb was made 1631, and ſtands near the South Door in Weſtminſter.

Michael Draiton, Eſquire, a memorable Poet of this Age, exchanged his Laurel for a Crown of Glory, Anno Dom. 1631.

Do, pious Marble, let thy Readers know,
What they, and what their Children owe
To Draiton's Name, whoſe ſacred Duſt
We recommend unto thy Truſt:
Protect his Memory, and preſerve his Story,
Remain a laſting Monument of his Glory:
And when thy Ruins ſhall diſclaim,
To be the Treaſurer of his Name;
His Name, that cannot fade, ſhall be
An everlaſting Monument to thee.

A Monument all of pure Gold were too little for a Prince of ſuch high Hope and Merit.

Although that famous and worthy HENRY, eldeſt Son to our dear Sovereign Lord King JAMES, hath as yet no Tomb or Monument made for him there in Weſtminſter, but liveth ſtill in the Love and Memory of all true Engliſh Hearts; yet this excellent Epitaph was purpoſely made for him.

Reader, Wonder think it none,
To hear me ſpeak, that am a Stone.
Here is ſhrin'd Celeſtial Duſt,
And I keep it but in Truſt;
Should I not my Treaſure tell,
Wonder then thou might'ſt as well,
How this Stone could chuſe but break,
If it had not learn'd to ſpeak.
Hence amaz'd, and aſk not me,
Whoſe thoſe Sacred Aſhes be.
Purpoſely it is conceal'd;
For, if that ſhould be reveal'd,
All that read, would by and by,
Melt themſelves to Tears, and dye.

His Monument hath had Violence offered it by rude Hands. He was a great Writer, hearty in King Charles the Firſt's Intereſt, and a Sufferer for him. The Inſcription on his Monument was made by his Friend Dr. Earl, Dean of this Church, afterwards Biſhop of Saliſbury.

The Abby Church Sanctuary.

Sanctuary within the Precinct.

This Church hath had great Privelege of Sanctuary within the Precinct thereof; to wit, the Church, Church Yard, and Cloſe, &c. From whence it hath not been lawful for any Prince, or other, to take any Perſon that fled thither for any Cauſe. Which Privilege was firſt granted by Sebert King of the Eaſt Saxons, ſince encreaſed by Edgar King of the Weſt Saxons, renewed and confirmed by King Edward the Confeſſor; as appeareth by this his Charter following.

Edward the Confeſſor's Charter for this Church's Privilege of Sanctuary.

‘EDWARD, by the Grace of God, King of Engliſhmen; I make it to be known to all Generations of the World after me, that by ſpecial Commandment of our Holy Father Pope Leo, I have renewed and honoured the holy Church of the Bleſſed Apoſtle St. Peter, of Weſtminſter; and I order and eſtabliſh for ever, that what Perſon, of what Condition or Eſtate ſoever he be, from whenceſoever he come, or for what Offence or Cauſe it be, either for his Refuge into the ſaid Holy Place, he be aſſured of his Life, Liberty, and Limbs. And over this, I forbid under Pain of everlaſting Damnation, that no Miniſter of mine, or of my Succeſſors, intermeddle them with any the Goods, Lands, or Poſſeſſions of the ſaid Perſons, taking the ſaid Sanctuary. For I have taken their Goods and Livelode into my ſpecial Protection. And therefore I grant to every each of them, in as much as my terreſtrial Power may ſuffice, all manner Freedom of joyous Liberty. And whoſoever preſumes, or doth contrary to this my Grant, I will he loſe his Name, Worſhip, Dignity, and Power; and that, with the great Traitor Judas, that betrayed our Saviour, he be in the everlaſting Fire of Hell. And I will and ordain, that this my Grant endure as long as there remaineth in England either Love or Dread of Chriſtian Name.

More of this Sanctuary ye may read in our Hiſtories, and alſo in the Statute of Henry the Eighth, the 32d Year.

Arreſts ſometimes in the Sanctuary. J. S.

But yet ſometimes, and in ſome Caſes, thoſe that had taken Sanctuary there were diſturbed; as alſo were ſuch as fled for Sanctuary in St. Martins le grand in London, belonging to the Church of Weſtminſter. But the Abbot, when ſuch a Thing happened, uſed to make heavy Complaint thereof. The Abbot, the 29th of Henry the Sixth, exhibited a Bill againſt the Sheriffs of London, for arreſting and drawing out with Force, a privileged Perſon out of St. Martins le Grand, belonging to the Abbey.

Debtors fled thither for Sanctuary.

One Sort of Perſons here ſheltered from ancient Time, were ſuch as were inſolvent, and intended to fail; and not being able to ſatisfy their Creditors, uſed to ſave themſelves from Arreſts, by flying hither for Sanctuary: And ſo taking Time to agree with their Creditors; yet by way of Confeſſion, and in Diſcharge of their Conſcience, diſcovering their Condition to ſome ſpiritual Man firſt, and leaving in his Hands what Goods they had, to be among the ſaid Creditors divided and diſtributed for their Debts. Thus did one R. A. Haberdaſher, in the Reign of Henry the Seventh, leaving certain Quantities of Cloth in the Poſſeſſion of John Foſter Archdeacon of London, in Truſt for him. But he, out of a coveteous Mind, thought to make Advantage thereby, and ſo forced this R. A. to complain againſt him in Chancery. The Petition was as follows:

To the mooſt reverent Fader in God, my Lord of Canterberry, [then Lord Chancellor of England.]

A Petition to the Ld Chancellor from one in the Sanctuary. Old Cuſt.

‘MEkely beſeecheth your good and gracyous Lordſhip, tendyrly to conſydre the humble Complayne, and alſo the trew Intent of me R A. your dayly and unfeyned Bedman, now abeyding in the Seyntwary of Weſtmynſter. That foraſmooche as twelve Moneths paſt, I conſydered well that by the mean of Mony, and dyvers gret Loſſes, I was come to that Decay, that I hadde not whereof to pay my Dettys; wherfore, in dyſchargynge of my Conſcyence, I dyſcloſed my Mynde in that behalve unto Mayſter Johan. Foſter, Archdeken of London, and delyvered to him bothe my Teſtement, and Inventory of al my Goodys and Dettys; and alſo delyvered unto hym XL fyne Cloths, and XII Clothes engreyned; wyllyng and deſyring hym as myne Executour and Ordynary, to do therein as he wolde yf I were dede; and ſpecyally, that as wel the ſayd Clothes, as al other Goodys that I had in Erth, myght be retayled, devyded and dyſtrybuted among my Credytors, yf they wolde be ſo contented. And for the executyon of the ſame, I valued my greyned Clothes at xv s. the Yarde, and myne other fyne Clothes at xii s. the Yarde, ſoo as my ſaid Creditours wolde have been wel content. From the which my trew Entent and Purpoſe the ſaid Mayſter Foſter many Ways declyned, and varyeth, kepyng ſtyl my ſayed Goodys in his Handes, and nother wyll delyver the ſayde Goodys to me, or to any other indyfferent Man, to the Entent aforeſayd, nor yet unto my Credytours after the Rate; but by many crafty and ſubtyl Meanes perſuadyth, as wel to me as to myn ſayd Creditours, in ſuch [Sort] as he entended to have gret Lucre and Advantage by hys Occupacyon in this Behave. And rather than he wyll delyver my ſayd Goodys unto any other Man to th'Entent aforeſaid, he ſayd to me in gret Fere and Jeoperdy, that he wyl after hys own Wyll and Pleſure pay ſome of my Credytours theyr hole Dettes, though the Remenaunt be never payd; or elles that he wyll cauſe or ſuffer the ſayd Goodys to be attached in hys Hands by ſuche of my Credytours as he favoureth; and hath gret Rewards promiſed unto hym on theyr Behalve.

‘Wherfor, I beſeche your good and gracyous Lordſhyp, in my moſt humble and herty Wyſe, to ſende a Commaundement unto the ſayd Mayſter Foſter, by your Letter, to delyver the ſayd Goodys unto myſelf, or otherwiſe into the Hands of ſuch one, as by the Favour and Autorite of your Lordſhyp, may dyſpoſe them amonge my ſayd Credytours, as ſhall be thought beſt to the Pleaſure of God, and mooſt accordyng to ryght and good Conſcyence.

One eſcapes to the Sanctuary with another Man's Goods.

In the Month of December 1558, Fecknam being then Abbot of Weſtminſter, one Geffray Raine-

man brought into the Sanctuary nine Cloths, the Owner whereof was Tho. Bradley Clothier. Whereupon a Letter was ſent from the Lords of the Council to the ſaid Abbot, to deliver thoſe Cloths, taking firſt Bonds of him, to be anſwerable to all ſuch as ſhould make Claim by Order of the Laws to the ſaid Cloths.

What follow'd upon taking one away from Sanctuary.

This Privilege of Sanctuary continued. For Hampton and Whitacre, in Queen Elizabeth's Reign, betook themſelves here for Debt. Whence a Caſe relating to this Sanctuary happened in the Eleventh of Queen Elizabeth, in the Star Chamber. And it being thence referred to the Lord Dyer, and Juſtice Southcote, it was ſhown, in behalf of their Privelege of Sanctuary, how two Sheriffs of London, for taking a Man away out of the Sanctuary at St. Martins le Grand, which belonged to Weſtminſter, were grievouſly fined in the Star Chamber, in the Time of Henry the Sixth.

But that bad Men might not ſhelter themſelves here, to defraud their Creditors, it was thought convenient, towards the Beginning of Queen Elizabeth's Reign, to adminiſter an Oath to ſuch as ſhould claim the Sanctuary at Weſtminſter, and to require certain Conditions upon their Admittance.

The Oath of ſuch as took Sanctuary at Weſtminſter.

The Oath was to this Tenor: ‘ Firſt, that ‘ they ſhould ſwear, not to crave or claim the ſaid ‘ Privilege or Sanctuary, to defraud or deceive ‘ any manner of Perſon thereby of his Goods, ‘ Money or Debts willingly; but only for Safe‑‘ guard of their own Bodies, where they were ‘ not able preſently to pay it.

‘ Item, That they ſhould make a true Decla‑‘ ration of all ſuch Sum or Sums of Money as ‘ they did juſtly owe to any Perſon or Perſons, ‘ with the Perſons Names to whom they were ‘ indebted: And what Goods, Chattels, Wares, ‘ Money, or Debts they had to ſatisfy their Cre‑‘ ditors with; and alſo to declare by what Means ‘ they were behind Hand.

‘ Item, Whereas they were not able with all ‘ they could make preſently, to pay their Cre‑‘ ditors, that they ſhould endeavour themſelves ‘ to travel, by all Means, to ſatisfy them as ‘ ſoon as they could poſſible.

‘ Item, That they ſhould reſort and be preſent ‘ in the Collegiate Church, both at Morning ‘ and Evening Prayer, to ſerve God.

‘ Item, That they ſhould behave themſelves ‘ honeſtly and quietly; and to eſchew all ſu‑‘ ſpected Houſes, unlawful Games, all banqueting ‘ and riotous evil Company.

‘ Item, That they ſhould wear no Weapon; ‘ nor be out of their Lodgings before the Sun ‘ riſing in the Morning, nor after the going down ‘ thereof at Night: Nor that any of them ‘ ſhould depart out of the Precinct of the San‑‘ ctuary, without Licenſe of the Dean of Weſtminſter for the Time being, if ſo he were pre‑‘ ſent; or of the Arch-deacon there for the Time ‘ being, if the Dean were abſent.

‘ Item, That they ſhould be obedient to Mr. ‘ Dean, to the Arch-deacon, and to other Offi‑‘ cers there, during their Abode there.

‘ Item, That they ſhould ſwear, that if they ‘ ſhould infringe or break any of the Articles ‘ above mentioned, or ſhould be proved to have ‘ made an untrue Certificate touching the Pre‑‘ miſſes; then they ſhould Claim no Privilege of ‘ Sanctuary, notwithſtanding any their Admiſ‑‘ ſion thereunto.

The Order of their Admiſſion.

‘ Firſt, the Archdeacon was to declare to them, ‘ what a Danger it was before God to defraud ‘ any Man wittingly of his Goods; the which ‘ was againſt his Laws, which willed every Man ‘ to pay, ſaying, Reddite omnibus, i. e. Render to ‘ all Men. And alſo againſt the Law of Nature, ‘ which ſaith, Hoc facias alteri, &c. i. e. Do that ‘ to another, which you would have another do ‘ to you. And what a Rebuke it was to any ‘ Man to claim Sanctuary, and a Diſcredit to his ‘ Occupying for ever. And to adviſe him there‑‘ fore to remember theſe Premiſes, and to return ‘ before he were known openly.

‘ Then after this, Knowledge ſhould be given ‘ to their Creditors of them that were in the ſaid ‘ Sanctuary. Or elſe, if they came unſent for, ‘ immediately the ſaid Sanctuary-men ſhould be ‘ called before the ſaid Dean and Archdeacon, to ‘ hear their Demands. And if any of the ſaid ‘ Creditors could certainly prove, that the ſaid ‘ privileged Men had brought in with them ‘ Money or Wares, they ſhould be ſatisfyed there‑‘ of preſently.

‘ And if the Creditors did lay unto their Charge, ‘ that they had more Money, Debts, and Wares, ‘ than they would confeſs, ſtraitway they ſhould ‘ be committed to Ward for a certain Time, to ‘ make them confeſs the Truth of the ſame, if ‘ it might be, and thereupon to make an End.

‘ And then, if they could not make them con‑‘ feſs more than was before confeſſed, to travail ‘ from Time to Time, to make them agree. And ‘ if any of them would not be ordered according‑‘ ly, then to puniſh him.

‘ And finally, if it were poſſible for them, to ‘ bring in ſome honeſt Perſons, to teſtify of their ‘ Decay.

Names of the Abbots, the Biſhop, and the Deans of Weſtminſter.

And laſtly, for a Concluſion of the Account of this famous Monaſtery and Church of St. Peters, I ſhall give a Liſt of the Spiritual Governors of it from ancient Times to this preſent, whether Abbots or Deans.

4000 l. per An. for the Reparation of St. Peter's Weſtminſter.

The only Thing I ſhall add more concerning this ancient Abby, is, that ſeaſonable Proviſion was made by the late Queen ANNE, for the neceſſary and effectual Reparation of it, gone to great Decay. Which was, that 4000 l. per Ann. ſhould be reſerved out of the Duty laid upon Coals, for the building of fifty new Churches, by an Act of Parliament An. 9. Regin. ANNÆ: Wherein it was provided, That the ſaid Sum of 4000 l. towards the Repairing of St. Peter's Church Weſtminſter, and the Chapels of the ſame, ſhould be paid to the Chancellor of the Exchequer, the Chief Juſtice of the Queen's Bench, and the Dean of the ſaid Collegiate Church, (who are hereby conſtituted Commiſſioners for repairing the ſaid Church and Chapels) by equal quarterly Payments.]

The Church of St. MARGARET.

First built.

THE Pariſh Church of St. Margaret, ſometime within the Abbey, was, by Edward the Confeſſor, removed, and builded without, for the Eaſe of the Monks.

New built.

This Church continued till the Days of Edward the Firſt; at what Time the Merchants of the Staple, and Pariſhioners of Weſtminſter, builded all of new, the great Chancel excepted, which was builded by the Abbots of Weſtminſter. And this remaineth now a fair Pariſh Church, tho' ſometime in Danger of pulling down.

In the Reign of Edw. 6.

Repaired. J. S.

This Church was repaired, altered, and beautified, in the Year 1682; moſt of the Charges defrayed by Perſons of Quality, and others. It is furniſhed with a large Pair of Organs. A fine antique painted Window over the Communion Table. Prayers are conſtantly at 6 a-Clock every Evening. A fair Table of Benefactors on the Weſt Wall of the Church.

The Miniſter's Houſe is on the South-Eaſt Side of the Church.]

MONUMENTS.

Monument of Dame Mary Billing.

In the South Ile of this Church is a fair Marble Monument of Dame Mary Billing, the Heir of Robert Neſenham of Conington in Huntingtonſhire, firſt married to William Cotton: To whoſe Iſſue, her Inheritance alone deſcended, remaining with Robert Cotton at this Day, Heir of her and her firſt Huſband's Family. Her ſecond Huſband was Sir Robert Billing, Chief Juſtice of England. And her laſt, whom likewiſe ſhe buried, was Thomas Lacy. Erecting this Monument to the Memory of her three Huſbands, with whoſe Arms ſhe hath garniſhed it, and for her own Burial; wherein ſhe was interred in the Year 1499.

Sir Robert Cotton, the Antiquarian. R.

On an ancient Monument in Braſs, at the upper End of the North Ile, is thus written.

Cole's Monument.

Sacrum doloris.

Shall Teares, the ſilent Meſſengers of Death,
Diſſolve their Streames into a Sea of Moane?
No, no, in vaine you ſacrifice Reliefe,
Over his Tombe, with Eyes, with Voyce, with Groane.
For Cole (aſſign'd by God the Poore to pity,
The Widow's Comfort, and eke the Orphan's Sire)
Who tun'd each String of Hate to Love's ſweet Ditty,
Is dead. Ah me! will Death the Beſt deſire?
Remorſeleſſe Death, thy Wrath in him is ended,
Maugre thy Darts, his Praiſes cannot dye;

Thou haſt his Body, but his Soul aſcended
Into the Place of Joyes Eternity.
And tho' his Corps interr'd lies dead in Grave,
Yet ſtill his Vertues Life and Being have.

An. Dom. 1597.

In Parliament, a Burgeſſe, Cole was placed,
In Weſtminſter the like for many Years,
But now with Saints above his Soul is graced,
And lives a Burgeſſe with Heaven's Royall Peers.
O bleſſed Change, from Earth, where Death is King,
To be united there where Angels ſing.

Ejuſdem in eundem.

Terra tegit Corpus, mens ſcandit ad Æthera Cœli,
Fama virens floret, Cætera mors rapuit.

Thus in Engliſh.

The Grave my Body, Heaven my Soule doth keepe,
The World my Fame, the reſt in Death doth ſleepe.

Margaretta Cole poſuit.

In another Column of the ſame Table.

This Monument unites two conſtant Lovers,
He that is dead, and her that lives in Death:
His Body ſhe, his Spouſe, in Honour covers,
Wiſhing her Days were ſhort'ned with his Death.
But ſhe muſt live, yet living ſhall be mated
With him in Death, while Death her Life hath dated.
Full twenty Yeeres and odde, their League was firm,
Witneſſe the World, their Children, and their Love;
Nothing but Death by Death ſhould give the tearme
Of Farewell to their Faith by falſe Remove.
Of Breach of Concord no Tongue can accuſe them,
Unleſſe baſe Envy by her Saints abuſe them.
O envy not the Dead, but die to Sinne,
Expect the Harveſt of this dead Man's Bliſſe;
Deſire the Crown which Envy cannot winne,
Amend in you, not others, what's amiſſe.
Sad Death ſhall be your Herauld to procure
Reſt to your Soules, with Chriſt for to endure.
Marget in woe, diſtill thoſe Tears to comfort,
And in thy Children's Love, redreſſe thy Anguiſh:
Three live with thee, then love their living Conſort,
No longer in thy Huſband's Sorrow languiſh.
But imitate thy Cole in Vertue's Laws,
That thou maiſt live where Vertue pleads his Cauſe.

This Monument is in the North Ile, and hath this Inſcription.

Here lyeth the Lady Dorothy Stafford, Wife and Widow to Sir William Stafford, Knight, Daughter [in Law] to Henry Lord Stafford, the only Son of Edward the laſt Duke of Buckingham: Her Mother was Vrſula, Daughter to the Counteſſe of Saliſbury, the only Daughter to George Duke of Clarence, Brother to King Edward the Fourth. Shee continued a true Widow from the Age of 27. till her Death. She ſerved Queen Elizabeth 40 Yeeres, lying in the Bedchamber, eſteemed of her, loved of all, doing good, all ſhe could, to every Body, never hurted any; a continual Remembrancer of the Suits of the Poor. As ſhe lived a religious Life, in great Reputation of Honour and Vertue in the World, ſo ſhe ended in continual fervent Meditation, and hearty Prayer to God. At which Inſtant, as all her Life, ſo after her Death, ſhe gave liberally to the Poore, and died aged 78, the 22. of September 1604. In whoſe Remembrance, Sir Edward Stafford, her Sonne, hath cauſed this Memorial of her to be in the ſame Forme and Place as ſhe herſelfe long ſince required him.

On a Monument on the North Side of the Chancel is this Inſcription.

A Monument ſet up by Margaret Engliſh to her two Huſbands.

To the Memory of Rob. Peeter, Eſquire, Auditor of the Receipt, her firſt Huſband, who gave to the Uſe of the Poore of this Pariſh one hundred Pound: And of Edward Engliſh, her ſecond Huſband, a Gentleman, kind, courteous, and of great Hoſpitality, who gave twelve Pounds in Annuity for ever to the ſame Uſe.

Margaret their loving Wife, Daughter of Sir John Tyrill of Gipping, Knight, who likewiſe hath bequeathed one hundred Pounds, for the purchaſing of one yeerely Annuity of twenty Nobles for ever to the 'foreſaid Poore: Lamenting their Death, and for Teſtification of her dutiful Love, hath erected this Monument.

Another Monument in the ſame Ile, with this Inſcription.

Here lyeth the Body of Thomas Arneway, buried the 8. of September, Anno Dom. 1603. And Margaret Arneway, his Wife, who was buried the 9. of Auguſt, Anno Dom. 1596.

Near unto the other, in a fair Plate, is this following Epitaph.

A Memorial on the Death of John Varnam, Gardiner, who deceaſed the xi. of December, 1586. Ætatis ſuæ 46.

O mortal Man that lives on Earth,
conſider well thy End;
Remember that thou muſt depart,
when God for thee doth ſend.
This Life is but a Pilgrimage,
ſo ſoon it doth decay;
And all the Riches of this World
ſhall fade and paſs away:

As by Example daily ſhew'd,
before our Eyes we ſee,
That Rich and Poor to Earth are brought for their Iniquity.
Let us that live on Earth behind,
to God for Mercy call,
With woful Heart and wringing Hands,
and he will bleſſe us all.

And now to ſpeak of this good Man,
John Varnam call'd by Name;
Who in his Life he lived well,
by Labour, Travaile, and Paine:
In helping of the Fatherleſſe,
and Widowes very Poore;
And ſetting ever them on worke which went from Doore to Doore.

A Gardiner by Art he was,
great Skill he had therein;
And proſper'd well in all his Life,
with every living Thing
That he at all Times tooke in Hand:
To God be given all praiſe,
That did increaſe this honeſt Man, with Riches many Ways.

The Poor they had great Work of him,
by weeding of his Ground;
And he to them was well content,
to leave Aſſurance ſound,
Of Land and Living to releeve
The Fatherleſſe in Need;
So he confirmed this his Minde,
by Will it was decreed.

Agnes Varnam left behind,
his loving Wife moſt ſure;
By her he had foure Sonnes, likewiſe foure Daughters, Virgins pure:
Who all being dead, and none alive,
but Elizabeth by Name;
And in Remembrance of his Life,
they have ſet up this ſame.

He willingly did yeeld himſelfe,
in God was all his Truſt;
And in the laſt Houre of his Death,
he ſhew'd his Faith moſt juſt,
To leave this World moſt cheerefully, deſirous to depart;
Aſking forgiveneſſe of the World,
and forgiving with his Heart,

To thoſe which he at any Time in Deed or Word offended:
Moſt joyfully his Soule was then unto the Lord commended.
And thus he left his mortal Life,
in Briefe, to tell you plaine;
Hoping in Heav'n to be receiv'd, for ever to remaine.

In the ſame Ile, in the Body of the Church, is this Inſcription.

Cornelius Vandun lieth here, borne at Breda in Brabant, Souldier with King Henry at Turney, Yeoman of the Guard, and Uſher to King Henry, King Edward, Queen Mary, and Queen Elizabeth: Of honeſt and vertuous Life, a careful Man for poore Folke. Who in the End of this Towne did build for poore Widowes twenty Houſes of his owne coſt.

Round about his Figure, wrought as in his Guards Coat, theſe Words.

Obiit Anno Dom. 1577. Buried the 4. of September. Ætatis ſuæ 94.

At the upper End of the South Ile in the Chancel, as followeth.

Frances Haughton, in Token of her Love to her Huſband, cauſed this Monument to be erected.

Here reſteth in aſſured Hope to riſe in Chriſt, the Body of Hugh Haughton, the fourth Son of Thomas Haughton of Haughton, in the County of Cheſter, Gentleman. Who married Frances, Daughter of William Coothe of Sherbourne, in the County of Dorſet, Gentleman, and by her had Iſſue two Daughters, Elizabeth and Frances. He departed this Life the 17. Day of October, 1616. Aged 50 Years. And Elizabeth departed this Life the 28. of Auguſt, 1615, aged ſeven Years, and lyeth here alſo interred.

On an ancient Braſs Monument, cloſe by the other, is thus written.

Give thankes to God for Edward Courtney, Eſquire, Sonne and Heire to Sir Peter Courtney of Devonſhire, Knight, who living a Life agreeable to his Eſtate and Stocke, ended the ſame like a faithful Chriſtian, the 27. Day of November 1566, and is buried before this Stone.

On another near to that, is thus written.

Here lyeth the Body of Alexander Tomkins, the fifth Sonne to Richard Tomkins of Momington upon Wye, in the County of Hereford, Eſquire, who was buried in Auguſt, in the Year of our Lord God 1615.

On another near to that is thus written.

Underneath lyeth the Body of James Tomkins, ſecond Sonne to James Tomkins of Momington upon Wye in the County of Hereford, Eſquire, buried in December, in the Year of our Lord God 1613.

Cloſe to this a very fair Monument in the South Wall of the Chancel, thus written on.

Hereunder is entombed Blanch Parry, Daughter to Henry Parry of New-court within the County of Hereford, Eſquire, chief Gentlewoman of Queen Elizabeth's moſt honourable Privy Chamber, and Keeper of her Majeſty's Jewels. On the ſame Wall, in a Table, is this Epitaph.

In Memory of the late deceaſed Virgin, Miſtriſs Elizabeth Hereicke.

Sweet Virgin, that I do not ſet
Thy Grave-verſe up in mournful Jet,
Or dappled Marble, let thy Shade
Not wrathful ſeeme, or fright the Maid,
Who hither at her weeping Howres,
Shall come to ſtrew thy Earth with Flowres:
No, know, bleſt Soule, when there's not one
Remainder left of Braſſe or Stone;
Thy living Epitaph ſhall be
Though loſt in them, yet found in me:
Deare, in thy Bed of Roſes then,
Till this World ſhall diſſolve (as Men)
Sleepe, while we hide thee from the Light,
Drawing thy Curtains round — Good Night.

On a Table, hanging at the upper End of the South Ile, is this written.

In Memory of the right vertuous and beautiful Gentlewoman, Miſtreſs Margaret Radcliffe, Daughter to Sir John Radcliffe, Knight, one of the Maids of Honour to Queen Elizabeth, who deceaſed at Richmond the 10. of November, and was here buried with Solemnity the 22. of the ſame, Anno Dom. 1599. An. Reg. Eliz. 41.

Tell thou my wailing Verſe, and mourning ſhow
What beauteous frame lies here interr'd below.

Here underneath entomb'd a Dazie lies,
The Pride of Nature, with Perfection fill'd;
O woe, whom Zephyres blaſts can ne'er make riſe,
Being by Death's black Storms untimely kill'd.
Ratcliffe's thy Name, the Glory of the Court,
Vertue and Beauty ſtrove t'adorn thee moſt;
Though here inclos'd, yet Fame ſhall ſtill report
Thy Vertue's Praiſe, thy Graces Time ſhall boaſt:

Thou dy'dſt a Virgin pure, and ſpotleſſe Liver;
Grief caus'd thy Death, Death makes thee live for ever.
If any aſk, Who ſigh'd this ſad Complaint?
Say, One that liv'd, that lov'd, that joy'd, now faint.

Of what Antiquity, it is uncertain: But Edward the Confeſſor held his Court here, as may appear by the Teſtimony of ſundry; and namely, of Ingulphus, as I have before told you. The ſaid King had his Palace, and for the moſt Part remained there; where he alſo ended his Life, and was buried in the Monaſtery which he had builded. It is not to be doubted, but that King William the Firſt, as he was crowned there, ſo he builded much at this Palace, for he found it far inferiour to the building of Princely Palaces in France.

Great Hall at Weſtminſter. Mathew Paris.

And it is manifeſt, by the Teſtimony of many Authors, that William Rufus builded the great Hall there, about the Year of Chriſt 1097. Amongſt others, Roger of Windover and Mathew Paris do write, that King William, being return'd out of Normandy into England, kept his Feaſt of Whitſontide very Royally at Weſtminſter, in the new Hall which he had lately builded; the Length whereof (ſay ſome) was 270 Foot, and ſeventy four Foot in Breadth. And when he heard Men ſay, that this Hall was too great, he anſwered and ſaid: This Hall is not big enough by the one Half, and is but a Bed-chamber, in Compariſon of that I mean to make.

Liber Woodbridge.

A diligent Searcher (ſaith Mathew Paris) might find out the Foundation of the Hall which he had ſuppoſed to have builded, ſtretching from the River of Thames, even to the common Highway.

Palace repaired. W. Fitz-Stephen.

This Palace was repaired about the Year 1163, by Thomas Becket, Chancellor of England, with exceeding great Celerity and Speed, which before was ready to have fallen down.

Repaired again in the Reign of K. R. 3.

Ledger-Book of K. R. 3. Harlian Libr.

It ſeems to have gone to Decay in the Times of K. Edward the Fourth. For I find King Richard the Third began to ſet upon the Repairs of it. He gave forth an Order to Thomas Tirrel, Keeper of the Park of Wildegolet within Eſſex, to ſuffer no Manner of Perſon to bezil or purloin, or carry away out of the ſaid Park, any Timber, Boards, Laths, Shingles, or any other Stuff, ordained for the Works at Weſtminſter, and other Places; but ſuffer ſuch as they ſhould ſend thither, to fell and carry away as much Stuff as they ſhall think behoveful for the ſaid Work, *Anno 2do, 16 March. Record Tower.

The Uſe of great Halls was to feed the Poor.

This hath been the principal Seat and Palace of all the Kings of England ſince the Conqueſt; for here have they in the great Hall kept their Feaſts, of Coronation eſpecially; and other ſolemn Feaſts, as at Chriſtmas, and ſuch like, moſt commonly. For Proof whereof, I find recorded, that in the Year 1236, and the twentieth of Henry the Third, on the 29. of December, William de Haverhull, the King's Treaſurer, is commanded, that upon the Day of the Circumciſion of our Lord, he ſhould cauſe 6000 poor People to be fed at Weſtminſter, for the State of the King, the Queen, and their Children. The weak and aged to be placed in the great Hall; and in the leſſer thoſe that were more ſtrong and in reaſonable Plight. The Children, in the King's and Queen's Chambers: And when the King knoweth the Charge, he would allow it in the Accounts.

Great Feaſts in Weſtminſter Hall. Mat. Paris.

In the Year 1238, the ſame King Henry kept his Feaſt of Chriſtmas at Weſtminſter in the great Hall. So did he in the Year 1241, where he placed the Legate in the moſt honourable Place of the Table, to wit, in the Midſt, which the Noblemen took in evil Part.

The King ſate on the right Hand, and the Archbiſhop on the left; and then all the Prelates and Nobles, according to their Eſtates; for the King himſelf did ſet the Gueſts.

The Year 1242, he likewiſe kept his Chriſtmas in the Hall, &c.

Alſo in the Year 1243, Richard Earl of Cornwall, the King's Brother, married Cincia, Daughter to Beatrice, Counteſs of Provence, and kept his Marriage Feaſt in the great Hall at Weſtminſter, with great Royalty and Company of Noblemen; inſomuch, that there were told (triginta Millia) 30000 Diſhes of Meats at that Dinner.

In

Henry the 3d. ſate in the Exchequer, and amerced the Sheriffs.

In the Year 1256, King Henry ſate in the Exchequer of this Hall, and there ſet down Order for the Appearance of Sheriffs, and bringing in of their Accounts; there was 5 Marks ſet on every Sheriff's Head for a Fine, becauſe they had not diſtrained every Perſon that might diſpend 15 l. Land by the Year, to receive the Order of Knighthood, according as the ſame Sheriffs were commanded.

And the Maior and Aldermen.

Alſo the Maior, Aldermen, and Sheriffs of London, being accuſed of Oppreſſion and Wrongs done by them, and ſubmitting themſelves in this Place, before the King ſitting then in Judgment upon that Matter; they were condemned to pay their Fines for their Offences committed, and further, every one of them diſcharged of Aſſiſe and Ward.

Tranſlation of Edward the Confeſſor.

In the Years 1268 and 1269, the ſame King kept his Chriſtmas Feaſts at Weſtminſter, as before: And alſo in the ſame Year 1269, he tranſlated (with great Solemnity) the Body of King Edward the Confeſſor, into a new Chapel at the Back of the high Altar; which Chapel he had prepared of a marvellous Workmanſhip, beſtowing a new Tomb or Shrine of Gold.

And on the Day of his Tranſlation, he kept a royal Feaſt in the great Hall of the Palace. Thus much for the Feaſts of old Time in this Hall.

Wherries rowed in Weſtminſter-Hall.

We read alſo, that in the Year 1236, the River of Thames overflowing the Banks, cauſed the Marſhes about Woolwich to be all on a Sea, wherein Boats and other Veſſels were carried by the Stream; ſo that, beſides Cattel, the greateſt Number of Men, Women, and Children, Inhabitants there, were drowned. And in the great Palace of Weſtminſter, Men did row with Wherries in the Midſt of the Hall, being forced to ride to their Chambers.

Moreover, in the Year 1242, the Thames overflowing the Banks about Lambhithe, drowned Houſes and Fields, by the Space of 6 Miles; ſo that, in the great Hall at Weſtminſter, Men took their Horſes, becauſe the Water ran over all.

Fire in the King's Palace. 47. Hen. 3.

J. S.

Rymer's Fœdera Convention. Tom. 1.

A great Fire happened upon the King's Houſe at Weſtminſter, An. 1263, in the King's Abſence. Of which Henry de Sandwich, Elect of London, ſent him Word in Condolance, viz. 'That hearing of the Burning of his Houſes at Weſtminſter, 'he much grieved, as knew the moſt High, 'fearing leaſt it might diſturb his Mind, when 'it ſhould be made known to him; and might 'change the State of his Body, and make it 'worſe than it was; which he prayed God to 'mend and preſerve.' King Henry was now, it ſeems, Abroad, perhaps in France; and not current in the Health of his Body, no more than in his Mind, by Reaſon of the Diſturbance made by his Barons.]

T. Walſingh. Palace at Weſtminſter burnt.

This Palace was (in the Year 1299, the 27. of Edward the Firſt) burnt by a vehement Fire, kindled in the leſſer Hall of the King's Houſe, the ſame with many other Houſes adjoining, and with the Queen's Chamber, were conſumed, but after that repaired.

The King's Treaſury at Weſtminſter robbed. The Abbot and Monks ſent to the Tower.

In the Year 1313, the 31. of Edward the Firſt, the King's Treaſury at Weſtminſter was robbed; for the which, Walter Abbot of Weſtminſter, with 49 of his Brethren, and 32 other, were thrown into the Tower of London, and indicted of the Robbery of an Hundred Thouſand Pound: But they affirming themſelves to be clear of the Fact, and deſiring the King of ſpeedy Juſtice, a Commiſſion was directed for Enquiry of the Truth, and they were freed.

Edward the Second, keeping his Feaſts at Weſtminſter-Hall, was preſented with a Complaint of not rewarding Soldiers.

In the Year 1316, Edward the Second did ſolemnize his Feaſt of Pentecoſt at Weſtminſter, in the great Hall; where ſiting Royally at the Table, with his Peers about him, there entered a Woman adorned like a Minſtrel, ſitting on a great Horſe, trapped as Minſtrels then uſed; who rode round about the Tables ſhewing Paſtime, and at Length came up to the King's Table, and laid before him a Letter; and forthwith turning her Horſe, ſaluted every one, and departed. The Letter being opened, had theſe Contents.

Our Sovereign Lord the King hath nothing courteouſly reſpected his Knights, that in his Father's Time, and alſo in his own, have put forth their Perſons to divers Perils, and have utterly loſt, or greatly diminiſhed their Subſtance, for Honour of the ſaid King; and he hath enriched alundantly ſuch as have not borne the Weight (as yet) of the Buſineſs, &c.

Great Hall at Weſtminſter repaired.

This great Hall was begun to be repaired in the Year 1397, by Richard the Second, who cauſed the Walls, Windows, and Roof, to be taken down, and new made, with a ſtately Porch, and divers Lodgings of a marvailous Work, and with great Coſts. All which he levied on Strangers baniſhed, or flying out of their Countries, who obtained Licenſe to remain in this Land by the King's Charters, which they had purchaſed with great Sums of Money, [John Boterell being then Clerk of the Works.]

A Royal Chriſtmas kept here by Ric. 2.

This Hall being finiſhed, in the Year 1399, the ſame King kept a moſt Royal Chriſtmas there, with daily Juſtings, and Runnings at Tilt; whereunto reſorted ſuch a Number of People, that there were every Day ſpent twenty eight or twenty ſix Oxen, and three hundred Sheep, beſide Fowl without Number. He cauſed a Gown for himſelf to be made of Gold, garniſhed with Pearl and precious Stones, to the value of three thouſand Marks. He was guarded by Cheſhire-men, and had about him commonly thirteen Biſhops, beſides Barons, Knights, Eſquires, and other more than needed; inſomuch, that to the Houſhold came every Day to Meat, ten thouſand People; as appeareth by the Meſſes told out of the Kitchin to three hundred Servitors.

Ro. Ivelefe.

Thus was this great Hall, for the Honour of the Prince, oftentimes furniſhed with Gueſts, not only in this King's LifeTime, (a prodigal Prince) but in the Time of other alſo, both before and ſince, though not ſo uſually noted For when it is ſaid, the King held his Feaſt of Chriſtmas, or ſuch a Feaſt at Weſtminſter, it may well be ſuppoſed to be kept in this great Hall, as moſt ſufficient to ſuch a Purpoſe.

King Henry the Seventh feaſted the Maior of London, &c.

Ro. Fabian.

I find noted by Robert Fabian, the Chronicler, (ſometime a Citizen and an Alderman of London) that King Henry the Seventh, in the ninth of his Reign, holding his Royal Feaſt of Chriſtmas at Weſtminſter, on the twelfth Day, feaſted Ralph Auſtry, then Maior of London, and his Brethren the Aldermen, with other Commoners in great Number: And after Dinner, dubbing the Maior Knight, cauſed him with his Brethren to ſtay and behold the Diſguiſings, and other Diſports, in the Night following, ſhewed in the great Hall, which was richly hanged with Arras, and ſtaged about on both Sides. Which Diſports being ended in the Morning, the King, the Queen, the Embaſſadors, and other Eſtates, being ſet at a Table of Stone, 60 Knights and Eſquires ſerved 60 Diſhes to the King's Meſs, and as many to the Queen's, (neither Fleſh nor Fiſh) and ſerved the Maior with 24 Diſhes to his Meſs, of the ſame Manner, with ſundry Wines in moſt plenteous wiſe. And finally, the King and Queen being conveyed, with great Lights, into the Palace; the Maior with his Company in Barges, returned and came to London by Break of the next Day. Thus much for building of this great Hall, and feaſting therein.

At

A Marble Stone, where the Kings uſed to ſit. J. S. Clauſ. E. 2. Manley's Interpr.

At the upper End of this Hall is a long Marble Stone of twelve Foot in Length, and three Foot in Breadth. And there alſo is a Marble Chair, where the Kings of England formerly ſate at their Coronation Dinners; and at other ſolemn Times, the Lord Chancellor. But now not to be ſeen, being built over by the two Courts of Chancery and King's Bench. At this Marble Stone divers Matters uſed to be tranſacted. Here Henry de Cliff, Clerk of the Rolls, took his Oath in the Preſence of the Lord Chancellor.]

Parliaments kept in Weſtminſter Hall.

A Houſe for the Parliament, built in the Palace Court.

Bouch of Court.

I find of Record the 50th of Edw. the 3d, that the Chapter Houſe of the Abbot of Weſtminſt. was then the uſual Houſe for the Commons in Parliament. J. S.

It moreover appeareth, that many Parliaments have been kept there: For I find noted, that in the Year 1397, the great Hall at Weſtminſter, being out of Reparations; and therefore, as it were, new builded by Richard the Second, (as is afore-ſhewed) the ſame Richard in the mean Time having Occaſion to hold a Parliament, cauſed (for that Purpoſe) a large Houſe to be builded in the Midſt of the Palace Court, betwixt the Clock Tower, and the Gate of the old great Hall. This Houſe was very large and long, made of Timber, covered with Tyle, open on both Sides, and at both Ends, that all Men might ſee and hear what was both ſaid and done. The King's Archers, in Number 4000, Cheſhire Men, compaſſed the Houſe about with their Bows bent, and Arrows nocked in their Hands, always ready to ſhoot: They had Bouch of Court (to wit, Meat and Drink) and great Wages, of ſix Pence by the Day.

The old great Hall being new builded, Parliaments were again there kept as before; namely, one in the Year 1399, for depoſing of Richard the Second.

And now of a long Time, the Place of the Sitting of the Parliament remains at the King's ſaid ancient Palace: The Lords in a fair Room, and the Commons in that which was formerly St. Stephen's Chapel.

The Authority of the Court of Parliament. Sir Th. Smith's Comm. Wealth, p. 46. Edit. 1589.

The Parliament is the higheſt and moſt abſolute Court of Record in the Kingdom. The Power and Authority thereof, a great Stateſman in former Times, as well as of excellent Learning and Knowledge in the Manner of the Government of England, thus ſets down: 'That which is done by this Conſent, [viz. of the two Houſes, and the Prince himſelf, in Preſence of both Parties] is firm, ſtable, and Sanctum. It abrogateth old Laws, and maketh new; giveth Order for Things paſt, and for Things hereafter to be followed; changeth Rights and Poſſeſſions of private Men; legitimateth Baſtards; eſtabliſheth Forms of Religion; altereth Weights and Meaſures; giveth Forms of Succeſſion to the Crown; defineth of doubtful Rights, whereof is no Law already made; appointeth Subſidies, Tailes, Taxes, and Impoſitions; giveth moſt free Pardons and Abſolutions; reſtoreth in Blood and Name; and as the higheſt Court, condemneth or abſolveth them whom the Prince will put to that Tryal. And, to be ſhort, all that the People of Rome might do, either in Centuriatis Comitiis, or *Tributis, the ſame may be done by the Parliament of England: Which repreſenteth and hath the Power of the whole Realm, both the Head and the Body.

* Alias Tribunitiis.

The Acts of Parliament, publick or private, be all kept, and remain in the Cuſtody of the Clerks of the Parliament.]

A great Part of this Palace at Weſtminſter was once again burnt in the Year 1512, the fourth of Henry the Eighth; ſince which Time it hath not been re-edified: Only the great Hall, with the Offices near adjoining, are kept in good Reparations, and ſerveth, as afore it did, for Feaſts at Coronations, Arraignments of great Perſons charged with Treaſons, keeping of the Courts of Juſtice, &c. But the Princes have been lodged in other Places about the City, as at Baynard's Caſtle, at Bridewell, and Whitehall, (ſometime called York-Place) and ſometime at St. James's.

Trophies taken from Enemies hung up here. J. S.

This Royal Hall hath of later Times been uſed for the hanging up Trophies taken from the Enemy, in Sign of Victory. I remember, when I was a Boy, I ſaw the Hall hung full, on one Side, with Colours and Standards taken from the Scots at Worceſter Fight. But upon K. Charles the Second his coming to his juſt Right, all taken down.

Standards and Colours taken from the French at the Battle at Bleinheim, hang here.

On Wedneſday the 3d of January 1704, were brought from the Tower through the City, and paſſed by the Exchange about Change Time, 34 Standards, and 128 Colours, taken from the French at the Battle of Bleinheim in Bavaria; attended by Horſe Grenadiers one Troop, a Detachment of the Troop of Horſe Guards, and many other Soldiers.

They were brought through the Paille Maille, and ſo through St. James's Park, where the Queen and his Royal Highneſs took a View of them; and ſo convey'd to Weſtminſter Hall, where they were hung up, and do fill both Sides of the Hall. The Motto's of ſome of them, ſhewing the boaſting and ſomewhat blaſphemous French Spirit, were theſe:

Ingenito ſolem veneratur amore.

Jovis obruit Hoſtes.

Victoria pinget.

Arduus ad Solem.

Alter poſt Fulmina Terror.

In regnum pugnas.

Pugnatur pro Deo & Rege.

In Lillii fortior, &c.]

This Hall the Place of pleading Cauſes.

This great Hall hath been the uſual Place of Pleadings, and Adminiſtration of Juſtice, whereof ſomewhat ſhortly I will note.

Magna Charta.

Vide Sir Th. Smith's Common Wealth, Ch. II.

Common Place in Weſtminſter Hall.

In Times paſt, the Courts and Benches followed the King, whereſoever he went, as well ſince the Conqueſt, as before. Which Thing at length being thought cumberſom, painful, and chargeable to the People; it was in the Year 1224, the 9th of Henry the Third, agreed, that there ſhould be a ſtanding [or common] Place appointed, where Matters ſhould be heard and judged, which was in the great Hall at Weſtminſter.

Three Judgment Seats. T. Smith.

Court of the Chancery.

In this Hall he ordained three Judgment Seats, to wit, at the Entry on the right Hand, the Common Pleas, where civil Matters are to be pleaded, eſpecially ſuch as touch Lands or Contracts. At the upper End of the Hall, on the right Hand, or South Eaſt Corner, the King's Bench, where Pleas of the Crown have their Hearing: And on the left Hand, or South Weſt Corner, ſitteth the Lord Chancellor, accompanied with the Maſter of the Rolls, and with certain other of the eleven Men (learned for the moſt Part in the civil Law, and called Maſters of the Chancery) which have the King's Fee.

Four Terms.

The Times of pleading in theſe Courts are four in the Year, which are called Terms.

The firſt is Hilary Term, which beginneth the three and twentieth of January, if it be not Sunday, and endeth the twelfth of February.

The ſecond is Eaſter Term, and beginneth ſeventeen Days after Eaſter Day, and endeth four Days after Aſcenſion Day.

The third Term beginneth ſix or ſeven Days after Trinity Sunday, and endeth the Wedneſday Fortnight after.

The fourth is Michaelmas Term, which beginneth the ninth of October, if it be not Sunday, and endeth the 28th of November.

Kings of this Realm have ſate on the King's Bench in Weſtminſter Hall.

And here is to be noted, that the Kings of this Realm have uſed ſometimes to ſit in Perſon in the King's Bench, namely, K. Edw. IV, in the Year 1462, in Michaelmas Term, ſat in the King's Bench 3 Days together, in the open Court, to underſtand how his Laws were miniſtered and executed.

Court of the Exchequer.

Within the Port, or Entry into the Hall, on either Side, are Aſcendings up into large Chambers, without the Hall adjoining thereunto; wherein certain Courts be kept, namely, on the right Hand, is the Court of the Exchequer; a Place of Account for the Revenues of the Crown. The Hearers of the Account have Auditors under them; but they which are the Chief for Accounts of the Prince, are call'd Barons of the Exchequer. Whereof one is called the Chief Baron. The greateſt Officer of all is called the High Treaſurer of England. In this Court are heard thoſe that are Delators (or Informers) in popular and penal Actions, having thereby Part of the Profit by the Law aſſigned unto them.

Informers.

The Great Officers, and Judges, and other Miniſters of this Court, are thus ſet down by the Great Lawyer.

There is a Court of Equity in the Exchequer Chamber. The Judges of this Court are, the Lord Treaſurer, the Chancellor, and the Barons of the Exchequer.]

In this Court, [of Exchequer] if any Queſtion be, it is determined after the Order of the Common Law of England by 12 Men; and all Subſidies, Taxes, and Cuſtoms, by Account: For in this Office, the Sheriffs* of the Shire do attend upon the Execution of the Commandments of the Judges, which the Earl* ſhould do, if he were not attending upon the Prince in the Wars, or otherwiſe about him. For the chief Office of the Earl was, to ſee the King's Juſtice to have Courſe, and to be well executed in the Shire, and the Prince's Revenues to be well anſwered, and brought into the Treaſury.

* Vice-Comites.

* Comes.

If any Fines and Amerciaments be extracted out of any of the ſaid Courts upon any Man, or any Arearages of Accounts of ſuch Things as is of Cuſtoms, Taxes, and Subſidies, or other ſuch like Occaſions; the ſame Sheriff of the Shire doth gather and is anſwerable therefore in the Exchequer.

As for other ordinary Rents of Patrimonial Lands, and moſt commonly of Taxes, Cuſtoms, and Subſidies, there be particular Receivers and Collectors, which do anſwer it into the Exchequer.

This Court of the Exchequer hath of old Time (and as I think, ſince the Conqueſt) been kept at Weſtminſter; notwithſtanding, ſometimes removed thence by commandment of the King for a Time, and after reſtored again; as namely, in the Year one thouſand two hundred and nine, King John commanded the Exchequer to be removed from Weſtminſter to Northampton, &c.

But the King's Evidences, Leaſes, and Grants of the Dutchy Land, as well his Poſſeſſion and Copy-hold, as Fee-ſimple, and Fee-ferme, are in the Keeping of the Auditors, who are divers, but two moſt principal; one whereof for the Lands of the Dutchy on this Side Trent, and another for the Lands beyond Trent. There be divers Surveyors alſo for the Dutchy Lands, for the Survey of them.]

Office of Receipt.

Then is there in another Chamber, the Office of the Receipts of the Queen's Revenues for the Crown.

Star Chamber.

Then is there alſo the Star Chamber. Where, in the Term Time, every Week, once at the leaſt, which is commonly on Fridays and Wedneſdays, and on the next Day after the Term endeth, the Lord Chancellor, and the Lords and other of the Privy Council, and the two Chief Juſtices of England, from nine of the Clock, 'till it be eleven, did ſit. [But this Court is now diſſolved.]

This Place is called the Star Chamber, becauſe the Roof thereof is decked with the Likeneſs of Stars gilt. There were Plaints heard of Riots, Routs, and other Miſdemeanours. Which if they were found by the King's Council, the Party Offender was cenſured by theſe Perſons, which ſpake one after another; and he was both fined and commanded to the Priſon.

Why termed the Star Chamber.
J. S. Lambert. Archie.

It was ſo called, either by Derivation from the old Engliſh Word Steoran, which ſignifieth to ſteer or rule, as doth the Pilot of a Ship; becauſe the King and Council did ſit here, as it were, at the Sterne, and did govern in the Ship of the Commonwealth. Some derive it from Stellio, which ſignifies that ſtarry and ſubtil Beaſt ſo called. From which cometh the Word Stellionatus, that ſignifieth Couſenage; becauſe that Crime was chiefly puniſhable in this Court by an extraordinary Power, as it was in the Civil Law. Or, becauſe the Roof of this Court was garniſhed with gilded Stars, as the Room itſelf was ſtarry, or full of Windows and Lights. In which Reſpect, ſome of the Latin Records name it Camera Stellata; the French, Le Chambre des Eſtoilles; and the Engliſh, The Starred Chamber.

This anciently the Council Chamber.

This Starred Chamber anciently was the Council Chamber, within the King's Palace of Weſtminſter, where the King's Council ſate. And here the Kings uſed to ſit perſonally in Council, being the ordinary Council Chamber, whenſoever he did lye and ſojourn at his Palace at Weſtminſter, with Deliberation as well of Matters of State, as for decreeing extraordinary Suits and Cauſes of Complaint.

Very ancient.

This Court was of much ancienter Erection than the Beginning of Henry VII; which ſome Men, being much deceived, have aſſerted to be the firſt Original of it, becauſe of his Statute in his third Year concerning it.

Riots puniſhed in this Court.

In former Time it was of great Uſe for puniſhing of Riots; and they often committed by Noblemens or Gentlemens Servants; too common in thoſe Days, by reaſon of Quarrels begun by their Lords and Maſters. For the remedying of which, Orders were made in this Court, in the Beginning of King Henry the Seventh, by the King, and the Lords ſpiritual and temporal here aſſembled. Which was thus as it ſtood in the Record.

Orders made in this Court.

IT is concluded and agreed, that every Lord and Gentleman, if any of his Servants make a Riot, or other Exceſs, the Maſter of the ſame Treſpaſſer ſhall have in Commandment to bring forth the ſame Servant. And if he ſo do not, to abide ſuch Direction and Punition, as by the King and his Council ſhall be thought convenient. And over that, if the ſame Riot, or Exceſs, ariſe by Cauſe or Occaſion of any Quarrel or Diſpleaſure concerning the Maſter of him that ſo exceedeth, the ſame Maſter ſhall anſwer for the ſame Exceſs ſuchwiſe as ſhall be thought to the King and his ſaid Council expedient.

Another Order to the ſame Purpoſe was made under Queen Elizabeth, thus:

In Cam. Stellat. coram Concil. ibm. xxix° die Jan.
An. XVI, Dne. nre. Elizabeth Rne.

Preſentib. Dno. Cuſtode Com. Leiceſtr. Dno. Hunſdon. Dno. Norris. Knolles Theſaur. Hoſpit. Mildmay Sub-Theſaur. Dyer Capit. Juſticiar. de Com. Banc.

IT is ordered, that in all Matters of Riot hereafter, where the ſame is committed by the Servant, by the Maſters Procurement, or by any other principal Rioter, the Fine taxed upon the Servant, or him ſo procured, ſhall be paid by the Maſter, or principal Rioter: Or elſe the Maſter, or Principal, ſhall bring forth the Servant, or Perſons ſo procured, to be committed to the Fleet for their Offence. Which doing, they ſhall be diſcharged of the ſaid Fines; and the Servant or Perſon procured, ſhall remain in the Fleet, 'till he have found Sureties for his Fine ſo taxed into the Exchequer. And all Rioters convict not to be enlarged before their Fines paid, or Sureties put in for the Payment thereof, as before, into the Court of Exchequer.

Forgeries puniſhed in this Court.

And as Cognizance was taken of Riots here, ſo of Forgeries. Several Inſtances there were of the Puniſhment of pillorizing, inflicted for this Crime by the Star Chamber, in the Times of Henry the Eighth, Q. Mary, and Q. Elizabeth.

Star Chamber Days.

This Court was held in the Terms. And the Star Chamber Days in Hilary Term were ſix; in Eaſter Term, eight; in Midſummer Term, ſix; and in Michaelmas Term, ſixteen.

Charges for their Diet.

When this Court ſate, the Nobility and Perſons of Quality, Judges of it, uſed commonly to dine together at the Prince's Coſt. In the Year 1587, the Queen's Charge for the Dinners were,

Theſe Expences were paid by the Under-Treaſurer, who appointed a Steward of the Star Chamber; And he, among other Duties incumbent on him, had a Right to the Lord's Diet here, as belonging to his Office; and his Fee was payable out of the Receipt. The Names of ſome of theſe Stewards, as I have collected them, were,

Concerning which, when ſome Doubt was raiſed while Guilpin was Steward, a Preſcription was ſhewn of ſeventy Years in his Behalf. Let this ſuffice for ſome Remarks concerning this ancient and noble Court of Star Chamber, now diſſolved.]

The Court of Wards and Liveries.

Then at the upper End of the great Hall, by the King's Bench, is a going up to a great Chamber, called, The Whitehall, wherein is now kept the Court of Wards and Liveries. This Court was founded 32. H. 8. cap. 46, called, The Court of the King's Wards. The Office of the Livery was annexed to the Court of Wards, 33. H. 8. cap. 22. And adjoining thereunto is the Court of Requeſts.

Cok. Inſtit. Pt. 4. p. 188.

Court of Requeſts.

Both theſe are now alſo diſſolved. A few Words concerning this laſt named Court. In this Court all Suits made to the King or Queen, by Way of Petition, were heard and ended. This was called The Poor Man's Court, becauſe there he ſhould have Right without paying any Money. And it was alſo called The Court of Conſcience. The Judges of this Court were called The Maſters of Requeſts: One for the Common Laws, and the other for the Civil Laws. And I find that it was a Court of Equity, after the Nature of the Chancery, but inferior to it. There were Judges of it. Commonly the Lord Privy Seal was the Chief. And there were Maſters of Requeſts that were ordinary Judges.

Sir Tho. Smith's Commonweal.

The Judges were commonly Divines, Civilians, Knights, and Gentlemen. This Court began 8. H. 7. For the hearing of Cauſes in this Court, from the eighth Year of that King, and ſo downwards: Some of the firſt were theſe, House of Lords. Here is now the Houſe of Lords; where the Lords Temporal and Spiritual meet and ſit in Parliament Time.

The Prince's Chambers. Here the Governors for Queen Anne's Bounty first met. Adjoining to the Houſe of Lords are his Highneſs Prince George's Chambers. Here, December 14, was the firſt Meeting of the Governours of Queen Anne's Bounty for the Augmentation of poor Livings. Who theſe Governours are, appears from the ſaid Queen's Letters Patents, dated Novemb. 3, 1704; whereby ſhe incorporated all the Lords of her Privy Council, the Lords Lieutenants, and Cuſtodes Rotulorum, the Biſhops, and all Deans of Cathedrals in the Kingdom of England, the Judges, and Queens Council learned in Law, the Chancellors and Vice-Chancellors of both Univerſities, the Lord Maior and Aldermen of London, and all Maiors of Cities in the Kingdom of England, by the Name and Title of The Governours of the Bounty of Queen Anne, for the Augmentation of the Maintenance of the poor Clergy.

Theſe were given by that King to Sir Andrew Dudley, Brother to the Great Duke of Northumberland, with other Lands and Tenements in Weſtminſter, to him, for the Term of his Life, *An. The King's Treasury robbed. Within this ancient Palace is the King's Treaſury. Which, in the Year 1313, the 31. of Edward the Firſt, was robbed. For the which, Walter Abbot of Weſtminſter, with 49 of his Brethren, and 32 others, were thrown into the Tower of London, and indicted of the Robbery of an hundred thouſand Pounds, as was ſhewn before.

Treaſury for Records. J. S. Beſides this Treaſury for Money, there was within the Palace another Treaſury of Records, relating to the Kingdom's publick Affairs, preſerved in certain Chambers and Rooms. Here are repoſited many ancient and precious Records. As within the Place called particularly, The Treaſury, where once the Court of Wards was kept, are the Records of Leagues with the Realms of Aragon, Flanders, Germany, and ſome of France, and other Places. Alſo, there are many Records relating to the caſting off the Biſhop of Rome's Authority in this Kingdom of England; and the Subſcriptions of almoſt all the Prieſts of the Realm to the King's Supremacy: And the Books of the Orders of St. George and St. Michael: The Covenants of Marriage between K. Philip, and Q. Mary; and ſundry Books of foreign Accounts, and other Matters of State.

The Treaſury for Records at the Abby. Alſo, within the Abby of Weſtminſter (that we may lay theſe Things together) there was an older Treaſury than that of the Palace, which was called The old Treaſury, a Place always deſigned for the Cuſtody of the Leagues of the Kingdom. It was vaulted with Stone, and had Cheſts and Preſſes that were empty.

Another Treaſury there. There is alſo another Treaſury within the Abby of Weſtminſter, vaulted alſo with Stone, and ſo out of Danger of Fire; but it wanted Reparation, both in Glaſs and Lead. Here were kept all, or the moſt part of, the Records of the King's Bench and Common Place, Fines, Writs, and Aſſizes, of all the Kings ſince the Conqueſt, until the moſt part of the Reign of K. Henry the Seventh, fairly arrayed up in Cheſts for that Purpoſe.

Records in the Cuſtody of the Ld Treaſurer. Alſo in the Cuſtody of the Lord Treaſurer and the Chamberlain of the Exchequer, were abundance of Records in Bags; as Records of Pleas and Perambulations, and Inquiſitions of Foreſts; Records of many Mens Lands in the Realm of England and Wales; as namely, Court Rolls, Auditors Accounts, Accounts of ſundry French Counties: Alſo, Deeds of Purchaſe, made by ſundry of Q. Elizabeth's Progenitors, for ſundry their Honours, Manours, and Lands.

A Motion to array theſe Rolls. Concerning theſe Records, &c. it was moved to the Lord Treaſurer Burghley, by ſome certain Perſon well verſed in them, that whereas theſe were put up in Bags together confuſedly, whereby, when a Search was made among of them, it was an eaſy Matter for a Stranger, finding a Roll, or Leaf, inconvenient and againſt him, to convey it away, as it ſeemed the like had been done; which could not be miſſed, becauſe there was no certain Note how many Rolls there be: And furthermore, the often toſſing, ruffling, ſearching, and lapping up of the ſame Rolls, had ſo ſoiled and worn many of them, as they could not be well read: For avoiding of which Inconveniencies, it might pleaſe his Lordſhip to appoint one to peruſe the ſame Rolls, and to array them into Shires, and certain Forreſts; and the ſame to put into Bags ſeverally, writing thereon the County, the Foreſt, and the Number of Rolls, and how many Leaves every Roll containeth: That this would be a great Preſervation of them, and a ready Help to find any Thing upon Commandment of the Court of Exchequer, or otherwiſe upon Occaſion. The ſame Perſon adviſed, that the old Records remaining in the Palace Treaſury, being a Place ſubject to Danger of Fire, might be removed thence into the old Treaſury within the Palace of Weſtminſter, a Place deſigned for the Cuſtody of the ſame, and where they might be more ſecure, being vaulted with Stone.

The Original Paper, wherein the foreſaid Motion was made to the Treaſurer, (which was Anno 1573) may deſerve to be here inſerted, viz.

MATTERS mooſt neceſſary to move the Right Honorable, my Lorde Theaſarour, and the Chamberleynes of Theſchequier in, for the reducynge of her Majeſties RECORDS, being in theire Cuſtodie, into muche bettre Suretie, and ſpeedier Redynes in Search, upon Commaundment, &c.

Records of Leagues.

Imprimis, That the Records of Leagues with the Realmes of Arragon, Flaunders, Germanie, ſome of Fraunce, with others now remeyinge in the Theaſaurie within the Pallaice of Weſtminſter, (where the Courte of Wardes was) beinge ſubjecte to the Daunger of Fyre, maye be removed into th'olde Theaſaurye within the Abbaye of Weſtminſter: a Place alwayes deſigned for the Cuſtodie of the ſame Leagues, and vaulted with Stone; whereby yt ſemithe (yf it ſo pleaſe God) that theye be without Daunger of Fire, and where there is Rome enough for them in Cheſts and Preſſes that be now emptye.

Records touching depoſing the Biſhop of Rome, and of Subſcriptions to the Supremacy, &c.

Alſo, there are in the ſame Theaſaurie in the Pallaice, ſundrye Records, mentyoninge the Depoſinge of the Buſhop of Rome; and Bookes of Subſcripcion of the mooſte Part of the Preeſtes thoroughe the Realme to the Kinges Supremacye, &c. Alſo Books of the Order of St. George, and St. Michael: The Covenauntes of Mariage betwixt Kinge Philip and Q. Marie; with other Mattres of States. Which weere very needfull to be calendred, and to be layed up in the Theſaurye amonge the Leagues, for theire bettre Suertye.

Old Fines.

Alſo, there are certyne olde Fynes in the Cuſtodie of the Cirographer at Bridewel Church, there kept ſecreatlie. Where in Righte the ſame Fynes ought to be in the Keaping of the Lorde Theſarour, and the Chamberlynes of Theſchequier. In which Reſpect yt might pleaſe your Lordſhip to call the ſaid Cirographer before you; and to know by what Righte he keapeth the ſame: And thereupon to geve Order for their Removinge, if it ſhal ſo ſeme convenient and lawfull.

Records of King's Bench, &c.

Alſo, it appeareth by Indentures, and Writtes, remeyninge in the Cuſtodie of the ſaid Lord Theſaurour and Chamberleynes Deputies, that the Records of the Kinges Bench, and Common Place, Fynes, Wryttes and Aſſyzes, ought to be in the Cuſtodie of the ſaid L. Theſaurour and Chamberleynes. And according to the ſame, are all, or the mooſte Parte of the laſt ſaid Records of all the Kings ſince the Conqueſt, untill the mooſt Part of the Reigne of Henry the Seventh, in the Keaping aforeſaid, in another Theſaurie, within the Abbaye of Weſtminſter; faire arrayed up in Cheſtes for that Purpoſe, where there is Rome enough in Cheſtes provyded for the reſte, if they might be brought in. The ſame Theſaurie is alſo vaulted with Stone, whereby the ſaid Records ſhould be in gretter Salfetie. It wanteth Reparatyons bothe in Glaſſe and Leade. It may pleaſe your Lordſhip to have ſpedie Regarde thereunto.

Records of Pleas and Perambulations of Foreſts.

Alſo, where the Recordes of Pleas, Perambulations, and Inquiſicyons of Forreſtes, are preſentlie put al up together into Bagges, confuſedlie; whereby when a Searche is made amongſte them, it is an eaſy Thing for a Straunger, fynding a Role or Leaf, inconvenyent, and agaynſt him, to conveye yt awaye, (as yt ſemethe the lyke hath bene done) which cannot be miſſed, becauſe there is no certen Note how many Roles there bee, &c.

And furthermore, the often toſſing, rufflynge, ſearchinge, and lappinge up of the ſame Roles, hath, in effect, ſo obfulked and worne many of them, as they cannot be well red: For avoyding of which Inconveniences, if yt pleaſe your Lordſhip to appoynte one to peruſe the ſame Roles, and to arraye them into Shires and certen Forreſtes; and the ſame to put into Baggs ſeverallye, wrytinge thereon the Countye, the Forreſte, and Nombre of the Roles, and how manye Leaves every Role conteyneth: This (we ſaye) would not onely bee a greate Preſervacyon of the ſame Records, when no mo Roles ſhould bee opened than concerned the Forreſt, which ſhould be ſearched; but alſo would be a redye Helpe to fynde any Thinge upon Commaundemente of the Courte of the Eſchequier, or otherwyſe upon Occacyon.

Records of Mens Lands.

Alſo, there are ſoundrye Records of many Mens Lands in the Realme of England and Wales, as namelye, Court Roles, Auditors Accompts, and Parcos, Miſes, Accomptes of ſoundrye Frenche Counties; and alſo Deeds of Purchaſe, made by ſoundrye the Quenes Majeſtie Progenitowrs, for ſoundrye their Honours, Manours and Landes. Which were very convenyent to be peruſed, and a Repertorie thereof to be made, for the ſpedie fynding thereof, upon Commaundement.

The lyke to be donne with ſoundrye Books of Forreyne Accompts, remeyninge in the foreſaid Theſaurie in the Pallayce.

Records of the Tower.

Alſo, it appearethe by ſoundrye Recordes, remeyninge in the ſaid Theſaurie, that there hathe bene geuen Allowance unto the Clerkes and Deputyes of the ſaid L. Theſaurour and Chamberleynes, for the arrayinge and removinge of the Recoordes of the Tower, and now latelye in Quene Maries Tyme, the olde Lord Stafforde (beyng one of the Chamberleynes of Th'eſchequier) complayned unto the Councell, that in Mr. Boyers Time certen of the ſame Records in the Tower were imbecelled; alledginge, how daungerous a Thing it is to the Quene, and to the Realme, that the ſame were under one Kaye. Whereupon the ſaide L. Stafforde had a Kaye appointed him with Mr. Boyer; which he kept a longe Tyme.

The Augmentation Office.

Within this Palace alſo, towards the South Weſt Side of it, is the Augmentation Office, occaſioned by a Court of Augmentations, which was ſet up by Act of Parliament, upon the Diſſolution of Monaſteries; whereby thoſe religious Houſes, and the Revenues of them were granted to the King. In this Office, being an ancient capacious Place, are kept all the Deeds, Inſtruments and original Writings belonging to the Abbies, Priories, &c. and the ſeveral Surrenders and Reſignations of the reſpective Abbots and Priors, with the Values of the Lands and Rents of thoſe Foundations: Whence much Light may be given into Church-Lands, Vicarages, and ſuch like.

Court of Augmentations, Cok. Inſtit. Pt. 4.

This Court of Augmentations was erected by Authority of Parliament, 27 H. 8, conſiſting of a Chancellor, Treaſurer, Atturney and Solicitor; and all Lands, &c. belonging to Monaſteries, and purchaſed Lands, were within the Survey and Governance of this Court. This was diſſolved, and a new Court of Augmentations was erected by the Letters Patents of the King, 38. H. 8. Queen Mary, in the firſt of her Reign, did, by Letters Patents dated Jan. 23, diſſolve the ſaid Court, according to Power given her by Act of Parliament holden the ſame Year: And the next Day, by other Letters Patents, united the ſame to the Exchequer, which was utterly void, becauſe ſhe had diſſolved the ſame before: And ſo reſolved all the Judges, Dier. 4, Eliz. 16.]

St. STEPHEN's Chapel.

Then for St. Stephen's Chapel, of old Time founded by King Stephen; King John, in the ſeventh of his Reign, granted to Baldwinus de London, Clerk of his Exchequer, the Chapelſhip of St. Stephen's at Weſtminſter, &c.

New built by K. Edw. 3.

This Chapel was again ſince (of a far more curious Workmanſhip) new builded by King Edward the Third, in the Year 1347, for thirty eight Perſons, in that Church, to ſerve God; to wit, a Dean, twelve ſecular Canons, thirteen Vicars, four Clerks, five Choriſts, two Servitors; to wit, a Verger, and a Keeper of the Chapel. He builded [Lodgings] for them from the Houſe of Receipt, along nigh to the Thames, within the ſame Palace, there to inhabit. And ſince that, there were alſo Building for them, betwixt the Clock-Houſe and the Wool ſtaple, called the Wey-Houſe, [ſtill called Chanon-Row.]

[Philip, Wife of this King, alſo was a great Benefactor to the Chanons of this Chapel.]

Little Sanctuary.

He alſo builded to the Uſe of this Chapel (tho' out of the Palace Court) ſome Diſtance Weſt, in the little Sanctuary, a ſtrong Clochard of Stone and Timber, covered with Lead, and placed therein three great Bells, ſince uſually rung at Coronations, Triumphs, Funeral of Princes, and their Obits. Of thoſe Bells Men fabuled, that their ringing ſowred all the Drink in the Town. More, that about the biggeſt of which was written;

King Edward made mee
thirtie thouſand and three,
Take me down and weigh mee,
and more ſhall ye find mee.

But theſe Bells being taken down indeed, were found all three not to weigh twenty thouſand.

True it is, that in the City of Roan, in Normandy, there is one great Bell that hath ſuch an Inſcription as followeth:

Je ſuis George d' Ambois,
Qui trente cinq mille pois
Mes lui qui me peſera,
Trente ſix mille me trovera.

I am George of Ambois,
Thirty five thouſand in pois;
But he that ſhall weigh me,
Thirty ſix thouſand ſhall find me.

Cloiſter of St. Stephen's Chapel builded.

The ſaid King Edward endowed this Chapel with Lands to the yearly Value of five hundred Pound. Doctor John Chambers, the King's Phyſitian, the laſt Dean of this College, builded thereunto a Cloiſter, of curious Workmanſhip, to the Charges of eleven thouſand Marks. This Chapel, or College, at the Suppreſſion, was valued to diſpend, in Lands, by the Year, One thouſand eighty five Pound, ten Shillings, five Pence, and was ſurrendered to Edward the Sixth: Since which Time, the ſame Chapel hath ſerved as a Parliament Houſe.

Grants of K. Edw. to this Chapel, Vol. III. J. S.

There is to be ſeen in the Monaſticon, K. Edward the Third's Charter for St. Steven's Chapel: And by Patent dated 22. of his Reign, he gave to it his great Houſe in Lumbard-ſtreet, London, with ſome Advouſons. By another Patent 32. of his Reign, he gave the Dean and Canons a Tower in Bokeleſbury, London, called Sewtes Tour, with the Appurtinences. In the 43. of his Reign, he gave them another Houſe in London called The Reol. And in further Augmentation of the ſaid Foundation, he granted them all the Ground from the ſaid Chapel Northward, to the Receipt of the Exchequer, between Weſtminſter Hall and the Thames, for making a Cloiſter and other neceſſary Buildings; with free Entrance Day and Night at the Gate adjoyning to the King's Bridge: Alſo a Chamber within the ſaid Gate, formerly belonging to his Clerk of the Kitchen, with the Houſes formerly uſed for Stables of War-Horſes, and other Horſes; and with a free Paſſage to the ſaid Chapel, by Daylight, through the Great Hall. And laſtly, he exempted the ſaid Dean and Canons, and all their Lands, from the Payment of any Aids or Taxes whatſoever. Richard the Second compleated the full Endowment of this College, by ſettling on it divers Lands and Manours in Kent, according to the Direction and Deſire of his Grandfather in his Teſtament.

The Deans commonly of great Account with the King.

The Revenues.

It was called The Free Chapel of St. Mary the Virgin, and St. Stephen. The Dean was commonly of great Confidence with the King, and often preferred to ſome Biſhoprick. Such was Sampſon, Biſhop of Litchfield and Coventry. It was richly endowed, but the Revenues were made away, and alienated upon the Diſſolution of religious Houſes. Among which was a Meſſuage called The Helmet in King's-ſtreet, belonging to it, which was granted to Richard Audely and John Rede, in the 2. Edw. 6. There were alſo certain Manours and Lordſhips belonging to it, called The Manours and Lordſhip of Eſſhetisford, alias Aſſheford, in the County of Kent; which, with other Lands, were ſold to Sir Anthony Aucher and Henry Polſtred, Eſquires, in 3. Edw. 6.

St. Stephen's Chapel now the Parliament-Houſe.

Since the Diſſolution, the ſame Chapel hath ſerved as a Parliament-Houſe: The High Court of Parliament, conſiſting of Knights, Citizens and Burgeſſes of Parliament, was formerly in the Chapter Houſe of the Abbot of Weſtminſter: And this continued till the Statute of 1. Edw. 6. which gave to the King Colleges, Free-Chapels, &c. Whereby the King enjoyed to his own Uſe this ancient Free-Chapel of St. Stephens. Since which Time it hath ſerved, by the King's Permiſſion, for the Houſe of Commons to ſit in.]

Chapel of our Lady in the Pew.

King Richard the Second makes his Devotion at this Chapel. J. S.

By this Chapel of St. Stephen, was ſometime one other ſmaller Chapel, called our Lady of the Piew. To the which Lady great Offerings were uſed to be made: Amongſt other Things I have read, that [Richard the Second, upon the coming of the Rebel Wat Tyler, with his Rout of Kentiſh Men in Armes to London, went firſt to Weſtminſter, to the High Altar there, and offered; and after that, confeſſed himſelf to an Anchorite. And then betook himſelf to this Chapel of our Lady in the Pew, and there ſaid his Devotions, and then went to Smithfield to meet this Fellow and his Company.]

John Pigot. Ann. 1452. Firſt Edit.

After the Overthrow of Wat Tyler, and other the Rebels, in the fourth of his Reign, he went to Weſtminſter, and there giving Thanks to God for his Victory, made his Offering in this Chapel: But as divers have noted, namely, John Pigot, in the Year 1252, on the ſeventeenth of February, by Negligence of a Schollar, appointed by his Schoolmaſter to put forth the Lights of this Chapel, the Image of our Lady, richly decked with Jewels, precious Stones, Pearls, and Rings, more than any Jeweller could judge the Price, (for ſo ſaith mine Author) was, with all this Apparel, Ornaments, and Chapel itſelf, burnt: But ſince again re-edified by Anthony Earl Rivers, Lord Scales, and of the Iſle of Wight, Uncle and Governour to the Prince of Wales, that ſhould have been King Edward the Fifth, &c.

Cotton Houſe.

In the Paſſage out of Weſtminſter Hall into the old Palace Yard, a little beyond the Stairs going up to St. Stephen's Chapel, (now the Parliament Houſe) on the left Hand, is the Houſe belonging to the ancient and noble Family of the Cottons: Wherein is kept a moſt ineſtimable Library of Manuſcript Volumes, famed both at Home and Abroad.

The Cotton Library, founded by Sir Rob. Cotton.

This choice Library in Cotton Houſe, had for its firſt Founder Sir Robert Cotton of Connington in the County of Huntingdon, Baronet: Who, at his own great Charge and Expence, and by the Aſſiſtance of moſt learned Antiquaries of the Time, collected and purchaſed (as it runs in the Act for the Settlement of this Library) the moſt uſeful Manuſcripts, written Books, Papers, Parchments, Records, and other Memorials in moſt Languages; of great Uſe and Service for the Knowledge and Preſervation of our Conſtitution both in Church and State. Which Manuſcripts, and other Writings, were procured as well from the Parts beyond the Seas, as from ſeveral private Collectors of ſuch Antiquities within the Realm; and are generally eſteemed the beſt Collection of its Kind now any where extant.

Settled in Cotton Houſe by Act of Parliament.

There was therefore, for the Preſervation of it for after-Times, an Act of Parliament, made 12. & 13. Will. 3. for the ſettling and preſerving the ſaid Library in the Houſe at Weſtminſter, called Cotton Houſe, in the Name and Family of the Cottons, for the Benefit of the Publick. This Library hath been preſerved with the utmoſt Care and Diligence, by the late Sir Tho. Cotton, Son of Sir Robert; and Sir John Cotton of Weſtminſter, his Grandſon; and very much augmented and enlarged by them. The ſaid Sir John, in purſuance of the Deſire and Intention of his Father and Grandfather, was content and willing that the ſaid Manſion Houſe and Library ſhould continue in the Family and Name, and not be ſold, or otherwiſe diſpoſed and imbezzilled; and ſhould be kept and preſerved, by the Name of the Cottonian Library, for publick Uſe and Advantage.

Truſtees.

A Library Keeper.

And ſo, by the ſaid Act, immediately, upon the Death of Sir John Cotton, it was, together with the Manſion-houſe, Garden, &c. ſettled and veſted in Truſtees; who were to take Care of the ſaid Library, and appoint Orders and Rules for the Reading and uſing the ſame, and for the better Preſervation of Books: And to nominate and appoint a good and ſufficient Perſon, well read in Antiquities and Records, to have the immediate Care and Cuſtody of it. And he to give Security to the Value of 500 l. by Recognizance with certain Sureties, that none of the Manuſcripts, written Books, &c. ſhould be loſt or embezilled: And likewiſe to take an Oath before the Lord Chancellor, or Lord Keeper, to uſe his utmoſt Care and Endeavour for preſerving of the ſame. That the ſaid Houſe with the Apurtenances and Library, be never ſubject or liable to any Judgments, Statutes, Recognizances, or any other Incumberances. The Truſtees to be the Lord Chancellor or Lord Keeper for the Time being, the Speaker of the Houſe of Commons for the Time being, Sir Robert Cotton of Hatley St. George in the County of Cambridge, Knight, Philip Cotton of Connington in the ſame County, Eſquire, Robert Cotton of Giddin in Huntingdonſhire, and William Hanbury of the Inner Temple, London, Eſquires. And in Caſe of the Deceaſe of the laſt four Perſons, the ſaid John Cotton, or other Heir Males of the ſaid Family, who ſhall be in Poſſeſſion of the Manſion-Houſe, ſhall nominate or appoint one or more fit Perſons to ſucceed him or them. And that all Bargains, Sales, Gifts, Grants, Deviſes, or other Alienations whatſoever, of any of the Manuſcripts, Parchments, &c. or other Memorials, in the Schedule now remaining in the ſaid Library; and alſo all Coins, Medals, and other Rarities there contained, are hereby declared to be abſolutely Void, and of none Effect. That within ſix Months after the Library-Keeper ſhall undertake the ſaid Office, he ſhall cauſe another Schedule to be made in Parchment; which ſhall contain the Names and Titles of all the ſaid Manuſcripts, &c. and all the Number of Pages and Folio's thereunto belonging, and cauſe the ſame to be enrolled in the High Court of Chancery.

A Catalogue of this Library.

There was a new Catalogue of this Library printed at the Oxford Theatre Anno 1696, from a careful and ſerious Review thereof, taken by Tho. Smith, D.D. prefixing the Life of Sir Robert Cotton, the learned Founder, and an Hiſtory and Survey of the ſaid Library.]

Clock-Houſe at Weſtminſter.

The ſaid Palace, before the Entry thereunto, hath a large Court, and in the ſame a Tower of Stone, containing a Clock, which ſtriketh every Hour on a great Bell, to be heard into the Hall in Sitting Time of the Courts, or otherwiſe. For the ſame Clock, in a Calm, will be heard into the City of London. King Henry the Sixth gave the Keeping of this Clock, with the Tower, called The Clock Houſe, and the Appurtenances, unto William Walſby, Dean of St. Stephens, with the Wages of ſix Pence the Day, out of his Exchequer.

It was firſt built and furniſhed with a Clock, out of a Fine which one Juſtice Ingham was fain to pay, being 800 Mark, for erazing a Roll. For that a poor Man being fined in an Act of Debt at 13 s. 4 d. the ſaid Juſtice, moved with Pity, cauſed the Roll to be erazed, and made it 6 s 8 d. This Caſe Juſtice Southcote remembered, when Catlyn Chief Juſtice of the King's Bench in the Reign of Queen Elizabeth, would have ordered a Razure of a Roll; Southcote being one of the Judges of that Court, utterly denyed to aſſent to it, and ſaid openly, That he meant not to build a Clock Houſe.]

Alms-houſes of Henry the Seventh.

On the South Side of this Gate, King Henry the Seventh founded an Alms-houſe for thirteen poor Men: One of them to be a Prieſt aged five and forty Years, a good Grammarian; the other 12 to be aged fifty Years, without Wives. Every Saturday the Prieſt to receive of the Abbot, or Prior, four Pence by the Day, and each other two Pence Half-penny by the Day for ever, for their Suſtenance: And every Year to each one a Gown and a Hood ready made. And to three Women that dreſſed their Meat, and kept them in their Sickneſs, each to have every Saturday ſixteen Pence, and every Year a Gown ready made. CHAP. IV.

The Government of this City. The Burgeſſes and Aſſiſtants. The twelve Wards. Other Officers. Orders for Butchers and Poulterers of Weſtminſter. What Meal Weekly ſold by the Bakers. The Poor of Weſtminſter. A Work-houſe for poor and idle Perſons. Lord Dacre's Hoſpital. Act of Parliament for the Government of this City.

This City hath 12 Wards, each governed by a Burgeſs.

THE City of Weſtminſter, for Civil Government, is divided into 12 ſeveral Wards. For the which, the Dean of the Collegiate Church of Weſtminſter, or the High Steward, do elect 12 Burgeſſes, and as many Aſſiſtants, that is, one Burgeſs, and one Aſſiſtant, for every Ward. Out of the which twelve Burgeſſes, two are nominated Yearly, upon Thurſday in Eaſter Week, for Chief Burgeſſes, to continue for one Year next following. Who have Authority given them by the Act of Parliament in the 27th of Queen Elizabeth, to hear, examine, determine, and puniſh, according to the Laws of the Realm, and lawful Cuſtomes of the City of London, Matters of Incontinency, common Scolds, Inmates, and common Annoyances; and likewiſe to commit ſuch Perſons as ſhall offend againſt the Peace, and thereof to give Notice within 24 Hours, to ſome Juſtice of Peace within the County of Middleſex.

Theſe Wards how called.
J. S.

I ſhall give ſome farther Acount of this Government, particularly as it was in the Days of Q. Elizabeth: The Burgeſſes, which were alſo called Headboroughs, and their Aſſiſtants, Anſwer to the Aldermen of the Wards of London, and their reſpective Deputies. The Wards belonging longing to each Burgeſs or Headborough were not called, as they are in London, by ſome certain fixed Name, but after the Names of the Burgeſſes that were appointed over them. And here I ſhall firſt ſhew how the twelve Wards of Weſtminſter were bounded, and the Conſtables belonging to each: And then the Manner of chooſing Burgeſſes, and their Aſſiſtants, with other Officers, for the better governing of theſe Wards.

The Wards in St. Margaret's Pariſh.

In St. Margaret's Pariſh were 8 Wards; in St. Martin's 3; and in St. Clement's, and the Strond 1. Which were thus bounded, beginning with thoſe in St. Margaret's Pariſh: The firſt Ward was from St. Stephen's Alley to the Sanctuary Gate on the Eaſt Side of King's-ſtreet, the Round Wool-ſtaple only excepted. Of this Ward, John Dodington, Gent. was Headborough; and it was commonly called John Dodington's Ward. The ſecond Ward was from the Clowſon to the Sanctuary Gate, on the Weſt Side of the ſaid Street, and St. Stephen's-Alley. Of this Ward, John Fiſher, Yeoman, was Headborough; and commonly called John Fiſher's Ward. The third Ward was from the Queen's Majeſty's Gate in King's ſtreet, to the Clowſon on the Weſt Part, and to St. Stephen's-Alley on the Eaſt Part of the ſaid Street Of this Ward, William Staunton, Gent. was Headborough; and commonly called William Staunton's Ward. The fourth Ward was Thieving Lane and Long Ditch. Of this Ward, John Savage, Yeoman, was Headborough, and it was commonly called John Savage's Ward. The fifth Ward was the New Palace, and long Wool-ſtaple. Of this Ward, Richard Garret, Ale-Brewer was Headborough, and it was called Richard Garret's Ward. The ſixth Ward was the Old Palace, Round Wool-ſtaple, and the Bowling Alley. John Jennings, Inn-keeper, was Headborough of this Ward, and it was called John Jennings his Ward. The ſeventh Ward was Tuthil-ſtreet, and Petty France. Tho. Clarke, Cook, and Servant to her Majeſty, was Headborough of this Ward, and called Thomas Clarke's Ward. The eighth Ward was the Sanctuary. This was called the Sanctuary Ward. John Collier was Headborough of this Ward.

Wards in St. Martin's in the Fields.

And then there were three Wards more in the Pariſh of St. Martin's in the Fields; and they and their Headboroughs were as follow: The firſt Ward here, being the ninth in Number, was, from the Manſion-Houſe of John Shortridge, called the Goat's-head, unto the Houſe of Thomas Fowel, overagainſt Durham Place, on the Land Side; and from the Houſe of Rob. Mansfield, overagainſt St. Martin's-Lane, unto Durham Place on the Water Side. Of this Ward Thomas Fowler, Gent. was Headborough, and it was called Thomas Fowler's Ward. The ſecond Ward in this Pariſh, being the tenth Ward in the City of Weſtminſter, was from the Houſe of Thomas Fowel, overagainſt Durham Place, unto the L. Treaſurer Burghley's-Houſe, on the Land Side; and from Durham Place unto Ivy-Bridge on the Water Side. Of this Ward, John Colbrand, Gent. was Headborough, and it was called John Colbrand's Ward. The third Ward in this Pariſh, being the eleventh in Number, was from the Goat's-head aforeſaid unto the Mews on the Land Side; and from the Mews to the Timber-Yard on the Land Side; and from the ſaid Mansfield's Houſe unto the Wall called Scotland-Wall on the Water Side. Of this Ward, Davy Powel, Gent. was Headborough.

The Ward of St. Clement's and Strond.

The twelfth and laſt Ward was in the Pariſh of St. Clement's and Strond within the Liberty of Weſtminſter. The Bounds of this Ward were from Temple-Bar to the White Hart in Strond. Chriſtopher Gibſon, Inn-keeper, was the Headborough of this Ward, and it was called as the reſt, by his Name, viz. Chriſtopher Gibſon's Ward.

Conſtables belonging to theſe Wards.

To this City and Liberties belong one High Conſtable, and to theſe twelve Wards thirty petty Conſtables; that is, to the firſt Ward, two; to the ſecond, three; to the third, three; to the fourth, three; to the fifth, one; to the ſixth, two; to the ſeventh, five; to the eighth, four; to the ninth, two; to the tenth, one; to the eleventh, one; to the twelfth, which contains St. Clement's and the Strond, three.

The Manner of chuſing Burgeſſes.

In caſe any Ward fell vacant by the Death of the Headborough, or otherwiſe, the Court uſually held in Eaſter-Week, preſented three Perſons Inhabitants of the ſaid Ward, to the High Steward, to chooſe one of the three, according as he thought good: And it was done by them in theſe Words in Writing, as I find in the Year 1585. "May it pleaſe your Honour to be inform'd, that whereas at this Preſent there is "wanting one of the Headboroughs, and ſo hath "continued ſince the Death of Richard Gibbes; "for the Supply whereof, may it pleaſe your "Honour to accept any of theſe three Perſons, "whoſe Names follow." And then the Names and Qualities of them are ſet down.

And Aſſiſtants.

The Way of chooſing Aſſiſtants, was, that the Names of three Perſons reſiant in each reſpective Ward, were written down, and preſented likewiſe to the High Steward, for Choice by him to be made of one out of the three for each Ward.

And an High Conſtable.

And an High Conſtable being alſo to be elected at the aforeſaid Court, three fit Perſons were likewiſe preſented to him to chooſe one; and in this Form of Words written: "Alſo there "is to be elected and choſen for the ſaid City "and Liberties, one other, to be High Conſtable "in Place of———Staunton; May it therefore "pleaſe your Honour to accept one of theſe "three Perſons whoſe Names follow." And then their Names and Qualities are ſubſcribed.

Two chief Burgeſſes.

At the ſame Court, after the twelve Burgeſſes were elected, then out of them two were elected, which are called Chief or Head Burgeſſes.

Bailiff of Weſtminſter.

There is alſo a Chief Officer, which is called the Bailiff of Weſtminſter, who hath his Deputy.

The preſent Government of WESTMINSTER.

Povey.

The City of Weſtminſter itſelf conſiſts but of one Pariſh, called St. Margaret's, which is of large Extent; but the Liberties comprehend ſix Pariſhes, viz. St. Martin's in the Fields, St. James's, St. Anne's, St. Paul's Covent-Garden, St. Mary Savoy, and St. Clement's. For the Government of both, the Dean and Chapter of the Cathedral Church of St. Peter, are inveſted with Eccleſiaſtical and Civil Juriſdiction, and not only within the ſaid City and Liberties, but likewiſe within the Precincts of St. Martin le Grand, near Cheapſide, London, and in ſome Towns of Eſſex, exempted as well from the Juriſdiction of the Biſhop of London, as from that of the Archbiſhop of Canterbury: But the Management of the Civil Part, ſince the Reformation, is left in the Hands of Laymen, elected for that Purpoſe from Time to Time, and confirmed by the Dean and Chapter.

High Steward.

Of theſe Magiſtrates, the Principal is the High Steward, uſually one of the Prime Nobility, who is choſen by the Dean and Chapter, and holds this high Office durante Vita; the Nature of it being not much unlike the Chancellorſhip of an Univerſity: But upon his Death and Reſignation, a Chapter is called for the Election of another, in which the Dean ſits as High Steward, till the Election be over. The Deputy Steward, or Under Steward of Weſtminſter, is likewiſe an Officer of great Note, choſen by the High Steward, and confirmed by the Dean and Chapter. He holds this honourable Office, durante Vita, and, as it were, ſupplies the Place of a Sheriff. For he keeps the Court Leet, or Town Court, with the other Magiſtrates, and is always Chairman at the Quarter-Seſſions: Next to him is the High Bailiff, an Officer of Honour, named by the Dean, and confirmed by the High Steward, holding likewiſe for Life. He ſummons the Juries, manages in chief the Election of Members of Parliament for the City, and has all the Bailiffs of Weſtminſter ſubordinate to him. In the Court Leet he ſits next to the Stewards. All Fines, Forfeitures and Strays belonging to him, which makes his Place beneficial; but is commonly managed by a Deputy Bailiff, a Perſon well verſed in the Law.

High Bailiff.

Burgeſſes.

There are alſo ſixteen Burgeſſes for the City, and nine for the Liberty, and each of them has an Aſſiſtant. Whoſe Office is much like that of the Aldermen of the City of London, every one having a proper Ward under his Juriſdiction: Out of their Number, two are elected by the Title of Head Burgeſſes, one for the City, and the other for the Liberties, who take Place, in the Court Leet, next to the head Bailiff: Then there is a High Conſtable, choſen as the ſaid Burgeſſes, by the Court Leet, who has all the other Conſtables under his Direction, and uſually continues two Years in his Office.

High Conſtable.

For Eccleſiaſtical Cauſes.

For Eccleſiaſtical Cauſes and Probat of Wills there is a Royal Juriſdiction, under a Commiſſary, from whom no Appeal muſt be, only to the Queen in her High Court of Chancery.

Notwithſtanding this Article, it might be lawful for any Butcher inhabiting within the Pariſh of St. Margaret's, and not having any Shop in the King's ſtreet, to keep a Standing in the Market-place in Kings-ſtreet, every Monday, and there put to Sale their Fleſh-Meat.

Bakers, what Quantity of Meal ſold by them.

I add an Account brought in to the Lord Burghley, High Steward of Weſtminſter, of the Quantity of Corn and Meal weekly brought, uttered and ſold in the Markets at Weſtminſter; and of ſuch Meal as is brought, uttered and ſold to the ſeveral Bakers at their ſeveral Houſes, Dec. 8. *Ann. Memorand. That there be ſundry of the Inhabitants of the ſaid City, (who uſually from Time to Time, do make their own ſeveral Proviſions of Meal, as well of Wheat as of Rye, and do bake and make Bread of the ſame for their ſeveral Houſholds) the Sum thereof is great, but the Certainty and Number of the ſame is not perfectly known.

Memorand. The ſaid Bakers, nor any of them will confeſs, that they bake or put to Sale, any Bread made of Rye, but only of Wheat, as aforeſaid: And as touching any Store of Corn or Meal, as yet it doth not appear, that the ſaid Bakers have any other Proviſion, but as they, from Time to Time, make their Proviſion, as aforeſaid. And that they do pay for every Buſhel of Wheat Meal, bought, as aforeſaid, 5 s. 8 d. and ſometime more.

An Hoſpital for the Poor of Weſtminſter.

In the Beginning of Q. Elizabeth's Reign, about the Year 1560, for the employing of the idle Poor, and for the relieving of the honeſt Poor, decayed through Age or Misfortunes, an Hoſpital was propounded to be erected: Whereof Sir William Cecyl, Knt. Secretary of State, and High Steward of Weſtminſter, was a great Mover. The Way thought on of raiſing Money to do it was by a voluntary Contribution of the Inhabitants: And that every Conſtable ſhould be authorized to gather in their Wards as they could obtain willingly for ſuch an Uſe; and that thoſe they found backward, and refuſed to give, ſhould have their Names taken; and to make Uſe of a Statute upon them, namely, to ceſs them 12 d. for every Day's Abſence from the Church at the accuſtomable Service there performed: And moreover, to take, by Way of Loan, a Portion of Money to this Uſe, to be repaid by a reaſonable Space, as ſhould be convented and agreed upon.

That 40 l. at leaſt might reaſonably be expected of Cox, Biſhop of Ely, who being Dean of Weſtminſter in Edward the Sixth's Time, had voluntarily promiſed that Sum for the ſaid Uſe.

That there ſhould be appointed certain Aſſiſtants, as one Prebendary, four Headboroughs, ſeven Conſtables, five Commoners, to be Overſeers of the ſaid Hoſpital, privy to all Things in the Houſe, both of receiving and laying out.

Then for the Works of ſuch as ſhould be taken into the Houſe: That old Women, or middle Aged, that might work, and went a Gooding, ſhould be Hatchilers of the Flax: And one Matron over them.

That common Hedges, and ſuch-like luſty naughty Packs, ſhould be ſet to Spinning: And one according to be ſet over them.

That Vagabonds, ſuch as were ſtout, ſtubborn, and ſtrong, ſhould make clean the Streets; ſome to carry away with Wheelbarows, as the reſt did fill them.

Among whom, if any chanced to be Taylors or Shoomakers, theſe to be likewiſe ſet to their Stitch, to work for the Houſhold.

That young Springals, of whom might be good Hope hereafter, ſhould learn to weave, by one of the Science: Who ſhould have a Stipend, and be as Maſter to them.

Likewiſe, that Children that were above Six, and not twelve Years of Age, ſhould be ſet to winde Quills to the Weavers.

Lord Dacre intended the founding an Hoſpital.

But what Iſſue and Effect this good Propoſal had, I cannot tell. Many Years after, Gregory Fines Lord Dacre, and Anne his Wife, intended the Founding of an Hoſpital in Weſtminſter; whereof I have ſeen a Draught of the Queen's Letters Patents for Allowance and Confirmation: To be founded for the good Education and Nurture of poor Children and Boys, born and to be born within the Pariſh of St. Margaret in the ſaid City; and for the Relief and Nouriſhment of poor aged People, and lame and diſeaſed Perſons, and for the Correction and Reſtraint of ſturdy Beggars, and idle Vagabonds within the City and Liberty, and Precinct of the ſame, and within the Pariſhes of St. Margaret's, St. Martin's in the Fields, the Savoy, and St. Clements Danes. That by this Means poor Children deprived of their Parents, being well educated and inſtructed, when they ſhall attain to elder Age, may learn honeſt Arts and Trades, whereby they may themſelves live honeſtly, and get their own Living: And likewiſe, that infirm, aged People, weak, lame, and ſick Perſons, might want nothing neceſſary to their Life; and other being ſtrong in their Limbs, might be compelled to Labours, and to honeſt and wholeſome Works and Exerciſes; whereby they might maintain and cheriſh themſelves and others, for the Profit and Benefit of the Commonweal, and not be permitted to live idly, and wander about the Streets and beg, to the great Offence and Trouble of the Nobles, honourable Perſons, Juſtices, Judges, and Officers of the Queen and her other Subjects, frequently paſſing towards Weſtminſter, and returning thence, as well in Time of Parliament, as of the Terms.

This Hoſpital was in the Letters Patents to be called, The Hoſpital of Jeſus, in the Pariſh of St. Margaret in Weſtminſter. And was by Vertue thereof, to be governed by eight diſcreet and honeſt Men, who ſhould be called, The Maſters of the ſaid Hoſpital of Jeſus. The firſt Maſters whereof to be nominated by the ſaid Gregory Lord Dacre, and Anne his Wife, or their Executors, after the Foundation thereof. And the ſaid Maſters, and their Succeſſors, to be one Body Corporate and Politic for ever, and to have a common Seal. And upon the Death of any of theſe eight, or Vacancy of any of their Places, the Survivors and thoſe that remain, might nominate and elect others out of St. Margaret's Pariſh to ſuccede: And upon their not ſo nominating and electing in ſix Months, the Dean of Weſtminſter to put in one or more fit Perſon or Perſons.
